Again, "Who is able for these things?" We are totally unequal to the task, only as he dwells in us can he shine out through us. Of this let us once more assure ourselves so that we may, with added earnestness and unabating hope, turn again to our task. Christ, where he is truly shown forth, is bound to win. The universality of his appeal is one of the joys and miracles of our Christian experience. Of this very thing H. E. Fosdick writes at the close of his studies on the Manhood of the Master: "Youth, maturity, age—what unlike virtues they exhibit and what various needs they bear! Childhood wants gentleness and friendly care; youth wants leadership calling to knightly adventure; maturity want wisdom and steadying power in the midst of life's battle, old age wants constancy, patience, and the grace of fortitude. Yet all these various qualities we find in Christ. Childhood is gentle but not strong; youth is adventurous, but not patient: maturity is courageous but often disillusioned and cynical: old age is patient but often hopeless; but to an extent that seems impossible in a character whose years on earth numbered not more than thirty-three, the Master comprhended in himself the virtues of all ages without their defects—gentle and strong, adventurous and patient, courageous and joyful, enduring and hopeful. The number of a person's years has never changed the adequacy of Christ as the Ideal. The children sing, "What a Friend we have in Jesus!" Youth sings, "The Son of God goeth forth to war!' The mature sing, "How firm a foundation ye saints of the Lord!" The aged sing--

While life's dark maze I tread,
And griefs around me spread,
Be thou my Guide.

All centuries, all races, all sexes, all ages find in the Master their virtues consummated. The whole light in him gathers up all the split and partial colors of our little spectre. As we consider the significance of this, his word possesses a fresh and persuasive meaning when he says "Ye call me Master and Lord: and ye say well, for so I am."

Evangel, Edinburg.

Bible Lesson

Both young men, and maidens; old men, and children; let them praise the name of the Lord: for his name alone is excellent (margin, exalted); his glory is above the earth and heaven.

Kindly take your Bible and read Psa. 148. You will find it an exhortation to praise the Lord. The first four words read, "Praise ye the Lord," and the last four also read, "Praise ye the Lord." In this Psalm the word "praise" occurs twelve times.

The quotation with which we open this lesson is part of this Psalm, being verses 12 and 13, and we are sure that we all shall agree as to the advice given, being the very best that any one person could give another, "Young men and maidens, let them praise the Lord."

What is expected of us, when we are asked to "praise the Lord?" First, we must make confession that God only is great and wonderful and adorable, and that only in him can we find excellency and perfection. Second, we must acknowledge that all goodness is from God, and that he is love, mercy, and truth. Third, we must have sublime faith in God that we will believe all he says, that Jesus is his Son, his Christ, and that it is only through this Jesus we can receive that salvation which God hath promised and planned for. Fourth, to thoroughly praise God we must live according to his desires, not saying, not doing anything that would cast reproach on his name, realizing that in many cases the world judges God and his Christ by the life led by those who profess to be his.

To be Christian we must follow Christ, it makes no difference where it takes us. Nor must we consider personal interest, or count the cost in worldly loss. Where Jesus leads, there we must go, else we are not Christian. And the same regarding the praise of God: God must be everything. Do we seek praise? God is our Creator, "praise ye the Lord." Do we glory in earthly things? "To God only be glory." Do we attempt to honor man for the things that God has done? "Honor and praise belongeth to me, saith the Lord." Therefore honor God. Do we claim God as our Father? Then we must be dead to the world. We can not serve two masters. If we belong to God we must hate the world, and the things of the world. If we belong to the world, that is if our pleasures and delights are the world's amusements, then we have no place in our hearts for the things of God. "Ye cannot serve both God and mammon." We must place God and the things pertaining to God on one side; on the other side, we must place the world and worldly things. Having done this we must make a choice. We can not have part of each. It must be either one or the other, and happy are ye if you decide as did Joshua when he said, "As for me and my house we will serve the Lord." "And him only shalt thou serve." To ignore worldly things now, looking forward to the kingdom for our compensation, is both good and wise, for the light affliction we now bear will then work out for us a far more exceeding weight of glory. Therefore "both young men and maidens, praise ye the Lord."

Paragraphs

"The Lord is my shepherd."

Small kindness, small courtesies, small considerations, habitually practiced in our social intercourse give a greater charm to the character than the display of great talents and accomplishments.

Do right now. Always scorn appearances, and you always may. The force of character is cumulative. All the foregone days of virtue work their health in this.

True worth is in being—not seeing,
  In doing each day that goes by
Some little good—not in the dreaming
  Of great things to do by and by.

The character which is developed by devotion to duty in life's smallest undertaking is being equipped for glorious achievements. Therein is found the secret of success.

Let us do our duty cheerfully, that it may bring pleasure and profit to others and to ourselves. We are social beings, and it is seldom that we benefit ourselves without benefitting others.

Build a little fence of trust
  Around today;
Fill the space with loving work,
  And therein stay.

Censure and criticism never hurt anybody. If false, they cannot hurt you unless you are wanting in manly character; and if true, they show a man his weak points and forewarn him against failure and trouble.

See that no day passes in which you do not make yourself a somwhat better creature; try to get strength of heart enough to look yourself fairly in the face in mind as well as in body.

People seldom improve when they have no other model but themselves to copy.

Best of blessings he'll provide us,
Naught but good shall e'er betide us,
      Oh, how he loves.

is in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the Spirit is life because of righteousness." The righteousness of God and Christ, "the image of the invisible God," in the heart, making up "the mind of the Spirit," answers the requirements, and is the pass-word into the kingdom of God. To Christ, the living Saved One from death, we may go; he is in evidence. "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light" (Matt. 11:28-30).

Take my yoke upon you and learn of me." Christ was not a successful man in a business way, nor as a statesman and warrior; neither as a scientist or philosopher; he did not walk in the gilded halls of fashionable society; he did not live without enemies, few men spake well of him; yea, "he was despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief; and as one from whom men hide their face he was despised; and we esteemed him not" (Isa. 53:3). Christ said, 'They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." He said to his disciples, "In the world ye shall have tribulations;" and his apostle Paul said, "Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." Then said Jesus unto his disciples, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me" (Matt. 16:24).

Yet in view of all these facts, Christ says, "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me." To a mind such as that of Esau, who sold his birthright for a mess of pottage, the invitation of Christ would be a poor proposition. Oh yes, eternal life is conditional. It is not born with us; it is prize to be striven for. The apostle Peter says: "But if, when ye do well and suffer for it, ye shall take it patiently, this is acceptable with God. For hereunto were ye called; because Christ also suffered for you, leaving you an example that ye should follow his steps; who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth; who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, threatened not: but committed himself to him that judgeth righteonusly" (1 Pet. 2:20-23). Christ said, "For which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first and counteth the cost, whether he will have sufficinet to finish it." "So likewise, whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple" (Luke 14:28, 33). Yes, let your wicked heart count the cost, hold on to "the mind of the flesh"; continue your labor for sin and carry its heavy burden; be as the ox at the full manger, don't exercise your mind in examining "the testimony of Jesus, which is the Spirit of prophecy." Gratify "the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life"; but remember that for these things you are "condemned already." "And be you sure of this, that your sin will find you out." "Let no man deceive you with vain words; for because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience" (Eph. 5:6).

"I am the way"; "learn of me," "walk in my steps"; "for strait is the gate and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." It was Paul who said, "I am determined not to know anything among men save Jesus Christ and him crucified" (1 Cor. 2:2). This statement covers the whole ground of saving truth; it gives us "the mind of the Spirit" which is what Christ was as a personal character; in that mind is the mind of God, which Paul says is "the eternal purpose which he purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Eph. 3:11).

This mind or purpose of God, was declared to Moses, Num. 14:21: "But as truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord." Christ was the first fruit of that glory; and so Paul could well afford to "forsake all that he had" in exchange for the knowledge of "Christ Jesus, and him crucified," "and be found in him, not having his own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith" (Phil. 3:9).

Russellism Refuted

ARTICLE EIGHT

THIS IS Russellism plainly stated, and in view of this, why do they compass land and sea to proselyte? Since they claim that God does not in our times offer salvation to all, and that he never intended to reach all during premillennial times, because the revelation of certain epochal truths was not "due;" and since men of our times have nothing to do to secure the "ransom" provided for them in the future, where is the propriety of preaching any sort of a gospel in our times? It may be claimed that they preach for the purpose of taking out the "little flock," but the principal part of Russellism, indeed that which gives it its popularity and its distinction, is not their claim of taking out in our times a "little flock," consisting of themselves, but the theory of a future post-resurrection "fair chance." To offer with one hand an opportunity to join the Russell "little flock" now, and to offer with the other hand a future chance regardless of merit, is to invite refusal of the former for the sake of the latter.

The delusion of the Russell "ransom" becomes more and more clear as we subject it to reason. Suppose a magician had the power to instantly transform a wild savage man of the woods into a noble, intellectual man of refinement; what would become of his identity? Would he know himself? Does identity consist of self-consciousness? or of the substance of which we are formed? Would a subject of such an instantaneous transformation realize that he, in his new creation state, had been a wild man up to within a moment of his having become almost an angel? Would the probation of this new man be that of the wild man? So far as identity is concerned, it would be the beginning of the man's existence.

Now Russellites' claim are more extraordinary than this, since their theory is that every little helpless child, black, white, red, and yellow, whether born in the woods or in a palace, from those who may have breathed but one breath up to those of mature years, is to come forth for a probation. Just think of the absurdity of offering probation to a newly born, helpless babe, hottentot or others! If this absurdity forces Russellites to say that helpless babes will be "ransomed" in a state of mature manhood and womanhood, then it is not a ransom, nor a resurrection at all. There is no self-consciousness in babes; and for them to be resurrected in a state of maturity, possessed of a good degree of intellectual powers, would be to newly create them. Identity would be entirely out of the question, and therefore Russellite "ransom" is a myth.

The resurrection of the Scriptures is based upof self-consciousness and amenability on identity. Only those who have reached a state are subjects of resurrection, according to the Scriptures, and these not for a probation, alias "a fair chance," but the worthy who have been faithful in their probation, "to a resurrection of life; and the unworthy, who have been unfaithful in their probation, to a resurrection of"—probation? No, "to a resurrection of damnation" (John 5:29). Instead of teaching the resurrection of every savage being of human form that has ever lived, the Scriptures declare their utter annihilation. The savage red Indian who in the act of scalping a beautiful girl is shot dead, if he were resurrected—he, himself—would come forth with the self-consciousness that he possessed when he was shot dead, and his first thought would be to grasp the scalping knife again. He lived as a brute, he died as a brute, and he will remain where brutes remain. Fill the earth with every human savage that has ever lived, and what sort of a Millennium shall we have? A menagerie would be a more appropriate name; and many would be the iron cage needed to keep the animals of human form from devouring one anther, until they they could be tamed first, then trained, then taught.

Now against the claims, against the presumption, against the audacity of Russellism we submit the clear and unmistakable declarations of the Scriptures of truth, as follows:

Psa. 49:12, 14, 20—Man being in honor abideth not; he is like the beasts that perish. . . . Like sheep that are laid in the grave; death shall feed on them, and the upright shall have dominion over them in the morning; and their beauty shall consume in the grave from their dwelling. . . . Man that is in honor, and understandeth not, is like the beasts that perish.

Isa. 26:13, 14—O Lord our God, other lords beside thee have had dominion over us; but by thee only will we make mention of thy name. They are dead, they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise; therefore hast thou visited them and made their memory to perish.

Prov. 21:16—The man that wandereth out of the way of understanding shall remain in the congregation of the dead.

Jer. 51:39, 57—In their heat I will make their feasts, and I will make them drunken, that they may rejoice and sleep a perpetual sleep, and not awake, saith the Lord. And I will make drunk her princes, and her wise men, her captains, and her rulers, and her mighty men; they shall sleep a perpetual sleep, and not awake, saith the king whose name is the Lord of hosts.

Obadiah 16—For as ye have drunk upon my holy mountain, so shall all the heathen drink continually, yea, they shall drink and they shall swallow down, and they shall be as though they had not been.

Rom. 2:12—For as many as have sinned without law shall perish without law; and as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law.

These Scriptures allow of no evasions, no misunderstandings. Whatever theory may be held of "ransom," it is compelled to respect these divinely inspired declarations. They are directly and immoveably opposed to the Russell theory of "ransom for all," and therefore the question is, Shall we accept God's word? or shall we accept the inventions of Russellism? Those who understand the scriptural ransom will have no difficulty in deciding; but where there is ignorance of this, victims will become a prey to the charms of diabolical delusions.—Selected by Brother B. F. Smith.

Baptism

Brother Russell Harmon was baptized in Eel river, Oct. 10th, 1919, near Raber, Ind. His good wife Sister Harmon has been a member for several years, and it was through her instructive teaching that her husband was led into the truths of the gospel and was persuaded to obey by baptism. Brother and Sister Harmon are not near any church but are earnest students of the Bible, the word of God, which is able to make them wise unto salvation. May God bless them and enable them to come off victorious and gain an abundant entrance into the kingdom.

Rules for Daily Life

Have faith in God, and his immutable promises. He is the giver of every good and perfect gife.

Have faith in Christ, our Redeemer. Through him we receive eternal life. He is our only hope of salvation.

Have faith in the gospel. It is the power of God unto salvation.

Do unto others as ye would they should do unto you.

Be diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord.

Be sure that you are right, then go ahead.

Keep your face toward the light, and the shodows will fall behind.

The Resurrection

Paul's Sublime Description of the Resurrection in 1 Cor. 15th Chapter in Verse

Moreover, brethren, I declare to you
The gospel which I preached throughout the land,
Which ye have all received, and kept in view,
And by its truths ye know wherein ye stand.

For by the gospel ye must all be saved.
Keep well in memory all which ye shall gain;
For ye are free, where once ye were enslaved,
Unless, ye know, ye have believed in vain.

For I delivered unto you the same,
That which was first delivered unto me,
That for our sins Christ died and bore the shame,
That we might live through all eternity.

Then he was buried in the silent tomb,
And on the third day rose a victor then;
And he was seen by Cephas, on the way;
The twelve apostles saw their Lord again.

And many hundred witnesses were there:
Some yet remain, and some in graves now rest;
Then seen of James, who came with love to share,
Then all of the apostles saw their guest.

He last was seen of me, poor human clay:
I seemed as one brought forth before his time;
Of all apostles I am least this day,
For I have been a leading one in crime.

Of all apostles I the least am known,
And I do not deserve the righteous name;
I wronged the Church of God, and I alone
Was saved by Christ, when I was brought to shame.

But I am what I am, by God's own grace,
His grace which he bestows was not in vain;
I labored more than all to win the race,
But yet not I, God's grace was mine to gain.

But whether it were either I or they,
We preach the gospel and therefore believe:
Then let your trust be firm from day to day,
And in your hearts the sacred truths receive.

Now if we preach that Christ rose from the dead,
How say some then he still is in the tomb?
If this be so, then death will reign instead,
And Christ will pierce no more the walls of gloom.

If he rose not then is our preaching vain,
Your faith is vain, false witnesses are we,
For we have preached God raised him up again,
Whom he raised not, if Christ in death shall be.

For they who now are dead shall rise no more,
Then Christ will not awaken from death's sleep.
Our words are vain, which we have preached before,
Your faith once strong ye can no longer keep.

Those who have died in Christ must now remain
To perish in their sepulchres of clay;
If this short life is all that we shall gain,
Then must we dwell in misery day by day.

But now has Christ arisen and left the grave,
And has become the first fruits of the dead;
For since by man came death which could not save
Christ came with life to resurrect instead.

For as in Adam death must come to all,
So those in Christ shall all be made alive;
And in their order each shall hear the call,
Christ first, and then they who in Christ survive.

Then comes the end when he shall cease to reign,
When he shall give the kingdom up to God,
When all authority and power shall wane,
And all his foes beneath his feet are trod

Death is the foe to be destroyed at last,
When all things have been subject to his will;
And when he saith, "All things beneath are cast,
Then naught remains, God's law he did fulfil."

When all things are subdued Christ then will be Subjected to his heavenly Father's will,
When he shall give up all authority
That God may, all in all, be ruler still.

What shall they do those baptized for the dead,
If they shall sleep, and fail to rise at all?
Why then baptized, if all their hopes have fled,
Should they not hear the resurrection call.

Why stand we then in jeopardy each hour?
For there is much rejoicing in your hearts,
Which is in Christ, who gives you strength and power,
While I die daily until life departs.

If I have fought with beasts at Ephesus,
To what advantage then to you or I?
For if the dead rise not, why marvel thus?
Some eat and drink, tomorrow we may die.

Be not deceived, for thoughts of evil men
May soon corrupt the good which ye possess;
Awake to righteousness, nor sin again;
Some know not God, nor will they him confess.

"How are the dead raised up?" some man will say,
"And in what form and body do they come?"
Thou foolish one, that which thou sowest today
Must die before the life shall spring therefrom.

GOLDEN TEXT. Luke 21:19

BE PATIENT WITH THE LIVING

Sweet friend, when thou and I art gone
 Beyond earth's weary labor,
When small shall be our need of grace
 From comrade or from neighbor;
Passed all the strife, the toil, the care,
 And done with all the sighing -
What tender truth shall we have gained
 Alas! by simply dying?

Then lips too chary of the praise
 Will tell our merits over,
And eyes too swift our faults to see
 Shall no defects discover;
Then hands that would not lift a stone
 When stones were thick to cumber
Our steep hill-path, will scatter flowers
 Above our pillowed slumber.

Sweet friend, perchance both you and I,
 Ere love is past forgiving,
Should take the earnest lesson home—
 Be patient with the living!
Today's repressed rebuke may save
 Our blinding tears tomorrow;
Then, patience, e'en when keenest edge
 May whet a nameless sorrow.

'Tis easy to be gentle when
 Death silence shames our clamor,
And easy to discern the best
 Through memory's mystic glamor;
But wise it were for thee and me,
 Ere love is past forgiving,
To take the tender lesson home—
 Be patient with the living.

A Commandment

"This is my commandment that ye love one another, as I have loved you" (John 15:12).

It is difficult for us to grasp the full meaning of the word "love" as Christ used it, because words translated from the language in which they are originally spoken frequently change or lose their richest content.

In spite of this difficulty with words, however, we are able to see clearly just what Christ meant by "love," for his life and character radiantly incarnated the love of God. In the light of his life and death the word becomes luminant and vital. "This is my commandment, that ye love one another, even as I have loved you." We learn to be very careful and very cautious when we set our own attainments as the measure of what we expect from other people. Jesus established this principle when, in teaching his disciples to pray, he showed that they had no right to ask God's forgiveness for their trespasses in any greater measure than they were in the habit of forgiving. And now in consonance with same principle he will not ask them to exercise any greater measure of love than he himself has exemplified. But what a measure of love was his! Brave words such as these fall frequently from the lips of many a man in hours when force of circumstance does not demand that he put them to the proof. In Christ's case, however, these words were spoken just before the Last Supper—the "Agape," as the Greeks termed it, taking the word directly from the Greek verb for divine love and only a few days before the great Act of Love, his crucifixion, of whose impending nearness Jesus was every moment fully cognizant. The love of Christ was no petty use of words. It cost him his life to say with meaning, "that ye love one another, even as I have loved you." When he said, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends," he was consciously foreshadowing the surrender of his own patient life on the the cross. Every statement and every deed in that life finally focused upon and illuminated the one great Act, and there on Calvary he proved that love had a new meaning.

The apostle Paul, through full surrender, had learned to a remarkable degree the long-suffering, enduring, unselfish nature of Divine love, for he placed it as the crown of every Christian attribute. It characterizes more fully than any other virtue the heart of God. The parent loves the child more than the child loves the parent; and not because the child is worthier of love, but because the parent's heart is larger. So Jesus loved his disciples infinitely more than they loved him, because his love was purely born of God, while theirs was tinctured with the earthen vessels from which it flowed. Every enduring act that has enobled our Christianity has been due, not so much to man's love of God as to the keeping and empowering love of God in the hearts of men. The dynamic of love does not ascend; it descends.

Therefore, "beloved, let us love one another; for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not, knoweth not God; for God is love. In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins. Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another."

God's Word is Everlasting

Last eve I passed beside a blacksmith's door,
 And heard the anvil ring the vesper chime;
The looking in, I saw upon the floor
 Old hammers, worn with beating years of time.

"How many anvils have you had," said I,
 "To wear and batter all those hammers so."
"Just one," he said, then with a twinkling eye
 "The anvil wears the hammers out you know."

And so I thought the anvil of God's word
 For ages skeptic blows have beat upon;
Yet tho' the noise of falling blows were heard
 The anvil is unharmed—the hammers gone

Remember the Golden Rule

Perhaps the person is not living who has not certain little peculiarities, but that is no reason why some narrow-minded individual should take it upon herself to weave into whole cloth those tiny, discordant ravellings and then pass on her "discovery" to anyone who will listen. If the listener is a believer in the Golden Rule she will not only turn a deaf ear to such a recital, but dismiss her uncharitable informant as quickly as possible.

Secret of Concentration

One reason for the remarkable powers of concentration possessed by some is the intense love of their work, into which they throw themselves with such ardor as to forget everything else about them. And this, after all, is the secet of all success—to forget oneself in one's work and to become a part of that work itself and so achieve "forgetting and forgot" of all about except the one task to which force, physical and mental, has been brought.

Bible Lesson

God will render to every man according to his deeds: to them who by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory and honor, and immortality, eternal life; but unto them that are contentious, and do not obey the truth, but obey unrighteousness, indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish upon every soul of man that doeth evil, of the Jew first, and also of the Gentile; but glory, honor, and peace, to every man that worketh peace, to the Jew first and also to the Gentile. For there is no respect of persons with God.

The above can be found in Romans 2.6-11 and has much to do with our present, temporal life, as also with that eternal glorified life that we shall receive from Jesus our Lord at his coming and appearing kingdom.

Our lesson today begins and ends with God. It starts out with the remark that God will pay wages to every person that lives, or ever has lived, and they will get just what they work for, no more, no less; nothing different. If our work is seeking God and his Christ for in no other direction can we find "glory and honor and immortality," and we work in a steady go-ahead, tireless up-to-the-minute, conscientious manner (patient continuance), our wages will be "eternal life." But if we belittle God's plan of salvation, quarrel or find fault with his deeds of love and gift of grace, do not believe the things that God has said, and would rather do wicked things than those that are good; then our wages will be everlasting death. The lesson says, "indignation and wrath," should we so conduct ourselves that God would be indignant and angry, then the penalty is the second death.

At one time God had a chosen, favorite people: he clothed them, he housed them, he fed them, he looked after and kept them in every way. "He was their God, and they were his people." This favorits people was the Jewish nation. Then there were another people "who knew not God:" they were known as the Gentiles. These two people had nothing in common; they even did not mix in a business way. That was the condition in the days before Christ, also for a few years after Christ came on the earth. But after a time, God withdrew his special care from the Jews, and formed new friends. He still had and has a chosen people; but now his favorites are all those, whether formerly Jew or Gentile who, believing that "Jesus is the Christ the Son of the living God," have been baptized into his name, and strive to live an honorable, upright, honest life, doing the will of their Father. These are the people who shall receive the wage, or pay, or compensation (call it what you will) of eternal life in glory, honor, and peace. "For there is no respect of persons with God." In other words today God cares not of what sex we are, or where we were born, the color of our skin, whether we are rich or poor, married or unmarried, young or old: he has but one test; and that is, believe what he says; do what he asks; then the wage. Future eternal life, in glory, honor and peace. But if not, no matter who or what we are, indignation and wrath with tribulation and anguish will be our lot.

To those who believe God, and accept Jesus the Christ, his Son, and acknowledge Jesus as their wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption," will now be given that peace of which Jesus said, "Peace I leave with you; my peace I give unto you, not as the world giveth give I unto you. Let not your hearts be troubled, neither let it be afraid;" and in the hereafter, eternal life with Jesus in the presence of God for ever more.

Are the wages not just? are they not liberal? are they not satisfactory? They are yours if you want them.

Just Suppose

If all that we say
In a single day,
With never a word left out,
Were printed each night
In clear black and white,
'Twould prove queer reading no doubt.

And then just suppose
Ere one's eyes he could close,
He must read the day's record through,
Then wouldn't one sigh,
And wouldn't he try
A great deal less talking to do?

And I more than half think
That many a kink
Would be smothered in life's tangled thread:
If one-half we say
In a single day
Were left forever unsaid.—The Grit.

Sunday Morning Address

2 TIM. 2:19: "THE LORD KNOWETH THEM THAT ARE HIS."

THIS WAS the language of Paul to Timothy nearly nineteen centuries ago, and more than seven hundred years before that time the prophet Nahum said, "The Lord knoweth them that trust in him" (Nahum 1:7); and three hundred years before these words were spoken, David in his prayer for a blessing upon his son Solomon, just as he was to take the reins of government, said that the "Lord searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts" (1 Chron. 28:9). "If thou seek him," said he, "he will be found of thee; but if thou forsake him, he will cast thee off forever." We know how true this was in Solomon's case. He forsook God and lost life. How much think you can be hid from God? If he understands all the imaginations of the thoughts, what is there about the human mind that is not open to him?

"If thou forsake him, he will cast thee off forever," said the spirit, speaking through David. What a condition to be in —"cast off forever." Without God and without hope. This is the condition of all creatures before they know God, or become obedient children. How do we know this? Read Eph. 2:11, 12. Paul says: "Ye who in times past were Gentiles in the flesh, at that time you were without Christ being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, strangers from the covenants of promise, not possessing a hope, and without God in the world." What an awful condition to be in: shut out from God, without Christ, without hope, with nothing to look forward to but death!

Jesus says, "I am come that they might have life, and have it more abundantly." Who might have life? His sheep, his chosen ones: those who had heard his voice and followed him. He says he is the Good Sheperd of the sheep. Yes, and those who follow him are his sheep. "My sheep hear my voice," he says, "and they follow me." And what do they get by following him? Hear what he says, "And I give unto them eternal life." What a promise and what a hope! If he gives to them eternal life, then they do not possess it as an inborn principle. The true disciple of Jesus has a hope of eternal life, and that is only part of the grand promise.

Can you, my brother and sister tell me what the balance of the promise is? Many of you can. But go to your Bible and look it out, and make it a golden text for life. Oh it will cheer you when the day break comes in the morning; yes, when the first gleam of sunlight streaks in through your window, and when the azure sky is tinted with the shades of evening. It will go with you from the dayspring till the evening, and when you fall asleep at night tired and worn with the day's duties, and when at times there comes across your pathway a pall of sadness, a pang of woe, a thought of desponding (for I suppose all have at times some of these moments of gloomy foreboding brought about by one thing or another as we tread life's weary pathway), forgetting for the instant these grand promises of God in his Son.

But oh when we recover ourselves and recount those promises, and remember what Jesus our elder brother endured for us that we might have life! Recall his tired and weary journeyings through that land of sunshine and hope: recall his statements to his apostles, and this story about his sheep: it is then that we are lifted up above the toils and cares of life and bask as it were in the sunshine of his and the Father's love.

What else does he say? "And they shall never perish." Just think of it, "never perish." But that is not all. No, what else? "Neither shall anyone pluck them out of my hand." Just think of it: never perish and cannot be plucked out of his hand.

And yet this is not all. No, there is still a stronger tie that binds them. Do not forget it. It

The seed which thou shalt sow is not the same
As that which cometh from the yielding earth;
Of wheat perchance, or yet some other grain,
God gives it shape and life in its new birth.

All flesh is not the same on earth, we find;
One flesh of men there is, as you and me;
Another flesh of beasts of every kind;
One flesh of birds, and fishes of the sea;

And bodies in their grand celestial sphere,
And those of earth, terrestial which we view;
The glory of the heavenly must appear
More beautiful than in earth's dome of blue.

There is one radiant glory of the sun,
Another glory of the moon afar;
And stars of glory in their courses run,
One star must differ from another star.

So is the resurrection of the dead:
Corrupt in death, but raised to life sublime,
Though sown in sin, to glory raised instead;
In weakness sown, yet raised by power divine.

For in a natural body it is sown,
Then raised again in spiritual birth;
There is a natural body of our own,
And one in spirit, which is not of earth.

The first man Adam was a living soul,
The last a quickening spirit from on high;
For mortal man came first, earth was his goal,
And afterwards came life, which could not die.

God made the first man from the common earth,
The second man, the Lord who came from heaven;
As is the earthy, all are born by birth,
But they from heaven are with the spirit given.

As we have borne the earthly image here,
The heavenly image we shall also bear;
For flesh and blood shall in the kingdom not appear,
Nothing corrupt can bring corruption there.

Here is a mystery: we shall not all sleep;
We shall be changed, when at the trumpet's blast,
They who lie in their earthly graves so deep,
Will rise without corruption at the last.

For they who were corruptible before,
Must change to incorruption at the call;
Those who were mortal shall be so no more,
For immortality shall change us all.

When we have left corruption in the grave,
And put on incorruption when we rise;
Then immortality we know will save,
And death is robbed of his long held prize.

"O death, where is thy sting?" why should we fear?
"O grave, where is the victory thou didst win?"
The sting of death is sin begotten here,
And law is the result and strength of sin.

Thank God through Christ, he does the victory give:
Therefore, beloved, be constant, steadfast, true;
Abounding in the Lord's work while we live—
Your labor then will bring much joy to you.

How Much Do You Believe On The Lord Jesus Christ?

A LETTER TO A FRIEND

Dear Friend:

You probably often wonder at our apparent unwillingness to join heartily in your many endeavours for good. Have you, however, given the matter any serious consideration? We are, after all, human like yourselves, and naturally desire community and fellowship in our relationship with those around us. Not only so, it is not infrequently the case that our social and financial interests are adversely affected by absenting ourselves from your religious assemblies. These things being so, it must be apparent to you that every cogent reasons underlie our actions. The statement so often made by you that the majority of "good people" differ from us is no proof that the truth lies with the majority; indeed, anyone at all conversant with the Bible incident, cannot but be aware of the fact that where the exact opposite obtains—all through Bible history. The very names so familiar to us in the sacred record bear ample evidence that minorities, and not majorities, were most general in line with the truth.

When we find that you exhibit an unaccountable indefiniteness regarding the fundamental truths of God's holy word, and that you do not consider that it "really matters what a man's belief may be," so long as he is morally good and active in doing good works, we cannot but take issue with you. We feel that a man cannot really believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and at the same time make of little account, and in fact repudiate, the most solemn teachings of our Lord. We are very much inclined to ask, "How much do you believe in him?" Examination proves it to be very little, a belief that does not go very deep, and for which no reason can be produced, and no proof is forthcoming.

Take for instance, your doctrine of the trinity: where can you find any sanction in the Bible for such an extraordinary belief? We challenge you to bring one single statement of the Lord Jesus that can honestly be quoted in support. You may perhaps quote, as many do, "I and my Father are one"; but two certainly never made a trinity; and if that verse really means what you say (which we deny), then to introduce a third person would unquestionably tend to destroy the oneness named. The plain unequivocal statements of the Lord Jesus were that God was his God, and that he was "come in his Father's name." He himself asked the question, "How can ye believe which receive glory one of another, and the glory that cometh from the only God ye seek not?" He always made a distinction between himself and God, for did he not say, "My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me"? You see at the very outset we find that we do not worship the same God. The doctrine of the trinity is borrowed from the heathen world. The God of the Bible is one God. Paul said, "To us there is but one God." To you these things are not essential—they do not matter—but we feel them to be vital. We believe the Lord Jesus is the Son of God; he himself claimed no more, and we cannot harmonize your teaching with either the Bible or common sense. A person cannot be God and the Son of God.

We believe the gospel (or good news) to be a very different matter from what you teach. We believe it is a message from God to mortal, perishing man, who through sin comes under the power of death. We believe with Paul that "death reigns," and that the gospel of Jesus Christ is God's remedy from the misery of sin, and the terrible reality and thraldom of death to be the "wages of sin"—its end, and its finish—for "sin, when finished, bringing forth death"; "the end of these things is death." We believe in the awful reality of death, hence we are forced to believe also in the sublime truth of "the resurrection of the dead." You, on on the other hand, say "there is no death—there are no dead"; that Christ came to save immortal (never-dying) souls from an eternity of torment. You say all men are immortal, whereas the Bible declares that all men must perish unless they believe on the only begotten Son of God.

When pressed about these things you charge us with having our eyes fixed on the future, and having regard only for that which is to come. But in so doing you close your eyes to facts. Sin and death are ever present with us. It is sin that mars this otherwise beautiful world! It is death that robs us of the fruits of our labors, and tears from us with ruthless hands those we love most. By your tradition you make void the sayings of Christ, and put yourselves outside of many of his most precious promises. Listen: "But they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that age (you see Christ thought a good deal of the future, and you will find the future looms largely in the sacred writings), and the resurrection of the dead (note that), neither marry nor are given in marriage . . . neither can they die any more . . . . being the children of the resurrection." If "there are no dead" there can be no "resurrection of the dead": and this teaching of Christ does not apply in your case. By your own confession you do not (in this) believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.

So small is your belief in the Lord Jesus Christ, and so little do you regard his example and precept that you designate as non-essential the confession of faith by baptism. Surely actions speak louder than words, and we feel compelled to ask once more, "How much do you believe on the Lord Jesus Christ?" Paul says, "buried with him by baptism," yet you affirm "sprinkling will do," nor does it matter according to your way of thinking whether the Lord's command is honored or not! We look for a new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness, and we pray daily that God's kingdom may come, and his will be done on earth even as it is done in heaven. We thank God for all the blessings we have now, and bless him for the promise that we shall reign with Christ on the earth: we can therefore see some consistency in the training which we are each undergoing that we may take part in the "wonders of the age to come" and the glories that God hath in store, of which we are now getting the earnest: for where sin abounded grace shall much more abound, and the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea.

How different—how very different—are your hopes to ours! We look forward to the time when sin, pain, and sorrow shall be no more, and when death, "the last enemy," shall be destroyed. You deny the reality of death. Death is no enemy to you, for it does not exist, and it cannot therefore be "the wages of sin." By so doing you make void the word of God; you shut yourselves out of the wondrous plan of salvation and, yes, and you make God a liar. Oh how awful the thought!! Paul must have felt the awfulness of it, for he said, "Let God be true, and every man a liar." With you sin and evil are never eliminated from the universe of God: sin is never conquered, but men, women, and children must suffer indescribable horrors to untold ages.

We might continue much longer pointing out how totally at variance are your views with plain Bible statement, and how you do not hesitate to use the very language of Scripture in denying its most positive assertions. Again, we cannot refrain from asking, "How much do you believe in the Lord Jesus Christ?" For reply you say, "Better men than you hold the views to which you so strongly object." Truly so. Cornelius, in some respects, is a splendid case in point, yet a message was required to be sent that he might hear words whereby he "might be saved," even though he was "a devout man and prayed to God always." The church today would have made him a member without a question, and would probably have drawn preferential comparison between him and St. Paul who so frequently "contended earnestly" in the synagogues and market places, and turned the world upside down.

Yours faithfully,

R. H. Judd.

Russellism Refuted

ARTICLE NINE

Election and Free Grace

RUSSELLISM endeavors to harmonize the conflicting views of certain sects on the doctrines of "election" and "free grace" by applying the former to Russellites in the present, and the latter to mankind universally, except Russellites, in the future. Russellites are supposed to be "elected or selected" while all the rest of mankind is given "free grace." Referring to Mr. or Mrs. Russell's (some say Mrs., others Mr.) "Plan of the Ages," the "Millennial Dawn," vol. 1., p. 96, says: "The order in the 'Plan of the Ages,' if observed, will show us clearly, that an Election has been in progress during the present and the past ages; what is by way of distinction designated Free Grace is God's gracious provision for the world in general during the Millennial Age." The writer is careful to say that the election is a "selection according to fitness and adaptability to the end God has in view," from which we are left to conclude that Russellites alone possess the "fitness" and "adaptability" to be the subjects of "selection" and not of "free grace," while the rest of Adam's race are to be the subjects of "free grace" in a second life time because they lacked the "fitness and adaptability" required by the "selection" in their first life time.

This means that "free grace" is withheld during the past and the present, and given in the future, and therefore represents God as partial. The writer of the "Dawn" even goes so far as to estimate how many will be the subjects of the superior favor by "selection" and how many, not selected, will have "free grace" forced upon them whether or no. The estimate is that about less than one billion are "selected," while one hundred and forty-two billions will have "free grace." This is an effectual way of falsifying the words of the apostle Peter "God is no respecter of persons." It is a denial that "the faith was once for all delivered to the saints"; and to add to the boldness of this absurd theory, we are complacently asked to believe that the knowledge of this was hidden in the darkness of all past ages, and its revelation was not "due" until it was revealed to the author of "Millennial Dawn."

The whole theory is based upon the delusion that flesh and blood is of great value in the sight of God, and that in order to save it for eternity if "selection" fail, "free grace" must make up for the failure. In other words, If you will not accept "ransom" voluntarily in this life, and join the Russel "little flock," it shall be forced upon you by resurrectional power, in which you shall have no choice, and in which merit or demerit will count for nothing. You will wake up from the sleep of death, and find yourselves a mixed multitude of savages, of the woods and of the praries, of thieves, murderers, and adulterers, of idiots, infants, and philosophers, and of good, well-meaning people whom Russellism fails to find all of you a heterogeneous mass with "free grace" infused into your bodies, whether your had any brains in your previous life or not; you will all be inoculated with "free grace" and ransomed," notwithstanding that many of you lived your previous life in reckless sinfulness and total depravity. All this folly is avoided by accepting the simplicity and consistency and truthfulness of the Scriptures, in declaring that the entire race fell in the federal head, and that as soon as the fall occurred "free grace" opened the door that sin had closed. In doing this no one was forced to enter the door. God's love and goodness opened it, and "once for all" delivered the one faith to the saints who had fallen and were ransomed. The door was left open. It has never been closed. In this, God did more than his part, viewed from the standpoint of justice. His act was an act of love, and the open door throughout all ages has been a witness of his great love. He But to enter the door required an act of man. He must act now. It is his turn; and his mental and moral action is the only means that will give him the "fitness" and "adaptability" for eternity. If he enters in any other way "he is a thief and a robber:" and if he were forced through the door by physical power, whether he had mental and moral powers or not, he would be as worthless for eternity as he was for time, and more so. There must be "fruit meet for repentance" before the door can be entered. This is a truth that commends itself to reason, to justice, and to wisdom, while to force "free grace" in the form of physical change upon good, bad and indifferent alike, is to outrage every principle of that righteousness which is revealed in the Scriptures of truth, and it is to put a premium upon sin in the first life time, because it offers "ransom" to a better nature without merit, and a far more easy probation after the "ransom." From the time the door was opened, and man ransomed to the opportunity he lost, the voice of God has been, "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come." If many have wandered too far away to hear the voice of love, God is not to be held responsible for that. He delivered the "one faith" into the custody of man to start with. Those who forsook it and wandered into ways of idolatry, or ignorance, or depravity, thereby give evidence of their unfitness for future life; if these conditions were transmitted to their posterity, and rendered worse by the hereditary transfer, then the inheritors were still more unfit for eternity, and for the glory and honor of God in ages to come. Their existence within providentially limited bounds has been permitted in this evil life, and the purpose it has served has been as an object lesson for those whom God has been "taking out" as "a people for his name." Apart from this they have been fit only to be "turned into sheol with all nations that forget God;" "like sheep they are laid in the grace and death (not resurrection, or life) shall feed on them" (Psa. 49:14). Reproof and correction have done them no good. "Their way is their folly, yet their posterity approve their sayings" (verse 13). "Nevertheless, man being in honor abideth not; he is like the beasts that perish" (verse 12). They are beyond redemption. Therefore the wisdom of God has decreed that they shall not "have any more a portion for ever in any thing that is done under the sun." They are of "the dead" who "know not any thing, neither have they any more a reward; for the memory of them is forgotten" (Eccl 9:5, 6). They were of the flesh and not of the spirit, and therefore belong to those of whom it is said: "For all flesh is grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away: but the word of the Lord endureth for ever" (1 Pet. 1:24, 25). Selected by Brother B. F. Smith.

Our good fight of faith consists in a considerable measure in our defence of the truth of God, which includes also our defence of the character of God. This will mean our willingness to stand for the truth at any cost and against any number of assailants—against the creeds and theories of men, which would misrepresent the good tidings of great joy which the Lord and apostles have announced, and which shall, thank God, yet be unto all people. As the apostle says, "I am set for the defence of the truth." We can do no less than defend the truth. Truth is God's representative, Christ's representative, and hence our standard; and as true soldiers we must defend our standard, even unto death (Jude 3).—Brother Rocker.

What For?

Written for the Young People's Socieyt

I have found it an excellent plan when doing any special church work to ask myself the question, "What am I doing it for?" Why do I get up at unreasonable hours to write for our own dear Restitution, and to the sick, the bereaved, the discouraged, and to the eager students of the Household of faith? Why put aside pressing tasks out doors and in, that religions duties may be done? Why deny myself to give that "the faith of Christ," may go into regions afar? Do I do these things to please myself; to win the love of my fellow soldiers, and the praise of my friends?

How quick the answer comes, "No: I am doing it for Jesus who did so much for me." Work is not irksome when done for him, nor does it bring weariness of mind or body, but rather strength and courage and joy.

Do you, my dear young friends, ever get tired of your God-given work? Does it seem as if it were all in vain? Do your hearts faint because you see only very small results or perhaps at times none? Ask yourselves the question, "What are we working for and for whom?" Ask it repeatedly: ask it prayerfully. The answer will give you courage and confidence, for working for Jesus means working with Jesus and for certain victory.

"For this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith," We under Christ, and with him will conquer it by and by, and all evil doing will be put for ever away. You are helping, grandly helping to win the battle for Christ: such a battle as all the peace conferences in the world, all the peace leagues of nations, could never win. Your unblemished integrity of character, your carefulness of speech, your love for another, your avoidance of sin, your confident trust in God, your prayerfulness, your thoughtfulness toward the poor, your steadfast clinging to the truth, all tell toward the glorious victory that is to fill the earth with the knowledge and glory of the Lord.

What for? For "things it has never entered into the heart of man to conceive of"—that is what you are working for. Working for a sinless world; working to have the earth swept clear of graveyards; working to have the time come when poor human forms shall no more writhe in pain; working to have the tabernacle of God be with men, and he himself dwell with them and be their God. Work on; pray on: Jesus is coming!

Hesitancy after the wrong is seen, increases the power of temptation.

From "He" to "She"

An Explanatory Version

Through their "Marian devotion" our Roman Catholic friends have perverted the first gospel sermon by erroneously attributing the work of Christ to the Virgin Mary in their "explanatory version" of Genesis 3:15.

The Lord said to Satan:

> And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel (Gen. 3:15).

> I will put enmities between thee and the woman, and thy seed and her seed: she shall crush thy head, and thou shalt lie in wait for her heel (the Douay "Roman Catholic" version).

Dean Alford, D. D., "an eminent Biblical critic," says of this text:

> Observe it is it, or he, viz. the woman's seed, that shall bruise the serpent's head, not she, as the Vulgate and Church of Rome have it here. Even were it she, no such applications of the words could be made as that Church makes to the Virgin Mary, for it would mean she, the woman then present, by means of her seed which is to come (Alford's "Explanatory Commentary" on Genesis, p. 17, London, 1872).

Another writer says of this text:

> "It" i.e. Christ. The corruption of this in the Vulgate into "she" lies at the root of Mariolatry; the verb in sing. masc. shows that zer'a (seed) is here to be taken in sing., with Sept., i.e. Christ (Note on Gen. 3:15, in the "Companion Bible").

However, one Roman Catholic writer admits that the reading of "the Hebrew text . . . refers to the seed of the woman," and that their translation, "she," is "an explanatory version." (The Catholic Ency. Vol. 15, p. 464).

That this "explanatory version" is contrary to the Hebrew is further evident from the following translations:

> And thy seed shall tread on the head (Tyndale's Trans.).
> He shall watch against thy head (Sept. Ver. Gr. and Eng.).
> He shall bruise thee on the head (Boothroyd's Trans.).
> He shall bruise thy head (Rabbi Leeser's Trans.).
> He doth bruise thee' thy head (Young's Trans.).
> He shall crush thy head (Rotherham's Trans.).
> He shall bruise thy head (American R. V.).

"And the God of peace (not the Virgin Mary) shall bruise satan under your feet shortly" (Rom. 16:20. See also Heb. 2:14).

Uncle Nat was telling Aunt Dinah about the new preacher at the colored church.

"He's a pow'ful smaht man, most specially in de mattah ob prayer. Why, he axes fer lots ob things dat dis niggah neber knowed de Lawd had."

is about his faithful followers he is now talking. He says, "My Father who gave them to me, is greater than all." Yes, greater than all other forces combined. And no one is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand. What a strong hand we now have. Yet this is not all. Go and read it and make it a permanent Bible proof text. It will cheer you the balance of your days. Yes, it will be sunshine in your soul, while treading life's weary journey, if you are a true child of God. Now do not forget that God knows all who are his. And you know also, if you are walking in the narrow way, and remember that illustration given by Brother Cattell when at the table, "That a broad gate will not fit a narrow way." Yes, we know each day if we are his children.

Then do not forget that the gate you passed through was a very strait one (which means very narrow and difficult). But now to come back to our subject again. "The Lord knows those who are his." Yes, and he never forgets them, either. No one can pluck them out of his hand.

And now for the conclusion of the whole matter. Jesus sums it all up in one beautiful sentence when he says, "I and my Father are one" concerning this thing. One in mind and purpose. So that if Jesus and the Father are thus minded that none of the sheep shall ever be plucked out of their hands. I think that the sheep have a foundation that cannot be easily moved, yes, one worth having. God and his only Son united on a plan. What thing you, loved ones? Is not this good news? Is this worth striving for? Is any one going to get your crown? I am determined through God's favor, not to lose mine. I want to eat of that tree of lfe. A conqueror I must be, to to have a seat in his throne; and that he has promised to all who endure to the end.

Be careful, then, not to be left out. Do you remember what Paul said to the brethren at Ephesus; and this was the church who had the promise of eating of the tree of life, if an overcomer. Paul says those who complied with the conditions, and are faithful, determined to overcome, that they were sealed unto the day of redemption.

Let us recapitulate: "The Lord knows those who are his"; Jesus says, "My sheep hear my voice"; "They follow me," "I give them eternal life"; "No one can pluck them out of my hand"; "The Father who gave them me, is greater than all"; "None can pluck them out of his Father's hand"; and "I and my Father are one." They are one on this subject. None can pluck them out of their hands, for the Father is greater than all. Paul says, the true believer is sealed unto the day of redemption, by the Holy Spirit of promise, which is the earnest of our inheritance. Does not this good news cheer you, weary and worn ones? Let us lift up our heads and rejoice for our redemption draweth nigh, if the movement in the Orient presages anything. Be of good cheer. It will not be long before we shall see the King in his beauty, and wear garments of heavenly glory. May it be very soon is my prayer.

Salt and Peace

Have salt in yourselves and have peace one with another (Mark 9:50).

WE TURN to the sermon on the mount as given by Matthew in his 5th, 6th, and 7th chapters for though few people may have recognized the connection between the beatitudes and our text it is in those beatitudes that we find what Jesus meant when he said, "Have salt in yourselves and have peace one with another." It was the same as saying, "I have given you the indispensable features of character that must become yours if you would be the accepted sons and daughters of the Lord God Almighty, see to it that you have them: let these sayings of mine sink into yuor ears."

The very nature of the country where this sermon was uttered seemed to emphasize the utility and importance of salt. Naturally rich the soil of Galilee had been kept so by moderate applications of salt, brought from the shores of the Dead Sea. It was used mixed with the manure heaps, to hasten their decomposition, as well as separately, and Galilee therefore, being one the most fertile, had become one of the most populous districts in all Palestine.

Its climate was of almost perpetual spring. Its grain fields brought forth "thirty, sixty, and an hundred fold." Its trees were of many kinds, its fruits marvellously sweet, its vines luxuriant in growth; the scenery as seen from its hill slopes, indescribably charming. It was in this Eden like region that the larger part of the life of Jesus was spent, first at Nazareth and later at Capernaum; and here it was that his ministry, that glorious ministry that was to revolutionize the world was begun. He had just returned from his first missionary tour when the sermon on the mount was uttered. He had visited the cities and villages throughout all Galilee, and preached in their synagogues and in open air meeting, giving to his glad Benjamite hearers the cheering news that the kingdom of God was again to be restored to Israel, this time in world-wide extent and splendor, with the tares all gathered out and burned, and all things that offend eliminated as foretold by Daniel and others of their prophets. This does not all appear in Matthew's account of the subject matter of his Master's teaching, but is to be gathered from the after experience of Jesus.

Vast multitudes had attended his meetings and of these multitudes many accepted his teachings, though not in the cities of Chorazin, Bethsaida, and Capernaum, the people of these cities did not repent; they were offended at him, and "woe" was pronounced upon them for not having believed after his divine mission had been attested by the miracles of healing that had been wrought before their very eyes, not a disease being able to withstand his power. The fame of Jesus had gone throughout all Syria, and "the great light" that had "sprung up" for the people of Galilee, who had been sitting "in the region and shadow of death," was throwing its beams across the sea, for great crowds came over from the regions that had been Manasseh's before these tribes were taken captive by the Assyrians, other crowds came up from Jerusalem and from Judea; but these Jews, like the people in the cities along the lake shore, were faithless.

We have been wont to think that it was a very high mountain into which Jesus went up to deliver the illimitable discourse that we are to consider in this, and perhaps in other papers, but it was not, for the ground does not rise into lofty eminences just back of Capernaum, but only into the modest elevations that are termed "hills" in physical geography. But into which of these hills he went up, cannot be determined.

We have also been wont to think that where Matthew says, "when he was set, his disciples came unto him," that he meant only the chosen few who had been singled out to afterwards become his apostles, but only Peter and Andrew his brother, and James and John, the sons of Zebedee, had at this time been chosen. The others were not called and the full complement of the twelve commissioned by two and two until after his second missionary tour, so Jamieson, Fausset and Brown think, and they give good reasons for believing that the sermon on the mount as represented by Matthew is not the same discourse with that in Luke 6:17-49; and this is the opinion of Lange, Cresswell, Burks, Webster and Wilkinson.

Men often repeat discourses with variations as new audiences face them. Jamison Fausset and Brown and Guke also think that a multitude of disciples were included in the number who came to him on the hill, and that although his words were addressed to these and to the four in the inner circle, that multitudes of others were present, who had not heard and accepted the gospel of the kingdom. This view seems reasonable, for Matthew says, "the people were astonished at his doctrine," and how could this be if they had not heard it?

Galilee seems to have been so called from a little tract of country around Kadesh-Napthali, in which were the twenty towns given by Solomon to Hiram, king of Tyre. Of course these towns were thereafter occupied by strangers, and for this reason Isaiah gave the upper Galilee the name "Galilee of the Gentiles." It embraced the whole mountain range lying between the upper Jordan and Phoenicia. Capernaum was on the north shore of the lake. I have given you a somewhat lengthy prelude, but this seemed to be necessary for unless we see Jesus in his environments, "go with him afield," as it were, we cannot understand so well what he says nor get near enough to him to love him as we ought.

We will go back now to the sermon on the mount. Jesus opens his mouth. Let us listen as we never have listened before—the Bible open at the place. He says, "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." Jesus did not mean "poor" as to temporal possessions; he had reference to the one thing needful," "the pearl of great price." "Before God we are void of every thing." He is happy who becomes conscious of this; conscious that he is lost and undone and utterly helpless aside from God, and that he can, in and of himself, weave no garment of righteousness that will avail to cover his sins.

We are in abject poverty; our coffers are empty. We have nothing in our hands wherewith to purchase eternal life. Our own good works will not serve for the purpose, though they may make us seem faultless in the eyes of men; for our own righteousness does not bring us into the saving name; does not make us Christ's. We must get where we can say with assurance,

> Jesus, thy blood and righteousness
> My beauty are, my glorious dress.

We may have great riches and give them all to the poor, and yet be "as sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal," for even though "we give our bodies to be burned" we cannot have part in God's everlasting kingdom unless we come to him stripped and naked as to any worth or worthiness of our own.

We cannot be Christian without Christ. We must humbly accept the gift of God on his own terms. Not else can we show our love and reverence to him. If we love him we will obey.

Continuing his discourse, Jesus says, "Blessed are they that mourn for they shall be comforted." This beatitude is akin to the first. Having discovered our poverty and helplessness, we naturally mourn, and stretching out our hands to the only one who can save, find comfort that endures, not only through all the troubled days of this present fleeting life, but for the ages of eternity.

"Mourning after a godly sort" is sure to bring comfort. Sin has brought us under a condemnation that we cannot, by our works, escape. The law is inexorable: we must die, unless we choose to come under the atoning blood.

How that concourse of people must have listened as Jesus made clear to their understanding the first steps that must be taken, if they would become the children of God, and inherit the blessings and the glory promised to all who show that they truly love him by "keeping his commandments." No wonder they said, "Never man spake like this man." And no man ever had, for no man had ever before claimed to be "the bread of life that giveth life to the world." For it is here made plain that having believed the gospel of the coming kingdom that Jesus preached, discovered their abject poverty; clothed in "filthy rags" of self-righteousness, and mourned over their helplessness and sin, those who would become followers of Christ must not only hear but do the sayings of Jesus, must eat the living bread; or in other words, must accept him as their own personal Savior by taking his name as the gospel requires.

Editorial

After a protracted visit in Glasgow, Scotland, Sister Meldrum has returned home and to our welcome.

It is impossible for an egotist to "esteem others better than himself." Thinking more of himself than anyone else, he naturally expects homage from others as subordinates; and when this is not forth coming, he feels abused and wronged. He becomes revengeful and quarrelsome. To egotism, then, must be charged all the quarrels in the church. Egotism is self-esteem; self-esteem is self-worship; and self-worship is idolatry.

During the week the church was shocked by the sudden death of Sister Hattie Goss. Our deceased Sister had been organist for many years, and she had an excellent record for faithfulness. One by one, inexorable time drags us into the grave. But when the righteous perish, all should lay it to heart (Isa. 57:1). We all keenly feel the loss of those who are faithful, for the faithful are so few. The loss however is only temporary, as God will restore them and beautify them with salvation in "that day" for which we long and pray. Brother George B. Alldridge, in a very acceptable manner, preached the funeral discourse, showing from the Scriptures to a large gathering of bereaved relations, friends, brethren, and sisters the hope in which Sister Goss lived and died, after which she was laid away with "the beloved that sleep" to await the return of him who is "the resurrection and the life."

Sisters Mary Knowles, Zephene Brown, and Alice Chappelle were joint hostesses to the Young People's Society at the home of Sister Chappelle, Thursday evening, Oct. 30. There was an exceptionally large attendance, including three visitors and two new members. The Corresponding Secretary reported a communication from Brother Donaldson, who asked to be rememebred to all the young people; also greetings to the Society and an article from Auntie Wince entitled, "What Am I Doing It For?" which may be found elsewhere in this paper. Deepest sympathy is extended to Brother Goss and family on account of the death of Sister Goss.

Brother Ernest Lindow conducted the lesson—"The kingdom of God is within you" (Luke 17:20, 21). No place in the Bible are the pharisees a people of God, but are called a perverse generation (Matt. 17:17; 12:34); so it would not be logical for such a people to have the kingdom of God in their hearts. Dan. 2:44 tells us that the real kingdom of God shall never fall. It is to be a divine political dominion on earth. This kingdom is neither of the past nor present, but of the future (John 18:36). The margin of our texts reads, "the kingdom of God is among you," and the Diaglott renders it, "God's royal majesty is among you." Matt. 7:21; 18:3; Mark 9:47 show that only a certain class of people shall enter this kingdom, so the evidence is conclusive that this "kingdom of God" shall be a dominion to be entered, and is not a condition within man. Have You Made Your Will?

We are getting older every day. During life men usually make a little more wealth than they use. The result is that as death approaches nearer and nearer to us, we have to think of how we are going to dispose of this surplus of unused wealth.

With most men this problem is easily solved. They make a will. The first line in this will usually reads, "In the name of the benevolent Father of all. Amen." Now the Father, formally acknowledged, is the Father of light and life; in him we live and move and have our being; the cattle upon a thousand hills are his; the silver and gold are his, for he made them all. "The Lord thy God giveth thee power to get wealth." Notwithstanding that God has given us all we have, we usually pass him by in a will with only a verbal recognition, and proceed to give Sam $5000; Jane $3000; and so on, until we have disbursed all that God has given us among our family and blood relations! No per cent, however small, is given to God! Reader, have you remembered God in your will? Have you left as much for The Restitution as you have for your son Sam? Have you willed as much to the Church as you did to your daughter Jane? Have you left more to your relations after the flesh than to your relatives after the spirit? If you have left all to your folks and nothing for God and his truth, you should be heartily ashamed, repent speedily, and re-write your will the day you read this editorial. See to it that Christ and his family share equally at least in your wealth with Adam and his family. We say "equally" advisedly; for they should have more. To leave them without anything is a clear case of robbery.

Communication

They spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened.-Mal. 3:16.

Dear Brethren and Sisters of Texas, Greeting:

As I have traveled over some fine country and have seen some very fine crops, I am wondering how much will be used for the greatest cause men ever lived or died for—to make men free indeed. We have had our Liberty Loans to get a freedom that cannot make us free indeed. Now cannot we have our First Liberty Loans in Texas that will pay the greatest interest and be the greatest blessing to mankind of any work? Now with good crops what can we do to put an evangelist in the field in Texas? I have asked before and have heard from very few of the Texas brethren, but have received encouragement from some in the north. Now this appeal is to each one that reads this letter. Let us know what you can and will do. Remembering that if we sow sparingly, we shall reap also sparingly. And let every one give as the Lord has prospered him. Now if any feel inclined to send help, send to C. A. Robbins, Riveira, Texas; and if we fail to get enough, it will be returned to the sender. If any cannot send money now, but will later, write how much and when you will give. Now we must remember the parable of the ten virgins, and not be like the five foolish virgins. Let us keep oil in our vessels, and our lamps trimmed and burning; for we believe the cry will soon go out, "Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him." May the good Lord help us all to be ready to say, "Even so, come Lord Jesus."

Yours in hope,

Mrs. W. A. Robbins.

"Out of Darkness Into Light"

Romans 8:3, is then cited in proof of the explanation of Heb. 2:14: "God sending his Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh." "For sin," in this text is taken to mean "by a sacrifice for sin," and "condemned sin in the flesh," the putting to death of sin as a physical thing. It is reasoned that when Peter said, "Who his own self bear our sins in his body upon the tree," that there must have been sin in Christ's body, otherwise Christ could not have borne it in his body upon the tree, as Peter said he did; hence, what was as a matter of fact condemned by death on the cross was "sin in the flesh" as a physical thing, and not personal sins.

The statement in Heb. 9:26, "he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself," is said to mean that Christ by his death put away "sin in the flesh" by the death of his body, confirming the texts already quoted. Now it is said, that this theory is a basis for faith; that by faith in it, proven by baptism into the death of Christ, that personal sins are forgiven. A supporting Scripture is found in Rom. 6:9, 10, "Death hath no more dominion over him, for in that he died, he died unto sin once"; that is to say, he died unto "sin in the flesh," to get rid of it, that it might not be the cause of death any more to him, therefore, seeing that he had been raised from te dead, there would be no more "sin in the flesh" to cause death, that death might have dominion over him.

The passage in 2 Cor. 5:21, which reads, "Him who knew no sin he made to be sin on our behalf; that we might become the righteousness of God in him," is said to mean that Christ was made "sinful flesh," flesh full of sin, "sin in the flesh."

The next theory, we may speak of as theory No. 2. It regards theory No. 1 as too physical and mechanical, and as not locating the seat of individual responsibility for sin at the right place, which is with the free will and with the conscience. Theory No. 1 is regarded as very good in a way, that it, so far as physical results go; but falls short of giving "the mind of the Spirit" in relation to the sacrifice of Christ. The cause for the remission of sins, personal sins, is too far removed from the act of remission or the time when a sinner is forgiven his sins to form a basis of faith: there is no connecting link. There must be between sin and the forgiveness of sin, the consciousness of sin and repentance. The mission of Christ was, that repentance and remission of sin might be preached among all nations beginning at Jerusalem (Luke 24:47). It is the moral aspect of the sacrifice of Christ that is essential to understand and believe; the physical and mechanical follow as an effect and are entirely outside of the jurisdiction of the free-will. The descendants of Adam are not responsible because they have "sin in the flesh," not for their natural death; in no way are they guilty for the state into which they have been born. God does impute sin where there is a knowledge of his law (Rom. 3:20). "By the law is the knowledge of sin"; and in chapter 5:13, "sin is not imputed where there is no law." The wages for imputed sin is death, "The wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23). Over this death the sinner who knows the law of God has control and can prevent it, for God by his law has shown him the way from death to life; and that way is by faith in "Jesus Christ and him crucified," expressed through "the obedience of faith" (Rom. 16:26). In this way sins are forgiven and therefore the penalty or punishment not inflicted. "There is therefore now no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus" (Rom. 8:1).

Theory No. 2 teaches that baptism connects the repentant sinner with the death of Christ on the

The Reserved Inheritance

Text: Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time (1 Pet. 1:3-5).

FROM THIS text orthodoxy derives its main proof of heaven going at death; Russellism finds in it proof of a kingdom in which none but the saints of the gospel dispensation can participate, or rather an invisible phase, of the kingdom of Christ. Some who claim to be more enlightened abuse us for believing otherwise by howling "infidel" while swallowing Russell's sugar coated pills. Does the Bible teach that the righteous of this age will go to heaven ?

(1). "And the Lord said unto Abraham, after that Lot was separated from him, Lift up thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art northward, and southward, and eastward and westward; for the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever" (Gen. 13:14, 15).

Do you say this applies to Old Testament saints only ? If so, let Paul show you better: "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seed as many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ" (Gal. 3:16). This makes the promises reach Christ. Do they teach Christ's people ? Listen: "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise" (Gal. 3:29). Again: "And now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers" (Acts 26:6). Israel's fathers were Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob (Acts 7: 32). Hence Paul, a New Testament saint hoped for what Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were promised, and as an inhertance in the land was the thing promised them, it is evident the same was promised to Paul. Paul was an heir, and an heir must inherit; therefore Paul will inherit a home in the earth, since his hope was the gospel hope. The gospel only offers a home on earth to believers.

(2). Jesus promised, "Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth" (Matt. 5:5). What meek ? The meek, all the meek of every dispensation, no doubt are included. But to make it plain we will hear Jesus further: "Fear not, little flock; for it is my Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom" (Luke 12:32). Where is the kingdom to be when given the saints ? "Under the whole heaven" (Dan. 7:27), not up in it. Then the proof is positive that the saints will not inherit heaven.

(4). Jesus says, "As I said unto the Jews, Whither I go ye cannot come; so now I say to you" (John 13:33). Where was Jesus going ? All admit to heaven; then the disciples of Christ will not go there.

(5). Paul declares, "Jesus Christ . . . in his time shall show, who is the blessed and only potentate, the King of kings and Lord of lords: who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto," etc. (1 Tim. 6:14, 15). Where does this King of kings or God dwell ? "Hear thou (God) in heaven, thy dwelling place" (1 Kings 8:30). "Our Father who art in heaven" (Matt. 6:19). Then God dwells in light which no man can approach unto. God dwells in heaven, and hence it is the lighted place which man cannot approach unto. This is positive proof that man never goes to heaven. But Russellites and probationists for dead sinners of this and past ages must have a kingdom in heaven that they may have the unrighteous, whom God says shall not inherit the kingdom of God (1 Cor. 6:9, 10) in some part of the kingdom of God, called "the earthly phase." Yet we have seen that "the wicked shall not inherit the earth," making ample evidence that even if there are to be two kingdoms, the unrighteous will not inherit the earthly kingdom, any more than the heavenly.

What is Reserved in Heaven for Us ?

"Ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God" (Col. 3:5). Where is Christ ? In heaven with God (Acts 1:11; Rev. 3:21; Acts 7:56). Then our eternal life which we shall, if faithful, inherit (Matt. 19:29), is an inheritance incorruptible, reserved in heaven for us, and will be given us when Jesus comes. We will then be clothed with our house which is from heaven (2 Cor. 5:2). "For the hope which is laid up for us in heaven" (Col. 1:5). "In hope of eternal life, which God that cannot lie promised" (Tit. 1:2). Here the hope is laid up, and promised, and will appear when Christ appears.

"Great in is your reward in heaven" (Matt. 5: 12). But do they get it there ? No; for "behold, I (Jesus) come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according to his works" (Rev. 22:12). "He comes to reckon with his servants" (Matt. 35:31, compare ver. 19 and Luke 19:15). His reward could not be with him if he left it in heaven, and as it is given after he arrives there is no room for it to be given in heaven. It is now in heaven, then it will be here on earth; and this shows clearly how our reward—inheritance—is now reserved in heaven. Paul's crown of righteousness is laid up for him, and will be given at Jesus' appearing. We are commanded, "Lay up treasures in heaven"; but are never told to try to go there after them. "We shall reign on earth" (Rev. 5:10). "Reign with Christ" (Rev. 20:4). Who is to reign on Mount Zion, and before his ancients gloriously (Isa. 24:23. "Upon David's throne" Luke 2:32) "Over Israel" who is restored in a remnant (Luke 2:33; Isa. 10:21). And the left of the nations, after the wicked have been destroyed, and the everlasting gospel has been praached and accepted by the living remnant of all nations during the period of judgment (comp. Zech. 14:16 with Rev. 14:6, 7). The people who worship the beast and his image after the angel's everlasting gospel message has been proclaimed drink of the wrath of God without mixture, and are tormented as offenders, and gathered out of the kingdom (Rev. 14:10; Matt. 13:11) and cast into the furnace of fire (Matt. 13:42), and destroyed (Rev. 11:18). The law being for this dispensation, "Except a man be born of water and spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God" (John 3:5). We must strive lawfully, or lose the reward according to Paul (2 Tim. 2:5). The man who is expecting to get into the kingdom for probation will fail, and the man who promises sinners who die in sin admission into the kingdom, makes the words of Jesus null and useless; for of what use is a law that does not bind ?

"Jesus Christ and Him Crucified"

1 Cor. 2: 2:

The discussion of this subject, and the different views held in reference to it, has been the cause of much sorrow of heart, and also the separation of brethren from the fellowship of each other in connection with the Lord's supper.

All can agree that somehow, and in some way, that by faith in Jesus Christ as the Messiah foretold by the prophets of Israel, and also his death, burial and resurrection from the dead on the third day, that the condemnation previously resting upon the believer for sin, which its wages earned, (Rom. 6:23, "the wages of sin is death") is removed; and eternal life as a thing of promise secured, to be realized at the second coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead. That the Scriptures make plain the "how and why," there can be no doubt; but inasmuch as Christ Jesus was sent to preach the gospel to the poor and to heal the broken hearted (Luke 4:18), and such although "good and honest in heart," are unable to make plain for themselves or others, the many statements in the Scriptures bearing upon the subject of "Christ crucified," so as to give an understanding reason for the hope that is in them, we submit, that so far as Christadelphians are concerned, a difference of understanding things not stated in "the Birmingham Statement of Faith" should not be made a reason for disfellowship. To insist upon accepting any one of the many theories and doctrines which have been floated and propounded, is to assume an awful responsibility, and to trifle with one's future destiny. Investigation in reference to "Jesus Christ Crucified" should be encouraged and not tabled or pigeon-holed, for fear of trouble and division. There is such a thing for those already in fellowship in an ecclesia as "attaining unto the unity of the faith" (Eph. 4:13), which is a most desirable state for brethren to be in. Jude exhorted that the faith should earnestly be contended for (verse 3). Therefore no phase of truth should be buried in silence for fear of consequences; but what kind of contention must it be ? "For though we walk in the flesh, we do not war according to the flesh (for the weapons of our warfare are not of the flesh, but mighty before God to the casting down of strongholds); casting down imaginations, and every high thing that is exalted against the knowledge of God, and bringing every thought into captivity to the obedience of Christ" (2 Cor. 10:3-5). Paul teaches here that "the mind of the flesh" must not be used in warfare for the faith. Many divisions undoubtedly can be traced as a cause to the use of "the sword of the Spirit" by "the mind of the flesh."

Paul says: "The Lord's servant must not strive, but be gentle toward all, apt to teach, forbearing, in meekness correcting them that oppose themselves" (2 Tim. 2:24, 25). If the brethren in the past had obeyed this command, realizing that God is looking after "the word which proceeded from his mouth," and that "we can do nothing against the truth, but for it," and that it will not perish from the earth, even if any one servant of the Lord is unable to make his brother see eye to eye with himself; how different the household of faith would be today from the state that it is in ! Unrest and suspicion, even among those meeting upon the same statement of faith, is wide spread. Those who are the most prominent, throw out the challenge that they are not afraid to conduct their papers without fear or coercion. Such reminders are unnecessary, for no worthy brother is a coward and afraid to stand up for that which he believes to be right; nevertheless this independence in an editor may lend itself unwittingly to slander and breaking down of the influence of his brother in Christ. It may not be unprofitable to "the poor" and "the meek," to reconsider some of the theories relating to the sacrifice of Jesus Christ. One prominent theory, that which is based upon Heb. 2:14; 2 Cor. 5:21; Rom. 8:3; 1 Pet. 2:24; and Heb. 9:26.

The theory is founded upon the thought that sin as a constitutional thing, in its secondary and derived sense, "sin in the flesh," must be condemned in the nature that sinned in the garden of Eden, in order that God might give expression, and show his displeasure against sin. This condemnation was the death of Christ on the cross. This sacrificial death destroyed sin as a fixation in the flesh, "sin in the flesh," the cause of transgression; and therefore the destruction of the devil (diabolos, meaning that which causes to pass over the line), sin as a cause; and so sin, in the sense of "cause," was put away. The interpretation put upon the passages of Scriptures cited are as follows: Here is the text: "Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death, he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil" (Heb. 2:14). The idea is that the devil, or what is the same thing, "sin in the flesh," as the cause for mortality and natural death, is destroyed by the death of the body in which it dwells; therefore in the resurrection the body becomes immortal; and this is what happened through the death and resurrection of Christ.

Allen D. Strickler.

Mirth is like a flash of lightning that breaks through a gloom of clouds and glitters for a moment. Cheerfulness keeps up a kind of raylight in the mind, and fills it with a steady and perpetual serenity.

cross, and that it is the symbol of a violent death, death due because of transgression, and therefore for the remission of sins, and the prevention of death into which the wicked go away into: "And these shall go away into eternal punishment" (Matt. 25:46). "Then Peter said unto them, Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit" (Acts 2:38).

The design of sacrifice by blood shedding is to establish a moral unity between man and his Creator; blood shedding is the first step towards such a union, as it gives expression to the justice of God's law which deals with the disobedience of man. The mode of death by blood shedding is a declaration that the person committing sin deserves such a punishment, and which would be eternal. The consciousness of sin and the just punishment due to it, expressed by faith in the shed blood of Jesus Christ, is a declaration of God's righteousness; and therefore, and because of faith in the righteousness of God, the moral union of God is effected; having then, "the mind of the Spirit," which is "life and peace," those "who through fear of death (because of the weakness of the flesh, the weakness of their will power to keep the law of God) were all their life time subject to bondage," and now delivered from the fear of "the ministration of death," because "that having the power of death," unforgiven sin, which is the devil, has been brought to naught or rendered powerless by forgiveness, covering, pardon. These things are always effective, for the reason that Christ having died unto the demands of sin, sin, in the primary sense, was raised from the dead and exalted to God's right hand as a merciful and faithful high priest to make propitiation for the sins of the people (Heb. 2:14-17).

Theory No. 2 fails to find in the Scriptures any such classification of sin as "constitutional sin" or "Adamic sin"; but that the propitiatory sacrifice of Christ relative to sinners, dealt only with sin in its primary sense, that is, in thought, word, and deed, and that therefore baptism is for such sins only. That there must be a consciousness of guilt because of sin before there can be forgiveness, atonement or propitiation. That for constitutional or Adamic sin, guilt is unthinkable, impossible. That the death of Christ because of sin as defined above, the mode of his death, which was by violence, is the only kind of death that the Scriptures connect with the man Christ Jesus in his death for sinners, and that, although his Adamic sin nature was cut off in the process of his death and resurrection, unto life eternal, it was not because he himself as a character deserved punishment, for himself or those for whom he died.

In Gal. 3:10, the apostle says, "For as many as are of the works of the law are under the curse: for it is written, Cursed is everyone that continueth not in all things written in the book of the law to do them." The curse of the Mosaic law was death by stoning, which was a violent death. To continue not to do everything written in the law, was sin; hence the curse or punishment came. Now in verse 13 it says, "Christ redeemed us from the curse of the law, having become a curse for us; for it is written, Cursed is everyone that hangeth on a tree." Note it was "for sin" Christ became a curse; for "the transgressions that were under the first covenant" (Heb. 9:15). Now from this testimony it is clear that the sufferings of Christ ending in death, were for sin, transgression of a personal character and not for "constitutional sin." Paul does not say that it was a future redemption, but redemption from past transgressions now. He says, "redeemed us." John in his first epistle says, "Beloved now are we the sons of God." At baptism none are redeemed from constitutional sin, or "sin in the flesh." Paul says, "with the flesh the law of sin." "So then with the mind I myself serve the law of God: but with the flesh the law of sin" (Rom. 7:25). Do the very best that he could, he could not help himself from doing the things which he condemned, although Christ did. It was by Christ becoming a curse for us, or "having become" that, as Peter says, "he his own self bare our sins in his body upon the tree, that we, having died unto sins, might live unto righteousness; by whose stripes we are healed." There was a very close connection between "having become a curse for us," and "his own self bare our sins in his body upon the tree," and also, "By whose stripes ye were healed."

Theory No. 2, objects to theory No. 1, when it claims that when "Christ was made of a woman, and made under the law" (Gal. 4:4), that it was by having the human nature of his mother that he was a sin bearer; bring up for proof 2 Cor. 5:21, which reads, "Him who knew no sin he made to be sin on our behalf: that we might become the righteousness of God in him"; teaching from this passage that Jesus Christ as a baby, boy, and man, before his crucifixion on the cross, was a sin bearer. Objection is also made to quoting Rom. 8:3, to sustain this teaching, "God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh."

The reason why objection is made to the use of 2 Cor. 5:21 to prove that when Christ was made of a woman with "sin in the flesh" he was made a sin bearer by reason of having it in his physical constitution as a fixed principle, is because many Hebrew and Greek scholars translate the Greek word that is here rendered sin, "sin-offering." Macknight says: "There are many passages in the Old Testament, where amartia, sin, signifies a sin-offering. Hosea 4:8, 'They (the priests) eat up the sin (sin-offerings) of my people.' In the New Testament, likewise, the word sin has the same signification (Heb. 9:26, 28; 13:11)."

Dr. Adam Clark says of the Authorized translation of 2 Cor. 5:21, that it has been made the foundation of a most blasphemous doctrine; "That our sins were imputed to Christ, and that he was a proper object of the indignation of divine justice because he was blackened with imputed sin."

In 2 Cor. 5:21, the word sin occurs twice, and in both cases it is a translation of a Greek word, which is a translation of a Hebrew word, meaning transgression, guilt as its primary signification. Its secondary signification is "something for sin," a sin offering. In the following passages in the Septuagint, a Greek translation of the Hebrew Scriptures, the secondary meaning is given, which is correct as the context shows. Had the translators of the Authorized Version followed the same rule in the translation of 2 Cor. 5:21, as they did in the following texts, they would have rendered the passage as follows, "For he hath made him a sin-offering for us, who knew no sin." In no way has it the meaning of "sin in the flesh."

The following are the texts where the word "sin" in 2 Cor. 5:21, is translated sin-offering in the Septuagint: Exodus 29:14, 36; Lev. 4:3, 7, 8, 10, 15, 22; 10:16, 17, 19 twice; 12:6, 8; 14:13, twice, 19, 22, 31; 15:15, 30; 16:3, 5, 6, 9, 11 twice, 15, 25, 27 twice; 23:19; Num. 6:11, 14, 16; 7:16, 22, 28, 34, 40, 46, 52, 58, 70, 76, 82, 87; 8:8, 12; 15:24, 25, 27; 18:9; 28:15, 22; 29:5, 11, 16, 22, 25, 28, 31, 34, 38.

In the Common Version the same word as above is properly translated in 2 Chron. 29:21, 23, 24; Ezra 6:17; 8:35; Nehemiah 10:33; Job 1:5; Ezek. 43:19, 22, 25; 44:27, 29; 45:17, 19, 22, 23, 25.

The objection to Rom. 8:3 being used to support the claims that "sin in the flesh," being what was borne by Christ, was what was condemned by God when Christ was offered up on on the cross, is that if this were the case it would be the condemnation of a physical or constitutional thing, where it must be a moral thing that is referred to from what appears in the next verse, "That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." The righteousness of the law is the opposite of the transgression of the law, and not the opposite of "sin in the flesh." Whatever the sins or sin, here spoken of as being condemned by Christ as a sacrifice, must have been the sins he bore when he was crucified. We have already seen that the sins for which he became a curse were sins of transgression, and although condemned by punishment through tragedy in real life, it was only so as a demonstration to show forth the just deserts due to sins committed; when in fact those whose sins were thus condemned, were forgiven and pardoned. No such thing could happen in connection with "sin in the flesh" as a physical fixture and not a moral being.

"The condemnation of sin in the flesh," spoken of in Rom. 8:3, may have another meaning than that commonly attached to it by Theory No. 1. Throughout the Bible man is spoken of as flesh. A few citations will show this: Gen. 6:12, "For all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth"; verse 13, "The end of all flesh is come before me; for the earth is filled with violence through them"; verse 3, "And Jehovah said, My spirit shall not strive with men forever, for that he also is flesh"; Psa. 78:39, "For he remembered that they were but flesh; a wind that passeth away, and cometh not again"; "That which is born of the flesh is flesh" (John 3:6). These passages are sufficient to prove that man as a free-will moral creature is spoken of as flesh, "the flesh"; and the statement in this third verse that we are considering, "For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh" (through the weak mind of man) to keep the law and bring forth the righteousness that was in the law for eternal life; God accomplished by Jesus Christ. This third verse also proves that "the flesh" is man. God then condemned sin in man; sin as the rule and habit of his life, man's evil habits and "wicked works." He did it some way by the death of Christ, one who had no such sin as just mentioned. How was it done? "Sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh," that is, Christ came as a man, and was a man, "the Son of Man." In this man sin in its primary sense was condemned by this man being put to death, because "the wages of sin is death." A more effectual way could not be devised. "Because Christ also suffered for sins once, the righteous for the unrighteous, that he might bring us to God; being put to death in the flesh, but made alive in the Spirit" (1 Pet. 3:18). "Put to death in the flesh," put to death when he was mortal and "flesh and blood," "suffered for sins." Whose sins? "Which also I received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures" (1 Cor. 15:3). What Scriptures? "But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him: and with his stripes we are healed." Jehovah hath laid on him the iniquities of us all." "Yet it pleased Jehovah to bruise him; he hath put him to grief; when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin . . . and he shall bear their iniquities" (Isa. 53:5, 6, 10, 11). "By oppression and judgment he was taken away; and as for his generation, who among them considered that he was cut off out of the land of the living for the transgression of my people to whom the stroke was due?" (Isa. 53:8, Revised Version).

IF WE KNEW

Could we but draw back the curtains
That surround each other's lives,
See the naked heart and spirit,
Know what spur the action gives—
Often we would find it better,
Purer than we judge we would;
We would love each other better
If we only understood.

Could we judge all deeds by motives,
See the good and bad within,
Often we would love the sinner
All the while we loathed the sin.
Could we know the powers working
To o'erthrow integrity,
We would judge each other's errors
With more patient charity.

If we knew the cares and trials,
Knew the efforts all in vain,
And the bitter disappointment
Understood the loss and gain
Would the grim external roughness
Seem, I wonder, just the same?
Would we help where now we hinder?
Would we pity where we blame?

Ah! we judge each other harshly,
Knowing not life's hidden force;
Knowing not the fount of action
Is less turbid at its source;
Seeing not amid the evil
All the golden grains of good;
Oh! we'd love each other better
If we only understood. Selected.

Sharing our Burden

Paul said, "Bear ye one another's burden, and so fulfill the law of Christ." Away out in Proctor, Montana, a young sister writes: "I want to help bear your burdens, and I am also going to try to interest others in the work"; and with that end in view, Sister Bessie K. Walker has written two letters and a pledge. One of the letters is open and addressed to you; the other is private and addressed to me, but I am generous and will permit you to read both. Sister Walker's pledge reads as follows:

Special Contributors

We whose names are signed below, do agree to contribute at least once a month, one or more articles for publication on the Young People's Page of The Restitution, said articles to be either original or selected, and all to the glory of God.

Bessie K. Walker, Proctor, Montana.

The Letters

This is the private letter, but there is nothing private between friends, and we are all friends, are we not? We feel that if you know who and what Sister Walker was you would take a greater interest in her "open" letter of appeal to you. So take the liberty of printing this letter first.

Dear Brother Donaldson, Greeting:

For some time past I have felt that the young people of our church have not taken the interest in our page that they should, and not considering myself among the "young people" until last late, I have not written myself as no doubt I should. You see I am only twenty-four years of age, but as I am married and have two boys I have felt somewhat older than I really am and, no doubt, would have continued feeling that way had not our dear Auntie Winer written me a most beautiful letter in which she decidedly showed me in which class I belonged. So I have written a little article, which if acceptable, I desire published on our page in the hope of arousing our young people to greater interest. I also enclose a pledge to be printed each week.

Greet Sister Donaldson for me and hoping this idea will be of some help to you in conducting our Young People's Page, I sign myself,

Your sister in the one faith. Bessie K. Walker.

That is not a bad letter, is it? Are you not glad I let you read it? You need not answer for I know you are. Now follows

Sister Walker's Appeal

To the Young people of the Church of God:

Let us all get together and have a good chat. Impossible, you say? Not at all, even though hundreds of miles separate us; for have we not the nicest little corner imaginable right here in the finest little paper published? Is not this corner called "The Young People's Page," and does not that mean our page? Then let us make use of it.

Well, are we all seated? All right; let us begin. First, we must find something to talk about. How easy! I almost can hear all talking at once. That is one thing we cannot very well do here; only one at a time, please. I suggest that as I already have the floor I do the talking for a while, then give some one else a chance.

I very much want to discuss this little page of ours. What do you think of it? My opinion is, it is "great," and I know you all feel the same way. Now as this is OUR page, it seems to me that WE, the young people of the church of God, should try to make it just as interesting as possible. I can hear you say, "It is just that now," and I agree with you. Our dear Brother Donaldson surely has "made good," and we find it hard to better it; still I feel that we are "slackers." Why should we sit back and reap the benefit of the page and not share in the labor of keeping it alive? And there is work to do. Do you ever think of the time and energy it costs Brother Donaldson in writing, and seeking up articles of interest for us to read? Perhaps he often is up late, while we are in bed, to accomplish it. He, being human, has to work in the day time to feed and clothe himself and family. I often think how discouraging it must be to him. And we never have let him know how much we appreciate his "labor of love" for us, but alone offered to help him. No, my dear young people, we cannot improve our page, but we CAN lift some of the load from Brother Donaldson's shoulders. Just think how much it would help if some or ten or twelve of us would write, or select some short article each month! What would happen to The Restitution if the elder members of the church should stop writing for its pages? I imagine it would mean the stoppage of the paper. If the elders of the church think so much of their part of the paper, we surely think enough of our part to occasionally do something to keep it alive. For I cannot help but think that our Editor will find it hard to "keep going" unless we help him out pretty soon. Perhaps he even now is thinking of discontinuing. Perhaps he feels that we do not care enough about the page for him to waste his time upon it. What if in the next issue, there was an announcement that the page would be discontinued on account of the labor being heavy? What if oh, dear! Let us get busy. We just could not get along without our page. And I know you all will help to keep it bright and interesting.

Well, now that we have had a good talk about the matter, suppose we get down to business. I suggest that we have "special contributors." If our elders can have such for The Restitution, why cannot we follow and have the same for our page? So, if our Editor approves, you will see my name as such, on this page today. But dear young people, do not let my name stand alone. Please add yours at once. Mary Lee, we know you can write, for what you once have done, you can do again. I will expect to see your name right next to my own. Perhaps some of you feel you cannot write for publication. I once thought the same, but I decided to try, and this is the result. Our page is worth a little effort. We all read, and if we cannot write an original article, we can at least select an interesting thought that some one else has written. Of course original articles are best, do you not think so?

Now I have finished. Will not some of you talk awhile? Remember, there is room in our corner for all, and I feel that all names written in our paper will also be recorded in the Book of Life. The Lord soon will be here; work in his cause, in his vineyard, while it is day. Jesus has set us an example. Let us follow him. This is very important.

BESSIE K. WALKER.

Daily Thoughts

According to his good pleasure	Eph. 1:9
Ye, brethren, be not weary in well doing	2 Thess. 3:13
I will make known my words unto you	Prov. 1:23
According to his mercy he saved us	Titus 3:5
Except the Lord build, they labor in vain	Psa. 127:1
No more can ye (bear fruit) except ye abide in me	John 15
Think upon me, O my God, for good	Neh. 5:10

Trials temptations disappointments, all these are helps instead of hindrances, if one uses them rightly. They not only test the fibre of character, but strengthen it. Every conquered temptation represents a new fund of moral energy. Every trial endured and weathered in the right spirit makes a soul nobler and stronger than it was before (James Buckham).

Every resolute person has found that, when some great trouble seems to stand in the way, it either proves not to be there, or it is far less serious than he anticipated. Bunyan's Pilgrim thought his end had come when he saw two lions in his pathway before him; but when he pressed forward, in spite of his fears, he found that the beasts were chained, and powerless to do him harm (Theodore F. Seward).

In good church work there is no substitute for sole leather. An earnest pleasant word, face to face, is worth ten over the telephone wire, or ten times ten by mail. Let the people see and hear you.

The Shortest Sermon

The practical import of the entire Bible, expressed in two words "Please God," which Samuel B. Letson has made the basis of what he calls the shortest sermon, is as follows:

To please God is vital.
To please God, man was created.
Pleasing God is man's highest function.
Infinite wisdom must demand that man please God.
Does any sermon comprehend more than please God?
Has any sermon less verbiage?
Does any command mean more?
Is any purpose better?
Is any resolution wiser?
Is any exhortation more timely?
Does any man know a better course of action.
Is not pleasing God the highest human wisdom?
Is not pleasing God the Christ life?
"I do always those things which please him" (Jesus).
Does not pleasing God include perfect morals and the square deal to all men?
May we all so please God as to accomplish our greatness, usefulness and highest joy!

Something For You

A good part of today's page is occupied by Sister Bessie K. Walker. We ask you to carefully read what she has written, to ponder over it, then act upon it. We want your help. We want it because it will lighten our labor. But above and beyond this reason we want it because it will instil in you a desire to be of assistance to others, and more: the more you write the better you will be able to write. To write so as to interest others requires practice. We want you to be of service to your fellows. We serve God and his Christ by serving mankind, providing we do it in his name and to his glory. So write. Write briefly. Write to the point. Write interestingly. Write to the glory of God, and success is bound to crown your efforts. "If at first you don't succeed, try, try, again."

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We whose names are given below, believing it be be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

A Paper Representing the Church of God, and Devoted to the Exposition and Defense of the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God and the Name of Jesus Christ.—Acts 8:12.

VOLUME 71 CLEVELAND, O. NOVEMBER 18th, 1919. NUMBER 43

A Tribute to Sister Goss

Our Sister dear has left us,
Our hearts are sad and torn;
Her little corner in the church
Seems empty and forlorn;
She loved thy church, O God,
Was always in her place,
And if, like her, we faithful prove,
We'll meet him face to face.

Her husband dear and children, too,
She loved with love intense.
Her loss to them none but their God
And Christ can recompense;
How oft her fingers touched the keys
In church and Sunday School,
And led us in our songs of praise
To our most glorious Lord.

Sleep on beloved, take your rest,
Your troubles all are o'er;
And when our Savior opens the tomb,
Sorrows will be no more;
He giveth to his loved ones sleep,
Removes them from our sight;
He knoweth best who loveth best,
Good night, dear one, good night.

Mrs. Powell Hogarth.

The True God And Eternal Life

BELOVED IN THE LORD:

YOUR ATTENTION is invited to the words of the Spirit in I John 5:20, 21. "This is the true God, and eternal life. Little children, keep yourselves from idols. Amen." So the apostle ends his letter. These words are probably not only the close of this epistle, but among the last words chronologically, of Scripture. The dear old man who leaned on Jesus' breast seems to have gathered up his ebbing force to sum up his life's work in a sentence which might be remembered, though much else be forgotten. Last words stick. Doubtless, too, he was directed to write for the benefit of us of these last days. At all events, we have what he wrote, and we are grateful. It is observable that in this final utterance the apostle drops the triumphant "we know," reiterated with such emphasis in the previous chapters. I think he did not do this because he doubted that all his brethren would gladly confirm what he was about to say, but because it was fitting that his last words should be his very own; the utterance of personal experience, and weight with it, and with apostolic authority. So he melts down all that he had learned from Christ, and had been teaching for fifty years, into that one sentence. The feeble voice rings out clear and strong, and then softens into tones of earnest exhortation, almost entreaty. The dying light leaps up in one bright flash, the lamp goes to pieces, so to speak, but the flash remains to shine into our lives so that we shall not walk in darkness, but have the light of life.

Here, then, is the sum of all that we need to know about God. "This is the true God, and eternal life." But whom does John mean when he says, "This is the true God"? Grammatically we may refer the word to the immediately preceding name, "Jesus the Christ." But it is extremely improbable that the apostle should so suddenly shift his point of view, as he would do if, having just drawn a clear distinction between "him that is true," and the Christ who reveals him he immediately proceeded to apply the former designation to Jesus Christ himself. It is more in accordance with his teaching and with the whole scope of the passage, if by "this" we understand the Father, of whom he had just been speaking. And when he says, "This is the true God," he means to say, "This God of whom I have said Jesus is the sole revealer, and of whom I have been declaring that we can know through Jesus Christ, and dwell abidingly in him, this and none else is the true God."

Mythology An Instructive Fable

But what does the apostle mean by "true"? True God. A great deal could be said in answer to this question, and from several points of view; but I am of the opinion that from the environment of the apostolic church heathenism everywhere that the words "true God" used by our Lord in John17:3, and by Paul in 1 Thess. 1:9, and 1 John 5:20, was intended to make him stand out in strong contrast with the numerous false and imaginary, and lifeless, gods of heathendom. Not knowing if all of you were acquainted with the mythology of Greece and Rome, I thought it might not be amiss to make some reference to it here. Mythology is compounded of two Greek words, "muthos," a fable and "logos," a discourse and signifies a system of fables, or the fabulous history of the false gods of the heathen world. Fable is divided into various kinds, and the following is an example of the instructive fable. When Philip's son, the hereditary enemy of the liberty of Greece, demanded that eight of their leading men be delivered up to him as the great impediment of mutual amity, the famous orator addressed his fellow citizens as follows: "On a time an embassy came from the wolves to the sheep, assuring them that the dogs by which they were attended were the sole occasion of their trouble; wherefore if they would give up the dogs, all would be well, and end in lasting peace and safety. The sheep were persuaded to give up the dogs, and henceforth the wolves devoured them at pleasure."

Oregon Bible College
Oregon, Illinois

A Political Fable

A second sort of fable is political, as the following: "When Jupiter heard of the death of his son Sarpedon, in the rage of grief he called Mercury, the messenger of the gods, and ordered him to go instantly to the Fates and bring from them the strong box in which the eternal decrees were laid up. Mercury obliged, and went to the three sisters, the Fates, and omitted nothing that a wise and well-instructed minister of state could say, to make them pacify the will of Jove. The sisters smiled, and told him that the other end of the golden chain which secured the box with the unalterable decrees was so fixed to the throne of Jove, that were it unfastened his master's seat itself might tremble." I offer this to show what sort of a field the disciples of our Lord had to sow the seed of the kingdom. Everywhere religion, law, and philosophy was a mixture taught by fable. Plutarch says the most ancient theology, both of the Greeks and barbarians, was natural philosophy, involved with fables, that physically and mystically conveyed the truth to the learned; there being nothing at all for the unlearned. And we may well wonder what of truth could reach the learned from the source indicated, when it had to be conveyed to them in fables and mysticism. O what a baseless fabric seems to rise before us as we think of the gods and goddesses Pan, Parce, the Furies, Harpy, the River God, Jupiter Ammon, also Jupiter Pluvius, Juno, Vesta, Cybele, Neptune, Pluto, Minerva, Vulcan, Mercury, Hercules, Saturn, Apollo, Diana, and a great many others of the principal heathen deities, besides a vast number of inferior gods.

Heathen Gods and Bribery

And when we reflect that the characters assigned to many of these deities were most abominable, it would seem that the best class of worshippers could only be inspired by dread or fear. I cannot extend remarks in this direction, except to say that it is against all such the apostle brings to our notice the true God, whom to know is life eternal. He is the God of all grace. The favor of the other gods, besides being nothing at all, yes people were taught that their favor had to be purchased by sacrifice. In other words they had to bribe their gods to secure their good offices. Animals such as black sheep and swine were at first offered in sacrifice; and after this they decided to enhance the value of the offerings by human sacrifices. The Gauls and Germans were so devoted to this shocking custom that no business of any moment was transacted among them, without being prefaced by the blood of men to various gods, but particularly Hesus, Taranis, and Thautates. These deities are mentioned by Lucan, when he enumerates the nations who followed the fortunes of Caesar.

Modern Idolatry

Before passing on I beg to remind you that the apostle in the next verse, the last of the epistle, says what should make us realize that although the grosser forms of idolatry have passed away there are in reality more idols than ever erected now. Not on the hill tops, nor in shady groves, but in the hearts of men and women. Whatever monopolizes our affection apart from God is an idol. Says the apostle, "Little children, keep yourselves from idols." But more of this further on.

The True God Described

I want to emphasize the distinction between the living and true God, and the gods many of heathendom, if I can. This true God is he, I repeat, who manifested himself to man; in whose heart I can lay my head, and in whose undying love I can repose, and upon whose light bright as it is, I can gaze, and in whose life I can participate, in whose righteousness I can share, and to whose glory I am an heir through grace, yes, the true God is he who was manifested to us in the flesh of Jesus; this is the true God, the real God, and of whom the apostle says, "To us there is but one God, the Father, out of whom are all things, and we for him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, through whom are all things, and we through him." So that light, heat, incorruptibility and life, center in one eternal substance which is the great self-existing and central power of the universe. This substance is spirit, for we are positively told that God is spirit. He upholds all things, and in him we live, and move and have our being. This is by the seven spirits which is before his throne (Rev. 1:4; 3:1; 4:5; 5:6). This ungrammatical expression is a puzzler for all commentators of the apostasy.

M. Joblin.

THERE IS SUNLIGHT BEHIND EVEY CLOUD

Like most garments and most carpets, everything in life has a right and a wrong side. You can take any joy, and by turning it around find troubles on the other side; or you may take the greatest trouble, and by turning it around find joy on the other side. The gloomiest mountain never casts a shadow on both sides at once, nor does the greater of life's calamities.—Scottish Reformer.

ACTIONS SPEAK LOUDER THAN WORDS

The Sunday School class was singing, "I want to be an angel."

"Why don't you sing louder, Bobby ?"

"I'm singing as loud as I feel," replied Bobby.

"Ye Shall Not Surely Die"

The above words are serpentine in origin; but in meaning are quoted in several ways by modern religious teachers as God's eternal truth.

The Serpent's Lie In Modern Forms

(1) We are told "there is no death," which is equivalent to the above statement; for if there is no death, then men do not surely die.

(2) We are told that man does not as a whole die; but only the body dies; and that again is in harmony with the serpentine lie; for if man lives either in body, soul or spirit, he does not surely die. God told Adam, "After the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die," or "dying thou shalt die," and the fact that "all the days that Adam lived were 930 years," proves him to have died according to the penalty; for if one lives only during a certain period, and that period is "all the days" he does live, it cannot be said he still lives after said period has expired.

(3) A new school of thinkers has recently came forward and are antagonistic to God's word as the serpent of old. An able writer of this school says, "The texts which speak of second death, do not say . . . that any sinner loses his physical life, or any other life in the second death" (Tract by E. P. Buvinger, page 2).

Buvinger's Fallacy Answered

Is this statement true? Let God answer: "When a righteous man turneth away from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, and dieth in them; for his iniquity that he hath done shall he die" (Ezek. 18:26). Here are two deaths: one dying in iniquities, the other dying for them. The first must be the natural or Adamic death; the second the one brought about by being cast into the lake of fire or "second death."

Again, Jesus tells some wicked Jews of the days of his earthly ministry, "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish." Perish like whom ? Some Galileans whom Pilate had slain. This threat would be meaningless if Adamic death was here alluded to; for many saints have perished that way, but this would be averted by repentance, and hence, must allude to second death.

"But his citizens hated him, and sent a message after him, saying, We will not have this man to reign over us" (Luke 19:14). What will be done with those citizens after he returns? "But those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me" (Luke 19:27). Here are Jews living at the first Advent of Christ who are to be slain at his second Advent, and hence, must have been resurrected to be slain or killed by the second death, as to slay means to kill. This then is positive proof that sinners are killed by a second death, and is against the newly invented theory of Mr. Buvinger and others.

All through God's Book statements like this are found:

The Death of the Sinner Not Adamic

"He that hateth reproof shall die" (Prov. 15:10).

"The soul that sinneth it shall die" (Ezek. 18:20).

"The wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23).

"The end of those things is death" (Jas. 1:15

"Sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death" (Jas. 5:20).

"He that converteth a sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death" (Jas. 5:20).

This all points to a death other than the Adamic, and hence must point to the second death. This writer admits that the lake of fire is to operate during the judgment, and if we can find what God does with sinners at the judgment we will have found what the lake of fire does for them.

The Judgment of Sinners is Penal

(1) "The Lord knoweth how . . . to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished" (2 Pet. 2:9). This makes it plain to the unbiassed reader that the wicked are to be punished at the day of judgment.

(2) "Have ye not asked them that go by the way ? and do ye not know their tokens, that the wicked are reserved to the day of destruction, they shall be brought forth to the day of wrath" (Job 21:29, 30). This proves that the day unto which the wicked are reserved is a day of destruction, and hence proves the day of judgment to be a day of destruction to the wicked.

(3) But if the above passages are not sufficient evidence to prove that the day of judgment is a day of destruction to the wicked, this does: "But the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition (destruction) of ungodly men" (2 Pet. 3:7).

The day of judgment then is a day of destruction of ungodly men.

The lake of fire is in effect during the day of judgment.

The lake of fire is the second death, or its cause.

Hence, the lake of fire causes the destruction of the ungodly, or the death so often threatened against sinners, and makes our proof invincible that second death is really death.

Meaning of The Lake of Fire

But our author goes further thus: "But strange to say, these same revelations tell us that this symbolic second death is a beneficient agent of God which actually destroys man's great enemies, death and the grave, in the same lake of fire" (page 2). Here he admits that death when cast into the lake of fire is destroyed, and in so admitting admits it to be an agent of destruction. The same passage reads, "Death and hades were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire" (Rev. 20:14, 15). If because death and the grave are cast into the lake of fire proves their destruction, then because those who were not written in the book of life were cast there, must prove their destruction. And if our author goes to other Scriptures to prove that death and hades are to be destroyed, then he must allow us the same privilege regarding the wicked; and when he does that we can give him dozens of texts to prove their destruction to his two or three to prove that death and hades are destroyed; and hence the evidence is stronger to prove the destruction of the wicked than to prove what he admits is to be destroyed. His admittance is fatal to his theory.

The Teeth of Larger Hope Extracted

But he says, "If one man remains in the grave after the judgment (FAIR TRIAL), then death still has the victory, and is not destroyed" (page 6). I am wondering what he does with this: "The wicked shall return to sheol, even all the nations that forget God" (Psa. 9:17). When do they return into the grave, if not in the second death? This then should be taken into consideration: "Drought and heat consume the snow water: so doth the grave (s'heol) those which have sinned. The womb shall forget him, the worm shall feed sweetly on him: he shall be no more remembered; and wickedness shall be broken as a tree" (Job 24:19, 20). This is conclusive; after the wicked have been returned to sheol, they are so completely consumed that they are no more remembered that must be complete destruction. Again Job declares, "Yet shall he (the wicked, vs. 30) be brought to the grave, and shall remain in the tomb" (Job 21:32). The Hebrew word here rendered tomb is "gadish," and means heap or stack, and is only in this place translated tomb. The idea is that after the day of destruction the wicked will remain in he heap or stack of dead ones, and never be permitted to live again. Then is death destroyed? Yes, to those who choose life. "The gates of hades shall not prevail against it" (Matt. 16:16). The fact that Christ makes it his church against which the gates of his hades does not prevail, implies that they may prevail against others. Some will be ransomed from the power of sheol; but those who have sinned shall be consumed by sheol, and so completely devoured by it that they shall be no more remembered. If one man is rescued from sheol, and one only, God has gained a great victory; and all this loud boasting about victory is only bosh. Sheep are lain in sheol (Psa. 49:14). All men at death go there (Psa. 89:48). Man and beast all go to one place (Eccl 3:20). Hence all the beast creation at death go down into sheol. Now if death, and sheol cannot be destroyed as long as one victim is in them, then the whole animal creation must be raised from death! But if sheol can be destroyed while animals are there, then why can it not be destroyed with brutish men in it? The logic that makes resurrection universal to mankind should make itself broad enough to be consistent. If sheol can be destroyed with dead brutes in it, it can be destroyed with dead men in it as well; and if death can be destroyed while the whole brute creation up to the time of its destruction, remain in death, then it can be destroyed while sinners are there; and all this talk of death not being destroyed till every man is made alive is only bosh to bolster up a pet theory. If our author can limit death and hades to mankind, he gives us license to go a step further, and place those whom the Bible declares are like the beasts that perish, there also. David prayed, "Oh save me for thy mercy's sake." Why? Because "in death there is no remembrance of thee; in the grave who shall give thee thanks?" (Psa. 6:4, 5). He knew that if he was not saved he must be returned to sheol, and have even his memory of God blotted out. It is clear that men of old did not expect life future life unless they were found in harmony with God. The texts that teach the death of the wicked are as plain and clear as that which threatened Adam; and if that meant what it stated, as experience proves, then the others must also: and it is as much of a falsehood to tell the wicked that they shall not die as it was to tell Adam and Eve, especially when God condemned his ancient people for promising the wicked life, and told them that they could only make such promise with lies (Ezek. 13:22).

"Etc."

"I do not want to be an etc. myself, and I do not want to do anything to get anyone else to be an etc.!"

Antonio was speaking with a good deal of excitement in his voice.

It was in my reception room. I was busy in the adjoining consultation room with a patient, and had left him and another man waiting until I could see them. I had overheard their conversation, which was carried on in a low tone, and now and then Antonio's voice was raised. This time that when he said was plain. A moment later I heard the outside door close, and when I went out I found Antonio alone.

"I thought there was some one else here," I said to him, and noticed that his cheeks were very red.

"There was!" he said. "He has gone." Then he added, "But he was not a patient of yours, Doctor. He was chasing after me."

Of course, I did not ask anything further, but he went on to explain.

"He is trying to get me to take his kind of Bible-book with me when I am going back to Italy. He says it is just the thing for our folks over there, and he has told me how many of our people get rich out in his state. He has his Bible-book in our language, and he wanted me to take some home to Italy, and also some other reading matter in Italian telling his big stories."

"And who is he?" I asked.

"I do not know his name," Antonio answered, "but he is a Mormon."

If, possibly, I looked surprised that a Mormon should be in our city, Antonio hastened to assure me.

"There are others, too," he said: "I know, for I have seen them give out the tracts, and I see their Bible-book."

"You mean their Book of Mormon?" I asked.

"Sure!" he replied. "He wants it circulated in my country. Eh? Catch me being an etc. man, or helping make other etc. people!"

"'Etc. man'?" I repeated.

"Sure! Don't you understand?" he asked.

I did not.

"All right," he said, "if you have time I will bring you the book that he gave me, and show you!"

He did so and a couple of hours later had the book open before me on my table. He opened it at page 385, and pointed out the following verse:

"The sufferings and death of Christ atoned for all their sins, through faith, repentance, etc."

"What does that 'etc.' stand for?" he asked. Then he indicated this, page 371:

"The journeyings of their fathers in the wilderness, and all their suffering with hunger and thirst, and their travel, etc."

"Heigh?" he asked, "Suppose that 'etc.' stands for polygamy?"

On page 484 he showed me this:

"They shall rest from their troubles, and from all care, and sorrow, etc."

On page 456:

"Bringing them into bondage, etc."

On page 484:

"Sent forth to preach among the people, etc."

"So it goes on, all through this book," Antonio said. "See all the verses that end in 'etc.'! How would it sound in our real Bible to see, 'In the beginning was the word, etc.!' 'Now abides faith, hope, etc.!' 'In the name of the Father, the Son, etc.' That kind of a Bible-book might make one a Christian, etc., and the 'etc.' might stand for anything but Christian! See?"

I saw.

We looked at other verses ending in "etc.," and Antonio remarked:

"Sure as your live, the Mormons are 'etc.' Christians; and so I told that fellow that I would have no 'etc.' in mine, and would not be an 'etc.,' either!"

The incident showed me a curiosity about the Book of Mormon, enlightened me on the Mormon propaganda, and suggested to me the question as to whether there are "etc. Christians"! -W. H. Morse, M. D., in "Herald of Life."

Church that Banished Christ

Jerusalem stood for forty years after she rejected the Messiah before she fell, but the Unitarian Church of the Messiah (!) of New York City stood for but a few short months after banishing her Lord from her communion ere going up in smoke. The following graphic report is by the Associated Press:

New York, Sept. 11. A hearse bearing the body of Horace Traubel, poet, biographer and literary executor of Walt Whitman, had just drawn up in front of the Church of the Messiah late this afternoon, and a large congregation was within awaiting the services, when fire burst from the pipe organ in the chancel and spread so rapidly that the interior soon was a mass of flames.

Mourners who were assembled for the "hail and farewell services which friends of Mr. Traubel planned instead of formal religious rites, rushed panic stricken from the building.

The body of Mr. Traubel was later removed to Camden, N. J., his birthplace.

The church, which was almost wholly destroyed, was one of the oldest in the city. It was founded in 1825 as the Second Congregation Unitarian Church, and in 1839 had its name changed to the Church of the Messiah. The Rev. John Haynes Holmes, for several years its pastor, recently proposed another change in the name, saying it had "lost its significance for many of our people."

At his suggestion, it was decided to abandon formal religious services and to hold "community services" at which social and civic topics would be discussed. The congregation voted to call the church in future "The John Haynes Holmes Community Church."

Shortly after the reorganization funds for extensive alterations to the interior were authorized, as well as the installation of a pipe organ, which cost $35,000. The edifice and its site were valued at more than $1,000,000.

This is the church which a few months ago secured a great deal of unenviable publicity by expurgating all reference to the Christian faith from its creed, and dropping the name of Christ from its title, because "that name had lost its significance for many of our people." Buddhists, Confucianists, Mohammedans, and unbelievers as well as Christians, are included in its membership. Under these conditions we can only think, however much we dislike harsh criticism, that either to drop or to retain the old name was blasphemous, but that to drop it was the more honest.

And so this church has banished the Christian faith, that it may take in all faiths. It has rejected Christ, that it may devote itself to the community. It has ceased to be the Church of the Messiah, that it may become the church of John Haynes Holmes. And at the very moment that a dead body is about to be brought within its walls, not that over it may be held the last rites of religion in the name of the "Man of Sorrows," but a godless substitue for the Christian burial service a "hail and farewell" fire suddenly burst forth from the chancel and consumed the edifice!

I do not wish to harbor a single uncharitable thought. But I cannot help believing that a righteous judgment has fallen upon an apostate organization. I cannot resist the feeling that if the Church of the Messiah must break with its past, must repudiate its holy name and faith (even the diluted faith of Socinianism), it is highly fitting and appropriate that the old edifice, dedicated to thé service an worship of the Christian God, should be saved, even by destruction, from the defilements of an unholy will-worship. "What agreement hath the temple of God with idols?" C. H. Hewitt, in "The World Crisis."

"Behold a great a matter a little fire kindleth" (Jas. 3:5). Probably the first mention of fire as such in the Bible is in Gen. 19:24, when the Lord rained "fire upon the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah, and the lands belonging thereto." This is not only an earlier reference to this most destructive of all elements than usually made by lovers of the classic story of Prometheus stealing fire from the gods, but it also points to the origin of fire, and so shows, by parity of reason and, somewhat, by the light of the quotation from James, that, no matter what the context of the quoted text implies, God certainly causes great things to occur through the agency of apparently insignificant, yet wonderfully efficient means. The "little fire" producing "great matter" not essentially by the human tongue, but generally by anything in any relation, is a suitable term for stating effect-producing causes whose results are self-evident.

The Sister's Society held their regular meeting Thursday afternoon, Nov 6th, at the home of Sister Gibbs. There were sixteen members and one visitor present. Several sisters were reported ill, and flowers were sent them. Several calls had been made and three letters of sympathy had been sent out and one letter received. Sister Fankbonner as leader continued the study of the latter part of the VIIIth Bible Lesson, which shows us the gifts of the Holy Spirit are not extant today. The lesson was both instructive and profitable to all. The meeting closed by all repeating the motto. Addie Gibbs.

November 6th, Brother Harold Baker, a young man in the prime of life, fell asleep in Jesus. Our Brother was a great comfort to us personally, as we learned to love him ardently during the draft times in the recent war. He was tested and sifted, as many of our young brethren were, as to the soundness of their faith, in the military measures that have lately disturbed the whole world; but like Abraham of old, he never wavered in his non-combative principles. None of his family relations are in the truth. Brother Sterling Russell introduced the gospel to him several years ago, and he learned it rapidly and embraced it with joy. God "called him alone and blessed him" (Isa. 51:2). A lone boy in a large family of unbelievers, all of the brethren and sisters sympathized with him in his family isolation, and loved him for his devotion to the gospel of the kingdom. Words of comfort were spoken from Deut. 34th chapter to a congregation of bereaved hearts, and then Brother Baker was laid away in "the valley" of death (Psa. 23) until Christ comes and takes hold of the seed of Abraham and rescues them from the power of death (Heb. 2:14, 15).

"In" and "Into"

Dear Editor:

In many places I read of "into Christ," while in probably just as many other instances I read of being "in Christ." Do these two expressions mean the same thing or do they contain different meanings?

EDITOR'S COMMENTS

The meaning of these two expressions is different and radically distinct. No man can be "in" a house, ship, city, state or kingdom until he has been introduced "into" them. "In Christ" and "into Christ" are words of frequent occurrence in the Holy Scriptures; but in not a single case can one phrase be substituted for the other. "In" belongs to verbs implying rest or motion in; "into" to verbs implying motion towards. For instance: He eats in the hotel; he sits in his house. He walks into the field; he rides into the city. In all passages where a person is said to be "in Christ" it refers to a state of rest or privilege subsequent to his baptism; while "into Christ" is a phrase only applicable to conversion, or baptism, scripturally called "putting on Christ."

Theory No 1, says that the condemnation was upon "sin in the flesh" as a physical principle; Theory No. 2 says that it was upon sin as declared in Isa. 53rd chapter, viz., "For our transgressions," "he was bruised for our iniquities," "for the transgression of my people to whom the stroke was due." And also in 2 Sam. 7:14 the mind of the Spirit says: "I will be his Father, and he shall be my Son. In his sufferings for iniquity, I will chasten him with the rod due to men; and with the stripes due to the children of Adam." Here it is not the case of an innocent man suffering for that which he did not deserve, for the reason that Christ of his own free-will, for the time being, assumed and bore the iniquities and sins of men. The sins and iniquities of men were not imputed to him; he was not charged with them. "Obedient unto death," is the testimony. "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." Truly an act of sacrifice, although a command; but that command he could have disobeyed, for the Father would have given him twelve legions of angels to have prevented his death at the hands of the Romans, had he asked it. If the condemnation of sin in the flesh must be understood in its physical sense or aspect, there was an innocent person put to death, for it was Christ who suffered, and that too, for something that he inherited from Adam. Furthermore, if men deserve to die because they have "sin in the flesh," then Christ, "a partaker of flesh and blood," also deserved to die, and therefore in his death he only suffered what he deserved to suffer, and so his resurrection would have been impossible.

Christ in dying "for our sins according to the Scriptures" (1 Cor. 15:3), died to redeem us from the curse due to those sins. "Christ redeemed us from the curse of the law." "In whom we have our redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of our sins" (Eph. 1:7). The apostle says, "that upon the Gentiles might come the blessing of Abraham in Christ Jesus." These Gentiles are made partakers of the same blessing as those under the law, by being redeemed from the curse or condemnation resting upon them "for sins that are past" (Rom. 3:25). "But the Scriptures shut up all things under sin, that he promise of faith in Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe" (Gal. 3:22).

This is a present redemption to all in Jesus Christ by faith, whether Jew or Gentile, because upon all rests a curse of death for sin in its moral and primary sense; but no one can get into Jesus Christ unless each and one have "the mind of the Spirit," which is "life and peace" (Rom. 8:6; 1 Pet. 1:18).

Now this great redemption and salvation has become effective because God condemned sin in the flesh of Jesus Christ in its moral sense (Rom. 8:3). It was as Paul says in Col. 1:22, "In the body of his flesh through death." It was in his human nature, while he was yet mortal, and had not yet become "the Lord the Spirit" (2 Cor. 3:19).

The testimony is that Christ "became a curse"; he could not be a curse without sin; sin could not be condemned in him unless he had it. How did he have it? By inheritance? No. By transgression? No. The answer is, by becoming a sin-offering, a sin-bearer. Isa. 53:6, "Jehovah hath laid on him the iniquity of us all." Isa. 53:11, "And he shall bear their iniquities." Verse 12, "Yet he bare the sin of many." "Who his own self bare our sins in his body upon the tree" (1 Pet. 2:24).

Theory No. 2 claims that in the Scriptures we can learn how sins are borne, and the meaning attached to the statements, "bear their iniquities," "bear the sin of many." "For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope" (Rom. 15:4).

In Lev. 1:4; 3:2, 8, 13; 4:15; 8:14 22, 16:21, is recorded the custom of laying the hand upon the animal victim, which was offered up to death for sin. What it was for is clearly stated in the last chapter cited, "And Aaron shall lay both his hands upon the head of the live goat and confess over him all the iniquities of the children of Israel, and all their transgressions in all their sins, putting them upon the head of the goat, and shall send him away by the hand of a fit man into the wilderness: and the goat shall bear upon him all their iniquities unto a solitary land: and he shall let go the goat in the wilderness." This solitary land and wilderness, represents the state into which the dead enter. See Job 10:21,22: "Before I go whence I shall not return, even to the land of darkness and the shadow of death; a land of darkness as darkness itself; and the shadow of death, without any order, and where the light is as darkness." Psa. 88:12: "Shall thy wonders be known in the dark? and thy righteousness in the land of forgetfulness?"

In the above testimony, it is proven that sins are borne by being transferred from the sinner to the victim by the contact of the hand and confession of sins. After sins are transferred, blood was shed, the life was taken, because of the sins; showing that death was the penalty or punishment due for the sins confessed. The blood was sprinkled upon the altar as the evidence that the punishment had been inflicted. The act by the priest of sprinkling the blood upon the altar was called "Kaphar," an Hebrew word meaning "covering or to cover." The idea was that by the ceremony of blood-shedding, the sin committed was put out of sight that it would be no longer in evidence against the one who had committed the act, so that the punishment for sin would not have to be inflicted and suffered. The violated law of God was vindicated in symbol by taking the life of the animal which was in the blood. The animal became the bearer of sin by suffering the punishment due to it, death. See Lev. 17:11: "For the life of the flesh is in the blood, and I have given it to you upon the altar to make atonement for your souls; for it is the blood that maketh atonement by reason of the life." Now after the priest had performed the ceremony of atonement (kaphar) then came the reality, which was forgiveness; the violent death, death by stoning was averted, the sinner was pardoned, the law no longer held him condemned.

Lev. 4:20, 31: "And the priest shall make atonement for them, and they shall be forgiven"; "And the priest shall make atonement for him, and he shall be forgiven."

The Scriptures which speak of the sufferings of Christ by death on account of sin are so numerous that they need not be cited; his suffering was in the flesh, because he came "in the likeness of sinful flesh"; it was as Paul says in Col. 1:22 "In the body of his flesh." Peter says, "Who his own self bare our sins in his body upon the tree." It was in human nature that Christ suffered death on the cross for sin, sin as "wicked works" (Col. 1:21). Therefore in scriptural meaning and wording, he "bear our sins in his body upon the tree," because he suffered the same kind of punishment due for sin.

To suffer the punishment due to or for sin, the Bible teaches is to bear sin. The testimony, "But every one that eateth it shall bear his iniquity, that soul shall be cut off" (Lev. 19:8). "By his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many, for he shall bear their iniquities" (Isa. 53:11). "He shall be cut off in the sight of the people. He shall bear his iniquity" (Lev. 20:17). "He bare the sin of many" (Isa. 53:12). "Messiah shall be cut off" (Dan. 9:26). "Whoso curseth his God shall bear his sin: he shall surely be put to death" (Lev. 24:15). "He bore our sins in his own body on the tree" (1 Pet. 2:24). "That soul shall be cut off: his iniquity shall be upon him" (Num. 15:31). "The Lord hath laid upon him the iniquity of us all" (Isa. 53:6) "The soul that sinneth, it shall die; the son shall not bear the iniquity of the father; neither shall the father bear the iniquity of the son" (Ezek. 18:20). "Christ was once offered to bear the sin of many" (Heb. 9:28). "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures" (1 Cor. 15:3).

Young's literal translation gives the following rendering of Isa. 53:6: "All we like sheep have wandered, each to his own way have we turned, and Jehovah hath caused to meet on him the punishment of us all. It hath been exacted, and he hath answered; and he open not his mouth."

Rosemiller, Gesenius, Michaelis and Seiler also render the word "punishment," which in the Revised Version reads "iniquity." The texts above quoted prove absolutely that to suffer for sin, or to bear sin, is to suffer the "punishment" due to sin. The Hebrew word rendered "iniquity" is rendered "punishment" in ten texts. How clear Peter's statement appears in the light of these testimonies, "Christ suffered for sins, the just for the unjust."

In view of such an array of testimony, it seems impossible that anyone can longer believe that because Jesus Christ partook of flesh and blood, human nature, with the impulses of sin in it, "sin in the flesh," that, that was what made him a sin-bearer, and for which he suffered; for surely the sins we bare were those for which he suffered. Does it not make that for which Paul said to the Ephesians, "for because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience," a matter of secondary importance? Was not the object of the atonement made by Jesus Christ made for the express purpose to put away guilt by "repentance and remission of sins"? Even as Christ himself said: "And thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and rise from the dead the third day; and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem." "But now once at the end of the ages hath he been manifested to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself." By atonement, the guilt of sin was put away, forgiven. This Leviticus and Numbers prove. Christ takes the place of animals as the anti-type to put away sin. Sin cannot be a type of itself, nor can it be a type of "sin in the flesh"; because sin was typically forgiven, and since the death of Christ anti-typically forgiven, forgiveness in both cases. The sins atoned for must be susceptible of repentance with "sin in the flesh," which is an irresponsible, automatic function of the brain, possible of control by free will power. What Paul evidently meant, when he said that Christ "put away sin by the sacrifice of himself," was that transgression was put away by atonement and forgiveness, and that he had no reference to the putting away of the sin nature.

There are those that have taught that baptism is for two classes of sins; baptism and the death of Christ being related, it would take the death of Christ also for two classes of sins. Now the apostle Peter in Acts 2:38, says that baptism is for the remission of sins; to remit sin means to do away with the guilt attached to the person having sin, and the non-infliction of the condemnation and penalty resting upon the person. Now this gives us guilt and punishment due for "sin in the flesh," and the remission of them by baptism; such remission does not take place at baptism, for the baptized person continues to live with "sin in the flesh," and in due season death takes place. This theory makes Christ die for two classes of sins, as has just been stated; what follows? This that the second class of sin being "sin in the flesh" belonged to Christ personally, and therefore he was as guilty for that sin as those for whom he died, and also was just as much under condemnation of death, and in dying, he died to satisfy that condemnation resting upon himself; that he paid the penalty due to himself, and representatively so for the others for whom he died.

Theory No. 1 holds that Christ as a person was under Adamic condemnation to death, that death for that reason had dominion over him; that when he died the claim of death was satisfied, and therefore his resurrection from the dead made possible. To support this the sixth chapter of Romans is cited in evidence, verses 9 and 10, "Knowing that Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him; for in that he died, he died unto sin once; but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God." The conclusion drawn from this evidence is that death had dominion over Christ; but that now, it has no more dominion over him, because when he died, he died so unto "sin in the flesh," "that having the power of death, the devil" (Heb. 2:14), died to get rid of it as the physical cause of death, and therefore, "he that is dead is freed from sin," "sin in the flesh"; and because there is no more "sin in the flesh" death has no more dominion over him.

A Prayer of Naturalism

SOME WEEKS ago the chaplain of the United States Senate being absent for a day, asked another minister of religion to open the body with prayer.

The Congressional Record reports the prayer of the chaplain's substitute as follows:

> Our Father who art in heaven, on earth and all over the [illegible], hallowed be thy name. [illegible] kingdom [illegible] came with the dawn of creation and, being [illegible] upon principles eternal and universal, its laws enforce themselves [illegible] in all ages, [illegible] thy will [illegible] be done among [illegible] even as it is amongst thy mortal sons on earth. Thou hast endowed nature with productive energies subservient to man's will, thereby thou gavest us this day our daily bread, [illegible] imparting as the divine spirit thou [illegible] us [illegible] law [illegible] compliance [illegible] society, [illegible] that as man passions lead us not into temptation, but by divine grace deliver us from all evil.

This man Kalb's attempt to paraphrase (or rather to make a parody) of the Lord's prayer is a shocking perversion of the simple and sublime petitions which Jesus taught his disciples to use when they asked him to teach them how to pray. Indeed this pretentious paraphrase can scarcely be regarded as a prayer at all. It sounds more like a glorification of the forces of nature that an adoration of the God of the universe.

It suggests more important lessons.

For one thing, it shows how a man's believing colors and controls his praying. This substitute for the Senate's chaplain evidently felt no need for asking God for anything, since he evidently believes that natural forces "from the dawn of creation" sufficiently meet all the wants of mankind. And if his creed of naturalism be correct, it is difficult to perceive why any one should pray at all. Manifestly he has embraced the fatalism of a gross materialism and such a system has in it no room for prayer. A fatalist cannot truly pray.

A patriotic optimist believes that all good is bound to come to pass without the hand of God or man and hence his power of prayer is paralysed by a suffocating hopefulness as unreasonable as it is unscriptural.

A fatalistic pessimist believes that the worst things must happen and that neither God nor man can avert the dreadful outcome. Hence his power of prayer perishes under a crushing load of despair. And so the pessimist cannot pray the prayer of faith.

Modern materialism is fatalistic through and through. It is widely prevalent and wherever it prevails it produces praylessness.

This materialism prevails among all classes, even among the uneducated, who have imbibed its principles almost, if not quite, unconsciously, without understanding the technical terms of the system. The man in the street has come to regard the forces of nature as quite superceding the person and power of God. And without being able to use the scientific terms employed by his more learned neighbor, who openly avows a creed of materialism, he reaches essentially the same conclusions and proceeds to live by them in utter prayerlessness.

The spirit of prayer can not be recovered until the doubt which has destroyed it has been removed. The writer of the epistle to the Hebrews tells us what must be believed if one would come to God in prayer: "He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is the rewarder of them that diligently seek him" (Heb. 11:6).

Men who do not believe that God is, can not and will not pray to him. Atheists, if logical and consistent, never pray. Nor can men pray who claim to believe in God and who believe that he is unable or unwilling to respond to their supplications. They seek God and they only who believe that "He is the rewarder of them who diligently seek him."

In the book of Job the wicked who doubt the existence of God, and despise his character, are represented as saying to him, "depart from us, for we desire not the knowledge of thy ways. What is the Almighty, that we should serve him? And what profit should we have if we pray unto him" (Job 21:14, 15).

It will be noted in this passage that serving God and praying to God go together. No man will serve faithfully a God to whom he cannot pray with the hope of having an answer to his prayers. Men serve that upon which they can depend, and that only. Hence the impossibility of serving both God and mammon.

He who heaps up earthly goods for himself in the very effort shows a distrust of divine providence and, hence, he seeks to make provision for himself quite apart from any dependence upon providential care. It is, therefore, the peculiar peril of prosperous men to become prayless.

An era in which a materialistic philosophy prevails in the realm of thought and vast gains are made in the sphere of business, almost inevitably leaves God utterly out of account in all its plans and calculations. In such an age we have been living for more than fifty years and we now hear one praying in the Senate of the United States (for calling it prayer), who glorifies, as the source of our daily bread, "the productive energies of nature subservient to man's will." Such so-called praying is far removed from the prayer which Jesus taught us to pray, and the conception of God from which such praying proceeds is utterly at variance with the teachings of Jesus concerning the character of our Father in heaven. Indeed it is passing strange that the substitue of the Senate's chaplain addressed "Our Father in heaven" at all. What sort of a father is a God who is the helpless slave of the natural forces which he has created? The universe which he made has got loose from him and is running wild at its own will under the repulsive power of the natural energies with which it is endowed.

Jesus revealed no such Father to the sons of men. The God of the Scriptures is a free person, who is both able and willing to hear his children when they cry to him in the hours of their need. He is not a prisoner immuned in nature, but an all-powerful and free person supreme over nature and imminent in nature.

If we are to believe in God at all, we must believe him to be free, powerful, and merciful. To such a person we can honestly pray, and to none other.

To this free God of the Scriptures we must get back to our thinking, or else we must quit praying. To depend on the impersonal energies of nature, apart from the personal God in whom all things consist, is to revive the Paganism of ancient Egypt and the later worship of Baal. Naturalism was the religion of those heathen peoples of antiquity. Against the naturalism of Egypt God sent Moses and the ten plagues. Against Baalism the Lord sent Elijah, the prophet, in the days of Ahab and hung at his servant's girdle the keys of heaven to withhold or send rain at will.

We need a prophetic voice to cry again, "How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God, follow him; but if Baal, then follow him" (1 Kings 18:21).

We cannot worship and serve the true God and be mere naturalists at the same time. We must renounce Baal or Jehovah.

When Baalism prays in the national capitol, it is time to consider whether we will be Christians or return to the obsolete paganism of the ancient Phoenicians.

It is time for us to learn how to pray from Jesus and the apostles, instead of framing our worship according to the tenets of a Baalistic materialism. Let us hear the word of the Lord and not the prattling nonsense of the naturalists.

"The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. Elias was a man subject to like passions as we are, and he prayed earnestly that it might not rain: and it rained not on the earth by the space of three years and six months. And he prayed again, and the heavens gave rain and the earth brought forth her fruit" (James 5:16-18).

Nature, including rain and sunshine, is still the servant of God, and not his master. Selected by a Sister.

Diary of a Bible

Jan. 5 . Been resting for a week. The first few nights after the first of the year my owner read me regularly, but he has forgotten me, I guess.

Feb. 8. Clean-up. I was dusted with the other things and put in my place.

Feb. 9. Owner used me for a short time after dinner, looking up a few references.' Went to Sunday School.

March 7. Clean-up. Dusted and in my old place again. Have been down in lower hall since my trip to Sunday School.

April 8. Busy day. Owner led League meeting and had to look up references. He had an awful time finding one, though it was right there all the time in its place.

May 3. In Grandma's lap again this afternoon. She spent most of her time on 1 Cor. 13 and the last four verses of the 15th chapter.

May 7, 8, 9. In Grandma's lap every afternoon now. It's a comfortable spot.

Sometimes she reads me and sometimes she talks to me.

May 10. Grandma gone. Back in the old place. She kissed me good-bye.

June 3. Had a couple of four-leafed clovers stuck in me today.

July 1. Packed in a trunk with clothes and other things. Off on a vacation, I guess.

July 7. Still in the trunk.

July 10. Still in the trunk, though nearly everything else has been taken out.

July 15. Home again and in my old place. Quite a journey, though I do not see why I went.

August 1. Rather stuffy and hot. Have two magazines, a novel and an old hat on top of me. Wish they would take them off.

Sept. 5. Clean-up. Dusted and set right again.

Sept 10. Used by Mary a few minutes today. She was writing a letter to a friend whose brother had died, and wanted an appropriate verse.

Sept. 30. Clean-up again. Selected by Brother Jesse Titman.

Obituary

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.--Psa. 116:15.

Margaret Jane Shaw-DeMont, daughter of Joseph and Abbigal Shaw, was born in Koscuisko County, Indiana, April 28th, 1861, and departed from life at the Logansport Hospital, Oct. 29th, 1919, at the age of 58 years, 6 months, and 1 day. She moved to Starke County with her parents when a small child, and here spent the remainder of her life. Feb. 12th, 1880, she was united in marriage to Joseph DeMont. To this union eleven children were born, three of whom preceded her to the grave. This loving mother leaves to mourn her loss the husband, eight children, two grand-children, one brother, one sister, and a host of friends. She had heard the gospel preached and been baptized and united with the Church of God in 1885.

Funeral services were held at a church three miles south-west from Culver on Saturday, Nov. 1, at 11 o'clock A. M., conducted by the writer. She had been taken from her household and friends suddenly, and the house was filled with sorrow and lamentation over wife and mother. By request of the husband we spoke from Job 14:14 in connection with the comfort found in 1 Cor. 15 and 1 Thess. 4. Burial was made in the adjacent cemetery, where Sister DeMont rests till the resurrection.

Editorial Brevities

While with face unveiled we behold as in a mirror, the brightness of our Lord's glory, are ourselves transformed into the the same likeness; and the glory that shines upon us is refleeetd by us, even as it proceeds from the Lord the Spirit (2 Cor. 3:18).

From Heb. 1:3 we learn that the Son of God is "the brightness of God's glory, and the express image of his person," or as McKnight translates, "an effulgence of his glory, and an exact image of his substance."

From 2 Cor. 4:4-6 we learn that Jesus is the "image of God," and that the "light of the knowledge of the glory of God (is) in the face of Jesus Christ." Christ is the manifestation of the glory of God, and when we steadfastly behold this divine glory shining "in the face of Jesus Christ" we are transformed into the same likeness ourselves, "from glory to glory." The Greek means that it is from the divine glory shining upon us, from the face of our Lord, that we are transformed into glory.

THE DEAN'S WARNING

A dean and a Highland minister were taking a long walk among the glen, and they stopped at a little inn for refreshment. They sat down and ordered two glasses of whisky. When these were set before them the pious Highland minister proposed that they should ask a blessing. To this the dean assented, but when his friend had closed his eyes and begun with great solemnity to ask a blessing, Highland in length, the dean quietly drank off both glasses of whisky. When the minister had finished his thanksgiving his amazement can be imagined when he beheld the two glasses standing empty on the table before him. He turned his eyes upbraidingly on the dean. "Ah," said the waggish dean, "you forgot half the Scripture warning. We are told to watch and pray."

THOUGHTS ON WAKING

I laid me down and slept; I awaked: for the Lord sustained me (Psa. 3:5).

When I awake, I am still with thee (Psa. 139:18).

My voice shalt thou hear in the morning, O Lord; in the morning will I direct my prayer unto thee, and will look up (Psa. 5:3).

Cause me to hear thy loving-kindness in the morning (Pros. 143:8).

I will sing of thy mercy in the morning (Psa. 59:16).

It is of the Lord's mercies that we are not consumed . . . They are new every morning (Lam. 3:22, 23).

The day is thine, . . . thou hast prepared the light and the sun (Psa. 74:16).

Truly the light is sweet, and a pleasant thing it is for the eyes to behold the sun (Eccl. 11:7).

Lord, lift thou up the light of thy countenance upon us (Psa. 4:6).

Make thy face to shine upon thy servant (Psa. 31:16).

Be thou in fear of the Lord all the day long (Prov. 23:17).

Unto you that fear my name shall the Son of righteousness arise (Mal. 4:2).

And the city had no need of the sun, for the glory of God did lighten it (Rev. 21:23).

I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness (Psa. 27:15).- Selected.

HELPFULNESS

The Three Partners: There is opportunity for daily helpfulness to others, whatever one's position or station. Helpfulness is a boomerang; while a grateful gift to others, it comes back and reacts helpfully on the one who bestows.

The world is big, life is intricate, and no single individual can know or experience everything. Sharing though helpfulness, then, is something more than individual service.

Helpfulness can assume manly forms, varying with circumstances and environment. It may be a kindly word, an hour's time, a bit of planning, material assistance, or just a smiling greeting. It is a splendid game of give and take, to be played frequently with those around us.

Whether helpful service be rendered in domestic, social, or business relationships, spontaniety adds to its effectiveness and reflects a generous impulse. And how much better it is, this spirit of helpfulness, than that selfish exclusiveness with which some people habitually envelop themselves.

The Budding Fig Tree

Near in the future we behold
  A country bright and fair,
The glory of that heavenly land
  Hope bids us seek to share;
Happy nations there abide,
  And war shall ever cease,
And Jesus there shall ever reign
  As King and Prince of Peace.

His righteous kingdom shall extend
  O'er this terrestrial ball:
All things he will restore again
  That Adam lost by fall:
He is the 'bright and morning star,'
  We view its radiant beam,
'Tis rising o'er old Canaan's land,
  Its rays with glory gleam.

The fig tree and the olive boughs
  Are budding once again,
And Israel's hope revives once more,
  That long has dormant lain:
There shall the weary wanderer rest,
  In peaceful quiet home,
With richest beauty they'll be blest
  In ages yet to come.

J. E. Hegarth.

Salt and Peace

HAVING "MOURNED after a godly sort," by yielding obedience to the law of Christ, Jesus now comes to other qualifications that must belong to his disciples, and like as salt preserved the sacrifices offered to God on Israel's altars, will preserve them from corruption.

"Blessed are the meek,' he says, "for they shall inherit the earth." Jesus was "meek and lowly in heart." We must be like him. We are to "be subject to principalities and powers; to obey magistrates, to be ready to every good work; to speak evil of no man; to be no brawlers, but gentle, shewing all meekness unto all men." The "meek and quiet spirit is in the sight of God of great price." It does not avenge itself. When smitten on one cheek it turns the other; when the coat is taken, it adds the cloak. It gives to him who asks, and does not turn away from him who would borrow. It lends hoping for nothing in return. Pretty strong salt this: but we who offer ourselves as living sacrifices unto God, must be salted in this very manner. Every sacrifice must be salted with salt. Jesus when reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he did not threaten; he bore wrong patiently; he loved when others hated; he was salted with salt that has never lost its savor, else could his doctrine never have salted the earth in the miraculous world-wide, continuous fashion that it has, ever penetrating jungles, opening closed gates, crossing pathless oceans, reaching canibal islands, and transforming man-eaters into man-savers. Possessed of superlative meekness, his reward will be to "have dominion from sea to sea, and from the rivers unto the ends of the earth" (Psa. 72:8), "an everlasting dominion which shall not pass away, a kingdom which shall not be destroyed" (Dan. 7:14); and with him "the meek shall inherit the earth, and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace" (Psa. 37:11)

The next qualification that Jesus requires in his followers is found in the fourth beatitude. "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled:" their prayers answered, their desires satisfied, their righteousness brought forth as the light, and their judgment as the noonday (Psalm 37:4-6). To do the will of God, to help carry out his purpose to be a factor in filling the world with righteousness, is more to them than their necessary food. Hungering and thirsting to pattern their lives after the life of Christ, they will endure the loss of all things for his sake, brave all perils, endure hardness, give up friends, kindred and home, and even life itself. O to be salted with such salt as this!

Have you, my dear sister, who asked me to write these articles for your special benefit, been thus salted? Is "the faith of Christ" so dear to you that you would choose rather to be torn limb from limb than give it up? Can you, are you strong enough to confess everywhere and at all times that Christ's kingdom is not to be located beyond the stars, over beings, "a million of whom, could dance on the point of a cambric needle:" but that he is to sit on the throne of his father David, and reign over the house of Jacob forever;" and that his saints are to "reign with him on the earth": their reward, the crown, the life of glory being given them at his appearing and kingdom, and not to them as bodiless souls at death?

Are you strong enough, brave enough to stand against the constantly rising flood that is sweeping the king, the president, the whole body politic, religious and secular of Protestant Anglo-Saxondom under the power of Rome? If the test comes as come it may sooner that we are aware, will you refuse to bow to the pope of Rome as earth's king and hold fast to Christ? The two are rivals for dominion: which will you own? There is but one Rock, one faith on which to build our house. "Other foundation can no man lay than that which is laid." The Rock is Christ. To build on him we must build on truth. Such building cannot be overthrown when the rains and floods of these last evil days beat against it. "Stand up, stand up for Jesus, ye soldiers of the cross."

The next feature of character set before that great crowd on the hill, was mercy: "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy."

How much mercy do the followers of the pope of Rome, of Mohammed, and other false religions show? Let the doings of Germany, Russia, Austria, and Turkey since the late war began, make answer. They have no salt, nationally nor individually. Germany had some in the past, but it soon lost its savor, was thrown out, and has been trodden as a worthless thing under the feet of both Kaiser and people. It does not do to put God out of our lives. When his existence is denied, the truth of the Bible questioned, the beautiful salt of mercy goes out of the hearts of men.

We are never to feel or to show hardness towards others, no matter what their conduct may be in reference to us. God loved us when we were yet sinners. Whosoever will may come to him and he will forgive "in stupendous fashion," the debts they can never pay. He is merciful. The unjust share in the dew, the sunshine, and the rain. The fruits of the orchard, the grain field, the riches of the mine, the treasures of the deep are theirs.

He loves them by doing them good and never destroys a people until "their cup of iniquity is full," and there is danger of them leavening the whole world with their evil doctrines and deeds. Just so we must love the sinful, love them by doing everything in our power to reach and save them. Lack of mercy on the part of fathers and mothers and professed Christians has sent many a soul to ruin. We cannot hate nor drive either children or grown-ups into following Christ. We must forgive if we would be forgiven. If we forgive not men their trespasses when they turn and repent, our own case is hopeless.

In the sixth beatitude Jesus enjoined purity of heart: "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." He will dwell with them; his tabernacle will be with them, and he will be their God.

No man yet has ever been permitted to look on the face of the All seeing One. Even Moses was allowed to look only on the back parts of the angel of his presence.

Purity of heart excludes even the thought of crime. In the eyes of God, a crime thought of is a crime committed. A man who looks on a woman with lustful thoughts, has committed adultery already with her in his heart. To be angry with a brother without cause puts us in danger of the judgment just the same as if we had murdered him in fact. And how about wishing people were dead who wrong or annoy us?

We cannot bring our gifts to the altar and have them counted to our credit knowing that a brother has ought against us. Reconciliation must come before the gift will be accepted.

We must give no place to selfishness, envy or hate, or coveteousness; but doing the truth must have fellowship with God. The spirit of fault-finding must be put away. If there are motes in the eyes of our brothers and sisters there are beams in our own. Until we are perfect in purity ourselves we cannot see well enough to pick out microscopical specks from the eyes of others. "Fault-finding that does no good is sin." It grieves, disheartens, maddens. No child that is constantly nagged ever becomes what it might have been had a loving, encouraging attitude been assumed toward it. To get angry at a child when we imagine it is doing things on purpose to aggravate us, shows that we are not holding tight rein over ourselves; that there are beams in our eyes, lack of purity in our hearts. We cannot make good into the little boy or girl in any such way.

> Folks need a lot of loving in the morning,
> The day before with all its cares beset,
> The care we know and they that give no warning,
> And love is God's best antidote for fret.

"He that ruleth his spirit is better than he that taketh a city," for having overcome the strong, rebellious citadel of self, he is able to guide and control others. Only the pure in heart can do this.

The pure in heart make no trouble in the family, the neighborhood, or the church. Thinking no evil thoughts, they do no evil things. Loving their wives as themselves, they do not put them away. Doing unto others as they would have others do unto them, they "have salt in themselves and have peace one with another."

The seventh beatitude is the crowning one of the list for seven is the number of perfection: "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God."

We are to be peacemakers not peace breakers. There are to be no angry dissensions among the followers of Christ. I once attended a conference where a whole afternoon that ought to have been full of blessing and uplift to all concerned, was turned into an afternoon of shame, confusion, and discomfort by the angry debating of two of our best beloved, most worthy brethren over a question, that when they came to understand each other, they were in perfect agreement upon! How glad I was that no outsiders were present.

At another conference there was a quarrel as to whether "the high sounding organ" should be used, as it was in the days of David, to sing the praises of the Lord or not. I had a friend with me who had just come to the knowledge of and belief of the truth through reading The Restitution, and was thinking of being, and was baptized at that very conference. But how I trembled while the quarrel was going on lest it threw her back! And it did come very near doing that very thing. Let there be no dissensions among you.

But we are to be peacemakers, in a richer, deeper sense than this, more than settlers of quarrels between men, though this is a part of the Christian's work. There is another quarrel we must help to settle, another peace we must be instruments to bring about. "The natural man is at enmity with God;" he will have none of him. When confronted with the law that inducts men into Christ, he says, "O, I cannot do that," and goes on in rebellion and sin, to be lost at last, irretrievably lost. Jesus "made peace by the blood of the cross." God manifested himself as "the God of peace" when "he brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant," thus revealing himself as "in Christ reconciling the world to himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them." And he actually and lovingly beseeches men to become "reconciled to himself;" to give up their enmity, their long war against him and his government, and be forgiven (2 Cor. 5: 19, 20).

And when men do thus surrender, and lay down their arms, peace is made: they have "peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ, even the peace of God that passeth all understanding," and go out in eager haste to beg their rebel comrades to also surrender and become the children of God, instead of the children of the wicked one.

The eighth beatitude is the outcome of having the beautiful qualities mentioned in the preceding seven. The world "loves darkness rather than light." It chooses to be ignorant of God's ways because it wants to take its own way. The world hated Jesus because he testified of it that its deeds were evil. It hates and persecutes and slays his disciples for the same reason. The very lives of Christians are a constant reproach to the wrong doer.

The sacrifies laid on the altar were first salted with salt and then with fire. We must go through the same process. We too must be salted with fire, if we would be a sacrifice of sweet smelling savor to God, and would be recognized as his children by our likeness to him. It is not pleasant now to endure "the bumps" the reproaches, the reviling to have our names "cast out as evil," to be persecuted and to have "all manner of evil said against us falsely for Christ's sake;" but if we would be "the light of the world" and "the salt of the earth" we must endure it.

"Blessed are ye who weep now for ye shall laugh" (Mark 6:21). Our mourning will some of these days be turned into dancing, our sackcloth put off and we be girded with gladness (Psa. 30: 11). "Be perfect be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you." Amen.

The True God And Eternal Life

Seven a Symbol

SEVEN SPIRITS which is before his throne"—not which are. Thank God for Moses and the prophets who furnish the key to this apparently ungrammatical expression. Seven in the Book of God is the symbol of unity and perfection. You are aware that there is but one spirit (Eph. 4:4), so symbolically seven, they are complete in one. Hence being the representative of one spirit, the substantive verb is expressed in the third person singular, and not in the plural, as the grammar of the sentence requires. There is but one spirit there, and this one is the nominative to the verb "is." Spirit pervades the boundless universe from the throne of light, in all its space; and wherever spirit is, there God is present, and, as Paul said to the Athenians, "not far from every one of us." This divine presence everywhere by his free spirit is beautifully and forcibly expressed in the 139th Psalm, as follows, "Whither shall I go from thy Spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend into the heavens thou art there; if I make by bed in sheol, behold thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me. If I say, Surely the darkness shall cover me, even the night shall be light about me. Yea, the darkness hideth not from thee; but the night shineth as the day; the darkness and the night are both alike to thee."

Oh what a wonderful God and Father we have; and is it not more wonderful still that he has taken notice of such worms of the dust as we are, and has drawn us to himself by amazing cords of love; adopted us into his family and granted all the rights and immunities of begotten children, made us joint-heirs with the only begotten Son he had, and heirs of himself? Oh what amazing love and condescension!!

School Divinity Foolishness

It would be hardly right not to refer to what the so-called divinity schools say of the words, "Out of whom are all things." They say that God created all things out of nothing! This idea must be of or out of their own imaginations. The proverb says "Take nothing from nothing and nothing comes;" but they have reversed all this, and taught the world of mankind that out of nothing something did come; and that something was the universe of God! That would be considerable, would it not? But let us away with this foolishness. Out of Deity all things have proceeded. His free radiant spirit underlies all existing things, from the star of the first magnitude to the minutest insect of the air, and is that which under the fiat of his will constitutes the nucleus of all bodies, solid, fluid, or aeriform; for we read, "By his spirit he garnished the heavens;" that is, as I believe, he illuminated the boundless immensity with orbs of light, teeming with life, and all the wonders of his wisdom and power, by his free spirit.

Such then, brethren and sisters, was God before the appearance of Jesus, substantial and radiant, substantial in his own person; radiant thence into all the Elohim of his universe; in whom the radiant matter, by the fiat of his will, became fixed in them; that is organically, and corporeally of the substance or nature with God. Thus he, the true God is Eloah in chief. This makes clear to us what we read in Isa. 14:6: "I am the first and the last, and without me no Elohim." There would be no one to constitute them Elohim without him. And we can take this name to ourselves without him—without the eternal spirit which quickeneth, there could be no glorified saints for the flesh profiteth noithing. I trust you all see from this that we as the sons and daughters of the Lord God Almighty, are hoping to be Elohim—attain to the divine nature, so that we can die no more, being equal to angels or Elohim. And be it remembered that the titles by which the eternal power designates himself in the prophets are all reproduced in the New Testament and applied to Jesus and his brethren when perfected in spirit, or glorified together (Rom. 8:17). What an amazing thing to contemplate! 'Tis wondrous in our eyes! In view of this possible destiny so exalted, so enduring, so glorious what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness. Our general or habitual attitude is pointed out in the next verse a "looking for, and hasting unto the day of God;" or as the Diaglott says, "expecting and hasting with the day of God." Of course as there is a set time for that day to come we cannot hasten it before that time, and therefore I conclude that we should eagerly desire it to come, look for it and that this would induce us to ever be in a state of preparation for the great event.

Children Must Shun Idols

This I understand to be the lesson for us in the words, "Hasting unto the day of God." Seeing then, that as little children we have come to know that this is the true God, the only one who answers all our requirements, and satisfies all our desires, we must keep ourselves from idols. The true God is a jealous God. He accepts no half hearts: he will divide with no other gods. We must not frequent the shrines of false deities that thickly stud the city of Cleveland, as they did every nook and corner of Ephesus. John is talking to us about anything and everything, and any person that comes into the heart and takes the place that ought to be filled by God alone: what I most prize what I trust most implicitly, what I love most ardently, what I should be most forlorn without; what is the real working aim of my life, the hunger of my heart; what I would sacrifice most for and if not the true God it is an idol. As the last sands of Gentile times will soon have run out, we must not forget that the form of idolatry has changed since the letter of John was written. The temptation to idolatry is just as subtle, just as all-persuasive, and the yielding to it just as fatal, just as absurd.

Keeping Ourselves

Another point of particular importance to note is that we have to "keep ourselves." So you see we can do it if we want to. But as some may think this conflicts with the revealed idea of being kept by the power of God, which is the gospel, from the very incipient stages of the saving process to the final consummation, I will just say that our keeping ourselves consists essentially of letting God our Father keep us. This may appear paradoxical, but when you take what I have just said in the light of Rom. 8:13,14 I am sure no one will differ with me. It says. "For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die; but if ye through the spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live." How so? "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." You see death winds up the history of those who, when they have a fancy for this or that, or the other thing, go and do it, or get it, without looking up the directions of the Spirit in such matters let their own tastes or desires lead them instead of the Spirit's instructions. So I repeat, the keeping ourselves from idols consists largely in letting the Spirit by the word keep us.

It is my fervent prayer that one and all of us who have named the name of Christ, may so observe all things which he has commanded so that we may meet his approving smile, enter into his joy and be forever with him.

M. Joblin.

This interpretation of these verses in Romans, chapter six, gives nothing but a physical and mechanical reason for the death of Christ.

Theory No. 2 does not question the fact that Christ came in the flesh, flesh full of sin, as to kind of flesh, that he was dust, that he was mortal, that death did have dominion over him; but it does challenge the theory that he was under condemnation as a penalty, and that therefore it was necessary for him to die to satisfy that condemnation penalty before he could be "freed from sin," and raised from the dead unto justification of life. Theory No. 2 claims that the sixth chapter of Romans treats throughout with moral considerations, except where the death and resurrection of Christ are stated as facts; then only is it physical and mechanical. The arguments of Paul in reference to the reason for the death of Christ commences in the 25th verse of the fourth chapter of Romans: "Who was delivered for our trespasses, and was raised again for our justification." "Being, therefore, justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ" (Rom. 5:1). If Christ was "delivered for our trespasses," as Paul says that he was, what right has anyone to take Paul's other statement, "for the death that he died, he died unto sin once," to mean that Christ died unto "sin in the flesh," as a fixed principle there? As it is the reason for death in both places that is given, we must interpret the causes as being the same; therefore, "sin" in chapter 6:10, must be the same as "trespasses" in chapter 4:25. How then did Christ die unto trespasses or sin? The only death that he did die, was a violent death on the cross, which was for "our sins" (1 Cor. 15:3). What did our sins demand from us? Our life, our death: "the wages of sin is death" everlasting death entered into by the marked displeasure of God, in contradistinction to natural death, which is not an exhibition of his displeasure, being an affair of natural law. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints" (Psa. 116:15).

There is not a single statement anywhere in either the Old or New Testaments that Christ died for his own "sin in the flesh." Therefore when the apostle says. "For the death that he died, he died unto sin once," reason dictates that we should understand that Christ died unto the demands of sin, which was death as wages. "For the transgression of my people was he stricken" (Isa. 53:8). It was the mode of Christ's death that must be understood, for Paul says, Christ "having become a curse for us" (Gal. 3:13). This testimony is all sufficient to clear up what might have been a difficulty in sincere minds.

If it had not been that a human sin-offering was required in the purpose of God to make propitiation for the sin of "all unrighteousness" (1 John 5:17), no such a person as Jesus Christ ever would have come into existence. When Christ became "a curse," death had dominion over him; but it was not for long, because God "raised him up, having loosed the pains of death, because it was not possible that he should be holden of it" (Acts 2:24). But death would have held him had he died to satisfy the penalty of death for himself under any kind of condemnation. What is the design of death when it is caused by violence for penalty or punishment, but to put the victim forever out of existence: no one can die any kind of death as a penalty, condemnation, or whatever words may be used to express the thought, and be released therefrom. Natural death is not such a penalty or condemnation.

Now under the law of Moses, a person dying, bearing his own sin, was accursed; so if Christ bare sin by bearing human nature with sin in it, then when he died he bare his own sin, dying because of it, and as he died under the Mosaic law, he died accursed as a person, and because of what belonged to him as an individual.

To separate Christ as a righteous person from Christ as a physical person, and then make Christ as a righteous person suffer for Christ as a physical person under condemnation for penalty deserved because of "sin in the flesh" or "sinful flesh," would seem to be unjust and not in harmony with divine law: which says, "The fathers shall not be put to death for the children, neither shall the children be put to death for the fathers: every man shall be put to death for his own sin" (Deut. 24:16). Ezekiel 18:20: "The soul that sinneth, it shall die; the son shall not bear the iniquity of the father, neither shall the father bear the iniquity of the son; the righteousness of the righteous shall be upon him, and the wickedness of the wicked shall be upon him."

However, Peter does not divide up Christ in that way, but takes him as a whole and says, "Because Christ also suffered for sins once, the righteous for the unrighteous, that he might bring us to God" (1 Pet. 3:18).

Paul says that Christ was raised for our justification (Rom. 4:25). God's moral law will not allow a righteous person to remain dead; but the righteous do die a natural death, therefore, when they are raised from the dead to die no more, that would be their justification. The use of the word "justification" in connection with the statement, "and was raised for our justification," proves that the one dying did not die because he deserved to die; that death as a penalty had no claim; that coming because of a helpless physical condition in the form of natural death, morally nor legally could it hold a righteous person. This is evident from 1 Cor. 15:54, 55: "Death is swallowed up in victory. O Death, where is thy victory? O Death, where is thy sting? The sting of death is sin; and the power of sin is the law." The victory comes through Jesus Christ because he by his sacrifice atoned for sin, causing it to be put away, so that it could not sting and be the cause of death; it was forgiven. Death to hold as an everlasting possession had lost it power, because its sting, sin (diabolos), had been destroyed, "rendered powerless," by being "blotted out." Acts 3:19: "Repent ye therefore, and turn again, that your sins may be blotted out, that so there may come seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord."

Allen D. Strickler.

Thoughts on Going to Sleep

Thou makest darkness and it is night (Psa. 104:20).

The day is thine, and the night also is thine (Psa. 74:16).

The darkness hideth not from thee; but the night shineth as the day: the darkness and the light are both alike to thee (Psa. 139:12).

He that keepeth thee will not slumber. Behold, he that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep (Psa. 121:3, 4).

When thou liest down thou shalt not be afraid: yea, thou shalt lie down, and thy sleep shall be sweet (Prov. 3:24).

I will both lay me down in peace, and sleep: for thou, Lord only, makest me dwell in safety (Psa. 4:8).

He giveth his beloved sleep (Psa. 127:2).

At evening time it shall be light (Zech. 14:7).

There shall be no night there (Rev. 21.25).

In a "Declaration of Principles" adopted by the National Spiritualists' Association, is the following: "8. We affirm that the doorway to reformation is never closed against any human soul here or hereafter." This brings to light the ghostly parentage of Larger Hope. This hope, which is confessedly "larger" than the "one hope" of the gospel, had its birth in agnostic France and in parlor seances of infidel Spiritualists. Let those who laud Larger Hope as having given them "expansion of heart," remember its unsavory parentage: and if this fails to make them blush to the roots of the hair, it will at least cause them to boast less.

November 9th, after a sermon on "The Evidences of Adoption," the following friends were transferred from Adam to Christ, from the old to the new creation, by baptism into the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit: John M. Andrews, the husband of Sister Andrews; John, their son, making the entire family members of the household of faith; Norman Whitehead and Lizzie Whitehead, husband and wife, both from England but a few months ago. From the day these friends set their hearts to learn the truth they have devoted themselves joyfully to the acquirement of divine wisdom; and now we pray ardently that they may go on in their "first love" to the end of the race, and receive the approbation of the King at his coming.

We fear some of our brethren are too much inclined to overrate the scholastic attainments of ministers too much inclined to bow to the presence of mere learning. To eulogize the leaders of the apostasy, although the eulogy may be only intended of their acquaintance with Hebrew and Greek, is dangerous. It often proves misleading to the young and unwary among us. In God's sight what is the value of learning when unaccompanied by a knowledge of the truth? Paul, himself a learned man, tells us in 1 Cor. 1. What is God's opinion of men who use learning to make of none effect, as do the ministers of Christendom, the threats and promises he has made? We have the answer to this in the denunciation of Israel's false prophets. We have it in the scathing rebukes addressed by Christ to the clergy of his day. We are prone to draw to kind a distinction between an open and avowed and a cultured, influential leader in mystic Babylon. Do not let it fade from memory that when Christendom's religious systems are destroyed, both Catholic and Protestant, the saints are to shout again and again, "Hallelu Yah."

Brother Buell Nutt is on a business trip in the West, and writing from Tacoma, Wash., November the 9th he says:

"I went to church last Sunday morning in the Mormon Tabernacle at Salt Lake. The music was fine. They have a pipe organ that is a wonder, by far the finest I have ever heard, and I have heard some pretty good ones in my travels. I made up my mind as I sat there listening to it that some day we would have one. One of the Mormon elders then tried to explain what Mormonism was. I always thought the Catholics had the greatest credulity of any people in the world, but a Mormon can show them a lot of tricks that they have not even thought of. The elder said that they believed in the Bible and its teachings except where they were not accurate, but that they also believed that the Book of Mormon was just as reliable and, in fact, more so, as there was no doubt (to a Mormon) that Joe Smith was inspired and, in other words, had the latest revelation from God. He said the reason they knew the book was reliable was that three witnesses had seen the plates, and that eleven others had been inspired to testify that they were genuine. He cited other instances which made the proof just as conclusive. Wonderful, is it not? I got some real information from a man I later met on the train, and the more you hear about it the more you wonder how intelligent men can uphold and believe in such a system. Will tell you something about it some day. After you have come in contact with such teachings, how thankful it makes you feel that the truth, the real truth, is so simple, and that it needs not to be added to or subtracted from, and that it does not require "inspired" testimony of Mrs. Eddy, Joe Smith, or anyone else."

Sowing and Reaping

"Be not deceived:" Why? "For (or because) whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he reap." Does this apply only to our rewards? Let God answer and not man made creeds: "To them who by patient continuance in well doing (he will give) eternal life." Thus you see salvation comes from active faith, or works of righteousness.

Faith and Works

I read not long since these words in a communication to The Restitution: "Thank God, we do not have to work for salvation, but our reward is another thing to be considered." The writer of the article from which this quotation is made is a member of the Baptist sect, and this doctrine of salvation without works is a prominent one among them. Let us see if it will stand the test of reason and Scripture.

If salvation is absolutely free, without any effort on our part, all we have to do is to sit still and it will come to us. This is against reason, for we see no such thing in all nature. Let us, however, look to revelation and see what God says. Turn to Mark 16:15, 16: "He that believeth (the gospel when heard), and is baptized shall be saved." Does it require work on our part to be baptized? It certainly does. We might believe to all eternity (that is, have faith), but if this work of baptism does not follow, we have no promise of salvation according to Jesus' words. See Phil.2:12. "Work out your own salvation." How were the Philippians to do this? Paul tells them in the verse following: "Not murmuring, not disputing, blameless, harmless, holding forth the word of life." Here, as in the passage quoted from Mark, the first step must be faith. James, speaking by the same Spirit as our Lord says positively that faith alone cannot save us (James 2:14, 17, 24, 26). Again our Lord says in Matt. 7:20, "By their works ye shall know them." There is no question with us as to salvation. God worked it out through the begettal, death, and resurrection of his Son, our Lord Jesus Christ. No work of ours can bring us eternal life apart from him. But nowhere have we promise of eternal life or salvation only through faith and works of righteousness combined. See again James 2:22, "By works was faith made perfect." God and saints must work together for salvation. "Workers together with God." "Come unto me and (if you will come) I will give you rest" (Matt. 11:28). Again, Jesus said to the Jews, "Ye will not come to me that ye might have life" (John 5:40). Here we see action (work) is required to have eternal life. That men are saved by faith without the works following is a dangerous doctrine, and one on which many have made shipwreck of life. "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling," says Paul in Phil. 2:12. He that feareth him (God) and worketh righteousness is accepted with him, says Peter in Acts 10:35. "Faith, if it hath not works, is dead" (James 2:17). In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established.

Purity

Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? or who shall stand in his holy place? He that hath clean hands and a pure heart."

Purity of life depends upon purity of mind. We are told to think on things that are true, honest, good report, lovely, and pure: and with some of the conditions of the world today, let me emphasize the word "pure."

"Whatsoever you do in word or deed, do all to the glory of God." "Be ye holy in all manner of conversation, as it becometh the gospel of Christ. "Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace (benefit) unto the hearer." "Neither foolish talking nor jesting (of which we hear so much), but rather giving of thanks." "Bring every thought to the obedience of Christ, and have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them." "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God." "He that overcometh shall be clothed in white raiment, and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life." Now is the time to make our raiment white. It requires constant watchfulness, but love for God makes this easy. Let us keep the thought ever before us of coming into his presence with clean hands and a pure heart. Can we expect to come into his kingdom any other way? "Be not deceived, God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."

Orpha Sanford.

PRUNING

A Christian, for the sweet fruit he bears to God and men, is compared to the vine. Now, as the most generous vine, if it be not pruned, runs into many superfluous stems, and grows at last weak and fruitless, so doth the best man, if he be not cut short of his desires, and pruned with afflictions.

If it be painful to bleed, it is worse to wither. Let me be pruned that I may grow, rather than be cut up to burn. Joseph Hall.

Russellism Refuted

ARTICLE TEN

THE APOSTLE Paul gives timely warning against "cunningly devised fables." When theories are presented whose characteristics are cunningness or ingenuity it behooves us to beware of them. Truth is of a frankness akin to the innocence of little children. Hence it is by becoming "as little children" the truth of the gospel is learned. Russellism confesses itself to be of such a subtle nature that it defied discovery during all the ages of the world till the advent of Mr. Russell. "Meat in due season" is what Mr. Russell calls his theory, and he claims that the "due season" is the time when he is propagating what he regards as spiritual food for "thinking Christians," and which, as his readers must see, requires the most "cunning" methods of manipulating Scripture words in order to reveal (?) what had been hidden before Mr. Russell's time. So often are we reminded in his writings of the hidden mystery of his claims, and so laborious do his efforts to reveal his discoveries appear that one cannot resist the suspicion that it is related to that "Mystery, Babylon the Great" the confusion of the religious world generally.

It has taken volumes to reveal this Russell theory, a fact which evidences the subtlety of its nature; and it would require volumes to follow it in all its devious ways and by-ways. The foundation of it all, however, is the new invention of "ransom"; all the rest consists of strenuous efforts to interpret Scripture into some sort of an appearance of harmony with the invented "ransom for all" theory. We have not the time to waste in following Mr. Russell in a work which has occupied nearly his whole lifetime. Having exposed the fallacy of his foundation, the superstructure built upon such a foundation of sand cannot be stronger than that upon which it depends. We are tempted, however, to deal with one other claim as showing the presumptious assertions of the author and the truth-nullifying novelty of the "cunningly devised fables" which Mr. Russell has the temerity to offer as "food in due season." This relates to

The Resurrection of Christ

Here are some of the assertions:

"We must bear in mind, also, that our Lord is no longer a human being." "He is no longer human in any sense or degree." "After they had become partakers of the Holy Spirit and understood spiritual things they could have believed the angels at the sepulchre, that he had risen from the dead condition, even if they had seen the fleshly body of the man Christ Jesus still lying in the tomb; but not so before the body must be away to make faith in his resurrection possible to them." "He thus showed them, not only that he now had the power to appear in a variety of ways and forms, but also that no one of those bodies which they saw was the spiritual, glorious body, though the facts of his resurrection and presence was made manifest to them." "Many Christians have the idea of our Lord's glorious, spiritual body is the very same body that was crucified and laid in Joseph's tomb, they expect when they see the Lord in glory, to identify him by the scars he received on Calvary." "Our Lord's human body was, however, supernaturally removed from the tomb; because had it remained there it would have been an unsurmountable obstacle to the faith of the disciples, who were not yet instructed in spiritual things." "We know nothing about what became of it, except that it did not decay or corrupt. Whether it was dissolved into gasses, or whether it is still preserved somewhere as a grand memorial of God's love, of Christ's obedience, and of our redemption, no one knows, nor is such knowledge necessary." "For the purpose of instructing them, (he) appeared as a man in various bodies of flesh and bones which he created and dissolved as occasion required."

These assertions are extracted from chapter V. of "Millenial Dawn," Vol. II. If these are not "devised fables" such things are hard to find. Mr. Russell's conception of God is a most crude one indeed. He deems him to be as cunning and deceptive as is Russellism, in that his claim is God planned to do what these assertinos say he did do. Let us ask Mr. Russell to transfer himself back to a time before the resurrection of Christ, and from that prospective point of view let him plan the movements which he has claimed to give us a retrospect of. In other words, let him do the planning. It would be as follows: I am going to have prophets foretell the resurrection of Christ; and Jesus must teach his disciples that he is to be raised from the grave. Of course they in their simplicity and lack of spiritual insight, will imagine that he who is put to death on the cross and who is buried in Joseph's tomb will come out of the tomb; but my plan does not require any such thing as that. For I will raise Christ from the dead without raising that body that was buried; but if I tell the disciples this, they will not believe me: for they will say, We never knew Jesus except as we saw Jesus himself -a real bodily personality that had no personal existence that we ever saw except that personality which we saw, heard and felt. So in order to meet this literal weakness of those spiritually dull disciples, I shall be compelled to plan a means of deceiving them. When they see that the body is gone from the tomb they will, poor simpletons, take that as proof that Christ has risen; whereas, if I plan to have the body left lying in the tomb they will naturally refuse to believe that he has been raised. So I must plan to have that body removed, and thus deceive them. I shall thereby virtually be saying to them, You see proof of the fact that he has risen in the fact that the body is gone, when in reality the absence of the body is no proof of his resurrection at all. But their lack of spiritual perception necessitates that I plan to thus deceive them so that they may be witnesses of the resurrection as a matter of fact (to them) of a body that never was raised but that "possibly dissolved into gasses" or is hidden somewhere as a relic. [illegible] creatures, in their simplicity, they would be eloquently proving that he who was put to death and was buried was also raised, and they will base their claims upon the evidence of men who saw him after his resurrection, but if they had but a little of the spiritual perception of Russellism, they would know that the trick of spiriting away the body was played upon them, and that what their hundreds of witnesses thought they saw was not the crucified, buried and raised Jesus at all but one newly created who could create and dissolve bodies to deceive as occasion required.

Now this is put bluntly, with Mr. Russell's "cunningly devised fable" dress, and we ask the reader to examine the quotations we have given, and then say whether we have fairly represented what is set forth in the quotations. Let me repeat one of the quotations: "After they had become partakers of the Holy Spirit, and understood spiritual things, they could have believed the angels at the sepulchre, that he had risen from the dead condition, even if they had seen the body of the man Christ Jesus still lying in the tomb, but not so before the body must be away to make faith in his resurrection possible to them." Now what does this mean except that the absence of the body from the tomb was necessary in order to deceive the disciples? Mr. Russell does not even give them credit that they did believe in Christ's resurrection with the body still in the tomb after they had received the Holy Spirit. He only says, "they could have done so." It seems from this that they never did get over the delusion (?) that the absence of the body was a proof that Jesus was raised, notwithstanding that they received the Holy Spirit. So even the Holy Spirit did not reveal it to them. Now will Mr. Russell tell us where he received this revelation from, that those spiritually weak minded disciples could not receive before they had the Holy Spirit, and did not receive after they had it? Is this mental acuteness so superior to that of God's chosen apostles? Or has he received a special revelation, like Dr. Dowie and a host of other pretenders? This must be his claim, judging from his oft-repeated words "present truth," and "meat in due season." What presumption a poor, fallible, frail man must have, to assume either that he has talents or has received a special revelation superior to those of the very apostles chosen of the Lord! To see this claim in its real ugliness, we have only to suppose Mr. Russell and our Lord's disciples visiting Joseph's tomb together; there let us suppose, lies the body that was crucified. But the angels say, "He is not here, but is risen." "No," answers the disciples, "there he is lying in the tomb, he is not risen." "Poor simpletons," cries Mr. Russell, "the body must be away to make faith in his resurrection possible to you; because you lack spiritual understanding; but not so with me. I can look upon that body that was crucified lying down there dead in that tomb and still believe that 'he is not here, but has risen.'"

Now is this so much the worse for the disciples, or for Mr. Russell? Which deserves to be pitied? Which deserves to be blamed? Verily, it is an odious thing to see a man "wise in his own conceit" ... claiming a wisdom greater than that of the chosen apostles of the Lord. Selected by Brother B. F. Smith.

Sound Prophetic Exegesis

In Dan 2:7 we find the foundation for all his prophetic utterances; the metalic image and the four beasts. These portions serve as a constitution to which all other portions of the book must conform; they are an outline of all that follows in other portions of the book.

For instance, we read in Dan. 10:21, "I will show thee that which is noted in the Scriptures of truth." Now concerning the 2300 days of Dan. 8:13, which in the Septuagint reads, "unto 2400 then shall the sanctuary be closed." All expositors have failed when trying to mark the period of its ending, and for the very good reason that they have no sure starting point. I am inclined to believe that 2400 is the true reading, because it agrees with the 1260, 1290, and 1335.

In the metalic image and the fourth beast, there is no mention of Mahommedanism. In chapter 11:31 we learn that the same party that takes away the daily, "shall place the abomination that maketh desolate." If the party of Mahommedan places the abomination of desolation, then this 31 verse is not true.

That Daniel refers to the Roman power in the last part of chapter 11 and in chapter 12 we have abundance of evidence. In verse 33 we read, ... "they shall fall by the sword, and by flame, by captivity, and by spoil many days." This is evidently the "time and times and the dividing of time," the 1260 years that the saints are in the hand of the horn (Dan. 7:25)

Again, in Dan. 11:36, "And the king shall do according to his will; and he shall exalt himself above every god, and shall speak marvelous things against the God of gods ... ." This agrees with what Paul says in 2 Thess. 2:4 concerning the self exalting "man of sin," the papacy, that was seated by Rome. This Roman party was to worship a "strange god whom his fathers knew not." This is not true of the followers of Mahommed, but is of the papacy, who worship a triune deity. And when the question was put in Dan. 12:6, "How long shall it be to the end of these wonders?" what is the answer? "It shall be for a time, times, and an half." This period does not belong to the Turks, but is the period that belongs to the Roman empire, while the saints are in the hand of

Dan 7:25, the horn	1260 years
Rev. 11:2, holy city trodden under foot	1260 years
Rev. 11:3, the witnesses prophecy	1260 years
Rev. 12:6 the woman in the wilderness	1260 years
Rev. 12:14, the woman in the wilderness	1260 years
Rev. 13:5, the beast to continue	1260 years

In every instance this period belongs to the Roman power; and now is it reasonable to say that the angel in Dan. 12 introduces this period in conpretion with periods belonging to the Turkish? The Turk has no standing in Daniel.

Obituary

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.—Psa. 116:15.

Fred Goddard, oldest son of Charles D. and Ethel M. Goddard, was born at Argos, Indiana, Aug. 17, 1904. He went to South Bend with his parents soon after his birth where his short life has been spent.

He was taken sick last Thursday, but nothing serious was thought of it till Sunday when the physicians ordered him to the hospital early Monday morning where an operation for appendicitis was had, but to no avail, and he died at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. He had lived 15 years, 2 months, and 23 days.

Little Freddie had always been a kind dutiful child, and his untimely death is a severe shock to his parents and relatives. He was a member of the South Bend Sunday School, where his mother is a member of the church, and had learned some of the things concerning Jesus and his saving power.

Death is a sad event even with the aged, but doubly so when the youth is cut down in the morning of life. It is like an untimely frost that eats down the flowers as they begin to bud and bloom in the springtime. But the Lord hath given, and the Lord hath taken in accordance with the fixed laws of his creation. We humbly bow in our sorrow to await the full fruition of his will and the achievement of his power.

Freddie leaves his parents, two sisters, three brothers, his grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Goddard, and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Bryan and other relatives to mourn in remembrance of his bright sunny life.

Funeral services were held from the Church of God in Argos, Nov. 18, 1919, conducted by the writer.

D. E. Van Taeler.

NUGGETS OF EAST AFRICAN WISDOM

Westerners have, generally a very wrong idea of the psychology and ethical code of the natives of the African continent. The following proverbs show that, after all, the human mind, in its essentials, is one from the equator to the two poles:

I am a gogota bird and I build for the gande bird. (I do the work and someone else reaps the benefit).

A stranger is like rain; he strikes you and passes by (i. e., No use bothering about him).

Two pieces of meat will not be chewed by one mouth. (Do one thing at a time).

An animal running at full speed is to be followed at full speed (Urgent matters urgent; wait for mature consideration).

THE THINGS THAT CANNOT FAIL

When the anchors that faith has cast
Are dragging in the gale,
I am quietly holding fast
To the things that cannot fail.

I know that right is right;
That it is not good to lie;
That love is better than spite,
And a neighbor than a spy.

In the darkest night of the year,
When the stars have all gone out,
That courage is better than fear;
That faith is truer than doubt.

And fierce tho' the fiends may fight,
And long tho' the angels hide,
I know that truth and right
Have the universe on their side.

What Think Ye of Christ?

An old question, a vital question, the question that through the ages has proved the touchstone of human character, and in countless human lives has marked the parting of the ways that lead to life and to death.

How little Christ is understood in this twentieth century of the era that bears his name! How few among the multitudes to whom his name is a commonplace suspect the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, the illimitable fields of new and thrilling experience with their appeal to all the heroism and spirit of splendid adventure of which the human soul is capable, that are immediately thrown open to the one who casts in his lot with Christ.

To how many the Christian conception is but a joyless negation of all that most appeals to the glad, growing, exuberant life of youth! A system of giving up things! An everlasting Don't! As one such expressed it to the writer recently, "Christians may be good, but they're deadly dull."

That one and there are oh so many like him met Christ a few hours later, a new Christ, a wonderful Christ he had never dreamed of before; and he has not yet got over the wonder; the gladness, the thrill of the new life to which he was introduced from the moment he put his hand in his and pledged himself to follow.

You who have been holding back from Christ because of the unattractiveness of many who bear his name; you who have lingered long in the shallows of the great ocean of Christian experience; let me tell you of the untrackable continents and oceans that await your exploration.

Your eager young lives thirsting for adventure and experiences that will call for all the best and most heroic in you, launch your frail bark upon the great ocean that washes the shores of your narrow little isle of life. Take Christ for your pilot and put out into the deep.

What think ye of Christ? He is the finest, truest, best friend man ever had. He is the most splendid Leader that ever led his followers to victory, the most fearless and surest pilot that ever sailed the uncharted seas of human experience. He is the only one in heaven or on earth who knows YOU better than you know yourself; and knowing you, is willing to link his life with yours and help you to realize your noblest ideals.

Put your hand in his and venture forth into the great unknown. Christ wants you; Christ needs you; Christ calls you. Will you fail him?—"Evangel," Edinburg, Scotland.

Good News

I went over to Mrs. Jones' the other morning, and she met me at the door, her face beaming with gladness "Oh, I have such good news. A very dear friend, that I have not seen for years is coming to stay with us. I have so much to do to get everything ready for him. He will be here most any day now, and there are so many things I know he likes, that I must prepare for him. I must also have the house extra clean and ready for his coming."

The dear woman was so delighted that I could hardly help rejoicing with her over her good news. For days after that, as I would pass the house, I could see her working and always watching for her loved one. How happy she was in her labor of love and expectation. Now, brothers and sisters, I have some good news also and it concerns you as well as me. We have a precious friend coming to see us soon. Who is it? you ask. It is our Savior, Jesus Christ, our loved and long looked for King. He is coming from a far country and will expect a loving welcome from us all. Will he get it? Are we watching daily for his arrival? Are we, like Mrs. Jones, doing those little things we know our Friend likes? Are we getting our "house" ready for his habitation? Oh, let us hurry! He will be here soon. Let us, like Mrs. Jones, rejoice. Let us prepare ourselves for that great event. Our King may be here any day now. Let us be ready and waiting, that we may join the happy reunion and with the rest of our loved ones, sing:

Joy to the world
The Lord has come;
Let earth receive her King.

Bessie K. Walker.

Special Notice

Today we publish the first of our "special contributors" articles. This from the pen of Sister Walker and entitled "Good News." We commend it to all. Do you not think you could write a similar article and have us print it over your name? Suppose you try. We feel you will make a success of it. Let us have your article.

November

November, ("Novembris" from "novem") the ninth month of the old Roman year, which began with March. By the Julian arrangement, according to which the year began with January 1, November, while retaining its old name, became the eleventh month, and had thirty days assigned to it. In the calendar of the first French republic November reappeared partly as "Brumaire" and partly as "Frimaire." The Anglo-Saxon name for November was "Blotmonath" (blood month), probably from the custom of slaughtering cattle about this time for winter consumption.

We read that "without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin"; also, "The blood of Jesus Christ his (God's) Son cleanseth us from all sin." You readily can see that unless you now are the happy possessor of Jesus Christ, there is no better time to claim him as your own than the present month. We can not trust to our own strength, neither can we trust to this world's riches to enter the kingdom of God. We must surrender ourselves to God through faith in Jesus Christ, otherwise we may be overtaken by the fate of the rich man who said: "Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry. But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be which thou hast provided? So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God."

Delay not: make your peace with God now. Don't put it off till tomorrow.

My Prayer

O God whose law controls the blazing sun,
And all the countless orbs that ceaseless run
From out thy hand, like chaff before the wind,
Make me to know thy will, O perfect one!

Make me to know the truth what'er it be;
Lead me to do the right, and show to me
How I may rise to thy celestial height,
And be from error and its evils free.

O give me courage to pursue the way
That I should go; let naught my progress stay;
Nor fear, nor pride, nor selfishness, nor greed,
Turn me aside or cause me to delay.

I am so weak! I would be strong and true;
Thy purpose I would know, and if I knew
How I might live the best of life to make,
Whatever should be done I'd try to do.

I am so blind! I cannot see the light;
With halting steps I grope as tho' 'twas night,
Yet all around I feel the glow of day;
Touch thou my clouded eyes and give me sight.

Guide me along the path the Teacher trod;
Let there my feet with faith like his be shod;
Fill thou my heart and soul with love of right,
Then nearer shall I come to thee, O God. Amen.

The Glory of Two Houses:

The Natural and the Spiritual

THERE ARE fundamental principles underlying God's plan of salvation which, if perverted, will furnish a subsoil in which infidelity and atheism will flourish instead of faith in and reverence for God and his word. Did Adam and Eve do the will of satan or the will of God in partaking of the tree of knowledge of good and evil? Some would be so agreeable as to maintain that it was the will of both. If so, satan for once at least, ceased to be an opposer of God. This is inconsistent, for if it was God's will for them to do so, and no other possible alternative open for them, why the commandment not to, and the warning of a death sentence to follow disobedience? This reasoning is about as sound as the arguments that God hath commanded all men everywhere to repent and turn from their sins, if it is not his will nor his plan for them to do so until a probationary period arrives when they will be disciplined for subjects of the kingdom of God. Some would contend that after all of God's pleading with Israel to choose him as their God and King, that they really did his will in rejecting him, and so committed no great sin in doing so; yet great punishment came upon them as a result of their disobedience. Others feel very badly for Judas Iscariot, avering that some one just had to act the demon's part, whether they wanted to or not, in order to have Jesus betrayed into the hands of sinners, when the written testimony says (John 13:2) the devil and not God put it into the heart of Judas to betray Christ. The same twisted process of reasoning affirms that the commandment was given to "go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," when it is not the will of God nor according to his plan that every creature should hear now. The child of God is taught not to use hypocrisy, but to act in sincerity and truth. Dare we maintain that God in carrying out his plan of salvation, would deviate from his own given laws?

Obedience in God's Commandments Brings a Blessing: Disobedience, a Curse

From the day that God created the first pair and placed them in Eden, his commandments if obeyed, could only have resulted in a blessing. To reason otherwise places a terrible stigma upon the character of God. Noah and Abraham obeyed the voice of the Lord and were greatly blessed, and the promise is still open, but the self-righteous and adulterous hearts enter not the door of salvation. God has winked at the ignorance and often temporary triumph of the wicked, for he knoweth their end is destruction; but he also knoweth them that are his and "he waiteth for the precious fruits of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain" (James 5:7). Man, often in his heart, essays to do one thing, but would have innocent bystanders believe he is intent on accomplishing quite the reverse. Happily God's ways are not man's ways, and a knowledge of his will and purpose inspires implicit confidence. Because he can turn evil to good account and has power to make the wrath of man praise him, does not excuse disobedience or nullify the execution of punishment should the offended fail to repent. God will keep his promises to the obedient in spite of the disobedient, and those who follow after the evil imaginations of their hearts. If man is punished by his sins as well as for them, the nearer he does the will of God the less he suffers; but if through suffering we are led to see the error of our ways, instead of complaining we should rejoice. Humbleness and godly sorrow work repentance. "What glory is it if, when we be buffeted for our faults, ye shall take it patiently? but if when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable with God" (1 Pet. 2:20). We find, here, another type of suffering which works perfection in faithful believers, but against which the natural man rebels: it is suffering wrongfully or for the wrong doing of another without complaint. It was by this suffering that Christ was made perfect and well-pleasing in his Father's sight. He died, not for his own sins, for he was without sin; but for those who seek a covering in his name, imputing his righteousness to them because of their faith. Old Testament blood sacrifices point to Christ and justified believers. It is acceptable with God if those who take the name of Christ shall also, through circumstances, in a comparatively small degree, partake of his suffering. Manifestation of like-patience brings Christ-likeness. The favor and blessings of God is bestowed in manifold ways upon his children in the present life more than offset all things they may be required to suffer for his name's sake, to say nothing of the promise of everlasting life in his kingdom.

Israel To Be The First Christian National Acquisition To The Father's House

The kingdom of Israel is to be the nucleus or the initial member of a family of nations blessed through the personal reign of Christ and his bride. In other words. Christ is the first fruits, his bride a kind of first fruits glorified through a resurrection from the dead and constituting the first born of spiritual nature, the first of the perfected Israel of God. The nation of Israel and Gentile nations seeking admittance to the kingdom of God will be granted a period of probation as occupied by the first fruits prior to the millennium and, if faithful, also become the completed harvest of the seed of Abraham through Christ by a resurrection when the thousand years' reign of Christ is finished. The order is Jew first, and also Gentile; so Israel is to have the honor of first gracing the the house of God in a national way. There is no promise in the Bible of Gentile nations becoming Christian nations previous to this time. Individuals and nations may claim to be Christian, but if they are not governed by the law of Christ, they are none of his. The last day afflicted remnant of Israel shall repent and accept and call blessed him (Christ) that cometh in the name of the Lord. The kingdom of Israel is to be the kingdom of God, and as it spreads to include Gentile nations, will never change its name or ever be destroyed. Then shall there be a league of nations where jealousies and mistrust shall have passed, because of a willingness to accept an imputed righteousness based on their faith in Christ and his laws as an international peace tribunal. Happy day when "many nations shall come and say, Come, let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us his ways and we will walk in his paths: for the law shall go forth of Zion and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem" (Micah 4:2). The glory of the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb is the light of the house of God, "and the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor into it" (Rev. 21:24). Then shall a knowledge of the glory of God begin to fill the earth. Christ is to continue to be the good shepherd and to know his sheep. They hear his voice and follow after him. With the repentance and acceptance of Israel begins the separation of the sheep and goat nations. Christian nations will now be chosen with the same no-respector-of-persons law into the family of God, as individuals have been prior to this; and the goat nations shall likewise receive the same wages for sin as promised the individual sinner, which is death. When the seed of Abraham comes into complete inheritance of the earth they shall everyone bear a relationship to the house of God through Christ Jesus. God's faithful promise to Abraham will then be fulfilled when he promised that his seed should be as the stars of heaven. This accomplished, the kingdom is given over to the Father, that the Son might be subject also to him. The theory of a triune God seems to have lost out by this time, for no mention is made of the glory be shared by a third personality when Christ gives the honor, glory, and the kingdom to his Father, the one and only true God.

Why Do The Wicked Not Understand?

Daniel speaking of the time of the end, says, the wicked shall not understand. Is it because they are wicked or because the time for them to understand has not yet come? What reason do we give for the present wicked condition of the world? Is it not due to the general wandering away from the principles of godliness which is automatically bringing upon the nations the present troublesome conditions, and which shall last until their iniquity is complete? And from the signs of the times the world is soon to realize that its immediate future is indeed a dark outlook. Farsighted statesmen and giants of the industrial and commercial world are even now greatly troubled. No sooner is a proposed remedy applied to one ill than another disorder demands attention. The world is ere long to realize that there is a God and that he sees and has been taking account of the deeds of men whether they be good or evil. The stern reality of Christ's birth, life, death, and resurrection, and the good news of his promised benevolent kingship over the earth, will soon face the nations as never before, among which it has been preached through the pen and speech as a witness against them. When the Master suddenly comes for his bride there shall be weeping for those who know not God and scoff at the promise of the Savior's coming. Must we make excuses for these conditions, relieving man of responsibility, because of a failure on God's part to provide him with adequate opportunity to do and to be otherwise? "There is a God. The herbs of the valley and the cedars of the mountains adore him; the insect hums his praise: the bird chants him in its foilage; the thunderbolt flashes forth his power: and the ocean declares his immensity. Man alone has said, 'There is no God.' He then, has never, in his adversity, raised his eyes toward heaven, or in his prosperity, turned his regards toward the earth! Is nature so far from him that he has no power to contemplate it? Or does he believe it the simple result of chance? But what has power to constrain unorganized and rebellious matter to arrange itself in an order so perfect?"

Romans 4: 25

"Christ was delivered up for our trespasses and was raised for our justification." It is a question of moral deserts entirely, that God's righteousness might be declared. On the one hand there is sin and death; and on the other there is righteousness and eternal life.

The mode of Christ's death showed that it was for punishment eternal, which is what trespasses deserve. "Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power (2 Thess. 1:9).

His resurrection unto eternal life, showed what righteousness deserved. We can now go back to Romans 6:7, which reads in the Revised Version, "For he that hath died is justified from sins." This cannot mean that simply by dying sin is gotten rid of; because Paul says in 1 Cor. 15:17, "And if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins." Then when all such die, they would die in and with their sins, and of curse they would not be justified or freed from them. Undoubtedly in Romans 6:7, Paul refers to Christ, but an eliosis must be supplied and then the passage would read as follows: "For he that hath died (and risen again), is justified from sin." In the 34th verse of the 8th chapter, the apostle says, "It is Christ Jesus that died, yea, rather that was raised from the dead, who is at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us." The sins from which he was justified were the sins which he bare when he became a curse; and it was for those sins that he died, became a curse. Those were not his sins personally; his resurrection was the proof that he bare no guilt because of them, he was freed or justified as to the claim that they had upon him, otherwise he would have remained dead forever, as that is what happens to those who bear sin judicially. Christ's release from death by resurrection unto eternal life, proves that the penalty for the sins for which he died was never satisfied or paid by himself, neither could he have paid the debt, which was eternal death, and been raised from the dead. What did happen, however, was that those persons whose sins Christ bare, were forgiven them; the impending penalty was not inflicted.

The testimony is that Christ "was numbered with the transgressors" (Isa. 53:12), that the Jews "did esteem him stricken, smitted of God, and afflicted" (verse 4). Christ took the position of a sinner, although not a sinner, and he died the same kind of death that criminals did in his day, to show in a public way that sinners deserve to be punished with death as a vindication of the law of God under which he was born. This was what all sin and trespass offerings under the Mosaic law were for. "It pleased Jehovah, for his righteousness' sake, to magnify the law and make it honorable" (Isa. 42:21). "Think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets; I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill" (Matt. 5:17).

After the law had fulfilled its design in connection with Jesus Christ in the development of the righteousness of God in the character of Christ, and the public declaration of that righteousness by crucifixion, he took it out of the way, "nailing it to his cross" (Col. 2:14). But though the law has been taken away, its righteousness is preserved in the personality of Christ outside the law, apart from it; being witnessed by the law and the prophets (Rom. 3:21). In Jesus Christ, the righteousness of the law, which was the righteousness of God, stands out as a lone tower and beacon light for the benefit of all, in the midst of great darkness, lighting up the way to eternal life. He was the illustration of how a righteous man can die and be raised from the dead to live forever and die no more. In passing through the flesh vail (Heb. 10:20) it was rent from top to bottom and cast aside as a useless and impossible thing [illegible] for immortality. Mortality had no claim on Christ as God manifest in the flesh that is as "the word become flesh." In Christ the age-long question of Job received its answer. "If a man die shall he live again?" He was the only one who could answer it, or ever did answer it. And why could he answer it? Because God showed to him the path of life, and he walked in it. "Thou wilt show me the path of life; in thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures forever more." Christ realized to the greatest degree, more so than any others, that if he would obtain eternal redemption (Heb. 9:12) he must make himself worth saving; hence he said to his heavenly Father, "And for their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth" (John 17:19). The spirit in Psa. 18:23, speaking prophetic of Christ said, "I was also upright before him, and I kept myself from mine iniquity." This was iniquity only in the potential sense as his human nature was like that of all other men who did not keep themselves from the impulses of their nature.

Again, this same Holy Spirit of prophecy testifying concerning Jesus, says in Psa. 17:3: "Thou hast proved mine heart; thou hast visited me in the night, thou hast tried me and findest nothing; I am purposed that my heart shall not transgress." Christ told his disciples that they should be of good cheer, because he had overcome the world (John 16:33), which shows that the free-will power was in active operation, and that he was on probation and had a righteous character to produce or create. Christ's sinful flesh, alias human nature, never defiled him nor made him unclean, therefore through death he could relieve himself of his "filthy garments," and then be clothed upon with his house from heaven (2 Cor. 5:2).

Let no mistake be made here; it was not the "filthy garments" that was the ransom price which he gave as the price for the ransom of "the world to come." Human nature has been dying for six thousand years, and it never yet has given to anyone eternal life, for the simple reason that it cannot first give it to itself.

The Psalmist talking about man, that is human nature, says, "None of them can by any means redeem his brother, nor give to God a ransom for him" (chapter 49:7). In verse 8, the spirit says, "For the redemption of their soul is costly." There is nothing so cheap as human nature. "All the nations before him are as nothing; they are counted to him less than nothing, and vanity" (Isa. 40: 17).

Paul says in 2 Tim. 2:6, "Who gave himself a ransom for all"; and Jesus says in Matt. 20:27, "Even as the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many." What kind of life was this, a forfeited life? God forbid! Peter says, "But with precious blood, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot, even the blood of Christ." Again Peter says, "Because Christ also suffered for sins once, the righteous for the unrighteous, that he might bring us to God." The sacrifice that God required was one that was not itself in captivity to sin and death as the wages of sin, so that when life was given it could be taken again for the reason that death cannot hold it: it must be able to live again and die no more, as a demonstration to show forth that upon just and righteous grounds, those of the human family who have been justified by faith in Christ Jesus can die a natural death and be raised from the dead unto eternal life. The efficiency then of the ransom sacrifice, lies in the fact that it was holy and without sin (1 Pet. 1:19), for a sacrifice dying to satisfy a condemnation resting upon it, and belonging to itself, would die to satisfy penalty, or punishment, and therefore could not come to life again.

There were certain animals under the law of Moses that were regarded as clean; the clean were typical of Christ. Now to show that Christ could not be his own ransom sacrifice through his death, we cite Numbers 18:17: "But the firstling of a cow, or the firstling of a sheep, or the firstling of a goat, thou shalt not redeem; they are holy; thou shalt sprinkle their blood upon the altar, and shalt burn their fat for an offering made by fire, for a sweet savour unto the Lord." The mode of Christ's death or sacrifice was for the benefit of those who are justified by faith in Christ Jesus. That mode was the illustration of the just penalty of God's law, that is, as Paul says, "The wages of sin is death." Repentant sinners are baptized into that death, and so in symbol it answers for satisfied penalty of broken law, which is what sin is. Through faith in the mode of Christ's death the sinner makes confession, and so God out of mercy forgives all past sins, hence, "there is therefore no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus." All such have passed from death unto life, and although still clothed with the filthy garments of the flesh, in due season, if they faint not, they will receive a change of raiment by passing through the vail, that is to say, the flesh, as Christ himself did; he abolishing death in them, and bringing life and immortality to light through the belief of the gospel.

Death is used in the Scriptures in two ways: death as the wages of sin; and death as an affair of nature. The death of Christ had a direct connection with death as the wages for sin; and an indirect connection with natural death, in the way of showing that it was no barrier to eternal life; whereas death as wages when suffered by the individual for penalty or punishment, is a barrier. At the time of baptism into the death of Christ, death as wages is done away with; but death by the law of nature, natural death, still remains, and as a matter of fact, at that time, is not abrogated. That this may be discerned and no confusion exist in the mind in reference to the use of the word "death" in the Bible, we call attention to the following Scriptures:

Romans 5:21, "That as sin reigned in death, even so might grace reign through righteousness unto eternal life." Rom. 6:16, "Whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness." Not death in general, but death as the reward of service to sin. The death in both of these passages is death as punishment. Rom. 7:5, "Wrought in our members to bring forth fruit unto death." Verse 10, "The commandment, which was unto life, this I found to be unto death." Verse 13, "Did then that which is good become death unto me?" Death in these places is also death as penalty or punishment, and not natural death.

Rom. 8:16, "For the mind of flesh is death." Rom. 1:33, "They that practice such things are worthy of death." Here again are two, that mean death as wages for sin.

2 Cor. 2:16, "To the one a savor of death unto death": from the first death to the second death. 2 Cor. 7:10, "But the sorrow of the world worketh death." Heb. 2:15, "And might deliver them who through the fear of death were all their life-time subject to bondage." James 1:15, "And the sin when it is full-grown bringeth forth death." Jas. 5:20, "Let him know that he who converteth a sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall cover a multitude of sins."

Rev. 2:11, "He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death." Rev. 20:6, "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: over such the second death hath no power." Rev. 20:14, "And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death, even the lake of fire." Rev. 21:8, "But for the fearful, and unbelieving, and abominable, and murderers, and fornicators and sorcerers, and idolators, and all liars, their part shall be in the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone; which is the second death." John 8:51, "He shall never see death." John 5:21, "And shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life." 1 John 3:15, "We know that we have passed from death unto life." Rom. 8:13, "If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die." John 11:26, "And whosoever believeth in me shall never die."

In all these passages, what is referred to is death belonging to sin in its primary sense, and not to natural death. It has been said that "death is death, it matters not how it comes"; but it does matter how it comes, whether a person lives again. A person may enter a prison as a visitor, or as a convict; the how he enters determines how long he will remain in the prison.

In Zech. 9:12 we read about "prisoners of hope"; in verse 11 that these prisoners are sent forth out of the pit wherein there is no water; and in Isa. 49:8, 9 that Christ was given for "a covenant of the people, to establish the earth, to cause to inherit the desolate heritages; saying to them that are bound (prisoners), go forth; to them that are in darkness, shew yourselves." Prisoners of hope do not go into the prison house and have the doors locked upon them, because of their sins and transgressions, but because of the temporary state of mortality in which they were physically born; therefore Christ who has the key can unlock the door so that they can come forth and put on the garments of salvation (Isa. 61:10; Rev. 1:18).

The conscious identity of man must become united with "the mind of the Spirit," otherwise man goes into the prison house with conscious identity united to "the mind of the flesh," which is death; and death will always have a just claim. Paul says, "But God giveth it a body even as it pleased him, and to each seed its own body" (1 Cor. 15:38).

Peter calls "the word of God" incorruptible seed; "the word of God" and "the mind of the Spirit" are one. God provides a body for this seed. The body is "our house from heaven." "The mind of the Spirit," the "new creature," has an earthly house in which it tabernacles, and in death it is destroyed. So "the mind of the Spirit," the seed, must be provided with its own body, "the house from heaven."

Allen D. Strickler.

The Spirit of Christ

PAUL WROTE with positiveness to the Roman brethren that "if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." So it is in order to enquire. How do we know that we have the Spirit of Christ? Must we not feel or in some way have the impression that we have this Spirit? Does not the Spirit bear witness with our spirit that we are the sons of God? To all of which I will say that Jesus has given us a criterion that will be conclusive in every case: "By their fruits we shall know them" (Matt. 8: 18-20). As in the tree the fruits betray what kind it is, so the person is known by his fruit or actions.

What is the fruit of the Spirit? Let the Scripture answer: "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance" (Gal. 5:22 23). And elsewhere it is stated, "The fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness and righteousness and truth" (Eph. 5:9). How then can I unquestionably know that I have the Spirit of Christ? Are feelings to serve as my guide; are they always reliable? The only way I know this to a certainty is, if I exhibit these fruits of the Spirit; for they are the same in all who have or are led by the Spirit of Christ. And we may know this by self-examination. "Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves" (2 Cor. 13:5).

By what standard? By the written word of God; for this has been given and is able "to make us wise unto salvation through faith in Christ Jesus" (2 Tim. 3:15). We too often forget that by the word God speaks to us. How does the Holy Spirit teach us today? Paul says, "We speak the wisdom of God . . . not in words which man's wisdom teaches;" therefore it is evident the wisdom of God is spoken in words, but they are not those of man's wisdom, which is neither the source nor the channel through which they come; it is the Holy Spirit that teaches them. But to whom does the Spirit teach them? To us individually today? No; for if this were the case, what was the use of the revelation that was made to holy men who spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit (2 Pet. 1:21).

The mystery of God's will was not made known in other generations as it was revealed to the holy apostles and prophets by the Spirit; and when it was made known to them, they recorded these revelations so that when others should read them they also might know their knowledge of the mystery of Christ. Why should God make special revelation to you and me of things revealed to others for no other purpose than to commit them to us? No wonder, then, that the apostle should conclude by saying, "But we have the mind of Christ." And this we get by his words. Jesus said, "The words that I speak, they are Spirit and life" (John 6:63). When we understand, believe, and obey these "words", when we heartily enter into the "spirit" we partake of their "life": they move us to action and keep us moving until the race is run. When we read these words we have the same truth into which the apostles were led (John 16:13); and if we follow the instructions therein given, we "are led by the Spirit," and the Spirit witnesses with our spirit that we are the sons of God. Can we not believe that if we obey him, forsake sin and turn to righteousness, by fulfilling every righteous requirement, he will remit our sins and receive us as his sons and daughters?

May we not say as Longfellow wrote:

Sail on, nor fear to breast the sea,
Our hearts, our hopes, our prayers, our tears,
Our hope triumphant o'er our fears,
Are all with thee: are all with thee.
Humanity with all its fears,
With all the hopes of future years,
Is hanging breathless on thy fate.

Selfishness seeks inlets and limits, but never outlets. Love seeks outlets, but is strangely indifferent to inlets and limits; it is self-abandoning, more eager to give than to receive, and knowing no limits but opportunity and capacity.

A "Special Contributor" to The Restitution writes: "I feel that an apology is due for this belated manuscript, but our youngest daughter has been sick, and one thing after another seemed to prevent from getting my notes together. Brother Strickler has ably presented many things that appeal to me. In fact I had to rewrite a few pages to prevent repetition, many of his references being the same as those I had chosen. He has gone much deeper than I am able to do, and I have received a great deal of good from his articles."

Cleveland Miscellanies

Sister McCave of Atwater, Ohio, is a welcome visitor among us this week.

We report with pleasure the removal of Sister Moses from New Milford, Ohio.

From Sister Bray we learn that Brother J. E. Hammond's daughter is quite sick. Let us remember her in our prayers.

The Sister's Meeting was held Thursday afternoon, Nov. 20th, at the home of Sister Murphy. There were seventeen members and two visitors present. All were pleased to receive a visit from Sister McCave, of Atwater. Several visits had been paid the sick, and several letters had been written and one received. Two sisters were reported being ill flowers and letters were to be sent them. All rejoiced in having Sister Lang meet with us after her several week's illness, and enjoyed her earnest exhortation on prayer.

Sister Fankboner as leader finished the study of the eighth Bible Lesson, showing how the gifts of the Holy Spirit were used by those possessing them, and how the design and purpose of God in giving the powers of the Holy Spirit has been achieved in a confirmed word and completed revelation. The meeting closed by all repeating our motto.—Sister ADDIE GIBBS.

Universalism Unscriptural

THERE ARE many propositions plainly revealed in the unerring word that are insuperable barriers to Universalism. We here submit a few for your perusal.

FUTURE DESTINY DETERMINED NOW

I. The destinies of all who are subjects of the resurrection are determined by what they did before entering the grave. Hence the utter impossibility of having probation extended to them beyond the grave (Rom. 2:6-9; Matt. 16:26, 27; John 5:28, 29; Rev. 22. 12; 20:12-15, 13; Gal. 6:7-9; Eccl. 12:14; Matt. 25:31-46) Here we are told that "every man" who is a subject of the judgment will either receive "eternal life" on the one hand; or "wrath," "woe," "anguish," "damnation," "cast into the lake of fire," "corruption," "everlasting fire," and "eternal punishment." Hence probation or a future chance beyond the grave to produce works that might entitle one to life eternal, falls flat. If the heathen are raised, as some think, they must meet with one or the other of the destinies meted out to all that are subjects of God's judgments as taught in the above list of texts. Hence no future probation for them, therefore no salvation. How could there be when "every soul of man that doeth evil" reaps "wrath," "woe," "damnation," "anguish," "cast into the lake of fire," "corruption," "everlasting fire," and "eternal punishment" for the works they did before entering the grave?

RESURRECTION LIMITED TO TWO CLASSES

II. There are just two classes raised, the righteous and the wicked; the righteous to eternal life, the wicked to punishment more or less extended, finally terminating in their "return to sheol" (Acts 24:15; John 5:28, 29; Rev. 20:12-15; Dan. 12:2; Rom. 2:6-9; Gal. 6:7-9; Matt. 25:31-46; 2 Pet. 2:9; 2 Thess. 1:8, 9; Job 21:30; Psa. 9:17, R. V.). These Scriptures declare that those who are raised are "just" and "unjust," doers of good and doers of evil, the "sheep" and the "goat" just the two classes. The "just," doers of good, or the "sheep," get a "resurrection of life," "eternal life": the "unjust," "wicked" or "goats," get a "resurrection of damnation," "awake to shame and everlasting contempt," receive "woe," "anguish," "damnation." They are "punished with everlasting destruction." They receive "eternal punishment" when they are brought forth to the "day of destruction" and, as a consequence, "shall return to sheol," which means for them the "second death." Inasmuch as the dead heathen are unsaved, if they come forth at all they must emerge as a part of the "wicked" to be instructed in order to salvation. But inasmuch as the wicked shall be brought forth to the "day of destruction"—not salvation—and "shall return to sheol," it follows logically, they can never be saved. Hence Universalism falls to the ground as a vain invention.

THE HEATHEN ARE NOT RAISED FROM THE DEAD

III. As the heathen shall never be raised, it follows necessarily they can never be saved. Hence Universalism is untrue (Isa. 26:14-19; 43:17; Jer. 51:39-58; Dan. 12:2; Amos 8:14; Obadiah 16; Job 3:16; Psa. 17:14; 49:12, 14, 15, 19, 20; 73:22; 88:5; Prov. 21:16; Matt. 22:32; 25:41; Jude 7; Rom. 2:12).

What an imposing array of Scripture proofs! Is not their meaning obvious? They declare some are "dead." Will they live again? "They shall not live again." Some are "deceased." Will they rise again? "They shall not rise again." "They shall sleep an everlasting sleep and shall not awake." An "everlasting sleep" is an eternal sleep. "They shall never rise up again." They "have their portion in this life"; hence " are extinct and shall not arise." God "remembers them no more," they are as though "they had not been." They "remain in the congregation of the dead," and "are as a beast with God." Some of them have "suffered the vengeance of eternal fire;" hence belong to "the dead" of whom God is not the God of (Luke 20:38). Therefore "they perish without law." "They are like the beasts that perish," and "unto eternity these shall never (saith God) see light." Therefore they are eternally gone!

PUNISHMENT OF THE WICKED IS LITERAL DESTRUCTION

IV. The Bible uniformly teaches that the punishment of the wicked is literal destruction. Their destruction is affirmed by various modes of expression more than two hundred times. Surely this is sufficient to prove the proposition that the wicked shall be literally destroyed and not saved. Paul says their "end" (or final outcome) is "destruction." What is there beyond their "end"? "They shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy." No "remedy" for them after destruction! Therefore their case is utterly hopeless (Prov. 28:1; 2 Chron. 36:16, margin).

Yours in defence of truth,

John R. Fiske, Jr.

Communication

They spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened.—Mal. 3:16.

Dear Restitution:

In our Berean Society two Sundays, on the 9th and 16th, and in our lesson for the 16th, on the gospel, gave us much light. If you remember last January I wrote you to send a man or rather to the church, to baptize me into Christ. Brother Adams came on Oct. 11th, and on the 19th he baptized me and also my wife, for which I am so glad. And I must thank you ever so much for helping me. Dear Brother, did you know you were the cause of three more persons being baptized into the faith just by asking a brother to come to me? I thank you again, and also my Lord and Savior who died that we through him might have life throughout the ages. Now may God bless you and all the household of faith. I am yours in the blessed hope

Propaganda

If the Lord built not the house, they labor in vain that built it.

If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God.

One of the most marvellous things to me is the power of "propoganda" among the human family. Nothing shows more clearly the extreme waywardness of mankind, also its weakness and folly..

We have no common sense. That is, no natural enlightenment as to what truth is and what is error. In view of this, if we turn to the "nations of the field and wood," the more wonderful seems the adaptation of all kinds of all wild life to its environment and circumstances. To each living creature outside the human family is not only given a set of tools to provide itself with a living, but it is endowed with a precise knowledge of how to work its implements and an infallible knowledge of the how, when, and where to provide itself with nourishment and other essentials to perform the functions of its being, and for every human being born into the world there are myriads of millions of other forms of life thus endowed. In the solitary instance of human life a man is born into the world like an empty sack subject and practically helpless by the stuffers by whom he is surrounded, and who carefully fill him with anything they think proper; and what the bag with its filling may turn out to be, is a question that cannot be solved except by time.

When I was young I used to read a good many missionary publications (they were even cruder in those days than they are now), and the impression received by such reading was that "heathen" people were sort of half wits and crooks, but as the world has been so much closer drawn together during the last half century or so we can see that those called "heathen" at the bottom are just as honest, reasonable, and quick witted as nominal Christians. A Chinaman for instance, will compare with a Russian, or a Jap with a German, and perhaps not lose anything by the comparison; but the difference the vast difference in some ways—is in the bringing up, the teaching, the propaganda, what they packed into the bag. What we call savageness in the wild tribes they understand to be manliness or patriotism, maybe. Head hunting is a religious devotion; cannibalism a sacred rite. Nothing absurd about that when you consider. The "Christian" invasion of Belgium by the "Protestnant Christian" Germans, when murder, arson, and rape were sanctified in the name and on the altar of patriotism. Shortly after the war broke out one of my neighbors said to me, "I could not have believed such a thing possible in the twentieth century." Indeed it took a long time to convince me that such things were possible deeds that we know now only half of the terrible truth. Yet we might have known if we had only known the nature of the propoganda. If we had realized the system of military education that they stuffed into the little school children for anything seems to be possible with "propaganda" whether the "red" and "white" terrors of Europe or the political and sectarian vanities of America, not forgetting the club now held over the public in the form of "strikes." Under present conditions this menace to humanity must always exist. We have been thrown out of divine guidance for the present at least, and have been left to take care of ourselves and endowed with reason and logic in plenty, as well as self-esteem. we march out like Hagar into the desert to make shift the best we can, and a poor affair we make of it, for any fool with a brass band or even a drum and fife can lead us down some steep place into a deeper sea than Galilee.

Some tell us the Bible holds the key to the situation, and they "search the Scripture" in the hope of finding wisdom and peace, but there is nothing in that not by itself at least. The Kaiser quoted Scripture every time he made a new drive, and I was born not far from the battlefield where Cromwell with his Puritans had it out with the Presbyterians, and a bloody affair it was too; but no one will ever accuse either of them of being ignorant of the letter of the Bible at least.

But it is the Spirit that quickeneth. Only God is the giver of common sense enlightenment in common with him and each other. No one needs to preach to the honey bee, or tell the swallow its way, and the hen hatches and mothers her brood without instructions. What we need is a like instruction on a higher plane to guide us into all truth from him who openeth the ears and sealeth instruction, and who one day "will pour out his Spirit on all flesh."

May his kingdom come.

A. T. Gellelly.

Lesson XI.

THE REDEMPTION

MEMORY TEXT: In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins (Col. 1:14).

1. "And the angel said unto them, Fear not, for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

"For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord" (Luke 2:10, 11).

3. "That was the true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world" (John 1:9).

4. Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood.

5. "To declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God" (Rom. 3:25).

6. "By his own blood he entered in once, into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us" (Heb. 9:12).

7. "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us . . .

8. "That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ that we might receive the promise of the spirit through faith" (Gal. 3:13, 14).

9. "Thou wast slain and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred and tongue and people and nation" (Rev. 5:9).

10. "Being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus" (Rom. 3:24).

11. "Who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time" (1 Tim. 2:6).

12. "And he is the propitiation for our sins and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world" (1 John 2:2).

13. "Therefore as by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation,

14. "Even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life" (Rom. 5:18).

Practical Truths

The subject of redemption is one of great importance to us all. The subject may be considered in two parts, viz: God's part, or what God has done; and man's part, or what man is required to do. God seems to have provided a plan of redemption, the ultimate aim of which is to secure man's obedience. As disobedience was the first act of man which alienated him from the favor of God, so in the purpose of God obedience shall be the act to restore man to the divine favor. While this is true, the plan of redemption, contemplates many steps on the part of God which are wholly voluntary and unconditional before man can be reached. To illustrate: The provision of a redeemer was wholly unconditional. Jesus' death was without consulting the sinner's choice; for Paul says, "God commendeth his love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us." From the point where the gospel of salvation first reaches a man in life the redemption is condition, and he must comply with the terms of redemption as they are made known to him in the word of God. The wisdom and love of God is manifested in his plan, and man should avail himself of its benefits while it is called "today."

Notes on the Lesson

Redemption. The act of redeeming, or the state of being redeemed: repurchase; ransom; release; deliverance. Webster. The text itself gives perhaps, the best definition of redemption, viz: "The forgiveness of sins." To remove the sin is to remove its effect, which would, in its fullest sense, be redemption.

1. All People. These good tidings are not to be confined to the Jewish race, but are intended for all the peoples of the earth.

2. Christ the Lord. The Lord anointed.

3. Lighteth every Man. Christ is the light of life. Every man must receive a knowledge of him before he can be saved. Salvation is through him alone.

4. Propitiation. Atonement, or atoning sacrifice.

5. Remission of Sins. To release from the punishment which the sin has incurred. Remission has reference to the punishment for sin due or being inflicted, rather than the sin itself.

The Holy Place. An apartment in the tabernacle; here used for heaven.

8. Blessing of Abraham.—The blessing of all nations through Abraham and his seed (See promise in Gen. 18:18; 22:18).

9. Out of. This phrase clearly shows that the redeemed who are to be kings and priests and reign with Jēsus are a select company and does not include all the saved.

10. Grace. Favor.

11. Ransom. Ransom is in all probability a variation of redeem: from re, again, and emo, to buy; to buy off or back to one's self. Crabb.

12. Whole World. The whole (kosmos) family of man, for man alone is concerned in the redemption

13. Offence. Sin.

14. Justification. The treatment of sinful man as though he were just. Webster.

Suggestive Topics and Questions

1. God's part in Redemption.- What is the meaning of redemption? Who is the the Redeemer? Where was the Redeemer born? (2) To what people shall these tidings of great joy come? (1.) What is said about the true light? (3.) For how many did he become a ransom? (11.) Did Jesus die for our sins? (12.) Did he die for the transgressions under the first testament? (Heb. 9:15). Was Adam's transgression under the first testament? Did he atone for Adam's trasgression? Did God make provision for our sins? Tell what God has done toward redemption? Ans. 1st He has opened a way to life. 2nd He has given a Redeemer. 3rd He has set the light before us 4th He will reward us if obedient.

2. Man's Part of Redemption.- Have we any part to perform in order to redemption? (1 Cor. 3:9; 2 Cor. 6:1). Is it required of us to have faith in the death of Christ? Is this what is meant by "faith in his blood?" (4). Through what condition may we receive the promise of the Spirit? (8). Will redemption be completed in us without obedience? What does the Bible say in regard to man's duty? (Eccl. 12:13; Micah 6:8) What is man's part of redemption? Ans. Faith in Jesus Christ and obedience to his commandments. Does redemption through Jesus restore the tree of life? Does it give permission to eat of that tree? (Rev. 22:14; Rev. 2:7).

It pays to shake hands. A good firm grasp often tells the story better than all you could say in a half hour talk.

GOLDEN TEXT: Psalm 37:4

PRINCE OF PEACE

He is coming, O ye people,
  Coming soon the Nazarine;
Not with flaunting, noisy tumult,
  Though none greater, man hath seen.
Shout, ye heralds, tell the story,
  Never let your crying cease,
For he comes, this man of glory,
  King of kings and Prince of peace.

Have we "set our house in order"
  For this guest, so soon to come?
Shall we entertain him gladly
  So with us he'll feel at home?
Are we eager for his coming?
  Is the banquet table spread?
Is the pillowed bed quite ready
  For the tired and weary head?

Do we wait, anticipating,
  (As we do for men of earth)
For this man among all nations
  Lord, and King, and Prince by birth?
Shall we bring of our heart's treasures,
  Love and praise and honor meet,
And in loving adoration
  Lay them at his his blessed feet?

Do we take him at his promise,
  That the appointed day draws near?
Do our hearts forget their aching,
  And rejoice with gladsome cheer?
Have we given all our being
  His to be, and his alone?
And are we prepared to meet him
  When he comes to claim his own?

Help us, Lord, to love thy coming
  Thou, who life eternal art;
Breathe, thy gracious tender spirit
  Into every waiting heart.
Thou art pure and meek and lowly,
  Come and bid our longings cease;
Thou art true and wise and holy,
  King of kings and Prince of peace.

The Prince of Peace

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

The above was the salutation of the heavenly host at the birth of Jesus, more than nineteen hundred years ago.

The birth of Jesus was the greatest circumstance that ever has occurred on this earth. The above quotation tells us that in it the glory of God was manifested, that through it the glory of God would be made known, that on time it would bring peace on the earth and eventually man would have and show good will to his fellows.

Peace on earth never has been known since our first parents ate the forbidden fruit in the garden of Eden. We never will forget the condition of the earth for the four years since 1914. And was peace ushered in when on the 11th of November 1918 the armistice was signed? No. Today we are witnessing the greatest battle between labor on the one side, and capital on the other, that this old world ever has known, and to all appearances it still will be worse tomorrow, and no one knows what will happen the day after, except this, that the world will grow worse and worse day by day, until the end of the Gentile times when the Prince of Peace shall come, rescue the world from its rulers and establish his reign of justice and equity in righteousness and peace.

This is the peace that the world shall know though ignorant of it. Under human government the world never will have peace, for where jealousy is trouble must be; and where there are weak men, stronger ones will take advantage of them. Therefore we pray, "Come Lord Jesus." Establish thy long promised kingdom, and bring thy peace to the earth.

But, shall the Christian never experience peace till the coming of the Son of Man? No, not outwardly: for the Christian's life is one of long battle against the world and its lusts. While the Christian lives he is fighting a constant warfare against sin and the effects of sin. But there is an inward calm, an inward peace possessed by the Christian that is unknown to the man of the world. Shortly before Jesus left the scene of his earthly labors he said to his disciples, "Peace I leave with you; my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." And the peace that Jesus left is secured through our confidence in God and our faith in Jesus: confidence in God that he will perform his every promise; faith in Jesus that he is the Christ, the Son of the living God, and that through him all people eventually will be blessed.

Isaiah's prophecy concerning Jesus states, "And he shall be called the Prince of Peace;" and in Romans we are told we shall have peace with God, providing we have been justified by faith in Jesus Christ. For the fruit of the spirit is love, joy and peace. And now my beloved, "Be careful for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus." "Let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful."

An Appeal

We whose names are signed below, do agree to contribute at least once a month, one or more articles for publication on the Young People's Page of The Restitution, said articles to be either original or selected, and all to the glory of God.

Bessie K. Walker, Proctor, Montana.

The above is the idea of Sister Walker. Our Sister desires that as many as will join her in regularly writing short, signed articles for our page. It has our hearty approval, for in no other way can you better grow in knowledge than to "search the Scriptures" for the purpose of getting data with which to compose a readable article for the good of others. And as we grow in knowledge faith with love and grace will follow, so write us your promise, follow it with an article, thus benefitting yourself while you do good to others.

Making Good of Evil

Christian people turn almost every circumstance of their lives to their good, while others, through superstition, or otherwise, fret and worry over every little mishap.

It was by broken pitchers that Gideon triumphed, and boards and other broken pieces of the ship that bore the apostle Paul on the shore of the island of Malta at a point still pointed out to inquiring travellers. Think of this when we worry, "O ye of little faith."

All This Will Be Changed At The Appearing Of The Prince Of Peace

Many of the demobilized men who were in Palestine with Gen. Allenby's troops were not sorry to bid goodbye to the precipitous, zig-zagging road running down from Jerusalem to Jericho. In summer it was intolerably dusty, and after a rain its greasy surface was dangerous for motorists. At one part of the route the site of the inn of the Good Samaritan is still pointed out.

Even in modern times the road is so infested with robbers as to be unsafe for travellers. In the days before the war tourists were recommended to apply to the Sheikh, or headman, of the villages of Bethany, on the other side of the Mount of Olives, for a mounted and armed escort. His charge however was [illegible] and on one occasion a party not well off declined to pay it. Whereupon this wily Oriental dispatched a messenger to the chief of the brigands telling him to be on the look out for a party of travellers. Of course he and the robber chief shared the booty.

You See, But Do You Observe?

Very few people really know much about the things they come into contact with every day.

If you don't believe that, ask yourself questions about common things.

How long is a dollar bill for instance? What color are your sister's eyes? How high is the biggest building in your town? How wide is the main street? How far is it from where you sit to the window? What word do you begin sentences with most often? What is the diameter of ten-cent piece?

You can ask yourself thousands of questions about the most ordinary things, and you will find that most of your answers are incorrect.

You go through life without observing carefully.

The Restitution

A Paper Representing the Church of God, and Devoted to the Exposition and Defense of the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God and the Name of Jesus Christ.—Acts 8:12.

VOLUME 71 CLEVELAND, O. DECEMBER 9th, 1919. NUMBER 46

Sympathy

Should old acquaintance be forgot,
And ne'er be brought to mind,
Still, we'll remember those we've met,
And long since left behind;
And should we meet them on the way,
Adown life's fitful road,
We'll bide a wee and hold their hand,
And ease a bit their load.

We each must bear our share of care,
And feel our mortal need,
Sorrow oft times fills our cup
[illegible] o'er life's mead;
And find a hand to grasp our own,
A solace oft may be,
And help o'er life's rugged road,
To reach our destiny.

When someone lays his burden down
In this frail mortal clay,
We each may drop a silent tear
As we pass on the way;
May slumber sweet enshroud each form
Till pain shall be no more,
When Jesus comes and calls his own
To Canaan's blissful shore.

"Out of Darkness Into Light"

Christ and the Curse

Gal. 3:13: "Christ redeemed us from the curse of the law, having become a curse for us; for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree."

That the full import of this Scripture may be seen, we must read verse 10. "Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things that are written in the book of the law, to do them."

The ordinary conclusion drawn from these passages is that Christ was by God's arrangements made to break the Mosaic law, thereby bringing the penalty of the law upon himself, which was death by violence; so that Christ could give an exhibition of what was due to all who transgress any of God's moral laws. Popular religion explains Christ being made a curse as being the payment of the penalty, punishment, due to all sin: that he paid the debt that was due to all sinners, that in this sense he died as a substitute; that all believing this, believe in what is known as "Substitution."

What the above amounts to is that Christ by hanging on the tree, brought himself under the penalty of the Mosaic law, that he broke the law. How could such a thing be possible when Peter says, "Who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth"; when Jesus said, "I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill;" when Isaiah, prophetic of Christ, said, "It pleased Jehovah, for his righteousness sake, to magnify the law, and make it honorable" (42:21).

Christ's whole life was devoted to keeping the law, and to fulfill the righteousness of the law in himself; and then, in the article of death, break the law and bring its curse upon himself, would surely be a most singular arrangement. Is this theology? It may be, but it is not the religion of the Bible. Moses says, "Deut. 21:23, "For he that is hanged is the curse of God." It was not sin for a person to hang on a tree; there is no such a clause in the law of Moses. A Jewish criminal put to death for his crime, and then hung on a tree, was the curse of God; he was "the curse" at the time when he was put to death; hanging him upon the tree, as a dead person, to exhibit what the law breakers deserve as a warning to other Jews, did not make him any more nor less a criminal, as he had previously paid the extreme penalty of the law.

Deut. 21:22, 23 stands as follows: "And if a man have committed a sin worthy of death and thou hang him on a tree; his body shall not remain all night upon the tree, but thou shalt surely bury him the same day; for he that is hanged is the curse of God; that thou defile not thy land which Jehovah thy God giveth thee for an inheritance." Paul was too good a lawyer to interpret this to mean that the mere act of hanging upon a tree was against the law, and that for so hanging, the law cursed him with death. The Revised Version, renders Gal. 3:13, "Having become a curse for us." The curse of the Mosaic law for breaking its ordinances or statutes, was death by stoning, that kind of death was one of violence. The death that Christ died was one of violence; he died that kind of a death because he was convicted as a criminal, although unjustly so, and by false witnesses; still it was the curse of the law that Christ suffered. He submitted to the kind of death that criminals die for the lesson that was taught by it for the benefit of his "friends."

Paul says, "He endured the cross, despising the shame" (Heb. 12:2). What greater shame can a man endure than to die as a supposed criminal in punishment for crime? "Surely he hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows; yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted" (Isa. 53:4). "Because he poured out his soul unto death, and was numbered with the transgressors" (verse 12). Now as the Bible gives no other reason for the death of Christ than for transgression, condemning transgression by an exhibition of the kind of death designed for sinners; where is the evidence to prove that Christ died to satisfy the condemnation supposed to rest upon him for his sinful flesh nature? His resurrection unto eternal life was his justification, the evidence that at the time he died, no single, double or any kind of condemnation rested upon him for anything; for when death takes place to satisfy condemnation, the grave cannot be unlocked.

Christ as an Altar

Heb. 13:10: "We have an altar, whereof they have no right to eat that serve the tabernacle."

In Exodus 29:36, 37, and also in Lev. 16:18, 19, an account is given in reference to making atonement for the the altar of burnt-offering, to cleanse it and to hallow it from the uncleanness of the children of Israel. The prevalent idea is that the brazen altar at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation was made unclean when it was fabricated or constructed, because those engaged in the work were unclean by reason of having "sin in the flesh" as a physical principle; and that it was from this uncleanness that the altar was cleansed and atoned for, making it holy, and therefore, everyone touching it was made holy. The antitype being Christ, therefore it is argued that he too must have had an atonement made for himself to cleanse him from his own sin in the flesh, for he by it as an altar, was made unclean. What all God-fearing believers in the word of God desire is to know the truth on this subject, regardless of what has been written upon the subject to uphold any theory or doctrine. The altar in the Bible is a symbol of sacrifice and suffering, because of service on behalf of those whose sins debar them from salvation. Paul says in Phil. 2:17, "Yea, and if I am offered upon the sacrifice and service of your faith, I joy, and rejoice with you all." The essential thing in reference to the antitypical altar is where to locate the suffering, because at that place is where the altar must be found. Peter says: "Christ also suffered for sins once, the righteous for the unrighteous, that he might bring us to God; being put to death in the flesh, but made alive in the spirit" (1 Pet. 3:18). "When it testified before hand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow" (1 Pet. 1:11). "That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his suffering, being made conformable unto his death" (Phil. 3:10). It was Christ as "a lamb without blemish and without spot" (1 Pet. 1:19), that suffered. It is the mind that suffers and not the body, although the body is injured. Any sensation felt by the body is instantly communicated to the conscious self in the mind, where the real feeling exists. Paralyze the limbs, cut off the electro-magnetic communication, and there is no suffering however much the limbs may be mutilated. Christ as "the mind of the spirit," a concrete conscious character, is what constituted the altar, and not "this body of death" with its mind of the flesh (Rom. 7:24). Paul says, "Who shall deliver me out of the body of this death?" (verse 24).

Now as we have already called attention to the fact that Christ's "sin in the flesh" did not make him unclean nor defile him, we can readily see that Christ the altar was not made unclean by it. Furthermore, if we regard the altar as Christ physically, and that the taking away of "sin in the flesh" from the human nature as the cleansing of the altar, difficulties present themselves. Nowhere does the Bible represent that "sin in the flesh" will be taken away from the body, leaving the body cleansed from it. Paul says in Rom. 8:10, "The body is dead because of sin." Jesus says, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh," and he also says, "He that is of the earth is of the earth, and of the earth he speaketh." This gives us "the mind of the flesh" as belonging to the "body of flesh"; and so we read the wholesome words of Paul to the Corinthians, "Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption." Truly, human nature has been defiled by "sin in the flesh," and it has become a worthless thing in the ultimate purpose of God, and will be cast aside. The divine mind or mental nature joined with the consciousness of existence or being, is what will be saved; and it will not be saved in a cleansed flesh and blood body. God gives "the mind of the Spirit" a body of its own, "and to every seed his own body" (1 Cor. 15:38). "An house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens; for in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven" (2 Cor. 5:1, 2). "Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself" (Phil. 3:21).

Not a vestige of flesh and blood will be left: the body will be entirely of spirit substance. Paul says, "there is a spiritual body." He also speaks of Christ in heaven as "the Lord the Spirit." If Christ's "sinful flesh" is what made him unclean as an altar, then was there no time up to the time that he was used as an altar to make atonement for sin when the blood was sprinkled upon the altar, that Christ was not an unclean altar, and therefore not being an holy altar, he could not have been used to sprinkle the atoning blood upon it. Christ the dead altar was symbolically and figuratively defiled by his own blood which was "shed for many for the remission of sins" (Matt. 26:28); and therefore in a figure represented the life that belonged to sin and was shed to atone for it. Sin and the life that sustains it are one. Christ for the time being on the cross associated himself figuratively with sinners. "And was numbered with the transgressors" (Isa. 53:12).

Blood itself has no cleansing efficacy. It was the use that it was put to that made it cleansing from sin. Christ's blood was called "precious," for the reason that it was the life of a spotless lamb, used in figure to represent the satisfied penalty due to sinners for transgression of God's law; and then when the lesson of death for sin has been taught, life could be taken back again because of the righteousness of the one who gave it up, to teach the desired lesson for the benefit of sinners. No other life in blood, among men, could do such a thing but the unblemished and spotless blood of the Lamb of God; therefore as Peter says, "The precious blood of Christ." Just before Christ was nailed to the tree, he was a clean and holy altar, but immediately when he willingly took the attitude or position of a sinner to work out a symbolism, he symbolically became unclean because of the sins which he bare as a sin-offering, and whose blood was sprinkled upon the Christ altar. When he arose from the dead triumphant on the third day, he was only justified from all symbolic and figurative uncleanness; but he was the same clean and holy altar that he had been before he was crucified; and therefore is an altar advanced from its brazen association at the door of the tabernacle, to an altar in the holy place, an altar upon which can be offered sweet incense ascending to the Father. "And there was given unto him much incense, that he should offer it with the prayers of all saints upon the golden altar that was before the throne" (Rev. 8:3).

The explanation has been made, now for the proof. "An altar of earth shalt thou make unto me, and shalt sacrifice thereon thy burnt-offerings, and thy peace-offerings, thy sheep, and thine oxen: in every place where I record my name I will come unto thee and I will bless thee. And if thou make me an altar of stone, thou shalt not build it of hewn stones; for if thou lift up thy tool upon it, thou hast polluted it. Neither shalt thou go up by steps unto mine altar, that thy nakedness be not uncovered thereon" (Exod. 20:21-26). Had Joseph been the paternal father of Jesus, then would the Christ have been a polluted and unclean altar. There was no possible way by which Jesus Christ could have kept himself "undefiled in the way," other than by having God for his Father in the way testified by Luke. A reasonable proposition is that the sins that the Christ altar was cleansed from were the sins which made a defiled or polluted altar. If we go to the history of the typical altar we shall be able to find out whether it was "sin in the flesh," or sin in its primary sense, as the mode and rule of human life. Lev. 16:18, 19: "And he shall go unto the altar that is before Jehovah, and make atonement for it, and shall take of the blood of the bullock, and of the blood of the goat, and put it upon the horns of the altar round about. And he shall sprinkle of the blood upon it with his finger seven times, and cleanse it, and hallow it from the uncleanness of the children of Israel." Chapter 16:33, 34: "And he shall make atonement for the tent of meeting and for the altar; and he shall make atonement for the priests and for all the people of the assembly. And this shall be an everlasting statute unto you, to make atonement for the children of Israel because of all their sins once in the year. And he did as God commanded Moses." The word "uncleanness" in the Authorized Version has been interpreted as meaning the natural uncleanness of the children of Israel, that is, their "sin in the flesh." This of course was done to prove that the antitype, the Christ altar, was made unclean by his own "sin in the flesh." This same word in the Revised Version is rendered "uncleanness of the children of Israel." The 33rd and 34th verses show clearly that the reason why atonement was necessary for the several things mentioned, and the altar as one of them, was because of the sins of the children of Israel. Those "sins" and the "uncleannessses" both mean the same thing; and that thing is what the apostle John says that it is, "All unrighteousness is sin" (1 John 5:17). Carefully follow the use of the word "uncleanness" (Lev. 16:19) throughout the Bible, and it will be found that the reference is to sin as wickedness, and uncleanness other than that known as Paul's "sin of the flesh" of Romans the seventh chapter.

Ezekiel 36:29, "And I will save you from all your uncleannesses." Verse 33, "In the day when I shall have cleansed you from all your iniquities," etc. Ezra 9:11: "The land, unto which ye go to possess it, is an unclean land with the filthiness of the people of the lands, with their abominations, which have filled it from one end to another with their uncleanness." Rom. 1:24, "Wherefore God gave them up to uncleanness through the lusts of their own heart," etc. Rom. 6:19, "Servants of uncleanness." 2 Cor. 12:21: "And have not repented of the uncleanness and fornication and lasciviousness which they have committed." Eph. 4:19, "To work all uncleanness with greediness."

From the above testimony it is proven that the sin or uncleanness that defiled the altar was not "sin in the flesh"; but sin in its primary sense. It was from that kind of sin that the Mosaic altar was cleansed, and therefore, the antitypical altar was cleansed from the same kind of sin; but it was only in figure and symbol, because as a matter of fact neither the typical nor the antitypical altars were defiled or cleansed from sin.

The National Resurrection of the Jew

ONCE PALESTINE could put into the field nearly a quarter of a million men (2 Chron. 13:3), which from a modern conscript experience, proves a population of at least twelve, or probably twenty millions; so that if restored to its original fertility, Palestine is capable of absorbing the whole of the Jewish race in the world today. The race has strangely fluctuated. A million were massacred at the fall of the second temple, and sixty years afterward Hadrian slaughtered 580,000. By the sixteenth century when there were but a million Jews in the world, a return tide of life set in. In the seventeenth century there were three millions; at the opening of the nineteenth, five millions in the middle, six millions; at the close, eleven; and today between thirteen and fourteen millions. "If their loss," their reduction to a smaller number which coincided with the gospel era, "be the riches of the Gentiles, how much more their fulness?" (Rom. 11:12)—their restoration, so extraordinarily accelerating in modern times, to the full pulse of national life.

But it is not only numerical replenishment which is promised, and which we are witnessing, but also personal and individual exaltation; "Behold at that time (the second Advent) I will make thee a praise and a name, whose shame hath been in all the earth" (Zeph. 3:19).

Already the influence of the Jew among all nations is astounding. In England five cabinet ministers, in recent days have been Jews; the Lord Chief Justice is a Jew; the last link that snapped between Germany and England—the British Ambassador in Berlin, Sir E. Goshen—was a Jew; and eighteen Jews sit in the House of Commons, and five in the House of Lords. In France a Prime Minister, M. Monis, five members of the cabinet, and eight generals in the army, are Jews; and out of forty daily newspapers of Paris, thirty are edited by Jews

In Italy the late Prime Minister (Luzzatti) the President of the Council of State (Malvanio), a late Prime Minister (Sonnino), the late Minister of War (Otholenghi), and the chief of the Judiciary (Mostara), are all Jews. In Germany although they are only two per cent of the population, 104 professors in the universities are Jews; the second, Mr. Morganthau, at the outbreak of the war, handled the affairs of eleven nations in Constantinople and the first, Mr. Strauss, drew on his own private fortune to help the Christian missionaries in distress. Enver Pasha, who plunged Turkey into war, and may thus, profoundly against his own will, be the instrument of the transfer of Palestine from the Turk to the Jew. Surely all of this is most extraordinary.

So also the modern Jew controls a wealth out of all proportion to his numbers. "The ships of Tarshish shall bring thy sons from afar, their silver and their gold with them" (Isa. 60:9). Since the fall of the house of Baring, no great Gentile name has ruled in the affairs of international finance; whereas the firm of Rothschild alone controls 400,000,000 pound; and another Jewish banking house is estimated to control 600,000,000 pounds. Some years ago the Russian government applied to the Rothschilds for a loan. Their representatives went to St. Petersburg (now Petrograd) to meet the Minister of Finance, a Jew; to Paris to consult the Premier, a Jew; then to Berlin to have an interview with the Chancellor of the government. At the opening of the war, nearly one half of the wealthy families in Germany were Jews; although they are only one-half of one per cent of the population in England, they are six per cent of the wealthy: and in America there are at least 250 millionaire Jews. Two thirds of the wealth of New York belongs to Jews! the Vienna Stock Exchange is entirely in their hands; and the London Stock Exchange holds so many Jews that it is sometimes called "the temple of the Jews." "Thou shalt lend unto many nations and thou shalt not borrow" (Deut. 28:12).

No nation in the world is so deeply involved, or contributing so much to the war as the Jews, massed as they are, in the very center of the world war. Ten million Jews out of fourteen are involved; that is, while the world contributes 46 per cent, Israel contributes 68 per cent. Half a million Jews, or one Jew in every 28 are fighting; that is twice as many in proportion as any other race; and in France eight Generals are Jews: and in Austria two Field Marshals and six Generals. The brain that is responsible for the transport of the whole German legion is Herr Ballin's, a Jewish brain: and so also is the foremost journalist's of Germany, Maxmilian Harden; and Germany's leading merchant prince, Herr James Simon. When the allies sought a head for the commission which was to raise the colossal loan of one hundred million sterling in the States, they chose a Jew, Lord Reading; and his great protagonist in the Central Powers, the financier, Jacob Schiff, is the wealthiest Jew in the United States.

Gen. Trepoff said to the socialist, Mr. Hyndman: "If we give the Jews the freedom you ask for them, in six months they would be masters of Russia," and no sooner was the Tzardom overthrown than all Russia was in the grasp of Kerensky, a Jew: and immediately after, Trotsky, a Jew. Henry Bergson whose intuitional philosophy is said to lie at the door of Syndicalism, is a Jew: and the inventor of Esperanto, the modern attempt to reverse Babel, Dr Zamenhof, is a Jew also. The greatest actress of modern days Madame Sarah Bernhardt, is a Jewess.

So we stand face to face with the national resurrection of the Jew. Practically stationery for untold centuries, inert and crushed; he has now sprung back into the forefront of the nations. The promises we have quoted are wholly millennial, and can actualize fully only after the visible Advent; nevertheless the striking approximation of the modern Jew to the Millennial forecast warns us that the hour is late. "For if the casting of them away is the reconciling of the world what shall the receiving of them be but life from the dead?" (Rom. 11:15). D. M. Panton.

Have You Made Your Will?

To the Readers and Lovers of The Restitution:

An editorial in The Restitution of Nov. 11, 1919, with the above caption, is worthy of more than a passing notice. I trust that it will receive the endorsement of all the lovers of our dear little weekly visitor. What would we do without it? To me it would be like the loss of a dear friend.

The uncertainty of life and the certainty of death are always present with us. We do not want to see God's truth perish from the earth. Are we bearing our share of the burden in making it possible for the Editor and Directors of The Restitution to have it make us weekly visits and bring messages of cheer and comfort to our hearts? The story of Jesus and his love will never grow old.

Not only should we, whom our heavenly Father hath given power to obtain more than enough for our present needs remember The Restitution in the final distributions of our possessions; but we should do more. We should contribute, if possible, monthly, semiannually, or at least annually, according as the Lord has prospered us.

If we receive in abundance, heaped up and pressed down, is it not our duty and obligation as well, to assist in holding up the hands of those who are devoting their days and years to the defence of the gospel of Jesus Christ? They give their services for practically nothing except the hope of a part in the glories in the ages to come. Let us minister to their temporal needs as never before, beginning the New Year.

The Helping Fund is worthy of our support. And why not also have a Memorial Fund for the spreading of the Gospel, and leave it to the Editor and Directors of The Restitution to apply as they think best?

We all have loved ones who have fallen asleep in Jesus: fathers, mothers, husbands, and wives, who loved the truth: would we not all love to give of our means as a Memorial of our mother who first unfolded to us in our childhood days the story of Jesus and his love, and at whose knees we were first taught to pray, "Thy kingdom come"? Perhaps it is the wife of our bosom who journeyed through life's rugged road with us, for two score years or more, toiled with us denied herself of all but the necessities of life in order to provide for the so called "rainy day," and was summoned by the dreaded enemy. Her portion was equal to our portion of all that we possessed. Will we knowingly deny the Lord his portion? It is written, "Thou shalt not muzzle the ox when he treadeth out the corn." The apostle Paul in 1 Cor. 9:14 says, "Even so hath God ordained that they which preach the gospel should live by the gospel." Let us all make a united effort to provide the means as much as it is in our power to do, so our Editor and co-workers and those who leave their own firesides to go out and tell the people the good news of the gospel of the kingdom of God, and of Jesus and his love, may be provided for.

When we read the accounts of their labors and of those who have become obedient through their efforts, do we not rejoice? Do we not shed a tear for joy to know that another has made the good confession, and is seeking to be a child of God? Certainly we do. On the other hand, do we show by our actions and deeds that we fully believe we are living in the last days, in the very days of the Master's preparation to return to this sin cursed earth, and take unto himself his great power and reign? Do we travel the streets of our cities any day without being reminded of the prophet Nahum, what he said in the Spirit more than 2600 years ago, and which we now behold in reality? The prophet says these things shall be "in the day of his preparation." He is preparing to come. Thank God, the giver of every good and perfect gift is preparing to come! The apostle Paul in Romans 13:11 says, "And that knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep; for now is our salvation nearer than when we first believed." Jesus said of the woman who anointed him, that it should be told "for a memorial of her throughout the whole world." Let us have a memorial department in The Restitution.

A Bright and Happy New Year

As we review the leadings of divine providence during the year that is past, let God's goodness and mercy stimulate our faith and confidence in him as respects the new incoming year. A proper retrospect on the part of a proper child of God will enable him not only to render thanks for the past, but to look up and lift up his head, realizing that our deliverance is nearer than when we first believed, and that he that began a good work in us is both able and willing to complete it, if we will but continue to submit our wills, our lives, and our all to his wisdom and loving care (Psa. 66:11). Just look and see what Psa. 116:12-14 says.

The close of the year is an excellent time for the making of new resolutions for the year to come. Let us, beloved brethren and sisters, make plenty of good resolutions respecting what we shall be willing to be, to do, to suffer, in fellowship with our Lord: that we may by his grace make of it the best year thus far of our lives—the year of largest hopes and the largest endeavors and by the Lord's grace, of largest increase in self-sacrifice in overcoming the world and its spirit, in vanquishing self and the desire of the flesh, in resisting the adversary, and in glorifying our Lord and blessing his people.

The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

Brother Becker.

Not man's manifold labors, but manifold cares, hinder the presence of God. Whatsoever thou doest, hush thyself to thy own feverish vanities, and busy thoughts and cares, in silence seek thy Father's face, and the light of his countenance will stream down upon thee. He will make a secret cell in thine heart, and when thou enterest there, there shalt thou find him. And if thou hast found him there, all around shall reflect him, all shall speak to him and he will speak through all. Outwardly thou mayest be doing the work of thy calling; inwardly if thou commend thy work to God, thou mayest be with him in the third heaven (Pusey).

Over the door of a certain school is engraved the words:

ENTER TO LEARN—DEPART TO SERVE

This should be our attitude every time we attend a religious service. We enter to learn the will of God, we depart to serve God's creatures by doing his will.—Brother A. D. DONALDSON.

Editorial

We are sorry to learn from Brother L. G. Jaeger that his daughter is in the hospital, "having had a very serious operation on Nov. 12th." He adds words of joy when he says she "is recovering nicely."

o

We have recently received some good MSS. from Sister Wood and brethren Gelletly, Parker, Robison. Moore, etc. Thanks. Readers can expect unusually good reading for several months to come. The Restitution slowly but steadily goes on to perfection. For this progress we thank the Lord and our loyal and able co-helpers.

The best way to convert a Socialist is to give him some property. And the best way to convince those who say that expository preaching is easy is to get them to try it. Let them prepare a real expository sermon, and before they get through with its preparation and delivery, they will find it is a little the hardest piece of homeletic work they ever undertook. The greatest difficulty with this method of public address is to give it logical unity and construction. It is by far the most instructive way of preaching, the least egotistical, and most honoring to God's word.

The homily was the ancient mode of preaching, and is really in a fuller sense "preaching the word" (2 Tim. 4:2) than the textual method, for it deals more directly with larger portions of the Bible, and requires greater exegetical ability. While textual preaching is principally synthetic, expository must be both synthetic and analytic. Some people think it is an easy way of preaching, and gives evidence that the preacher is lazy. But in this they are quite mistaken. It is not a mere running commentary on a chapter or portion of Scripture. There can not be anything more insipid than that. It was quaintly remarked by a minister who was doing that kind of work and imagining he was pursuing the expository method that he liked to preach that way because, if he found himself "persecuted in one verse he could flee to another." Hearers sometimes get the impression that it must be easy because, when well done, it seems so simple and devoid of vehement declamation.

Sister Martha Townend writes: "In The Restitution a short time ago (I don't remember the date) you had an article about Dan's name not being in Revelation. A few years ago I noticed that, and I sent to Mr. Leopold Cohn, an ex-rabbi who is now a missionary to the Jews of Brooklyn, N. Y., and asked him if he could tell me why Dan's name was not in Revelation; and he said Dan was a judge, and in this age a judge is not needed. When I saw your article about Dan it came clear to my mind how he became an adder, biting the horse's heels, and the rider falling backward. Dan being a judge in Israel and judging Christ a deceiver, would cause all the house of Israel to fall back from Jesus; and counting Jesus the power or the horse, he filled that office, as an adder biting the horse's heels, and causing them (Israel) to fall backward."

o

Brother, J. M. Owens, of Kingsville, Texas, writes: "I will send two dollars to keep The Restitution coming. Sister W. L. Robbins' letter was good. Brethren of Texas ought to pay close attention to her letter. I am ready to do all I can. I live about fifteen miles from Riviera, Texas. We need a preacher in Southern Texas. There are brethren enough in Texas to keep two Evangelists in Texas. I am ready to do my part. Let us get busy and do something. Let me hear from some one else. We have brethren in Texas who could easily give a hundred dollars a year. This is the first time I have written to The Restitution. Through The Restitution perhaps we can wake up some of our brethren who are asleep. Brother Huggins, please use your influence through the paper to get our brethren in Texas to do something for the truth. I live on the Gulf Coast. The weather is mild here. We are having fine weather now. This is a fine place to hold meetings in the winter. We have ten members at this place. There were only two when I came—wife and myself. We had Brother Bradley hold two meetings for us."

Cleveland Miscellanies

Sister Gertrude Miller, of Adrian, Michigan, was a guest Sunday, Nov. 30th.

Thirty-one members answered roll call at the Young People's Meeting, held Friday evening, Nov. 21, 1919, at the home of Brother and Sister Brandt. Three new members were taken into the Society and six visitors were present. The Corresponding Secretary reported several communications, among them letters from Sister Jessie Kauffman and Brother Long. It has been suggested that some of the young people make an extra effort to assist Brother Donaldson in the publishing of his Young People's Page in The Restitution, by sending him contributions.

Sister Frances Russell conducted the lesson on "Significance of Current Events." All episodes of history have at one time been "current events" in order to later become "history." In the same way those fomer "current events" of the creation, flood, wanderings of the Israelites, etc., make up our Bible history. The loss of dominion to Adam, the people of Noah's time, Egypt, Israel, and all down through the times, was due to unbelief and sin, for there is a God in heaven who rules the kindoms of men (Dan. 4:17; Prov. 8:15, 16). The world war started through greed. The league of nations cannot come to definite decisions because of this same greed. In the proposed league of churches the aim will be one organization in which no denomination will be obliged to give up any of its particular phases. The nations which were built on the unsolid foundation of unbelief and sin, fell. Is not this age a similar one; and shall it not bow to a higher supremacy which shall exist forever (Dan. 2:44)? —HELOISE CRAWFORD.

"Readiness"

"Having shod your feet with the preparation of the gospel of peace" (Eph. 6:15). This is the only place in the New Testament where the word "hetoim" is rendered "preparation." Paul uses four times the verb, translated "to prepare"; and also four times the adjective, translated "prepared." As an adjective it would be better if translated "ready." This would make "readiness" a preferable rendering to "preparation" in the text. Such a translation just suits the passage.

Paul is viewing the Christian as a messenger, one who is especially prepared to run on an important errand, that of proclaiming "the gospel of peace." He must be shod accordingly. As Paul is writing to converted Gentiles he probably had in mind the messenger of the heathen god Mercury, who was represented with winged heels; therefore he wrote, "The readiness of the gospel of peace."

Heart-sickening Experiences

"Have You Made Your Will?" a response in this number to an editorial a few weeks ago is interesting reading. It may interest the reader to be informed how we were led to write that editorial. Briefly, the facts leading to it were these:

First, we noticed that among Catholics and many protestant sects, many people of means who were getting old and could not much longer enjoy them, gave hundreds and thousands and thousands of dollars to churches, papers, and religious institutions. As we never hear of anything like this happening among our people, we found ourselves asking if it were possible that the people of God were ignorant or stingy—which?

Secondly, along with pastoral duties goes the unpleasant one of officiating at funerals. Often the deceased is old, and he knew several years before he died that he would die soon if the Lord tarried. Did he, like Hezekiah, "set his house in order" (Isa. 38:1)? We have preached the funeral of many brethren who were either "well to do" or rich. Without inquisitiveness on our part we just had to learn how they had feathered their own nests, what solicitude they had showed for their son, leaving him $10,000; and how concerned they were for their daughter, leaving her a competence for life. And what has saddened our heart more than once was the fact that neither son nor daughter loved the God of truth, both often being children of the Philistines. Under such depressing circumstances, did not the deceased love the flesh more than the Spirit? Did he not love the children of the flesh more than the children of God? Did he not give to the Red Cross, the Community Chest, and other worldly things? "The world loves its own," says Christ, and surely the evidence is before us. Does not a brother love the world who gives the world all he has? The matter was a weight upon our mind, and fearing that such robbery of God and his children would cause the loss of the kingdom for some of our readers, we felt compelled to give the exhortation and warning. If we are to "acknowledge God in all our ways," as one divine writer says, let us see that his cause and household get recognition in our wills; not merely a recognition in words, but a substantial gift from a grateful heart.

Persevere But Don't Be Stubborn

Sir George Reid, a noted Englishman, once said:

"I have aimed at health and happiness, and when confronted by a formidable obstacle, I have first tried to knock it over; failing in this, to get around it; if not to get under it; and if all these maneuvers failed I have been content to lie down in its grateful shade, lauding it as a beautiful blessing in disguise."

Bible Lessons On First Principles

ROBERT G. HUGGINS

Lesson V

Setting up the Kingdom of God A Destructive And Constructive Work

I. Setting up the Kingdom of God is a Destructive Work

WHEN CHRIST returns to establish the kingdom of God the earth is baptized in judgment-fire (Isa. 66:15,16; Psa. 50:3-6; Mal. 4:1 2; Jer. 30:23,24; Psa. 21:9; 11:6; Jer. 25:33).

II. Setting up the Kingdom is also a Constructive Work

Nevertheless in wrath God remembers mercy. The out-goings of his wrath are destructive, deadly, and extensive, but not universal (Hab. 3:2; Gen. 6:7,8,17,18; 7:23; 8:1,18,19-22; 9:1; 2 Pet. 2:5, Isa. 31; 35; Jer. 4 Zeph. 1; Acts 2:19-21; 3:19-23).

III. The Subjects of the Kingdom Scripturally Defined

In mercy God also remembers justice. The outflowings of his mercy are constructive, rehabilitating and magnificent, but circumscribed.

(a) The subjects of the kingdom consist only of a "remnant," a residue composed of the meek, willing, and well-disposed of mankind (Isa. 1:19,20; 24:6; 11:11,16; Zeph. 3:12; Zech. 14:16; Micah 4:1-7; Ezek. 39:2; 20:33,38).

(b) These "remnant" subjects are composed almost entirely of infants and children (Deut. 1:39; Psa. 8:2; Matt. 21:15,16; Psa. 22:30,31; 102:18,28; 127:3; Isa. 11:6,8; Zech. 8:5; 13:7,8,9; Luke 18:16).

Synthetic Remarks

I. SETTING UP THE KINGDOM OF GOD IS A DESTRUCTIVE WORK

IN THE last lesson we learned that it is God's purpose to "send Jesus Christ" to the earth (Acts 3:20) to destroy all the kingdoms which now exist, and to set up a kingdom of his own (Dan. 2:44). We come now to consider the circumstances which will attend this prodigious political transformation. Will Christ creep upon the nations secretly and decimate "the powers that be" quietly, or will he come when wars are prevalent and troubles are rife? Instead of coming to redeem a saved world, according to the misconceptions of orthodox missionary propagandists, he comes in harmony with scriptural representations, to baptize the earth in judgment-fire.

The change from the kingdoms of this world to the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ (Rev. 11:15) will be attended by "a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation" (Dan. 12:1). "Evil shall go forth from nation to nation" (Jer. 25:32,33). God has a controversy with the nations, and directly pleads with all flesh (vss. 30,31). To natural, political, and military troubles, without a parallel in history, which cause "men's hearts to fail them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth" (Luke 21:26), will be added God's visible, judicial operations upon the nations. Natural and national perplexities will be supplemented by miraculous retributions. Vengeance of a most deadly kind overspreads the earth. Multitudes perish by war and pestilence; thousands more fall victims to the fire which will descend after the manner of the judgments upon Sodom and Gomorrah (Ezek. 39:6). "A fire shall devour before him" (Psa. 50:3-6) which falls "with pain upon the head of the wicked" (Jer. 30:23,24). Revealed in "flaming fire," Christ comes to take vengeance upon sinners, and to destroy them with an "everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power" (2 Thess. 1:8,9). To give some idea as to the extent of this advent-destruction the prophets write: "The slain of the Lord shall be many" (Isa. 66:16); "The slain of the Lord shall be at that day from one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth" (Jer. 25:33). Out of this world-wide destruction comes this exhortation and warning: "Take heed to yourselves lest . . . . that day come upon you unawares. For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth. Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man" (Luke 21:34-36). If God's own loved ones must "watch and pray always" to be "accounted worthy to escape" this snare that springs upon "the face of the whole earth" at Christ's advent, what chance of "escape" do you see, dear reader, for the world which neither watches, nor prays, nor believes in the coming of the Lord? "They shall not escape" (1 Thess. 5:3). If God's own dear ones, after watching and praying without intermission, "escape" with the skin of their teeth (Job 19:20); if "the righteous scarcely be saved" (1 Pet. 4:18), are not Russellites, Restorationists, and Universalists in a precarious business when they promise the world "escape" from this world-wide "snare"; and then having escaped, another chance for life after the Lord comes? "With lies ye make the heart of the righteous sad, whom I have not made sad; and strengthened the hands of the wicked, that he should not return from his wicked way, by promising him life" (Ezek. 13:22). Instead of "strengthening the wicked" to continue in his wickedness by a "promise of life" and a "fair chance" in the coming age; instead of giving the world Russellite opiates to put them to sleep in sin, and stereotyped arguments of Universalists to make them feel safe in iniquity, "the man of God" (2 Tim. 3:17) must proclaim the word of God in stentorian voice: "Before the fierce anger of the Lord come upon you, before the day of the Lord's anger come upon you. Seek ye the Lord, all ye meek of the earth, which have wrought his judgment; seek righteousness, seek meekness: it may be ye shall be hid in the day of the Lord's anger" (Zeph. 2:2,3). Seeking the Lord, righteousness and meekness "before the day of the Lord's anger comes upon you" is here twice categorically commanded. Even after we have "wrought his judgment" the promise of our safety is only conditional: "It may be ye shall be hid in the day of the Lord's anger." Russellism pledges to all men an unconditional and non-forfeitable "chance" in the coming age. This false and seductive system of religion promises all who have neither sought the Lord, righteousness, nor meekness, that they shall all "escape"; it therefore promises more to the world unconditionally than God has promised to his own sons and daughters conditionally. The impudent doctrine of a "fair chance" for all men, both dead and living, in the kingdom age, is the most fallacious dogma that has been invented since theological quacks began to temporize with the word of God.

Obituary

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.--Psa. 116:15.

Eliza Jane (Scudder) Evans was born in Switzerland County, Indiana, March 22, 1843, and was the youngest child of John and Elizabeth (Williams) Scudder. Her mother died a few days after the birth of her daughter, and the father was summoned to his final rest when his child was only nine months old. Being left alone at this early age she never knew a "home" until she made one of her own. She was reared in the home of her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Rutherford who lived in Prestonville, Kentucky.

She came to Warren County, Indiana, when eighteen years old and kept house for her brother, Henry Scudder). David W. Scudder, of Danville. Evans, January 22, 1863. The entire married life of this couple was spent in Jordan Township where their two sons were born, Henry H. and Cyrus C., both of whom survive her. She also leaves one grandson, Kenneth B. Evans, one nephew (son of Henry Scudder), David W. Scudder, of Danville, Illinois, and three cousins, members of the family where she was raised; Mrs. Anna Meek, of Cincinnati, Ohio; John Rutherford, of Covington, Kentucky, and Harvey Rutherford; besides a number of second cousins, one of whom, Harry C. Meek and Wife, of Chicago, visited her only a few weeks ago. A foster son, Charles E. [illegible], died some years ago in California.

Her husband's sudden and tragic death, October 1, 1897, was a severe shock and one from which she may never have fully recovered. Last January she was stricken with paralysis, and while she seemed to regain most of her usual activities, she gradually failed in general health, and probably this weakening of her system may have brought on her last illness. Feeling that she was no longer able to live alone and that she needed help in caring for herself, on the eighteenth day of August she was brought to the home of Harry Evans and Wife, and for three months or more she was confined to her bed; then just as a new day was calling to life a sleeping world she entered the Dark Valley of the Shadow of Death at twenty-five minutes after five on the morning of November 21, 1919, at the ripe age of 76 years, 7 months, and 29 days.

When a young girl she became a member of the Baptist Church, being baptized in the winter when the ice in the Ohio River had to be cut that they might have access to the water. After her marriage she joined the Church of God in Jordan Township, and as long as health permitted and circumstances allowed, she was a regular attendant at all the services. She was tenacious in holding to the doctrines of her church, and was a firm believer in honesty and allowing nothing to interfere with duty. Written by Henry H. Evans.

Funeral services were held from her late home in West Lebanon, as she had requested it to be held there, on Sunday at 2 o'clock P. M., November 23, 1919, conducted by the writer. Sister Evans had made many close friends among those with whom she lived. Their love was expressed by many rich floral offerings while the tribute of flowers was profuse from nearer relatives in token of the hearthstone ties of filial love. We read a Scripture lesson from 1 John 3 and 4, which she had enjoyed at our last visit with her before her death, and from it reviewed the great primal principles of Jesus' life as it had been exemplified by her devotion to service and duty. Burial was made in Jordan Cemetery beside her much lamented husband where they await the coming of Jesus and their change, through his great life giving power, from that which is sown a natural body to that which shall be raised as a spiritual body.

THE VALUE OF A LITTLE

Do thy little, do it well;
Do what right and reason tell;
Do what wrong and sorrow claim,
Conquer sin and cover shame.

Do thy little, though it be
Dreariness and drudgery:
They whom Christ apostles made
"Gathered fragments" when he bade.

Do thy little, never fear
While thy Savior standeth near;
Let the earth its javelins throw,
On thy way undaunted go.

Do thy little, God has made
Millions leave the forest shade;
Smallest stars their glory bring,
God employeth everything.

Do thy little, and when thou
Feelest on thy pallid brow,
Ere has fled thy vital breath,
Cold and damp the sweat of death.

Then the little thou hast done -
Little battles thou hast won,
Little masteries achieved,
Little wants with care relieved,

Little words of love expressed,
Little wrongs at once confessed,
Little favors kindly done,
Little toils thou didst not shun;

Little graces meekly worn,
Little slights with patience borne,
These shall crown thy pillowed head,
Holy light upon thee shed.

Saved by Grace

Faith opens the highway for the passage of the heavenly commerce.

Faith is always the medium of communion even upon the purely human plane. Where there is no faith there can be no heart commerce; no precious exports and imports come and go from the spacious harbors of the soul. Even in human intercourse let the faith be ruptured and the commerce is destroyed. Let the faith be impaired and the communion is checked. That is so in married life. That is so in friendship. No faith, no road! No road, no communion! Much faith, open thoroughfare, abundant communion. According to your faith, even in these realms, "shall it be done unto you."

And so it is in the highest of all realms: faith opens the way of communication between the soul and God. "If any man will open the door I will come in." Faith lets grace in. "By grace ye are saved through faith." Faith lets the lover in. And when the Lover enters into a life he begins to do his work of grace, which is the work of holy lovliness. The one who is lovely begins to impart his lovliness to the unlovely, and that is salvation. Salvation is just becoming like Jesus Christ. We are more and more saved as we become more and more like him. And that is why the apostle Paul uses three tenses in describing the mystery of saving grace. He does not merely use the past tense as of something accomplished. He uses the present tense as of something whose progress is to continue to the coming morrows. "We are saved!" "We are being saved!" "We shall be saved!" The full work of salvation stretches right across our years. It is like a shining light that shineth more and more even unto the perfect day. Salvation is a crisis and a process. The crisis of salvation is when faith is born, and the Lord of grace is offered a dwelling place in the human soul. The process of salvation is to be growing like our Guest, growing in the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. The crisis is the return, the process is the restoration. The crisis is to get with God, the process is to become like him. The crisis is to answer the Savior's call, the process is to become altogether lovely with the radiant and unsullied loveliness of the Lord. And so by faith we let grace into our lives, and grace is the parent of graces, even the fruits of the Spirit. From "Evangel," Edinburgh.

December

December, the last month of the year. In the Roman calendar the year was divided into ten months, the last of which was called December, or the tenth month; and this name, though etymologically incorrect, was retained for the last, or twelfth month of the year as now divided. In the Romulian calendar December had thirty days; Numa reduced the number to twenty-nine; Julius Caesar added two days to this, giving the month it present length. Martial applies to the month the epithet "canus" (hoary), and Ovid styles it "gelidus" (frosty) and "fumosos" (smoky). The Saxons called it "winter monat," or winter month, and "heligh-monat," or holy month; for it was in December (25) we celebrate the birth of Christ. December 22nd is the date of the winter solstice, when the sun reaches the tropic of Capricorn.

We now have entered into the last month of this year. Are you now a child of God? If not, and you intend to make 1919 the date of the new birth, you must not delay, for time is flitting, and we soon will see the end of this year. O, delay not. You know you want to do that which is right: why not do it now? Perhaps another opportunity never will present itself. God so loved you that Jesus came and lived a perfect, obedient life in doing his Father's will. It was for love of you that Jesus died, was buried, and was resurrected. It is because you are loved that Jesus is again coming to establish the kingdom of which both God and Jesus not only want you to be a part, but also a partner. Then why not present yourself as a birthday gift to Jesus on this Christmas month? You know you ought; you know you want to. Then why do you not do it? Please don't delay. Solomon said: "Beast not thyself of tomorrow; for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth."

These All Shall Pass

Having been swept from its mooring by the events of the past few years, the world is seeking as never before for a firm, stable anchorage. Permanent peace, enduring happiness, lasting prosperity—how shall they be secured? The question is unspeakably complicated by the rapid changes that have taken place. Only untried, and therefore unreliable, methods can be suggested.

But there are some things that do not change. It is still true today that the heart of man is "deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked." And it is forever and unalterably true that the only remedy for this deplorable condition is the everlasting gospel of faith in Christ the divine Savior of men. The goodness for which men are longing is not inherent, but must be wrought out in the life by his indwelling presence. In him is that "hope which we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast." It is to him alone and to his promise that we confidently look for the setting up of that "new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." And coupled with a reminder that "all the glory of man" is "as the flower of grass," it is of his word it is written, that it "endureth forever." In view of the transitory things of this present world it is well for us to heed the explanation and the assurance, "They shall perish; but thou remainest; . . . and they shall be changed: but thou art the same, and thy years shall not change."

In seeking for a sure anchorage, the word of God points the way. Here is the rock that shall never be moved.

Well planned, systematic activity is bound to produce results.

Daily Thoughts

Thou hast cast all my sins behind thy back	Isa. 38:17
Be patient unto the coming of the Lord	James 5:7
He that refraineth his lips is wise	Prov. 10:19
I will make darkness light before them	Isa. 42:16
Be ye transformed by renewing of your mind	Rom. 12:2
Grudge not one against another	James 5:9
The Lord our God preserve us	Josh, 24:17

True Living

I live for those who love me,
  For those that know me true,
For the heaven that smiles above me,
  Where God dwells, and Jesus too:
For the cause that needs assistance,
  For the wrongs that need resistance,
For the future in the distance,
  And the good that I can do.

With constant prayers fasten your souls on high, that constantly the smile of your heroic cheer may float above all floods of earthly agonies, purification being the joy of pain!

The little griefs, the petty wounds,
  The stabs of daily care -
"Crackling of thorns beneath the pot"—
  As life's fire burns, now cold, now hot;
  How hard they are to bear!

I heard a bird at break of day
  Sing from the autumn trees
A song so mystical and calm,
  So full of certainties;
No man, I think, could listen long
  Except upon his knees,
Yet this was but a simple bird,
  Alone, among dead trees.

Christmas Netice

To the friends who have so often helped in the work before, the Chicago Bereans wish to announce that they will take up the Christmas work again this year, the work of bringing a little Christmas cheer to the poor and needy. The Restitution

A Paper Representing the Church of God, and Devoted to the Exposition and Defense of the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God and the Name of Jesus Christ.—Acts 8:12.

VOLUME 71 CLEVELAND, O., DECEMBER 16th, 1919 ● NUMBER 47

Christmas Time

Christmas bells are ringing,
  O'er hill and dale and plain.
May angels touch their harp strings,
  And sing that song again,
Peace and good will to man,
  Is the divine decree,
Christ is born in Bethlehem,
  The Prince of Peace is he.

The shepherds watching with their flocks,
  Upon that peaceful night,
Heard the joyful message,
  And saw the heavenly light,
To you is born a Savior,
  He is Christ the Lord,
To rule the world in righteousness
  As promised in God's word.

No babe was half so pure,
  No child so passing fair,
As Jesus cradled in the manger,
  'Neath Mary's loving care.
The angel songsters hovered near
  To view the hallowed scene,
While the star that called the wise men,
  Shone with a holy sheen.

They brought a costly offering,
  Of worship, wealth and praise;
Meet offerings to the holy babe,
  The King of future days;
And now we're waiting for him,
  Till his star again appears,
He will come with joy and gladness,
  And banish all our fears.

Full soon the glorious morning
  We've waited for so long,
Will burst upon our vision
  With heavenly rapturous song;
Then Gabriel's trumpet will sound
  The last glad Christmas call,
And the righteous of all ages
  Shall be gathered, one and all.

The Good Shepherd

Late at night I saw the shepherd
Toiling slow along the hill,
Though the flock below were gathered
In the fold so warm and still.

On his face I saw the anguish,
In his locks the drops of night,
As he searched the misty valleys
As he climbed the frosty height.

Just one tender lamb was missing
When he called them all by name,
While the others heard and followed,
This one only never came.

Oft his voice rang through the darkness
Of that long, long night of pain,
Oft he sadly paused to listen
For an answering tone again.

Far away the truant sleeping
By the chasm of despair
Lay unconscious of its danger,
Shivering in the mountain air.

But at last the shepherd found it
Found it ere in sleep it died,
Took it on his loving bosom,
And his soul was satisfied.

Then I saw the eastern spaces
Part before a shining throng,
And the golden dome of morning
Seemed to shatter into song.

A Letter to Sister Howard

DEAR SISTER SUSAN HOWARD:

IT WAS so thoughtful and kind of Brother Donaldson to let the family read his letter from a member of that same family. Do you remember at home when one of us received a letter from some absent one how we all read it because we were all related one to another? And so it is with the household of God: we are brethren, having one Father. We are members one of another, belonging to one body, even Christ.

Oregon Bible College
Oregon,

Some things in your letter helped and strengthened me, so I pass them on to the rest of the family. You spoke of your regret that you had not talent to write fluently, and of your sorrow that your "silver and gold" were so limited that you could not give more abundantly. Dear Sister, your letter was so filled with trust in God, with sincere love for our Lord and those who are his, that your faith, like a little child, helped me more than all the wealth of the wealthiest could do. Your courage under all the heavy burden you had to bear strengthened my weak efforts and made me ashamed that I sometimes complained to God that he had given me so heavy a burden as it sometimes seems to me when I compare my own with those of others travelling the same path I am in. And now I am reminded forcibly of Peter and John and the lame man at the gate Beautiful. You remember what Peter said, "Silver and gold have I none"; just as we sometimes feel that we cannot do anything for the cause of Christ because we have no worldly means. But read further, "Such as I have give I unto thee." And through the name of Jesus of Nazareth, the anointed one, the man was made whole. For forty years this man had not been able to move; others carried him from his place and laid him down on the ground to beg for alms. If Peter and John had possessed the wealth of the Indies, and had given it all to him, would it have counted as anything in comparison with the whole body they, through the power of the name they were united to, brought to him? So it is, dear Sister, with the least and poorest member of Christ's body. Such an one by a godly life, does more to preach the gospel, to hold forth the offer of eternal life, than one possessed of all the talents and all the wealth to work with, if his faith (doctrine) is not confirmed by works following. We may be able to speak or write fluently the doctrine, but if we do not show forth in our daily life the fruits of righteousness; if in our intercourse with those who know not the way of life we do not show forth the meekness, the gentleness, the courtesy of Christ, our words are only as "sounding brass or tinkling cymbals." So you see the highest, the most convincing way of showing the truth is our gift just as much as it is the greatest orator, the most fluent writer, and the most talented one among us. It is the one talent the Master gave to every one of his servants, and the one, also, which we are most prone to neglect to use for that Master.

It may be now you can see more clearly how your letters work for the Lord, because I am convinced your life is in accord with them. And that brings me to another thing. You say, "I wrote to a sister or sisters of my great desire to be baptized, and in less than one month they raised the money and sent a brother to baptize me." Do you know Sister Howard, I laughed when I read that and said, "Why, that is just like God's children." The surprise would be if they had not done it. We are so prone to "fall back" and let the thoughts of the flesh predominate. Sometimes when I see one who claims to be of the faith holding himself above others as the elect, and such an one viewing all beautiful scenes, having rich and costly apparel, and goodly food with no thought or care for the poor brother plodding on wearily with scant attire and little sustenance, I feel for a little moment as David did once until something else was brought to his mind. Then I read over a little packet of letters I have; I look over the old copies of our beloved paper, and see how quickly and generously and lovingly the brethren respond to the needs of those more unfortunate than themselves; and I begin to see why one has and another has not, even though children of one Father. I believe, dear Sister, it is for the testing of both those who have and those who have not; and happy are we if we endure trial for the little while of our time. There is a little flock whom it is the Father's good pleasure to bestow the kingdom upon, though we in our short sightedness may not always be able to discern them.

Speaking of our paper, you know how I have always loved it and how much it is a help and comfort to me. It grieves me to see any of its space taken up with questions which do not "profit." We all believe that we are mortal, that in obedience to the faith we have eternal life, and that Christ was the first fruits of them that slept. Then what "profit" is there to our faith to spend our time and talents as to speculations whether one man has not yet slept? None of us believe that Jesus would put the bottle that makes drunken to another's lips or that he himself would look upon the wine when it moveth itself aright. Why then should precious time be wasted and lengthy arguments be written on what kind of wine was used in the feast of the Passover? We know that Israel was commanded to eat nothing leavened, and to put all leaven out of their houses during the feast. And the church is commanded to keep the true antitypical feast with "the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth." God has greatly blessed The Restitution by providing for its continued publication in these trying times of peril and high cost of material. We should consecrate it and ourselves anew to God's service. Sister Howard, if we were sure that the Lord was coming today or tomorrow, next week, or even next month, what do you suppose we would be talking about? You know we would spend every moment exhorting one another to faithfulness, and praying mightily to God that he would hide all our sins with the covering of Christ's righteousness. The strong would be encouraging the weak. The ambassadors of Christ, those to whom he has committed the word of peaching, would be constantly pointing us to the love manifested for our redemption. Their words would be like this: "Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died for us. Be not afraid. He is coming for our salvation. Again, He that spared not his own Son, will he not with him give us all things even life eternal? Trust him and be not doubtful." In fact every true child of God would be doing just what the Spirit of God commands him to do in these last days: "Exhort one another, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching." Do we not see it near at hand? Will not the light of the day star soon burst upon our longing sight? We know (for Jesus warrants us in this, nay, commands us), that he is even at the door. May we then, dear Sister, strive to help one another to a life more filled with the fruits of righteousness. I think one of the greatest works the Bereans are doing is sending loving, cheering, and encouraging letters to the isolated ones. Our paper used to be so full of these, but we seldom see any now. You see how large a letter I have written unto you. May God keep you and all his everywhere, blameless unto the coming of our Lord, by whom we have received the atonement with God.

Your sister in Christ,

Flora A. Reed.

"Out of Darkness Into Light"

Christ as the Antitypical Priest

There is a prevalent idea extant that inasmuch as Jesus Christ became the antitypical high priest, and therefore as the high priest under the law was required to offer sacrifice first for his own sin, so too, Christ had first to offer for his own sin before he was qualified to offer for others. This idea is not founded upon the facts in the case, as we shall see. In the first place, the high priest under the law had sin for which atonement was necessary. Christ had none; the apostle says, that he was "without sin." The priest under the law was on a lower level than Christ, and before he could act for those on the same level as himself, he was required to place himself above them. Jesus required no sacrifice for himself to elevate himself above his fellows. Paul's whole argument in Hebrews seven proves that Christ was quite a different high priest from those under the law. "For the law appointeth men high priests, having infirmity; but the word of the oath, which was after the law, appointeth a Son, perfected for evermore." "For such a high priest became us, holy, guileless, undefiled, separated from sinners, and made higher than the heavens." Under the law men were appointed high priests who had infirmity; "but the word of the oath, which was after the law, appointed a Son, perfected for evermore." High priests under the law, because of their infirmities continued to offer sacrifices for themselves, during the tenure of their office, not so however with the High Priest of the Oath; never having had any such kind of infirmity as the priests under the law, he never made any offering for himself either before or after he became High Priest by the Oath; for where there is no sin, no offering is required; and John said in reference to Christ, "In him is no sin." Now then, as Christ had no such infirmity to offer for as the High Priest under the law offered for, what was his offering for? For the infirmity of the people. "And then for the sins of the people; for this he did once for all (for all time, never to be repeated daily as under the law) when he offered up himself."

Now let it be observed that the high priests under the law never offered up themselves as sacrifice, but a lamb, goat or bullock. When Christ offered up himself he was not a High Priest, he had not at that time been constituted a priest because he was not immortal; his mission as the Messenger of the Covenant had not been fulfilled until his own blood sanctified and confirmed the instrument, by which "the transgressions under the first covenant" could be taken away, as also those under the New Covenant. One clear testimony from the word of God is worth more than all the theories of men, however high a position they may occupy in the minds of their devotees. Not as a priest did Christ offer up himself, but as a lamb. "But the precious blood, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot, even the blood of Christ" (1 Pet 1:19). "For if the blood of goats defiled, sanctify unto the cleanness of the flesh: how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal spirit offered himself without blemish unto God, cleanse your conscience from dead works to serve the living God?" (Heb. 9:13, 14). It is a marvelous thing that men are so blinded by a theory that they will read into the offering of Christ "sin in the flesh," when Paul says, "offered himself without spot to God."

Christ said in John 6:51, "I am the living bread which came down out of heaven; if any man eat of this bread, he shall live forever; yea and the bread I shall give is my flesh, for the life of the world." This theory that Christ Jesus as a High Priest offered himself up to God, as a sacrificial victim to make atonement for himself because of his own "sin in the flesh" is a very serious one, and if not found taught in the Bible should be summarily discarded, because to eat of such flesh in connection with the sacrifice of Christ is to eat of bread that perisheth, and which cannot give eternal life; it belongs purely to Paul's "mind of the flesh," which he says is death. Christ in his argument with the Jews, in the sixth chapter of John, claims that his flesh, which he gave for the life of the world, came down from heaven. "The Jews strove one with another, saying, How can this man give us his flesh to eat? Jesus therefore said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except ye eat of the flesh of the Son of Man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in yourselves. He that eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day." John testifies that "the word became flesh, and dwelt among us (and we beheld his glory as the only begotten from the Father), full of grace and truth." It was "the mind of the Spirit" as a concrete conscious identity in physical flesh and blood manifestation. Men partook of this word made flesh, so that they too were the word made flesh, or "the mind of the Spirit." At the end of Christ's mission, this "word made flesh" lays down his life in mortal tabernacle, and then takes it up again that it may have an immortal tabernacle (John 10:18). John 1:29, "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." How? By atonement and forgiveness of sins.

Putting Darkness For Light

In an article appearing in "The Restitution," No. 43, there is this statement: "The idea (in the law) was that by the ceremony of blood-shedding, the sin committed was put out of sight, that it would be no longer in evidence against the one who had committed the act, so that the punishment for sin would not have to be inflicted and suffered ..... The animal became the bearer of sin by suffering the punishment due to sin, death."

The thought sought to be conveyed in this statement is: that as those animals offered under the law for sins were a type of Christ's sacrifice for sins, and as the victim offered for sins stood in the place of the presenting party and received in its death the penalty due to him for sins: So Christ, the anti-typical sin-offering, took our place in his death and suffered the punishment due to us for sins.

No Israelite would build an altar with bricks and expect it to be acceptable to God. Neither can anyone build up divine truth upon a foundation of error. The idea that the animal offered as a sin-offering stood in the place of the presenting party and suffered the punishment dee him for sin, is erroneous.

For this reason, no death penalty was attached to those violations of the law which did incur the death penalty, no animal sacrifices were demanded; none could be accepted under the law. That being true beyond doubt, then, that animal offered concerning the sins of the people did not suffer death in the place of the presenting party, and did not pay the penalty of its death for the sins of the one who offered it; because no death penalty was attached to these sins. The presenting party was not under any penalty, but only he was at variance with God, being in sin through the iniquity or perverseness of his fallen nature.

HATTIE CATTELL GOSS

Mrs. Hattie Goss was born in Cleveland, Ohio, October 9th, 1860, the daughter of Levi C. and Margaret Martin Cattell, and died in Cleveland, October 28th, 1919.

Sister Goss was married to Charles A. Goss April 23rd, 1885. She leaves her husband, one daughter, Mrs. A. C. Baker, two sons, Howard and Paul, three grandchildren and a brother Charles L. Cattell of Willoughby, Ohio, to mourn her loss.

Sister Goss was the daughter of Brother Cattell who was one of the pioneers of the truth in Cleveland. At the age of 16 years she united with the Church of God together with her brother Charles L. Cattell. She was a life-long worker in the church, devoting her life in spreading the gospel of the kingdom. She served as organist of the church and was Secretary of the Sister's Society for many years.

To know Sister Goss was to love her. She will be missed by all who knew her. Deepest sympathy goes out to those who mourn her. She sleeps to await the resurrection morn.

A LESSON IN FAITHFULNESS

Another of God's noblemen has gone to his rest to await the call of the Savior whom he loved so well. I have known Brother Charles Elvey all my life, and his faithfulness both in attendance at church service and in the performing of the little thankless tasks that must be done by someone. He has had such an influence on my Christian life that I feel that I must pass the lesson on to you.

He was so very shy that it was a physical impossibility for him to speak in service or even read a verse, and he thought, as so many make the mistake of doing that, because he could not speak, that his service was of little account.

One Sunday when the Bereans had conducted the church service he said to me, "I cannot talk, but I can serve the Lord in being here every Sunday, and being here with thanksgiving." What a lesson to us! What would it mean to the life of the church, if every Berean and every church member, young or old, served the Lord by being there every Sunday and serving, not with fault-finding, but with thanksgiving.

One of my earliest recollections is of seeing Brother and Sister Elvey every Sunday in their seats at church; and the beauty of it is that they loved to come, they did not come from duty. Nothing but sickness kept them away.

It was Brother Elvey that passed the hymn books and Bibles every Sunday, and it was Brother Elvey who put them away. It was his work to pay the rent for the hall, to see that the janitor had the steam up in time for service, and a hundred and one little things that we did not realize until sickness held him in its grasp, and he could do them no more. No parade, no fuss, but he just faithfully and quietly did them, and he could not realize how he has been missed.

As deacon of the church his hand was the first to pass me the communion when I entered the Christian fold. He held the position of deacon until he could come no more.

I wish to give one more tribute to Brother Elvey that came from strangers and from the world. One day, when riding on the street car, I heard two men behind me discussing Christians and their failings. One man said, "I tell you there is nothing in it. Christians are like every one else; there is no difference. They will skin you on a deal every time."

"Hold on," said the other man, "they are not all like that. There is a Christian coal dealer on Madison St., named Elvey. He is square. If I wanted to test any other coal man I would have that man Elvey deliver a ton of coal and then I would measure every one else by that."

A quiet, faithful, loving, unassuming man whose light shone forth in the world.

Written in loving memory.

A New Tract

The Restitution has just published a new four page tract, "Universalism Unscriptural," by Brother Fiske, Jr. Brother Fiske is always a good writer, but in this instance he has excelled himself. Universalism hurts the truth worse than any other form of error. Brother Fiske makes short work in dispatching it. Send for a few dozen copies to give to friends. For price see the last page under "The Restitution Publications."

Another New Tract

"How Much Do You Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ ?" is another new tract just issued by The Restitution Office. Brother Judd, of Canada, is the author. As Brother Judd is a regular contributor to The Restitution, our readers need no words from us commendatory of his ability as a writer and Scripturean. For price of this work see the last page of The Restitution.

Go face the fire at sea, or the cholera in your friend's house, or the burglar in your own, or what danger lies in the way of duty, knowing you are guarded by the cherubim of Destiny (Emerson).

There's music in the sighing reed;
There's music in the gushing rill;
There's music in all things, if men had ears;
Their earth is but an echo of the spheres.

No man is proved to be a Christian because he is found in company with the children of God, even in the house of worship and around the table of the Lord.

Be firm and be faithful; desert not the right,
The brave are the bolder the darker the night;
Then up and be doing, though cowards may fail,
Thy duty pursuing, dare all, and prevail.

In every age God has called his servants to lift up their voices against the prevailing errors and sins of the multitude.

It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude after our own; but the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.

Editorial

The sudden death of Rev. Mr. Hancock, a Baptist minister, came to us as a great shock this week. He had finished his Bible Lessons preparatory to baptism, and had expressed himself as seeing the need of his baptism, but while he was hesitating a few weeks about obedience, death suddenly smote him, and now he must meet the future out of Christ. Hesitation about such vital maters is a great risk, and he who hesitates takes that risk. Let this tragic affair sober the living, and cause them to say, "The living, the living, he shall praise thee as I do this day."

Sister A. Ashute, Troy, N. Y., writes: "Brother Samuel Pitts has had an accident. He was hit by an automobile and knocked down, had his right arm broken at the elbow and was bruised about the body. He is confined in the hospital, and will be there for five weeks or more, as he is 75 years old, and will mend very slowly. He asked me to let the brothers and sisters know and ask them to pray for him, and also to write to him as he cannot read or study any more on account of his sight. The time passes very slowly. I do all I can, and hope to have him home as soon as possible. Address both Brother Samuel Pitts and myself at 61 Burdette Ave., Troy, N. Y."

Sometimes all we are called to exercise is the spirit of resignation. It is not our duty to shout "Praise the Lord" under every circumstance of life. The standard in all things is Jesus Christ, and when he went down to Gethsemane he did not shout "Halleluah." No; he went down with a heart that was breaking, and he cried: "If it be possible let this cup pass from me, but Amen unto they will; not as I will, but as thou wilt." And in the life of most believers they will find a great space between the Amen of Gethsemane and the Halleluiah of glory. The one thing requisite is that the whole bent and delight of our nature is to do the will of God.

When Christ was born wise men from the east prostrated themselves before him and bestowed gifts upon him with a lavish hand. In imitation of their generosity we express our gratitude at Christmas time by voluntary gifts to friends. In this, however, we are too prone to select as the objects of our benevolence those to whom we are related by ties of flesh. Selfishness pricks up its ugly ears even in our benefactions. It is a settled policy with the world to love the world, and we expect nothing else. A child of God should love the children of God. But notice how those who profess to love the children of God will ignore them and ask to the Christmas dinner only those who are of the same family "the family" including none but kinfolks according to the flesh! Is it not time to quit serving the flesh, and those who are only related to us by the flesh, and to serve the Lord and those who are his? Suppose we remember this in our invitations for Christmas dinner this year?

It was reported that several calls had been made, and four plants had been sent to the sick. Sister Sanford as leader took up the study of the first part of the ninth Bible Lesson, which deals with the nature of man, showing the soul as used in the Bible means primarily a creature or person, and is employed to express the variety of aspects in which that creature can be contemplated; such as person, life, mind, disposition, etc.; but in no instance does it express the idea of immortality. The meeting was closed by repeating the motto. There were nineteen members present. Sister ADDIE GIBBS.

Be Consistent!

Salvation of the Dead a Heirloom of Orthodoxy

In The Restitution of recent date the following statement is found: "The elder said that they believed in the Bible and its teachings except where they were not accurate." When in the course of human progress men reach the place where they have, to carry out their plan, to change the present account, there is something wrong somewhere. As wrong as we find the Mormons to be in many respects, I do not condemn them in the above stand if I am guilty of the same charge. You do not have to go to the Mormon ranks to find those whose faith wavers when it comes to accepting the present written record, called the Bible, as authentic and reliable. And until we, as a class, who claim to be the Church of God, clear ourselves of the same guilt, then I fail to see wherein you treat others quite fair. I do not uphold the Mormons, or anyone else who is guilty of this act. But if you think them wrong for taking this position, are you guilty likewise? Have you in any way sought to change the written account? If so, why? There are those who claim to be members of the Church of God, and who say that Christ was the son of Joseph. In their effort to prove this they resort to the act of trying to prove that much of the Scriptures are spurious, and yet they fight the Mormons.

And there are a few who oppose future probation for any who have died previous to the second coming of Christ, and yet they plead for the same for those who are living when he comes. Brethren, be consistent. In your efforts to disprove this, does it not seem like that you are trying to change things a little to read your way? Now the next time you write on this question, just watch yourself and see how you perform. The very same Scriptures you take to prove future probation for the living after Christ comes, proves the same for those who have died without the same opportunity before he comes. Let me suggest, brethren, when you are writing as you have been, do not get the idea that you are representing the Church of God -- for you are only representing just a few just yourself.

And then some of you are greatly opposed to a universal resurrection of the dead, thinking it would interfere with the fulfilment of God's plan. We constitute a wonderful church, do we not? Are all speaking the same thing? And you are always talking about "Larger Hope," "Fair Chance," also "Second Chance," just as if you do not believe in the same yourself. Now brethren, get down to reason: do you not think and believe that God has given those who have died a fair chance? Do you not really think that he has given them a second chance? --as they had one through Adam, and the other through Christ? Also do you not concede that the hope of God is a "larger hope" than the one that man offers you? Well, after all, you believe in the second chance, a fair chance, and a larger hope. Then what are you finding fault with these doctrine for?

Yours for truth.

EDITORIAL COMMENTS

With all the perplexities of editorial life there is mixed an occasional smile provoked by those from whom we never hear unless they have something critical to say. Occasionally we print one of these literary curiosities that the reader may be amused as well as ourselves. As usual the writer, like all other advocates of future probation for the dead, has substituted reason for the word of God. He has not honored God's word by so much as one quotation in his article. Just read it again, dear reader, and notice how destitute it is of Bible quotations.

Our correspondent seems much exercised over whom we "represent." It may help him some if we say that we are not Josephites fighting the Mormons; and that when we write against posthumous probation we represent ourselves and hundreds of others. "The few called" are to him a contemptible number, and with a sneer he says that when we write against larger hope "you (we) are only representing a few just yourself." Well, the truth is the truth whether believed by many or by few. The Restitution does not represent unbelievers; it is proud of the fact that it represents "the few" in the narrow way of life. It is quite satisfied to "represent" the truth as it is in Jesus.

Since our correspondent scorns us because we represent an ignoble few, it may be interesting to ascertain whom he represents when he teaches posthuman probation. In this teaching he represents

I. The Mormons. They teach unbelievers may be saved after they are dead by proxy baptism.

II. The Russellites. They teach the salvation of more people after they die than are saved in life. Only "the little flock" are saved as living people; the world of mankind are saved after they die!

III. The Spiritualists. Practically all the salvation taught by this sect is obtained by the dead. The salvation of the living scarcely finds any recognition by them at all.

IV. Christian Scientists. These people are Universalists. All are saved by the enfoldment of a principle within in the general development of evolution. All people who are not Scientists now must "demonstrate" science after they have "passed on." By this they mean after they are dead!

V. Episcopalians. Since the war these people, to accommodate the soldiers killed on the battlefields of Europe, have come out avowedly for posthumous probation and salvation. They now are praying for the dead!

VI. The Disciples. In this church probation for the dead is hidden in what they call "the intermediate state." In this half-way house between heaven and hell many escape from hell by turning their faces heavenward.

VII. The Roman Catholics. These people teach that no man is pure enough to go directly to heaven, not even the popes. All must go to purgatory to be fitted for heaven. The consummation of salvation in every case takes place in purgatorial fires, after people are dead! This is future probation with a vengeance!

VIII. Universalists. This sect makes salvation after death a huge success. They are perhaps "bigger hearted" than any of the others. But time and space forbid the mention of numerous heathen religions which teach posthumous salvation. Enough has been said to show that our friend, in teaching the salvation of the dead, does not "represent just a few—himself." No, indeed! Quite orthodox is he!

Communication

They spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened.–Mal. 3:16.

Dear Restitution:

Dear Brothers and Sisters: Brother Drinkard was here Oct. 5th and baptized me, but I have been driven with work and not very strong, and beside my husband has been sick, so all the work came upon me outside and inside, and also the taking care of him. You see I have had all I could do. He is getting better. Now I wish to thank all who were so generous to help send Brother Drinkard here because, without their help, it would have been impossible to have been baptized. I thank God because it was he who put it in Sister Sweet's heart to send someone. May God bless and keep us is my prayer. I left it with him who is able to do all things. He has never failed me. Now as always, when I go to him in faith believing, he answers prayers. I was so tired last night I could scarcely go about and I ached so I could hardly move. I went to Christ for help: I told him all and said, "Dear Father, you know how necessary it is for me to be well." When I got up off my knees I felt better and have washed all day.

Lesson V

II. SETTING UP THE KINGDOM IS ALSO A CONSTRUCTIVE WORK

In wrath God remembers mercy. Inasmuch as human governments are overthrown, the Papal and Protestant systems of religion abolished, and the reprobates of the earth expurgated at Christ's coming, in connection with the establishment of the kingdom of God, the reader who has been led thus far kingdomward will no doubt be ready to ask in anxiety: "Who, then, are 'hid in the day of the Lord's anger'; who are to 'escape' the devastating judgments of God which accompany the Lord's advent: who are to enjoy the benign reign of Christ as subjects of the kingdom of God?" This question is easily answered when we understand that in wrath God remembers mercy (Hab. 3:2). This arrangement permits the prudent to foresee the evil and "hide" themselves; but "the simple pass on and are punished" (Prov. 27·12). Setting up the kingdom of God is both a destructive and constructive work. To some minds these two words, "destruction" and "construction," and the ideas represented by them, are mutually exclusive. But they are not antagonistic: in fact, they are the best of friends. They are placed in successive chapters of the Bible, the one following the other logically and consistently, to show their amity. The thirty-fourth chapter of Isaiah is full of stalking destruction: the thirty-fifth overflows with permanent construction when "the desert shall blossom as the rose." And as further suggesting the friendliness of these terms, they are placed side by side in the same texts. Thus in Dan. 2:44 the God of heaven is said to "set up a kingdom," which is a work of construction, upbuilding, and restitution. In the same verse this kingdom is said to "break in pieces and consume all these (other) kingdoms," which is a work of demolition. To those who think clearly "the restitution of all things" in Acts 3·21 is in admirable harmony with the destruction of the rebellious (vs. 23). Destruction and construction, restitution and demolition, then, are not incompatible and mutually exclusive terms and ideas.

These discriminative observations help us to understand and appreciate the dual nature of the kingdom as found in the work of destruction and restitution. God's judgments are fully released at the return of Christ, for he comes to take vengeance (2 Thess. 1:8); they are destructive, deadly, and extensive, but they do not totally exterminate mankind. World-burners believe that the earth will be depopulated at Christ's advent, while others, more extreme still, think the globe itself will be annihilated. Both theories dishonor God and his word (Num. 14:21; Isa. 11:9; Hab. 2:14; Isa. 45:18; Eccl. 1:4; Psa. 104:5). Both give to a heated imagination the wings of a wild goose. The first is content in the thought that the kingdom of God will be set up on an ash bank, and that Christ and the saints will reign over a pile of cinders; the second is satisfied with Christ's kingdom and Lordship exercised over vacuity! Such unmitigated judgments as these ideas represent have not happened since the world began. During the course of God's dealings with man, extending over many centuries, his judgments have been almost numberless; but in no instance have they exterminated mankind entirely. The depopulation of the earth by universal destruction when Jesus comes has not one precedent in all divine history to sustain it. Take the flood as an illustration of God's most astringent judgment. Mercy shines even in that opaque catastrophe. If we are told God destroyed "man and beast" (Gen. 6:7), this modification is immediately added, "But Noah found grace in the sight of the Lord" (vs. 8). If "every living substance was destroyed" (Gen. 7:23), the pronouncement is mitigated subsequently in the words, "God remembered Noah, and every living thing, and all the cattle that were with him in the ark" (Gen. 8:1). "As the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be" (Matt. 24:37). Since a remnant of men and animals were spared from death during the deluge in Noe's day, and the coming of Christ is compared to that day, are we not within the confines of Scripture, logic, and analogy in saying that a remnant will be preserved through advent-judgments? As some "escaped" with their life from Sodom's destruction (Gen. 19:17-23), so at Christ's coming some are to be saved from death notwithstanding the conflagration (2 Pet. 2:6-9). As the spared remnant in Noe's day survived the flood, and afterwards made a burnt-offering, "and the Lord smelled a sweet savor," and blessed them in fruitfulness and multiplication, and commissioned them to exercise dominion in the new earth (Gen. 8:20,21; 9:1-3), so will it be when Christ comes. This conclusion is not reached through a prolix process of dubious reasoning; it is explicitly declared in the word of God. Out of the darkness of the flood twinkles this star of promise: "I will not again curse the ground any more for man's sake, ... neither will I again smite any more every living thing as I have done" (Gen. 8:21). Granting, then, that in the flood there was maximum destruction, here is the pledge of the Almighty never to "smite again" to the same extent. Here is "comfort" concerning "the ground which the Lord hath cursed" (Gen. 5:29, margin). To show how world-burners nullify this promise and comfort of God we will quote from "Bible Readings," a Seventh-day Adventists work, page 219:

> "In what condition will the earth be after the coming of Christ? 'I beheld the earth, and lo, it was without form and void; and the heavens, and they had no light.' 'I beheld and lo, the fruitful place was a wilderness, and all the cities thereof were broken down at the presence of the Lord, and by his fierce anger' (Jer. 4:23-26; Isa. 24:1-3).
> "Will any men be living on the earth at that time? 'I beheld, and lo, there was no man, and all the birds of heaven were fled' (Jer. 4:25; Zeph. 1:3)."

This quotation shows that world-burners understand and teach that advent-judgments are astringent, depopulating the earth, and reducing it to chaos. It also exhibits how surreptitiously they handle the word of God. On page 220 of "Bible Readings" the writer says through stress of necessity: "The saints are taken to heaven at the coming of Christ." If he has correctly interpreted Jer. 4:23, which he quotes to prove that the earth will be "without form and void," heaven will also be involved in this chaotic condition: "And the heavens, and they had no light." It cannot be an enrapturing prospect for the saints to be taken to heaven a place where there is "no light"! Such prattle as this cannot stand the steelblue light of reason. The fact is, the texts cited in "Bible Readings" are garbled instead of quoted. They are historic, not prophetic; and the judgments which they enunciate are expressly qualified and hedged about with ameliorative features. Jer. 4:23-26 applies to Judah and Jerusalem (vss. 3,11), and the 27th verse, which the author of "Bible Readings" did not quote, reads: "The whole land shall be desolate; yet will I not make a full end." Destruction and preservation, justice and mercy, are both in this passage; and although world-burners have two eyes they can see only one thing: justice, destruction. They are blind in one eye. Isa. 24:1-3 is misquoted, too. "The land shall be utterly emptied, and utterly spoiled" (vs. 3) are words that catch the eye of world-burners every time; but they are totally blind to the effulgence of heavely light which shines with a halo of glory in the 6th verse: "Therefore hath the curse devoured the earth, and they that dwell therein are desolate: therefore the inhabitants of the earth are burned, and few men left." Again, Zeph. 1:3 is quoted to prove the depopulation of the earth, "I will consume man and beast." Before the prophecy concludes, however, mercy is mixed with wrath in these words: "I will also leave in the midst of thee an afflicted and poor people, and they shall trust in the name of the Lord. The remnant of Israel shall not do iniquity. . . . . The Lord will rejoice over thee with joy; he will rest in his love, he will joy over thee with singing" (Zeph. 3:12,13,17). These readings show that the very Scriptures which are quoted to prove that the earth is without inhabitants after Christ comes, when closely read, declare that God does not "make a full end"; that a "few men are left"; and that "an afflicted and poor people" survive as a "remnant" whom God loves, and over whom he rejoices and sings. God made the earth to be inhabited (Isa. 45:18), and world-burners cannot annul his purpose. While it is true that God puts away the wicked like dross at the coming of Christ (Psa. 119:119), the heart building truth remains: "Yet will I leave a remnant that ye may have some that shall escape the sword among the nations" (Ezek. 6:8). To this sublime truth this divine assurance is added: "And the remnant that is escaped of the house of Judah shall again take root downward, and bear fruit upward: for out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant, and they that escape out of Mount Zion: the zeal of the Lord of hosts shall do this" (Isa. 37:31,32).

LET'S HAVE SOME CHRISTMAS EVERY DAY

O, let's have Christmas every day
The gladness and the heart felt mirth,
Good will toward men and peace on earth;
The simple joy of giving things
To gain the joy the giving brings;
The practicing of what we preach
In word and deed, and thought, and speech.

O, let's have Christmas every day
The hearty clasp of hand on hand,
The shouts of children in the land,
The kindness done to pauper boys
When Santa Claus forgets the toys;
The money that is freely spent
On dwellers in some tenement.

O, let's have Christmas every day
There are so many of us here
Who need the warmth of daily cheer;
Whose lives are full of grief and care,
Whose hearts are full of black despair,
Far more than empty words and prayers.
Far morethan empty words and prayers.

O, let's have Christmas every day
By thinking less of foolish pride,
And more of those for whom Christ died;
By thinking more of noble deeds
And less of purely selfish needs;
By standing in the clear sunlight
And doing good because it's right.

O, let's have Christmas every day—
'Tis wrong to wait a weary year
To bring some fellow creature cheer.
We should adopt the bettter plan
Of doing good whene're we can,
But do it now—next Christmas may
Not come at all—let's live today.

Princes

Recently, New York, as also some of the other cities of this great country, was visited by a prince of royal blood. Wherever he went a great time was made over him, and rightly so; for he represented the greatest constitutional government on the face of the earth today.

Edward Albert, whether home or abroad, is popular with the masses. His nature is congenial; there is nothing "stuck up" or proud about him. According to the newspaper reports of his actions at the different receptions given in his honor, he oft times was the most democratic of those present. But, think you, it was these characteristics that made the people notice him and do him honor? Would any other young man with the same appearance and character and disposition and wit and sense of humor unheralded and unannounced, leaving his London home and visiting our country excite the same curiosity, receive the smae homage, create the same excitement as did the Prince of Wales? No. The honor, the homage paid Edward Albert by the great city of New York was peculiar to himself. No other person visiting our city ever created the excitement he did. If the reason of all this was not personal, what was it? It simply was because Edward Albert was the son of a king. We look upon the young man as physically fit, mentally bright, and morally good; in character and disposition a guide and example for youth. We have no desire to belittle the young man when we say that was he in all things exactly as he now is, except his birth—that is, was his father in some more humble station—his visit to our shores would not have attracted attention.

In writing the above we have a twofold reason: first, we wish to draw your attention to Christmas Day, December 25th, to our mind the greatest day of the year. We fully are aware—and we feel you also are—that the exact date of the birth of Jesus is unknown; the season of the year even is in doubt. Still we celebrate Christmas, and in so doing we do honor to the glorious name of our Redeemer. The day has nothing to do with it: it is the event we celebrate. We know that Jesus was born; we also know that through the birth of Jesus redemption, with peace and glory, shall be the portion of all those who confess that he is the Christ, the Son of the living God, and having confessed, obey his commands and walk in newness of life. As Edward Albert received honor on acount of what he represented, so do we, as Christians, celebrate Christmas Day for what it represents. Then, in celebrating Christmas let us do so whole-heartedly, knowing that in the birth of Jesus, hope also was born, love was manifested, and eternal life made possible.

Second, Edward Albert was acclaimed, feasted and honored because he was a prince. Who is a prince? A prince is the son of a King. Have you accepted Jesus as your Savior, Redeemer, and Righteousness? If you have then you also are a prince, for you, by adoption have entered into relationship with Jesus Christ. You have become his bother, and as such a son of God. "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God!" Edward Albert is the son of George, king of Great Britain and Ireland; we as brother of Jesus Christ are sons of God, who is King of kings and Lord of lords. Edward Albert's social position in this world is among the greatest that can be allotted to man; still, the least in the kingdom of God will be greater there than he is here. Is this future glory worth striving for? Is it worth while to forego the light, earthly pleasures of today so that in the future we shall receive the everlasting, heavenly blessings of God? The praise and glory of this world are but for a day; the glory that God shall bestow shall endure throughout the countless ages of eternity. It is for us to make a choice as to which we shall have. The time is the present. I trust your decision will be a wise one, and that you will elect to come out from the world and be separate, as the Lord saith, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty.

Season's Compliments

Brother and Sister Alexander D. Donaldson extend every reader of this page the very best wishes for a bright and happy Christmas, praying the eternal God that he may grant to each the blessings necessary to create peace, contentment, and joy.

Christmas Bells

I heard the bells on Christmas Day
Their old, familiar carols play,
And wild and sweet
The words repeat
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!

Till ringing, swinging on its way,
The world revolved from night to day
A voice a chime,
A chant sublime
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!

Then from each black, accursed mouth
The cannon thundered in the South
And with the sound
The carols drowned
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!

And in despair I bowed my head;
"There is no peace on earth," I said;
"For hate is strong
And mocks the song
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!

Then pealed the bells more loud and deep;
"God is not dead; nor doth he sleep!
The Wrong shall fall
The Right prevail,
With peace on earth, good-will to men!" H. W. Longfellow.

A Christmas Hymn

As shadows cast by cloud and sun
Flit o'er the summer grass,
So, in thy sight, Almighty One,
Earth's generation pass.
And as the years, an endless host,
Come swiftly pressing on,
The brightest names that earth can boast
Just glisten and are gone.

Yet doth the star of Bethlehem shed
A lustre pure and sweet;
And still it leads, as once it led,
To the Messiah's feet.
O Father, may that holy star
Grow every year more bright,
And send its glorious beams afar
To fill the world with light.—William Cullen Bryant.

The Date of Christmas Originated in Rome

Nobody knows when Christ was born, of course, and December 25th is simply an arbitrary date. The day has been variously fixed and celebrated on April 20th, May 29th, March 29th, September 29, and quite generally on January 6th. But Pope Julius in the fourth century had a careful inquiry made into the matter, and this resulted in the fixing of December 25th as the most likely day of the birth.

The Restitution

A Paper Representing the Church of God, and Devoted to the Exposition and Defence of the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God and the Name of Jesus Christ.—Acts 8:12.

VOLUME 71 CLEVELAND, OHIO, DECEMBER 23rd, 1919. NUMBER 18

In Memory
Of B. F. Woodward

An aged soldier of the cross,
Who has labored long to save the lost:
Has lain down his armor; his work is done;
He awaits now for his "well done."

He has fought life's battles for four score years,
'Mid joy and grief and sorrow and tears:
Ever sowing the seed from the Master's bin,
That the angel keepers may gather in.

He has labored long with voice and pen,
To teach the gospel to dying men:
To teach them of God's power to save,
And ransom them from the silent grave.

Sleep on, dear brother, and take thy rest,
With thy head pillowed on thy Savior's breast:
Thy friends all loved thee well,
But Jesus loved thee best.

Soon the archangel's trump will sound
And wake the sleeping saints now in the grave;
And you with all the ransomed band,
Upon Eden's heights you then will stand.

And the glad anthems all the redeemed will sing,
All glory to our Priest and King:
And God shall wipe all tears away,
For it will be one eternal day.

For saints shall then as angels be,
All clothed in immortality:
When in that holy, happy land,
He will take no more the parting hand.

Mrs. C. L. Micklin.

Certainties
Of the Life to Come

By David Young.

He that hath my word, let him speak my word faithfully; what is the chaff to the wheat? saith the Lord (Jer. 23:28).

In vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men (Mark 7:7).

WHILE THE darkness still covers the earth, and gross darkness the people, concerning our dear Father's revealed purpose with man and earth, let us take a walk on the inside while contemplating the gospel of the hereafter.

"Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power; but they shall be priests of God and of Christ and shall reign with him a thousand years" (Rev. 20:6).

The certainties gleaned from the word of God and of truth are threefold: The life to come is endless, is obtained by resurrection, has its seal and pattern in the Lord Jesus Christ. These are fundamental features, illustrating the mode, the quality, the guarantee; the additional certainties are either an enlargement of these features, or are built upon the broad basis thereby established.

Corporeal Qualities of the Future Life

Taking the pattern life of the Lord Jesus as our guide, the first additional certainty that confronts us is the corporeal quality of the life to come. Christ appeared in bodily form. He manifested himself by all the visible attributes of existence; he demonstrated his reality by the eternal features that applied to the eye of sense. He was seen, handled, companioned; he walked, talked, and ate with his disciples; and on every occasion he was corporeally visible. His was no etherealized existence, for, as he answered, "a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have" (Luke 24:29).

There is, says the apostle, a natural body and there is a spiritual body; and the order is first the natural and afterwards the spiritual (1 Cor. 15:44-46). Christ illustrates in himself both the order and the certainty of the spiritual body. That body has features akin to the natural body and features which transcend it. It has a visible form—"flesh and bones." It is energized by spirit; the germ principle of enduring life. As such it does not wear out, and therefore needs no renewal. It has tireless energy enabling those who possess it to run without being weary, and to walk without being faint: consequently it is independent of physical sustenance. It has powers and qualities of which we can form no adequate conception, and is able to nullify the laws which govern our present existence. Christ could make himself visible or invisible at will, could disguise himself so that he was not recognized; could veil his glory so that he could be seen, and yet be as he appeared to Saul of Tarsus, so intensely bright as to eclipse the sun in its noonday splendor (Acts 26:13). The celestial glory of the resurrection life transcends all possible knowledge but the few glimpses we receive not only testify to its actuality; they indicate the greatness of the inheritance of the saints when the change of nature takes place, and their bodies become like unto the glorious body of the Lord Jesus.

No Death: No Weddings

Another distinguishing feature of the resurrection life is that those who inherit it "neither marry nor are given in marriage" (Luke 20:35). This characteristic has a profound bearing on the negative aspect of the subject. The object of all marriage is the preservation and selection of the species, God having beautifully adapted the marriage relationship to the higher affections of men and women. But this is the indelible stamp of mortal existence. Where there is birth, there is invariably death; where there is no death there is no birth. Those accounted worthy to obtain that resurrection age, says Jesus, are like the angels who die no more; therefore they do not marry. That is to say, there is no birth by natural agency in the immortal state: consequently the idea that men can have immortality by physical generation is an impossibility, according to the order of being God established. Judged by this standard of development, the idea of the immortality of the soul is condemned; and the gospel of the hereafter not only forbids such a conclusion, but it makes good the radical defect which is based on man's need.

Location of the Life Hereafter

With the attributes of corporeality and endlessenss established, another necessity is implied location. Where will the future life be spent, and to what purpose will it be devoted? Here again, we must speak with becoming reserve, for when we postulate an incorruptible nature and an endless existence, we are on the border of the infinite, and we enter a region we are totally unfit adequately to portray. But we are helped immeasurably by the great central thought of association with Christ, for we are assured that where he is there will his glorified saints be also (John 14:3).

As the future life is entered through the gateway of resurrection, and as the resurrection takes place at the second coming of the Lord, those who are alive and remain unto that great event becoming the subjects of instantaneous change from mortality to immortality (1 Cor. 15:51, 52) and are afterwards united to the company of those who have risen (1 Thess. 4:17), it is obvious that our thoughts must circle around this supreme event in history. Where does Christ go after he gathers his redeemed saints around him and makes them all glorious like himself? Not to the realms above. There is no definite promise that saints of God will ever be translated to the heavenly regions. That idea which is so commonly held, goes with the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, and neither is in accord with Scripture teaching. "Whither I go," said Jesus to his disciples, "ye cannot come" (John 13:33). Accordingly the apostolic outlook was always expressed by the idea that Christ was to come for them, that they might be with him. And when Christ comes to the earth, he returns to the scene of his former labors, and there he remains. The time has arrived when his foes shall become his footstool, and his tenure on his Father's throne will be ended (Psa. 110:1). The time has come for the manifestation of his power to the world, for the beginning of the future aspect of his mission, when the nation that crucified him shall look upon him whom they pierced, when every eye shall see him, and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him (Rev. 1:7). At his second advent Christ comes to establish his kingdom upon the earth, to take his rightful place as "King of kings and Lord of lords," and to bear rule over all; and his glorified saints will be his regal associates in the future government of the world (1 Cor. 15:25). The kingdom Christ is to establish will be God's kingdom: and then the time will have come when "the kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven will be given to the people of the saints of the Most High" (Dan. 7:27). Hence the location of the future life will be the earth, thus fulfilling the Master's saying, which is alike a beatitude and a prophecy: Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth" (Matt. 5:5; Psa. 37:29).

God's Oath

But as truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord (Num. 14:21).

When God took the above oath Israel, and Israel alone, were his people (Amos 3:2). God had just threatened to destroy them (vs. 12). From a human standpoint it did not look as though the earth ever would be filled with the glory of the Lord. More than seven hundred years pass by, and we find no indication of the fulfilment of this oath. On the contrary, God's people went into idolatry. Then God says, "They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea" (Isa. 11.9). Another century passes by, and still darkness covers the earth, and gross darkness the people (Isa. 60:2). Then God says, "For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea" (Hab. 2:14). More than two thousand five hundred years have passed and gone since God spoke to Habakkuk, and the promise still unfulfilled. Today darkness covers the earth. Has God forgotten his oath? Will this old earth be, as some teach, destroyed, and never be filled with God's glory? If so, what becomes of God's oath? Paul says, "God cannot lie" (Heb. 6:17, 18). Then if God cannot lie, we must look to the future for the fulfilment of his oath.

Turning again to Isa. 11 we read in the tenth verse the time when the ninth verse will be fulfilled, that a root of Jesse shall stand for an ensign of the people, and that the Gentiles shall seek it, and his rest shall be glorious. In Heb. 4 we find that there is to come a rest to the people of God, the 1000 years during which the root of Jesse, Christ, shall stand up (to rule). This time, then, is the time when God's oath will begin to be fulfilled. It will of course have its complete fulfilment after the little season, when God's dwelling place is with men, and satan's works are destroyed (1 John 3:8), and all things are made new (Rev. 21:1-5). In Heb. 10:7 we learn that Christ is to do God's will, that is fill the earth with a knowledge of God's glory. Jesus taught us to pray for God's will to be done on earth as it is in heaven. When God answers the prayer, the knowledge of the glory of the Lord will fill the earth. May that time soon come, and may we be ready is our prayer.

Remarks

THE MONTH of October was another month of anxious activity. What I mean by "anxious" is that one who has charge of the Lord's work cannot help being anxious about results. True we must sow and God gives the increase, yet we are so concerned about the future welfare of the people we get anxious about how much increase God is going to give each individual effort.

We began the month by talking to the Omaha Sunday School on the 3rd and 7th. This school shows what a little effort will do. It has not only held its own, but has increased in number and interest. The teachers and pupils are doing good work. On the 10th we left for Buckhart, Mo. After riding all night we reached Kansas City at 8 A. M. After breakfast and a little wait, at 10:45 we were again on the way to Mountain Grove, Mo., over the Frisco. After riding till two in the afternoon, first in rain, then in sun shine, we arrived at Fort Scott, Kan., apparently much better but not in spirit, than when we started in the morning. Here we took lunch and I noticed the only substantial thing was the price. After leaving the festal board of Railroad lunch syndicate, having enjoyed their hospitality, based mostly upon a considerable amount of filthy lucre we again started on our way.

In the evening we arrived at Springfield on the very summit of the Ozarks. Here we changed crews which changed the scenery and broke the monotony. At eleven o'clock, and the rain pouring down, we arrived in Mountain Grove. Here we found a stock show in progress and other shows, and not a bed to be had in the town. One kind hearted hotel man gave me a pillow and a quilt, and offered me his spacious waiting room with all its comforts (that I just had a quilt), and after spreading my quilt on a slat settee, I proceeded to stretch my weary self, and tried to put Christian Science to a bitter test. I tried to believe that the downy side of the settee was the real thing, and that my hip bones were imaginary, but when I got up in the morning, the painful truth convinced me they were still a reality. Then we remembered we must look on the bright side of things, and so we had, having chosen the side which had no splinters in it: and it could have been worse. So we just smiled and got ready for the next ordeal. How strange that things can come up so soon to make us forget the trying things in the past.

We boarded a Ford truck that carries the mail from Mountain Grove to Buckhart 25 miles south. This truck had solid tire hind wheels, so the first stone we struck the past with its trials began to fade away: and when we finally arrived at our destination at 11 A. M. and alighted from this much sought after piece of machinery, with hat awry by having come in contact with the top, the past and all its trials were forgotten. Just then a man said, "I guess I am he for whom you are looking." There stood the object of our visit with a welcome beaming upon his smiling countenance. Now an interest and acquaintance had sprung up, with their obligations, leaving no time to reflect on the past. What I have written is not just fun or mere jest, but is the actual experience of those who carry the true gospel to a dying world. But again there are many pleasant things that we would not forget for all the dignity of rank and all the wealth of the world. A year and a half ago, or something like that, we began to arrange for this trip; the object being to baptize Si Herren who had been convined that his former baptism was not valid; having been baptized by the Christian people called Campbellites. After dinner we went to old Brother Herren's, Si's father, where we were to make our home. Here also we found a hearty welcome. Brother Herren is a man well posted, above the average, and when quoting Scripture in his presence, one must be sure he is quoting it right or he will be corrected.

Brother Herren has battled for the truth for nearly half a century has worked with all classes of people. He told me he had gotten through life so far without ever using a profane word. This is a record hard to beat.

When we arrived in Buckhart we found meeting had been given out to begin in the evening. When we arrived at the school house we found it well filled, and the people singing. It is a custom there that as soon as a few gather they begin singing one song after another until time to begin meeting. For several evenings the attendance increased until the house would hardly hold them. Then prejudice and opposition arose, and some quit coming; but the interest of those that kept coming when we had presented the gospel until we believed them sufficiently enlightened, we asked how many had the courage to stand for the truth, and put on Christ by baptism. Si Herren stepped out, and for the moment he stood alone; but before the time came for baptism, his wife decided to go with him. After the morning meeting, we buried these two willing souls into the likeness of Christ's death. They arose, we believe, fully determined to walk in the newness of life. At the earnest solicitation of those present we stayed from evening to evening, expecting every evening to close, when finally a lady who belonged to the Latter Day Saints church, decided she had been much in the dark, and now would step out into the full light of God's truth. When we again met at the water, her husband, a member of the same church, said the scales had fallen from his eyes, and he too wished to be immersed, which we promptly did. After partaking of the emblems, Brothers Fennimore and Herren took us to Buckhart, where we boarded the Ford truck for Mountain Grove, where we took train for Kansas City. Our stay among the brethren there was very pleasant. Before leaving we organized a Berean Class. Their books have been sent, and we now suppose they are in active work. Sister Fennimore was made secretary and Brother Si Herren class leader. Brother Herren Sen., told me he had a son in Kansas City, Kan. that belonged to the church, and begged me to hunt him up. Upon arriving in the city went directly to his place, and found him at leisure that day. There we found as hearty welcome as if were at our own father's home, and found something queer and unknown to us. We found Brother Herren had married a daughter of one of our old time preachers, and his name was Herron. So all the change Sister Herren made in her name was from Herron to Herren.

After dinner Brother Herren and I went to see Sister Calkins. Here we might relate a little interesting history. Thirty years ago, Brother Underwood said in The Restitution, "if any of the preaching brethren can go to Liberty, Mo., and hold a meeting, correspond with Mrs. N. G. Calkins." A few days after reading it, the thought occurred to me, that every one might think some other might answer. Prompted by this thought, I wrote Sister Calkins, expressing my willingness to go. In a few days I was somewhat surprised to receive a letter containing a money order to pay expenses, and saying, "come."

Up to this time I had preached at the different school houses, but had never held a series of meetings. This was to be a new experience, and the beginning of my long evangelistic career. The result of that first effort was 15 baptized and a church set in order. And now here I am after 30 years visiting the Sister whose call I answered, which marked the beginning of my active work. Since then my work has extended to 15 states, and I have baptized over twelve hundred people who now reside from coast to coast, and from Canada to the Gulf: and now I am nearly on the same ground and with some of the people who went through that meeting, and were baptized, Sister C. C. Whitten being one. Some of that first work have made a record; some are sleeping; and how we do hope their record is good enough to assure them a place in God's kingdom.

Sister Calkins had arranged for me to give a few talks in the Advent Christian Church, which we did, beginning Sunday night. The two Herren families above mentioned came, and we had a good turn out. Those two families have some bright young people, and it seemed wrong to close the meeting; but I had previously promised to go to Minneapolis, and could not disappoint them. After giving three talks we bid them adieu, after promising to return soon as possible. On Sunday night I gave a talk on the signs of the times, and showed the necessity of being loyal, and allowing nothing to come between us and our duty to God. The next evening an old lady came to me and said they had a sister who had not been to church for a long time, but was out the evening before, and that day she had been busy getting her neighbors to come, and said she is here with a number of them, and said she would never be careless again. Oh, how easy to neglect the Lord's work and yet not realize it is just as fatal as to deny the faith! God never quit until his work was finished, and neither can we, and expect to be rewarded. We are laborers together with God, not idlers. Jesus said "I have finished the work thou gavest me to do" Then and not till then, did Jesus ask to be glorified. If we have done nothing but merely to believe, what are we to be glorified for? Let us think seriously of this matter, and if we have been careless about going to the meetings, and doing the work we are capable of doing, let us repent, and get busy. Jesus is coming to reward people for what they have done, not what they ought to have done. If we have been unfaithful or idle, how can we expect to have Jesus say, "Well done"? If we have only attended the meetings when the preacher was there, and then indifferently, can we expect to have it said, "Good and faithful servant"? We must be just as faithful to works as to truth.

Upon arriving home I found letters asking me to come to four different points, besides the places already promised, saying some will be ready for baptism. So I must close this report, and hasten to these points We ask the prayers of all, that all may be a part of the work. I wish to say here, I find myself many time handicapped in trying to meet these urgent calls because I have to figure so closely to save all the expense possible. I do not say this to solicit, but to present facts. If any one wishes to contribute to make the work more efficient, the report will show just how your help is expended.

MOTTO: SEARCH THE SCRIPTURES DAILY
SLOGAN: WE STAND FOR UNITY, TRUTH, AND RIGHTEOUSNESS

Dear Bereans:

I have been thinking how nice it would be if we could all meet in one place and get acquainted with each other.

We realize just how nice it would be and how well we would enjoy such a meeting. While this is true, do we as fully realize what it means for us to meet in the kingdom of God? A meeting together now would have a great deal of its joy taken away by the fact that we would have to part again. How vastly greater the joy of meeting when we will not have to part any more.

Another thing that will intensify the joy, is that the meeting will be under more auspicious conditions. We will have passed from a state of imperfection to a condition of perfection. We do not understand by this that every one there will be perfect, but a perfect order of things that will finally grow into perfection when the whole earth will be filled with the glory of God. When we see so much unrest and suffering on every hand, it makes us doubly long for that better order of things. This should make us increase our efforts to be a participant in the joys of that age. It is quite possible that Bereans may and probably will miss that golden age. In view of this fact, we should be like the disciples of old; ask this question, "Lord, is it I?" It would seem in the contemplation of such an event that we would all try so hard that there would be none missing. It seems to me we are expected each day to increase our knowledge of the Scriptures and make a little growth in our spiritual life. We might be able through The Restitution to suggest some things from time to time that would help us in this line. For instance, I might suggest that we set apart a certain day for meditation and prayer. Then some one else might suggest something else that would be profitable. We think the finest idea so far was the appointment of a Social Correspondent. The good letters we receive from Sister Moore are so helpful that we hope that she may be spared for this good work. Let us all remember her and Sister Bray, who is also cheering the hearts of the isolated, in our prayers, as well as all others who are trying so hard to make the order a success; but do not let us forget that they cannot do this alone. Each one has to do his part; therefore let us all work and not lag, and the success of our order will be a foregone conclusion.

I would be pleased to hear from any of the Bereans in Nebraska or elsewhere.

Your sister Berean,

Marie Roche,

Remember the Helping Fund

Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble. In the day of evil, margin (Psa. 41:1).

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

You can fool some of the people all the time, and all the people some of the time, but you cannot fool all the people all the time.

Did you ever think of the many sufferings that Jesus endured that we might enjoy the "peace that passeth knowledge"?

No good ever comes of leisure idly spent; and heaven ne'er helps the man who will not work.

The idea of "salvation" is so inextricably interwoven in common speech with rescue from peril, that confusion easily attaches to the words of Paul in Phil. 2:12,13. Let our reader remember when he reads this Scripture again that the apostle is avowedly addressing "the saints in Christ Jesus" in Philippi, who have already received a "token of salvation, and that of God" (Phil. 1:28). Paul is not, then, talking of obtaining salvation in the first instance, but the "working out" of salvation already received to its intended completeness. For an exposition of this difficult and much abused text the reader is referred to an editorial in this number under the caption "Working Out Salvation."

The Glenville Christian Church says in its bulletin: "This Church offers a hearty welcome to every stranger who may cross its portals. It invites every earnest soul to accept the privilege of prayer and praise and the spiritual good ever to be found in its worship. It invites to its membership all who believe that Jesus Christ is the divine Son of God." The point that is very striking to us is the condition of membership offered: "All who believe that Jesus Christ is the divine Son of God." Why limit belief to the Sonship of Christ? "The things concerning the kingdom of God" (Acts 8:12) are all left out of this creed! Why? They are left out because they are not believed. "The gospel of the kingdom" (Mark 1:14) is a homeless wanderer among the churches.

The Fellow Helpers' Society of the Church of God in Cleveland met at the home of Brother and Sister Bullock on Friday evening, Dec. 5. Eleven members were present and one visitor. On account of the small attendance not many reports were made, but a very interesting Bible lesson was enjoyed by all, the subject being Rom. 6:23, "For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Brother Headley, who has not been a member of the church very long, led the meeting, it being his first attempt at leadership. He was congratulated on the very interesting manner in which he handled the lesson. After the meeting was over, donations to the amount of $2.00 were collected. The Fellow Helpers will be very glad to have visitors attend any of their meetings. --Bessie Nichols, Secretary.

A Baptist Funeral

Last week we reported the death of Rev. Mr. Hancock, a friend of ours who, although persuaded of the truth, died in procrastination. His funeral was preached by Mr. Lemon, a Baptist minister. He called upon four or five other Baptist preachers who were present to give short talks. One spoke on "A Minister's Life"; another on "Death"; another on "Heaven"; and so on. The tendency of all they said was to the effect that the current of life flowed on forever without interruption. Mr. Hancock was much better off dead than alive. The preacher who spoke on "heaven" gave fine recitations of poetry, and became so enthused and excited over the performance that he so far forgot himself as to say he was glad Mr. Hancock was dead! Paul fought with beasts at Ephesus, and said "what advantage it me, if the dead rise not?" He says again, that concerning the resurrection of the dead he was called in question. But these Baptist preachers substituted immortal soulism for the resurrection, and so dispensed with the necessity of it entirely. No danger of them ever being "called in question" about the resurrection! We listened attentively to all the sermonettes at this funeral, and so did Sister Austin Smith, but neither of us heard them use the word "resurrection" once! The saddest part of all was that all this orthodox poison was preached about Mr. Hancock, a man who did not believe a word of it. But there! Mr. Hancock was a Baptist, and he died a Baptist, and therefore had a Baptist funeral. Here is a lesson worth laying to heart. Believing the truth, if we do not obey it, cannot benefit us, either in this world on in the world to come.

Working Out Salvation

I have heard you preach several times, and have been startled more than once by hearing you say salvation was of faith, and not of works. If so, what meaneth the apostle in Phil 2:12, 13?

Editorial Comments

NOTHING CAN be more fundamental to Paul's conception of salvation than his teaching as to its relation to "works." He is persistently insistent that this relation is that of cause, rather than of effect. The "not out of works—but unto good works" of Eph. 2:9,10, sounds the keynote of his whole teaching. In "good works," according to Paul, "salvation" finds its realization. The essence of salvation is holiness of heart or "sanctification of the spirit." In salvation "good works" find their root: solely upon the ground of the saving work of God are men exhorted to good works. The New Testament is full of particular instances of appeals to conduct based on the inception and working in us of the saving activity and influence of God. Study as examples 1 Thess. 2:12; 2 Thess.2:12-15; Rom. 6:2; 2 Cor. 5:14; Col. 1:10; Phil. 1:21; 2:12, 13; 2 Tim. 2:19. Probably in Phil. 2:12, 13 we have the most precise expressions of this appeal. The saint is told to "work out his own salvation" just because God is the worker. If there is an antinomy involved in this collocation of duty and motive, it is here surely brought to its sharpest point.

All perplexity, however, is dissipated by recalling the fact that the exhortation in Phil. 2:12, 13 is addresses to saints, not sinners: it is to "the saints in Christ Jesus" that Paul is speaking (Phil. 1:1). Then the exhortation has reference, not to sinners and their entrance into the Christian life, but to saints and their prosecution to its consummation of the spiritual life already entered into. The verb used indicates this fact. The apostle does not simply say, "work your salvation," but "work out your salvation"— employing a compound verb, which throws emphasis on the end, meaning, "bring your salvation to its completion." What the compound verb implies, the context says. The passage under consideration, Phil. 2:12, 13, concludes a paragraph which had begun with the appeal, "Only let your manner of life be worthy of the gospel of Christ" (Phil. 2:27); and it closes it by a reversion to the same fundamental thought. The Philipians were already in the fellowship of the gospel: Paul's desire for them was a complete realization in life of all the gospel meant. They had entered upon the race; let them run it to the goal. At the beginning of the letter the apostle had expressed his confidence that, as God had begun a good work in them, he would perfect it until the day of Christ (Phil. 1:6). He now exhorts them to strive to attain the same high end: "Work out your own salvation." Work it out completely, advance it to its acomplishment, bring it to its pinnacle. "Work out" what God "works in you." Make real what God makes possible; complete in fact externally what God has begun in vital potency internally. This interpretation preserves also the apostolic conception of the harmonious and complementary relation of divine and human agency in the progress of salvation. We are to work out our salvation, not independent of, much less in spite of, the fact the "God worketh in us"; it is not "although," but "for" (or "because").

In the phrase "with fear and trembling" we have to do, not with an exhortation to doubt and terror, but as Professor Warfield says, "with a set formula, which in the apostle's mind and lips finds its reference to the attitude of dependence, reverence, and obedience befitting an inferior, and is therefore especially related with the ideas of submissiveness and subjection." It owes its place in the passage under discussion obviously to its correlation with the immediately precedent phrase, "As ye have always obeyed" (vs. 12), which itself goes back to the obedience of Christ's great example (vs. 8). What the apostle's meaning is may be clearly indicated in the following

Paraphrase

As ye have always hitherto been submissive, so let it be in the same submissiveness of spirit that ye bring your salvation to its completion, seeing that, as ye know, the energizer who works in you both the willing and the doing is God, in pursuance of his good pleasure.

111. THE SUBJECTS OF THE KINGDOM SCRIPTURALLY DEFINED

In mercy God remembers justice. Doubtless the reader now sees with a clear vision that the theory which burns up the globe, depopulates the earth, and translates the saints to heaven when Christ comes is an error which utterly subverts the word of God, since it declares that "the righteous shall never be removed: but the wicked shall not inhabit the earth" (Prov. 10:30). "The righteous shall be recompensed in the earth" (Prov. 11.31). World-burning destroys entirely the kingdom of God, for it leaves no subjects to be governed by it. While these allegations are serious and true, to maintain equilibrium we must also recognize, on the other hand, that the outflowings of God's mercy are limited like the shafts of his justice. God is just as well as merciful (Rom. 3:26). At the expense of his justice Russellism proposes to raise all men from the dead, and then give them a "chance" for eternal life as subjects in the kingdom of God. But the Savior has closed the door in the face of Russellism by these words: "All that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation" (John 5:28). The subterfuge often employed by "fair chance" advocates, that God will be propitious to those who suffer "damnation," amounts to a parody upon the words of our Lord. To change krisis, "damnation," to a trial for for life, is precluded by a contrast in the description of those who are raised: Those having "done evil" versus "they that have done good." Those that have "done good" include all the saints; those that have "done evil" embrace all the wicked- Balaam, Judas, etc. What "damnation" means for one that has "done evil," it means for all. Therefore if damnation means a chance or trial, Judas and all other evil doers are raised from the dead to be given a "chance"—none are punished with condemnation! Again, "the resurrection of damnation" stands opposed to "the resurrection of life." What is the opposite of "life"? Not a trial, not a chance; but death! The Savior says only two classes are raised from the dead—"they that have done good," and "they that have done evil"—and he says that "all" who are raised get one of two things, corresponding with what they have "done" in a previous life: they either procure "life" because they have "done good," or they receive "damnation" (death) because they have "done evil." Destiny at the resurrection depends upon what we do in our lifetime; what we sow now we shall reap then. There are only two classes and two destinies spoken of in the Scriptures in connection with the resurrection. Those who "have done evil" have sown to "the flesh" in Pauline phraseology; those who "have done good" have sown to "the spirit" according to the same authority; the "damnation" of which Christ speaks Paul calls "corruption"; and "the life" which our Lord mentions is "life everlasting" in Paul's interpretation (Gal. 6:7,8). The opposing destinies of these two classes are called "everlasting life" and "shame and everlasting contempt" by the prophet Daniel (Dan. 12:2). These contrasts in the character and destiny of those who are raised from the dead leave not an atom of room, not a space thin as a hair line, for a third class who are said by Larger Hope apologists to emerge from the grave to undergo curative discipline during the millennium. The agricultural law of "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap" (Gal. 6:7), is entirely set aside by these errorists who teach that if we sow nothing we shall reap something! Something is reproduced from nothing! Constitutional passivity blesses all its helpless subjects with a resurrection which is followed by alluring and saving chances and opportunities! The Scriptures, on the contrary, are clear as a trumpet blast that there is no third class raised from the dead who have done neither good nor evil, who have sown neither to the flesh nor spirit; and whose destiny is neither "life" nor "damnation." No one is given a "chance" to be saved after being raised from the dead. The subjects of the kingdom are taken out of the living people at the coming of Christ. They are selected from the "neutrals" of the time. The word "remnant" means "few of many" (Jer. 42:2), and is often applied to the subjects of Christ's reign. Every time the Bible uses this word world-burners and Russellites are both rebuked. The first say there is not a man on the earth during the reign of Christ. There can be no "remnant" of nations where there are no nations. The second say there are unnumbered hordes of the vile and ignorant raised from the dead and put on probation during the millennium. A "remnant" does not mean a horde. Neither have any use for the word "remnant." The reader will therefore perceive in the propositions hereto appended, and which are amplified and sustained by the word of God, a complete refutation of both the world-burning and "fair chance" theories—two dogmas which have been invented by the flesh and made popular by the traditions of men.

"The left of the nations" (Zech. 14:16).

"I will leave but the sixth part of thee" (Ezek. 39:2).

"The remnant of his people, which shall be left" (Isa. 11:16).

"I will also leave in the midst of thee an afflicted and poor people" (Zeph. 3:12).

"With fury will I rule over you: . . . . I will purge out the rebels, and them that transgress against me" (Ezek. 20:33,38).

"I will make her that halted a remnant, and her that was cast far off a strong nation: and the Lord shall reign over them" (Micah 1:7).

"The Son of Man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity: and shall cast them into a furnace of fire" (Matt. 13:41,42).

(b) These "Remnant" Subjects will be Composed Almost Exclusively of Infants and Children

"The streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing . . . . " (Zech. 8:5).

"A little child shall lead them. . . . . . And a sucking child shall play . . . . . " (Isa. 11:6,8).

"And the children crying in the temple, and saying, Hosanna to the son of David" (Matt. 21:15,16).

"Lo, children are an heritage of the Lord, and the fruit of the womb is his reward" (Psa. 127:3).

"The children of thy servants shall continue, and their seed shall be established forever before thee" (Psa. 102:28).

"Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God" (Luke 18:16)

"This shall be written for the generation to come, and the people which shall be created shall praise the Lord" (Psa. 102:18).

"Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings hast thou ordained strength because of thine enemies, that thou mightest still the enemy and the avenger" (Psa. 8:2).

"Whom shall he teach knowledge? and whom shall he make to understand doctrine? them that are weaned from the milk, and drawn from the breasts" (Isa. 28:9)

"A seed shall serve him; it shall be counted to the Lord for a generation. They shall come, and shall declare his righteousness unto a people that shall be born, that the Lord hath done this" (Psa. 22:30,31).

"I will turn mine hand upon the little ones . . . . In all the land two parts therein shall be cut off and die; but the third shall be left therein. And I will bring the third part through the fire" (Zech. 13:7,8,9).

"Your little ones which you said should be a prey, and your children, which in that day had no knowledge between good and evil, they shall go in thither, and unto them will I give it, and they shall possess it" (Deut. 1:39).

A Poem Wanted

Some years ago a poem entitled "The Church Walking with the World" was published in The Restitution. The writer has searched diligently but failed to find it. If any one has it we will be very grateful if they will send it to Brother Huggins for republication.

GOLDEN TEXT: Romans 1:16

IN COMMON THINGS

Seek not afar for beauty, Lo! it glows
In dew-wet grasses all about thy feet;
In birds, in sunshine, childish faces sweet;
In stars and mountain summits topped with snows.

Go not abroad for happiness. For, see!
It is a flower that blossoms by the door;
Bring love and justice home; and then no more
Thou'lt wonder in what dwelling Joy may be.

Dream not of noble service elsewhere wrought,
The simple duty that awaits thy hand
Is God's voice uttering a divine command:
Life's common deeds built all that saints have thought.

In wonder workings of some bush aflame
Men look for God, and fancy him concealed.
But in earth's common things he stands revealed
While grass and flowers spell out his name.

The Fear of the Lord

"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom" (Psa. 119:10).

The fear of the Lord is the beginning, but it is not a beginning which we can ever leave behind as a stake can be discarded by a sapling when it has grown stronger and more matured. This reverence is not a beginning in the sense of being a rudiment. It is a beginning which is carried forward through all succeeding stages, and even into ultimate issues. It is like the alphabet which, while forming the beginning of literature, yet enters vitally into the loftiest creations of a Shakespeare or a Milton. Without the alphabet there can be no literature; without reverence there can be no religion.

It is in reverence that we must begin our quest of divine wisdom.

When the veil is lifted in Isaiah's vision, the seraphim who stand before us are revealed in very significant endowment. Each of them has six wings: "with twain he covered his face, and with twain he covered his feet, and with twain he did fly." Four wings for reverence and two for practical service. We need have no uncertainty about our power of motion if we have the requisite mood. Perhaps the reason why our two wings are so often ineffective may be found in the absence of the four. We are feverishly ready for flight, but we are not so ready to bow before the Lord and veil the face in reverent homage and communion. And may not it be that the two wings so frequently and so easily because they have not the restful support of the four wings, hiding the soul in the secret fellowship of God? We so often fail in service because we have forgotten or ignored the creative beginning of things, which is the fear of God.

It is the mood of reverence which gives the soul its initial posture for discovering the things of God. In the quest of divine secrets it is infinitely more necessary to have the reverent spirit than to have a learned mind. There is all the difference in the world between mere cleverness and spiritual discernment. One is just worldly sharpness; the other is heavenly vision. "I thank thee that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent and hast revealed them unto babes."

In matters of spiritual understanding the first requisite is a certain kind of mood rather than a certain quality of intellect. We enter the secret place not by logic but by disposition. Reverence has its own senses, its own discernment: it has intuitions which give the most assured experiences. I am therefore not surprised to read the sequence of the Psalmist's word, and to find that "a good understanding" follows in the wake of "the fear of God." The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will show them his covenant.

Aunt Bess

We nearly made a mistake, and had we, we feel sure you hardly would have forgiven us. We were going to say "Aunt Bess had visited us," and that is as impossible as it is absurd. Aunt Bess does not visit; she lives here; she is a part of the page. She is a fixture. She is at home, and she is inviting you to make your home with her. You are not going to allow her pleadings to be in vain, are you? Remember that Aunt Bess is not doing this for her own glory, but to benefit you and to the glory of God and the praise of Jesus our Savior. She wants you to feel the glow that she has experienced in "working together with God." Now please carefully listen while Aunt Bess talks; make up your mind to do the right thing, and then do it.

Listen: I think I hear someone knocking. Yes, there it is again!

Rap-A-Tap-Tap!

"may I come in? Hello, young people; here I am again. How cosy our 'corner' looks with you all gathered near. May I sit down here beside little Mary Lee? Do you know, dear, that just as soon as The Restitution arrives each week, I open it up at 'our page' the first thing, to see if you have sent in your name yet. I hope I will see it very soon. Of course I know it is some time after an article is sent before it can be published, still I just cannot help looking for it.

"Now, may I tell you about another 'Mary' that I used to write to? She and I are about the same age, and I feel sure she is present here among us now. But when we wrote to each other many years ago, we were about the age of Mary Lee, here. She lives in Monroeville, Ohio. I often wonder if she has forgotten her unseen friend of long ago.

"My name was at that time Bessie Thomas. Her name was Mary Smith. Now I will let you know why I am telling you of her. Her parents, Brother and Sister Smith, are members of the Church of God and I hope that my young friend of the past is also one of us. She used to write me such interesting letters, and we need her support now. I am speaking of her now in hopes that she will be among us today. If you are here, Mary Smith, will you help us in our glorious work? Send in your name as a special contributor to the 'Young People's Page.' You will receive your reward when Jesus comes. That will be soon, I hope.

"But until he does come, let me say that it helps us beginners just wonderful to have our Editor say such nice things about our very first article. Just send in your names and see if I am right. There is just one more thing I wish to say before I go. I want all of you young people to adopt me. Please don't laugh; I mean it. I can hear little Mary say, 'why how can we adopt you?' It is very easy. Just listen, and I will tell you: Each time I come among you for a little visit, instead of saying, 'I see that Bessie Walker has written another article,' I want you to say, 'Oh, here is Aunt Bess again!' Do you not think that sounds as if I belonged to you really and truly? I know it makes me feel as if I did anyway. So that is the reason I have proposed this plan. I want you all to love me as I love you, and I thought it would be much harder to learn to love Bessie Walker than it would be to love

Aunt Bess.

Youth is the best season for improvement.

1919—1920

We now have come to the close of another year. Are you satisfied with the way the time has been spent? How many things would be done differently had you the opportunity of again doing them? Perhaps the difference in time between the first day of this year and December 31st has not been enough to make you see the real importance of life—of living you may not, as yet, have reached that age when one realizes an hour that is past is gone forever, never more to return. Some of us never realize it. No matter what age we attain. Still the passing years should bring wisdom. Paul recognizes this thought when he says: "When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things."

Whether or not we are old enough to realize the fact, nevertheless it is a fact that during the year just past we have changed. But how have we changed? Have we changed for the better or for the worse? Have we made an honest endeavor to better do the will of God? Have we striven to walk in the footsteps of our Redeemer? Or have we been ashamed of God and of his Christ? Do you remember what Jesus said regarding those who were or are, or might be ashamed of him? Let us read it: "Whosoever shall be ashamed of me or of my words, of him shall the Son of Man be ashamed, when he shall come in his own glory." And remember this: we now expect to see Jesus "come in his own glory" very shortly. With the close of the year 1919 we merely have come to an imaginary division of time; but when Jesus comes, the division will be a stern reality, for then the day of grace will end. We no longer will have an opportunity to accept the invitation to walk with him, and talk with him and have him live with us. "Beloved, now is the accepted time: now is the day of salvation." When Jesus comes it then will be too late, for "the door will be shut."

But let us not despair. Let us show the world that we are wiser for living: let us prove that today we have a greater knowledge than we possessed yesterday, and that tomorrow our knowledge will be even greater than it is today; and let us turn our knowledge into faith and hope. Knowledge of itself is barren, but if our knowledge of the plan and purposes of God leads to faith in God and in his Christ, also to a hope of those plans and purposes soon being fulfilled, and that faith and hope is strong enough to compel us to work for and with the Master, then have we a wisdom beyond the value of worlds, a wisdom that this world neither will comprehend nor appreciate, but that will be acknowledged by our Lord the Christ when he comes to make up his jewels.

The passing of the old year simply brings the beginning of the new. Let us appropriate this new year as our very own. In this "New Year" let us turn our past mistakes into a profit by using them as an example. Let the things that we failed to do for God in the old year be accomplished in the new. Let the things that we did against the cause of God and his Christ in the old year be blotted out through our zeal in working for God in the new year showing true wisdom in accepting Jesus as our wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption, glorying only in the Lord.

The facts that Paul states in Hebrews seven, in reference to two clases of high priests, those having infirmity, and those not having infirmity; he also states in Hebrews 5:1-4, the same facts in reference to the Aaronic priesthood; yet by a singular process of reasoning and manipulating of grammar, what Paul says in reference to the Aaronic priests has been taken to refer to Christ. Where do the unlettered poor of this world, of whom the apostle James speaks, find themselves, when the leaders of the long lost but found truth in these latter days take the third verse of Heb. 5, and apply it to Christ? This is the reading of verse three, "And by reason thereof is bound, as for the people, so also for himself, to offer for sins. Every word in Heb. 5:15 (four verses), apply to the high priests under the law, who had sins; and not until the fifth verse is there anything said about Christ. The priests under the law could sympathize with the ignorant and erring because they were both tempted and yielded to temptation. But how was it with Christ? Christ too could sympathize because he was touched with the feeling of our infirmities (but those infirmities were not sins). "One that hath been in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin" (Heb. 4: 15). And here again we repeat, if no sin, no offering for himself, only an offering for those who have sins; but, says your sub-conscious mind, "It was for Christ's 'sin in the flesh.' "The Spirit of prophecy, which is the testimony of Jesus," does not say so. It is what your leaders have taught you; you have alowed those leaders to do your thinking. With emphasis we repeat that when Christ offered himself on the cross he did not do so as a high priest, but as a lamb without blemish; and that when he commenced to make offerings, he was in heaven and not on earth. "For every High Priest is appointed to offer both gifts and sacrifices; wherefore it is necessary that this High Priest also have somewhat to offer. Now if he were on earth, he would not be a priest at all seeing there are those who offer gifts according to the law" (Heb. 8:3, 4). The Mosaic law continued in force up to the very hour in which Christ expired on the cross. He said himself, that he came to fulfill, not to destroy. "And took it out of the way, nailing it to the cross" (Col. 2:14).

According to the testimony, there is no possible way for Christ to have been a priest before his death on the cross. God's arrangements are such that they do not conflict, but fit nicely into each other. "For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law; for he of whom these things are spoken pertaineth to another tribe, of whom no man gave attendance at the altar. For it is evident that our Lord sprang out of Judah; of which tribe Moses spake nothing conceming priesthood" (Heb. 7:12-14).

The New Year

Another year lies before us,
  Like a book with its pages unturned;
Opportunities rich and glorious
  Are ours to accept or be spurned.
O what if that golden morning,
  That morn without rift or cloud,
Should this year on our vision come dawning:
  Would the joy and peace be ours?

Would our Savior find us ready,
  With the wedding garment on,
Watching, praying, hoping,
  For our King, God's only Son?
O Father, in mercy we pray thee
  Strengthen us in thy love,
That we all may meet him in gladness,
  When he comes from the realms above.

Forbid, O gracious Father,
  That any should be left out;
May we all see the beams of the Son rise,
  And greet him with joy and a shout.
Lord, hasten that glad, golden morning,
  Thy people have waited so long,
Send Jesus our blessed Redeemer,
  Our King, our crucified one.

The Hebrew Letter

NO. ONE

THE AUTHORSHIP of this letter has been in dispute by ancient and modern writers. McKnight in his remarks on this letter gleans from the writings of men of the early centuries, and gives proofs sustaining his position that the apostle Paul was the author. His proofs seem so conclusive that we are constrained to accept them. A number of passages from the Scriptures are cited as peculiar to Paul. The purpose of the author was to identify the Christ, the son of Mary, as the Messiah of the ancient Scriptures. When Paul returned to Damascus from Arabia he preached that the Christ is the Son of God. He confounded the Jews, proving that this is very or truly the Christ (Acts 9:20, 22).

The contents of the letter and the presentation of the subjects suggests that the writer must have been thoroughly instructed in the covenant made with the fathers and the purpose of the law of Moses. In his discussion of the subjects he presents the priesthood in a manner different from all other writers of Old or New Testaments. From the pen of the author this becomes a vital and living subject. It separates the Hebrew Christian's works from the law of Moses which are called "works causing death." In the ninth chapter the writer states that the law made none perfect but the blood of Christ would purge them from the "works causing death." This could be accomplished through the new order of the Melchisedec priesthood. The vitalizing principle in this letter is that Jesus the Christ is the Messiah. This doctrine is brought to view in John 1:41 where Andrew declared to Simon Peter that he had found the Messiah, which is, being interpreted, the Christ (margin, the anointed).

With the above remarks as preliminary we will continue our remarks by furnishing what we think to be a correct analysis of the subjects found in each chapter. The author is careful in giving the matter in logical order. The letter is addressed to Hebrew Christians. This is the only letter wholly given to those who were of Jewish lineage. The author of this letter announces that God in sundry times and divers manners spake unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these days spoken unto us by his Son. In view of this statement he urges them to give the more earnest heed to the things spoken and not let them slip (leak out). He called their attention to the fact that "the words spoken by the angels were steadfast and every transgression and disobedience received a just retribution." He follows this with the announcement that they could not escape if they neglected so great a salvation, which at first was spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them who heard him, God also bearing witness both with signs and wonders and with divers miracles and gifts of the Holy Spirit according to his will (chapter 2:1-5).

The apostle refers to an announcement made to Moses concerning Israel when he (God) said, "Behold I send an angel before thee, to keep thee in the way, and to bring thee into the place which I have prepared. Beware of him and obey his voice, provoke him not; for he will not pardon your transgression: for my name is in him" (Exo. 23:20, 21). For their transgressions God punished them with a just retribution. Note please that not one of the vast number who left Egypt above twenty years and upward ever reached the promised land. Their carcases fell in the wilderness (Num. 14:28, 29). The name of Jehovah is in Jesus the Christ, which places us under the same punishment if we disobey him or neglect to retain the gospel spoken by the Lord.

In the first three chapters the apostle produces proofs that the Messah of the prophets is Jesus the Christ. The Jews believed in the Messiah but rejected the son of Mary or the Christ. Paul announces to the Corinthian church that Jesus the Christ was a stumbling block to the Jews and unto the Greeks foolishness. But he preached Christ to the Jews and Greeks the power of God and the wisdom of God.

As an incentive to keep the way he alludes to the inheritance promised to Jesus the Christ. He was made better than the angels. He had through this inheritance received a more excellent name than they. It is stated that God had not said at any time to one of his angels, "Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee." He also saith unto his Son, "Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever. A sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom." These were prophetic utterances and applied to Jesus the Christ to prove his identity with the child born and the Son given (Isa. 9:6).

In returning to chapter 2:5 we are informed that this dispensation or world was not put in subjection to the angels, but unto his Son. The apostle quotes from the Scriptures. "Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet." These conditions did not exist at that time, but would be accomplished by Jesus the Christ and his associate rulers. The apostle then proves from the prophetic word the humility of Jesus the Christ. This was the great stumbling block to the Jews. They could not understand how one whom they looked upon as the son of Joseph and Mary could be so exalted as to become their King. When Jesus during his ministry, spoke of his death they replied, "We know that thou art not our Messiah, for we know he abideth forever," quoting Psalm 45:6 as proof. They accepted the Scriptures referring to the Messiah, and believed that he would rule the world in righteousness. Paul then leads them to see the necessity of accepting the Scriptures that refers to his death. As the Son of God and Mary he proves that the Christ inherited the mother's sin nature which would naturally bring him under the law of death. He must obtain eternal redemption before Jehovah could exalt him to his own right hand. No statement could be plainer than, "Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is the devil." He also states, "Wherefore in all things it behooved him to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people, for in that he himself hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted." This is preaching Christ as the power of God and the wisdom of God. Paul closes his argument by comparing Jesus the Christ and Moses. He pronounced them both faithful in his house: one as a servant and the other as a Son. The house that Moses built was left unto them desolate; the house built by Christ abideth forever. We are of this house if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope unto the end.

Certainties
Of the Life to Come

By David Young.

THIS INDICATES and prepares us for another certainty. The object of the new life and the purpose to which its powers will be devoted. "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection, on such the second death hath no power: but they shall be priests of God and if Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years" (Rev. 20:6). "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory, and blessing. For thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood; and hath made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth" (Rev. 5:9-12). "He that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations; and he shall rule them with a rod of iron (firmness), even as I received of my Father" (Rev. 2:26, 27).

The future life is therefore no meaningless existence. God does not perfect and prepare the new instruments of his grace without providing an enlarged sphere of usefulness. The Scriptures quoted reveal a vista of wondrous possibility. Regal glory, imperial dominion, universal sovereignty, an associate kingship with the Lord of glory: these are some of the distinguishing attributes of the inheritance of the saints in light. And they are made sure by the invioable promise of the Lord himself. The kingdom age as the final dispensation in God's great redemptive plan, and the kingdom itself will be the effective instrument of blessing to all mankind. In that work, than which there is none greater, it will be the privilege of the saints of God to share. Though no longer on the mortal plane of existence, they will not be divorced from the throbbing life of the world. They will be the message bearers of the King, the teachers of the new order of society, by whom the nations will be not only governed in equity and justice, but taught the ways of truth and righteousness. They are now being prepared for their exalted station by the discipline of life through the obedience of faith, and it will be their privilege to lead the nations of the future along the same narrow path of submission to God's will, until they too reach the same plane of being whereon is fulness of blessing. These features of character, duration, location, and purpose proclaim the life to come, in its revealed reality, as certainties.

Little more is needed to give assurance to faith, and little more could be desired to give substance to hope. Short of actual vision a clear apprehension, with our limited comprehension, there could hardly be. Yet we feel that we have only touched the fringe of the subject, barely lifted the edge of the curtain. The life to come will be a tearless life, a glorious life, a life with the noblest and most exalted purpose, a life enriched by companionship with the excellent of the earth, the saints of every age, the glorified associates of the risen Lord. Behind, and expressed by these qualities lie tremendous possibilities, such as a sanctified imagination can only dimly conceive. But we thank God for their reality and certainty, and for the clearness of the gospel of the hereafter which reveals them.

It is good to know that our present life is only a stepping stone to something higher and better; it is good to know that life's little day will eventually find its sequel in the fulness of endless years. It is good to know that the kingdom of God is coming, and with a life of unexampled honor and usefulness for all who are privileged to inherit it. But the best of all is to know and know it by the joy of actual experience, that association with Christ (now) will mean an unbroken companionship in the ages to come, being partakers of his nature (Eph. 1:18-20), his glory and the fulness of his immortal life. "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne" (Rev. 3:21).

Dear ones, for whom Christ gave his life, are not these exalted positions here outlined, enough to set our affections, and keep them fixed on the things coming from above, where Christ now sitteth, and to say with Paul, "I count all things but dross that I may win Christ and experience the power of his resurrection." "Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God" (2 Cor. 7:1). "We cannot serve two masters, for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and Mammon." Jesus said so in his sermon on the Mount (Matt. 6:24). Peter in his second epistle, speaking to all these who have obtained like precious faith with us, goes on to state that it is through the righteousness of God and our Savior Jesus Christ. Think of the source through which we were admitted into his grace wherein we now stand, and of the cost of our admission—the sacrifice of a Lamb without spot, through whom grace and peace is multiplied to us. How Peter? Why through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus our Lord, according as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness. Again Peter repeats that it is through the knowledge of him that called us. Yes dear ones, this is the secret. A getting to know God and Jesus Christ whom God has sent. This is the tie that binds us together and to him, along with those great and precious promises, as an inducement, the belief and aceptance of which will entitle us to become partakers of the divine nature, and escape the corrupting influences the world offers.

Sin when it is finished bringeth forth death

We cannot impress too strongly upon ourselves and each other the necessity of complete separation from everything that will defile or soil the garment we put on in baptism. The allurements of today surpass those of Sodom and the pre-Noahic age.

And the Life Giver is at Hand

What can be earth's best blessings
For a little lonely hour?
Should we miss those heavenly ages
And the resurrection, power

Behold the Bridegroom Cometh

The price of the oil to keep our lamps full and our lights burning is still the same price. Some whose lights had gone out for lack of oil found the entrance to the marriage feast had been closed. May this not be you, dear reader.

Chas. Moore.

Remorse

And now the Lord's ain trumpet loud
Till a' the hills are rarin'
And echoes back return the shout
Black Russell is no sparin'
His piercing words like Highland swords
Divide the joints and marrow,
His talk o' hell where devils dwell
Our very souls doth harrow,
We fright that day.

A vast unbottomed boundless pit
Filled fou o' lowing brimstone,
Whose raging flame and scorching heat
Wad melt the hardest whinstane.
The half asleep start up we fear
And think they hear it roaring,
When presently it does appear
'Twas but some neighbor snorin'.
Asleep that day.

(Burns' "Holy Fair").

In the above quotation from Scotland's famous bard we have a sketch from life of the "religious" instruction in his time and, to some extent, the same conditions and doctrines obtain among the illiterate and misinformed today after a century and a half of exposure and contempt of the best writers and poets of Britain and America. At negro camp meetings and uproarous midnight conventions of "Holy Rollers," where the police have to be called in so that the nighbors get some sleep, the old "whip" is still in use to keep the wretches in order; but in order to win over the more cultured classes of society to the support of the ancient heathen dogma of eternal torment, a less crude and vulgarly atrocious mode of everlasting punishment has been invented in the form of "exquisite pangs of remorse.' Moreover, the "sulphur and hot lead," besides being repulsive to ordinary humanity, has also the distinct disadvantage that "spirits" being immortal beings could not be much affected by burning materials or degrees of temperature. This point of view, combined with doctrine of universal and compulsory immortality established as an incontrovertible proposition, the rest of the argument follows that the incorrigible bad must necessarily be sad. But it is only in the regions of fertile imagination where eloquence indulges in fantastic dreams to delight ill-informed audiences that such conditions exist. As a matter of fact the bad fellows often have the best times while living, and "no bands in death." as the Psalmist remarks, while decent people have just as often a hard time as well as a tender conscience; and a "step aside" is apt to keep the good fellow awake at night while his tough neighbor snores in delightful oblivion.

I even heard the case of the Kaiser cited as an illustration of "infinite remorse," whereas all the information I have gleaned on the subject of the Kaiser is that he is still busy talking of how he might, could, or should have been successful in his late enterprise of loot and murder; and so engrossed is he in the subject that he does all the conversation at the meal table and no one gets a "word in edgeways." Remorse! All one has to do is to read Ludendorff's account of his conduct of the war—now being published in some of our American papers—and whether you credit his story or not, you can see that anything like remorse or sorrow for the ruin he wrought never entered his mind at all—not at all. And so it has always been. It seems to me that the main distinction between the righteous and the wicked lies in the difference of the quality of their repentance. When Cain killed Abel we do not read of any remorse. When the exposure came the first thing he though of was his own self. "Whoever findeth me will slay me," expresses the full depth of the sorrow of all such people.

All we humans are sinners more or less, and some of us even criminal sinners; but some of us—the best of us have remorse and repent and pull out and try to do better; and then some of us are only just sorry that we lost out, like Ludendorff and the Kaiser. Peter was a great offender against his Lord as well as Judas, but Peter had remorse and repented "and wept bitterly." Judas saw his mistake and disgrace and repented without the weeping, but "set his jaw" and put an end to it.

So that the great moral divide of humanity is between those that own up, and those that stick it out; between those that pull out and those that worm through whether or no. David was a pull outer and wept before his offended God; but Saul was the stick-it-outer, and rather would consult the witch and fell on his sword.

People hell with a mob of such tough and riotous immortals, and we would have as much row as we had in Flanders and Picardy of late, and remorse would not worry them. The only question of interest would be as to who would be the masters. They would be altogether too busy "prosecuting the war industry" to be very sad; and it would be a continuous perfomance.

But that question is all settled—settled for good—"for the wages of sin is death."

Remarks

WE OPENED the November work by going to Minneapolis by request to baptize a niece there, Miss Birdie Gearhart. Byrdie is a girl of high ideals, teaches music in the schools, and liked by all who come in contact with her. She is quite a noted singer, and we hope to hear her voice in the kingdom, when we sing the new song (Rev. 5:9, 10). We had hardly entered the house of her sister, where she stays until questions began to pour in, and we did all of our instructing privately, the result being that both nieces put on Christ, and are now rejoicing in the hope of the soon coming kingdom. Byrdie expected to go to Europe the first of December, and wanted to be prepared to be called when the Master comes.

On our return we stopped at Clarion, Ia., and made Sister Hattie Henry a visit between trains. I baptized Sister Henry when she was a girl in Missouri, the first meeting I ever held, and mentioned in my last report. It was the first time I had met her in a good many years, and we put in the time very pleasantly, talking of old days, and the many changes, some being sad memories, as several of that first ingathering are sleeping. As our calls were urgent we had to cut our visit short. The Macedonian cry came from Iowa, so we hastened to Brother Robert Anderson, an operator at Gifford who was baptized two years ago while I was visiting there, that being my old home. He sent for his parents who live at Beeman, three stations east, and what they heard interested them very much. Finally the agent at Beeman was called to the army, and Brother Anderson took his place, which gave him a chance to stay at home, and talk the truth, which he did not fail to do. So he wrote me that with a little more instruction, mother would be ready for baptism. Who could resist such an earnest appeal? Everything worked favorably for the meeting. The Seventh-day Advents have a church which had been out of use for some time, and they told us we were welcome to it. On Sumady the Gifford brethren brought their lunches and we had an all day meeting, which was greatly enjoyed by all. Brother Anderson brought his car full every night, and part of the time three cars full came twenty miles, which showed some zeal. Then on Thanksgiving Day we all met at my brother's in the flesh as well as in tno Lord and ate thanksgiving chicken and I noticed some of the young brethren showed some of the qualities of a preacher. After dinner three car loads went to Union, the first town south, where the Christian minister had told us we could use their baptistry. You may judge Brother Anderson's joy when he saw not only his mother buried in the likness of Christ's death, but his sister and brother. Then in addition to these, my two nieces whom Brother Anderson had been associated with in their Sunday School. Sister Blanche Anderon was a nurse over seas for some time and can tell some very interesting things about the war. The Anderson famliy are quite musical and have an orchestra of their own. Brother Clyde Anderson shows the disposition that will always stand for the truth: Misses Iva, Nellie, and Marie Anderson are bright girls that can be a great help to the spread of truth. Iva and Nellie are sisters and Marie, although of the same name, is no relation. I hope under the leadership of Brother Robert Anderson, the class there will prosper, and I believe it will for "Bob," as he is familiarly called, is an untiring worker.

These seem to be the days of vengeance, for everybody and class seems to be trying to wreak vengeance on the other. A very important question confronts us all: Are we right with ourselves, with each other, and with God? This question cannot be set aside lightly; it must be met and settled, in order to get into the kingdom. Can we truly say "yes" to the above question? If not what are we doing to right ourselves? What conditions can arise that cannot be satisfactorily settled, unless one party is unwilling to do their part? In such cases each one can tell for themselves if they have been guided by selfishness and hatred, and whether or not they have done their part for peace. It seems out of place to talk of the unrest of the world, and the cry of peace when there is none. If unrest and no signs of peace reigns within, I am afraid there will be many surprises awaiting those who are expecting an entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

The peace which passeth understanding is the kind that makes us know we are at peace with all men. This can only be when we know we have done our part. If we say we cannot, and will not even forgive a brother, why play a farce and make believe; for there is no hope in such cases. If we do not forgive, we will not be forgiven, and in that case we must be rejected. It is the height of folly and the greatest of farces for us to pray that beautiful prayer Jesus taught us to pray, "Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us." Do we realize what we are saying? Can we pray that and go on expecting God to forgive us and give us a home in his kingdom, when we have refused to forgive our brother? It is high time we all make a deep study of ethics. Our relation to God is just whatever it is to each other and his word. We are all agreed upon the fact that a kingdom is coming, but that will not insure us an entrance to it. Well, then, how many of the conditions have we complied with? This alone will tell us how much hope we have. Jesus said to one, "Thou art not far from the kingdom." This statement was based on the fact of his having done the will of God. We may believe in the kingdom and believe it is nigh, and yet be millions of miles from it. How necessary to look after the essentials that will ensure us a "well done good and faithful servant." We must regulate our lives by the word of God, and the life of Christ. If we would do this, how quickly strife would cease, and peace and harmony ensue.

A child that is cruel to animals, disdainful of their sufferings when in pursuit of his pleasure, cannot be kind to a younger sister, a weaker companion, or a valued pet. Cruelty is a vice of the basest and most cowardly—a mark of the savage and criminal. Let the mother remember this, not only in the precepts, but in the example she gives her children.

Carelessness does more harm than a want of knowledge.

Editorial

We thank one and all, from far and near, for kindly remembrance during the holidays.

Renewals for The Restitution should be sent in at the beginning of the New Year. Have you sent yours?

Sister Lecrone's letter in the Berean department is worth reading. Read it and think awhile. Think of the denial and betrayal of Christ and his truth involved in a believer going into the sects of the apostasy! Our sermon entitled "Denying the Faith" was published for the information of those who are weak in the faith: and we wish the churches every where would see that every member in their congregations has a copy. It will not hurt any of us to do a little pastoral work. If we cannot convert sinners let us at least help to save the sheep of Christ's flock.

Bother Judd sends the following extract as a sample of orthodox "blasphemy":

"There need not be any hesitation in reverently declaring that God cannot annihilate a moral agent. It he could, would he not have annihilated the devil that vexed his beloved Son in the wilderness? So far as we can gather from the sacred writings, what has been the attitude of God in relation to the devil? He has degraded his position in the universe; he has taken away the lustrous robe with which he was originally clothed; he has caused him to wither into the most awful and repulsive deformity; on every side the most tremendous pressure has been brought to bear upon him; but no force can touch the life. Diabolism is nothing but abused divinity, and can God be annihilated?

"All creatures are such by virtue of a divine element in their nature. But cannot God withdraw the divine element? Let us pause. What would he make of it after he had withdrawn it? Could he absorb the poisoned element which for a life time had been given up to the devil?" (Ecce Deus, p. 219).

Cleveland Miscellanies

Sister Florence Westfall, of Lapier, Michigan, joined us at the Lord's table Dec. 21st.

We have gained one by the removal of Brother John Faulk, of Auckland, New Zealand. This brother has literally come to us "from the ends of the earth," and we find much pleasure in having him among us as a member of our family. God bless Brother Faulk.

December 21st was observed as Christmas Sunday. The joys of the day were augmented by the obedience in baptism of Miss May Westfall, formerly of Troy, Ohio. For several years Sister May has enjoyed a wide acquaintance among the household of faith, and her obedience was an occasion of rejoicing to many.

The 253rd consecutive meeting of the Young People's Society was held Friday evening, Dec. 12th, at the home of Brother and Sister Earle, 10315 Ingersoll Rd. There were twenty members present and five visitors. Several matters of importance were brought up during the business meeting, the most important of which was the appointment of Sister Alice Chappelle to represent the Young People's Society in Brother Donaldson's section of The Restitution. In the absence of Sister Susan Keith, the scheduled leader, Sister Alice Chappelle conducted the lesson which was a quiz on the book of Genesis. The lesson was most entertaining and profitable as well, leaving as it did to every member the indisputable fact that no matter how much we may study the Bible, there is always some point which we seem to miss.

The meeting was closed in the usual way with song and prayer. Lawrence Gibbs.

"Let all those that put their trust in thee, rejoice: let them ever shout for joy, because thou defendest them: let them also that love thy name be joyful in thee" (Psalm 5:11).

The annual Christmas Festival of the Sunday School was held Monday evening, Dec. 29th, at a hall at 10512 Hathaway Ave. It was well attended by a large number of church members and their friends. A supper was served at 6:30, and immediately following a varied and pleasant program was given by the members of the Sunday School. Twenty numbers were presented, there being recitations, songs, piano solos, duets, three of the songs being sung by the Sunday School. While all the numbers were pleasing those that brought forth the most applause were those rendered by the yunger members of the Sunday School, who gave great promise of affording much pleasure to their friends at future entertainments. After the program gifts were presented to those members of the Sunday School who had a percentage of 95 per cent or more in attendance during the year of 1919. Lawrence Gibbs.

A Certificate of Baptism

THE following certificate of baptism written for our parents by our namesake who taught and baptized them, has been framed and kept in our study for many years. It has been prized and kept with care because it was the only writing we have of Brother Gresham. The ink is fading now, and to preserve a copy of it we herewith give it place in The Restitution. Robert Gresham Huggins.

THIS WILL certify that from my personal acquaintance with Lankford Huggins and Rebecca, his wife; from much conversation face to face with them in the past ten months, and many written letters from them in that time, and by carefully watching their conversation and deportment, and from the good report of them from their neighbors, I am satisfied that for the most of that time in the past ten months they have been very honestly, earnestly, and zealously (like the noble Bereans) searching the Holy Scripture expressly for the purpose of learning for themselves what has been taught by the inspiration of the One Deity in reference to the nature and destiny of man, in reference to the Bible plan of the true way that leads to the kingdom of God which is promised to those who live a life of righteousness.

From the evidence thus before me I am well satisfied and fully convinced that they (Brother and Sister Huggins) have been drawn by the One Deity, the Father, to his Son the Christ, by the word of truth as recorded in John 6th chapter, 44th, 45th, and 48th verses. That they have believed from the heart the gospel of the kingdom of God as taught to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, David, and the prophets, as taught to Mary by the angel as recorded in the 1st chapter of Luke; and as taught by Jesus the Christ and by his apostles throughout their combined testimony in reference to the gospel of the kingdom of God. I am satisfied that they have, with full purpose of heart, in a scriptural manner, according to all the teaching of the inspired apostles, repented of all their past sins and errors of all kinds. I know that with their mouths they have made the good confession of their faith in the things revealed concerning the kingdom of God shortly to be established in the earth, and concerning the great and glorious name of Jesus the Anointed One, who was a prophet on the earth, who is now our High Priest in heaven, and who will soon come to the earth to reign as King of kings over the whole earth.

Thus they were dead to sin and they, wishing to put on Christ or get into the all-saving name of the Christ, that his blood might purify them from all past sins, and that they might arise from the watery grave to live a new life of righteousness; therefore on Tuesday morning before sunrise, Nov. 14th, I baptized them in the clear stream called Bright's Creek; and thus they became partakers (in accordance with the apostles' teaching) of the one hope, and were engrafted into the one body of called out ones, called to be saints, called to an endless inheritance in the coming kingdom of God.

On Thursday P. M., Nov. 16th, I partook with them of the loaf and the wine, emblematic of the act of the Master when he so lovingly said, "This do in remembrance of me." And we ate and drank discerning the Lord's body. And now I pray God earnestly that they may be kept pure and blameless daily and hourly through life, and that they may be the means of doing much good.

Robt. W. Gresham,

an Elder of the Church of God at Jeffersonville, Indiana.

Written at Bright's Creek, Polk County, North Carolina, Nov. 16, 1876.

Communications

They spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened.-Mal. 3:16.

Dear Brother Huggins:

I am sending the poem that was asked for, copied by my oldest girl Marion from Brother Pitt's Bible, where he has it pasted for years. Do you not think it would be fine to print it in tract form? Brother Pitts is improving slowly. I hope all your family are well. Give our Christian love to all the brethren.

The Restitution is as always very good, but like Sister Flora Knapp and others, we miss the personal correspondence, the little letters from all over that were so comforting. You see we don't know what is going on in other states, and if one here and there writes telling us about what is going on where they are, it is sure to make interesting reading. The Bereans are doing fine work in writing to the isolated and also to the paper. The Sister's Society of Cleveland are also writing their reports, which are very interesting.

I will close now. Pray for us all and give our love to all.

Mrs. A. Ashute.

Dear Sister Wood:

Your good letter to Sister Susan Howard gave me great help; and although we have never met, still I seem to know and love you. I often think of you and other dear ones who are isolated and are not so blessed as we are in Cleveland, who have the true gospel preached to them Sunday after Sunday. Then there are others who through the infirmities of the flesh are debarred from hearing, like my poor husband (all the gospel he gets is what he reads); and I somtimes think if our people would only stop and think of the hundreds to whom these little articles are meat and drink, they would write more on the simple love of God, and less on non-profitable things. Are there not enough valuable things to write about? We who are built up in our most holy faith from time to time should be able in some small way to pass the good things along.

Sister Wood, I often think that the isolated ones, those especially who hold up the banner of truth, like yourself, will have a double recompense of reward. He has so said. Of course there are some who choose isolation: but others have isolation thrust upon them. To such my heart goes out. You have been wonderfully blessed by God in being able to edify the poor saints with your pen. It sometimes seems as if there was so little we could do, especially as we grow older; but then, too, we must remember the parable of the talents: "Faithful in little, faithful in much." Were it not for those wonderful instances recorded for our benefit, I am afraid some of us would be often cast down. But thanks be unto God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. What a really happy people we ought to be. What matters the unrest of the nations to us? It is a sign for us to lift up our heads and rejoice, for our redemption draweth nigh.

Write again soon, beloved in the Lord. Your writings are always helpful. Let us all pray, "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly."

Catherine Hogarth.

Weddings

From Brother E. W. Knapp, of Idaho, comes the following announcement which gives both readers and Editor surprise and pleasure:

I have a wonderful notice to announce: Sister Flora A. Wood, of Chico, Cal., got so sleepy she thought it proper to take a knapp; so on Sunday, Dec. 14th, 1919, there was joined in marriage in Portland, Ore.,

Edgar W. Knapp and
Flora A. Wood

In her own handwriting Sister Knapp makes the following "correction" of above report:

Brother Huggins:

I was not sleepy, but took the fatal leap with wide-open eyes.

Flora A. Knapp.

Mr. Dewy Overmeyer and Miss Mabel Mills were married at the residence of the writer in Argos, at 2 o'clock, Saturday, Dec. 27th, 1919.

The groom is the son of the late Albert Overmeyer, of Burr Oak, and the bride has been a resident of Plymouth. They will reside in Bremen, Ind., where they will be at home to their friends. Mr. Overmeyer has a position with the Holland Radiator Works at this place. May the blessings of peace and prosperity go with them through life, is our wish and prayer.

Obituary

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.--Psa. 116:15.

Dear Brother Anderson:

I am sorry to inform you that your brother, Redmond, died Dec. 19th, 1919, and will be buried Dec. 20th at Guthrie Grove, Anderson Co., S. C. Brother A. W. Durham will conduct the funeral.

Your brother, Weldon McCoy, Piedmont, S. C.

Redmond was our youngest brother in the flesh. He has suffered with tuberculosis for the past three years. He leaves a wife and two small children. He was baptized into Christ several years ago. Being unable to work for the past three years he would have suffered had it not been for the members of God's family who sent him help. I wish to thank all who did so, especially the members of Brush Creek Church who have been sending him some help each month for some time past. Brother Redmond's wife was baptized last August by Elder A. W. Durham. May God take care of her and the little ones, is our prayer.

AN AUTOMOBILE TOUR

Dear Bereans:

I though a few lines from me might be of interest to you. Husband and I have just returned from a three month's travel in our Ford car. We were trying to rest and regain some shattered nerves caused from much hard work for the past five years. We stopped at Hot Springs, Ark., took the baths and rested a little while.

While we travelled through eight states we observed the many different ways the people have of making a living. We passed through the coal fields, cotton and rice fields, the lumber camps and road construction work. We saw signs of race riots and strikes, and many other conditions which prevail over the land today.

I gathered much food for thought. Perilous times indeed. No consideration anywhere. Anything to get the dollar. People seem to be pleasure mad, running to and fro hunting for amusement.

And what of the church? I visited some of the brothers and sisters and heard some good sermons and Bible lessons, which are enjoyed very much, it being our first in over three years. It seems to me some of the conditions of the day are creeping into the church: error, carelessness and indifference, taking part in other churches (partakers), and many such things. I think the saddest thing I know of is to hear our people say, "It makes no difference, you know." I drove thirty miles to look up a family who were of our faith only to find they had gone back into the church they had come out of. What is the matter with the church? I thought of Jesus' own words when he went to the garden of Gethsemane to pray, and his disciples fell asleep, "Couldst not thou watch one hour?" Is the church falling asleep? Oh wake! Be up and doing something for the Master. The Nobleman has gone into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and return. He may be even at the door. There never has been a time when there has been such a need of work. The field is large, and the laborers few. There is sickness, old age, discouragement among our number everywhere; and one of the saddest is isolation. Members like myself who do not hear a sermon in years. It makes me think of a song I love so well, "O Help Somebody Today." Write someone a few lines. It helps a lot; send someone a few papers, a clipping, or a few references on some subject. Oh, it just turns one's lonely hours into joy, many times, and above everything, let us be faithful. "Be ye ready; for in an hour ye think not the Son of Man cometh." There is much I should like to say about the social correspondence work. I believe it is of God. It is filling a place in the church that nothing else is doing. I believe one-tenth of our time belongs to the Lord just as much as our means. Pray for me, dear ones, that I may be in a small measure worthy of a place in Christ's kingdom when it is established on the earth.

A VACATION TRIP

The night before Thanksgiving, Sister Anna Drew and I left for St. Elmo, Ill., to spend Thanksgiving with Sister Emma Lenz. Sister Lenz is one of our isolated members, and we hope our Bereans will write to her. We enjoyed our visit and I was sorry I could not stay longer. Thursday evening found me at Brother and Sister Will Lansberry's, Casey, Ill. I visited with them until Friday afternoon and they drove down to Brother Verne Lansberry's. After supper we all went to Berean Class which is held at the church. They have a large class and we are taking up the lessons in the Berean booklets. The new members, which are mostly young men, take an interesting part in this class. We went home with Sister Lewis Weaver and family, and remained until Sunday morning. It simply poured Saturday so we had to stay indoors and could not visit with other members as we planned. On account of the train for St. Louis coming earlier than usual we could not attend Sunday School, and I had to return to Brother Will Lansberrys and remain until train time. These short vacations are good for us; we enjoyed every minute. It is a pleasure to visit and meet with those of like faith.

The Restitution Sunday School Leaf

THE DEATH OF JESUS

Part 1

MEMORY TEXT: I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures (1 Cor. 15:3).

1. And they that had laid hold on Jesus led him away to Caiaphas, the high priest, where the scribes and the elders were assembled (Matt. 26:57).

2. And the men that held Jesus mocked him and smote him (Luke 22:63).

3. And when they had bound him they led him away, and delivered him to Pontius Pilate, the Governer (Matt. 27:2).

4. And they began to accuse him, saying, We found this fellow perverting the nation and forbidding to give tribute, saying, that he himself is Christ a King (Luke 23:2).

5. Pilate therefore said unto him, Art thou a king, then?

6. Jesus answered, Thou sayest that I am a king; to this end was I born.

7. And for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth (John 18:37).

8. And they stripped him, and put on him a scarlet robe.

9. And when they had platted a crown of thorns, and put it on his head, and a reed in his right hand.

10. And they bowed the knee before him and mocked him, saying, Hail, king of the Jews.

11. And they spit upon him, and took the reed and smote him on the head.

12. And after they had mocked him, they took the robe off from him and put his own raiment on hid, and led hid away to crucify him (Matt. 27:28-31).

13. And it was the third hour, and they crucified him (Mark 15:25).

14. And Pilate wrote a title, and put it on the cross, and the writing was, Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews (John 19:19).

Practical Truths

We cannot be too familiar with the story of the life of Jesus. It was a life full of earnest work and a shameful tragical death; and all for you and me. Paul says: "Consider him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds." Again he says: "Consider the apostle and high priest of our profession, Christ Jesus, who was faithful to him that appointed him." The faithfulness of Jesus was characteristic, and his devotion to truth and the right are worthy of our earnest study. He was a martyr to his mission, and the greatest moral hero of all times. He was tried for claiming to be a king, and although he confessed he was a king, yet he explained that his kingdom would not conflict with the Roman world. Pilate declared him faultless, yet delivered him up to the chief priests, and he was crucified.

Notes on the Lesson

First of all. Among the chief things (Diaglott).

1. Led him away. Brought as a Lamb to the slaughter (Isa. 53:7).

3. Pontius Pilate. Governor of the province of Judea under the Roman Tiberius.

4. Forbidding to give tribute. This was a false charge (Matt. 17:24-27).

6. Thou sayest. A form of expression equal to an affirmation that the statement was correct.

8. Scarlet robe. John says "purple robe." It was probably scarlet and purple blended—the robe of royalty.

12. Crucify. Crucifixion was a death by nailing or tying the person to a frame in the shape of a cross; hence the term crucify.

13. Third hour.—Probably about nine o'clock A. M., as the Jews in the time of the crucifixion computed their hours of the civil day from six in the morning till six in the evening; their first hour therefore, would be our seven o'clock, their second our eight, etc.

14. A title.—An inscription put over anything by which it is known. The object of this title seems to have been to show: 1st. His name. 2nd. His residence. 3rd. His crime our accusation.

Suggestive Topics and Questions

1. The trial. Had Jesus committed any crime? Then why was he arrested? Who arrested him? (John 18:3, 12). Where did they take him? (1). How did they treat Jesus? (2). When they had bound him, where did they take him? (3). What accusations did they bring against him? (4). In what was Pilate most interested? Why? What question did he ask Jesus? (5). How did Jesus answer? (John 18:36). Would the kingdom of Jesus conflict with the then Roman kingdom? When will Jesus' kingdom be given him? (Matt. 25:31; Dan. 7:12, 14). Has Jesus received his kingdom? Did he not tell the truth then before Pilate? After Pilate had heard his explanation, did he think Jesus guilty of treason to the Roman government? (Luke 23:13-15). Did he find any fault in him? Why then, was he crucified? What did the soldiers do? (8). What kind of a crown did they make? (9). Read 10, 11, 12.

2. The crucifixion. How was Jesus crucified? Describe a cross. Was he nailed or tied to the cross? (John 20:25). What time of day was he crucified? (13). What did Pilate write? In how many languages was it written? Repeat the title. Will Jesus yet be the king of the Jews?

Report Of Donations

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ:

Last summer Mrs. Susan Howard, of Chinook Cove, B. C., Canada applied for some one of the faith to come and baptize her, and later I also made an appeal in her behalf and received the donations to send some minister of the faith. Brother T. J. Drinkard, of Holbrook, Neb., was chosen. He gladly did the work, and did it well. He traveled 2,200 miles, denying himself a berth to keep down expenses. Below is a report of the donations, and no doubt much of it came from "the poor of this world."

"Out of Darkness Into Light"

The Faulty Aaronic Priesthood

Why was fault found with the Aaronic mediatorial priesthood? Because the mediator could not enter into the most holy place through his own blood, but with the blood of animals; therefore he could not represent in his own person the wages due to sin, which is death violently administered, and then come to life again and live forever in a spiritual body: and so passing "through the vail, that is to say, his flesh" (Heb. 10:20), condemned human nature, with all the experiences in connection with it; and which are necessary for the development of the divine character. The Aaronic mediator could not represent the kind of death due to sin, and the righteousness that gives eternal life: he used an animal in the first case, and in the second, typical linen garments, which symbolized righteousness. The method used by the mediator of the old covenant was purely a symbolism of facts yet in the future, and therefore so far as reality and fact are concerned in the salvation of man, the old method was weak and unprofitable (Heb. 7:18): leaving the transgressions under the first covenant unredeemed (Heb. 9:15), as also the apostle states the fact in chapter 10:4, viz., "For it is not possible that the blood of bulls and goats should take away sin." What was the reason that the mediator of the old covenant could not die a violent death to reperesent by actual fact the kind of death due to those of his own species and race for their own sins, as did the mediator of the new covenant? It was because that by dying, death would have captured him because of his own sins and held him. No actual atonement ever having been made for his past sins, his actual death would have been the infliction of the penalty of death due for them, and so such a death, although possible to represent the death due to others for their sins, would have been valueless because there could have been no resurrection and appearance in the presence of God to administer on behalf of the sins committed for which the representative death had been submitted to.

This new kind of mediator, Christ Jesus, who actually died under the demands of the sins that were figuratively laid upon him, not having been his own sins, left him free from death as penalty, that is, death as the wages of sin; hence Christ was raised from the dead because of his righteousness. The mediators under the old covenant died through the animal sacrifices, and for that reason they could remain alive and perform the duties of their office and attend to the judgments that the Lord would render in reference to the sins that the shed blood stood for. The apostle referring to the priesthood under the old covenant said, "And inasmuch as it is appointed unto men once to die, and after this cometh judgment" (Heb. 9:27), shows what was necessary because of sin; sin committed by man requires the death of man; therefore the only proper mediator for men must be a man who could die and upon righteous grounds be raised from the dead and appear in the presence of God in evidence that death had been inflicted to satisfy the ends of justice: justice being vindicated, judgment is rendered in the pardon and acquittal of the one for whom the mediator officiated. This transaction is covered by the words, "forgiveness and remission of sins." "If one died for all, then were all dead," or as it is in R. V., "therefore all died." Paul says in Rom. 6:3, "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his death?" The apostle further says, "I am crucified with Christ" (Gal. 2:20). God has purposed that the fit and proper sacrifice which could represent the punishment due to sin, must also be qualified with the righteousness that would ensure a resurrection from the dead unto eternal life, so that the evidence of death unto the demands of God because of sin, could be presented to God in "heaven itself" (Heb. 9:12, 24, 25). It is righteousness that qualifies a person for a mediator to appear in the presence of God. "God is of purer eyes than to behold evil, and cannot look upon iniquity" (Hab. 1:13).

The Church Walking With the World

The church and the world walked far apart
  On the changing shores of time,
The world was singing a giddy song,
  And the church a hymn sublime.
"Come, give me your hand," said the merry world,
  And walk with me this way;"
But the good church hid her snowy hands,
  And solemnly answered, "Nay,
I will not give you my hands at all,
  And I will not walk with you:
Your way is the way that leads to death,
  Your words are all untrue."

"Nay, walk with me for a little space,"
  Said the world with a kindly air:
"The road I walk is a pleasant road,
  And the sun shines always there:
Your path is thorny, rough and rude,
  But mine is broad and plain:
My way is paved with flowers and dews,
  And your with tears and pain;
The sky to me is always blue,
  No want, no toil I know:
The sky above is always dark,
  Your lot is a lot of woe;
There's room enough for you and me
  To travel side by side."

Half shyly the church approached the world,
  And gave him her hand of snow;
And the old world grasped it and walked along,
  Saying in accents low,
"Your dress is too simple to please my taste;
  I will give you pearls to wear,
Rich velvets and silks for your graceful form,
  And diamonds to deck your hair."
The church looked down at her plain white robes,
  And then at the dazzling world,
And blushed as she saw his handsome lips
  With a smile contemptuous curled;
"I will change my dress for a costlier one,"
  Said the church with a smile of grace;
Then her pure white garments drifted away,
  And the world gave in their place
Beautiful satins and shining silks,
  Roses and gems and costly pearls;
While over her forehead her bright hair fell
  Crisped in a thousand curls.

"Your home is too plain," said the proud old world,
  "I'll build you one like mine;
Carpets of Brussels and curtains of lace,
  And furniture ever so fine."
So they built her a costly and beautiful house;
  Most splendid it was to behold;
Her sons and her beautiful daughters dwelt there
  Gleaming in purple and gold;
Rich fairs and shows in the halls were held,
  And the world and his children were there,
Laughter and music and feasts were heard,
  In the place that was meant for prayer,
There were cushioned pews for the rich and great,
  To sit in their pomp and their pride,
But the poor who were clad in shabby array
  Sat meekly down outside.

"You give too much to the poor," said the world,
  "Far more than you ought to do;
If they are in need of shelter and food,
  Why need it trouble you?
Go take your money and buy rich robes,
  Buy horses and carriages fine,
Buy pearls and jewels and dainty food;
  Buy the rarest and costliest wines;
My children they dote on all these things,
  And if you their love would win,
You must do as they do, and walk in the ways
  That they are walking in."

Then the church held fast the strings of her purse,
  And modestly lowered her head
And simpered, "Without doubt you are right, sir, Henceforth I'll do as you've said."
So the poor were turned from her door in scorn,
  And she heard not the orphan's cry;
But she drew her beautiful robes aside,
  As the widows went weeping by.
Then the sons of the world and the sons of the church
  Walked closely hand and heart,
And only the Master, who knoweth all,
  Could tell the two apart.

Then the church sat down at her ease and said,
  "I am rich and my goods increase;
I have need of nothing, or aught to do
  But to laugh and dance and feast."
The sly world heard and laughed in his sleeve,
  And mocking said aside
"The church is fallen, the beautiful church,
  And her shame is her boast and pride."

The angel drew near to the mercy seat,
  And whispered in sighs her name;
Then the loud anthems of rapture were hushed,
  And heads were covered with shame,
And a voice was heard at last by the church,
  From him who sat on the throne,
I know thy works and how thou hast said,
  "I am rich, and hast not known
That thou art naked poor and blind,
  And wretched before my face;
Therefore from my presence, I cast thee out,
  And blot thy name from its place."—Selected by Sister Emma Niesley.

A Gospel Sermon On The Abrahamic Faith

TO THE EDITOR OF THE RESTITUTION:

BELIEVING THAT it is sometimes wise to make a special effort to gain the interest of those outside the truth, I submit the following sermon. Knowing that there are many honest and good hearts who have not heard the word of truth, and are therefore not in a position to obey it (Luke 8:15); men who verily think that they ought to do many things (Acts 26:9) which, from God's point of view, are quite wrong; to such I appeal for a patient hearing.

Paul outlines a speaker's duty when he tells us that he had rather speak five words with understanding than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue (1 Cor. 14:19). He gives us a reason for this, "that he may teach others." Again, he tells us that our words should be easy to understand: failing in this we shall speak unto the air (1 Cor. 14:9).

Having defined the duty of a speaker, we will now consider the attitude of the hearer.

The Hearer's Attitude

We are told that the Bereans were more noble than those of Thessalonica in that they received the word with a ready mind, and seached the Scriptures daily, to see whether those things were so (Acts 17:11). This is the only safe course for any one to take—test all you hear by the written word of God.

In this appeal I shall endeavor to use words easy to understand and earnestly hope that the reader will test their truth by comparing them with the Scriptures.

Much of the Bible is Difficult to Understand

If our salvation required us to understand all that is in the Bible, most of us would have little chance, as much of it is difficult and our minds are darkened by sin. The Bible contains history, biography, prophecy, proverbs, and poetry, but running through it all like a golden thread is the gospel; and it is an indication of the wisdom and goodness of God that he has made the gospel simple and easy to understand. Mark this with care: it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes (Rom. 1:16).

It is my purpose now to present the gospel as I find it in the word of God with the hope that those who read may understand and obey it, and thus gain eternal life in the age to come.

A Gospel Text

Matt. 1:1: "The book of the generations of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham."

I intend to preach from my text though sometimes a long way from it, even as far as the covers of the Bible will let me roam, but I hope to return to it, having gathered treasures here and there which help us to understand the purpose of God as indicated in the history and mission of the three persons in our text.

Gospel Sermon

In Importance Christ is First

In importance Jesus Christ comes first: he is the first and the last. All of God's purposes centre in him. We are told that he is the son of David, the son of Abraham; but from Matt. 1:17 we learn that from Abraham to David were fourteen generations, from David to the carrying away to Babylon were fourteen generations and that from that time another fourteen generations lived and died before we come to Christ. It may be asked why out of forty-two generations, two men are indicated as in some special sense the progenitors of Christ.

There is a reason, and the answer to that question reveals the hope of the gospel, the faith once delivered to the saints.

The Story of Abraham

In Galatians 3:8 we learn that the gospel was preached to Abraham; we are also given the language in which it was preached, "In thee shall all nations be blessed." Paul is quoting from Genesis, so we will go to Genesis and learn what we can of the history of Abraham.

"Now the Lord had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house unto a land that I will show thee . . . . so Abram departed as the Lord had spoken unto him . . . . and the Lord appeared unto Abram and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land" (Gen. 12)

Christ Explained the Gospel to Paul

Now lest there should be any misunderstanding about this I call your attention to the fact that Abram was on this earth. He had been living in Mesopotamia near the ancient city of Babylon on the Euphrates River. At God's command he had travelled west into the land now known as Palestine, and God appeared to him and told him that he intended to give this land unto his (Abram's) seed. The apostle Paul was a descendant of Abraham, and he had a special interview with Christ. Christ fully explained the gospel to him, so when he speaks he does so with authority. Now he tells us that the seed spoken of here was Christ (Gal. 3:16). Then we learn that God appeared to Abraham and told him that he intended to give this land, in which Abraham was, to Chrst.

. . . Arise, walk through the land, in the length and told him to "look northward and southward, eastward and westward, for all the land that thou seest to thee will I give it and to thy seed forever . . . . Arise, walk through the land, the length and the breadth of it; for I will give it unto thee."

The Abrahamic Promise Was Made to Abraham and Christ

So that God promised to give the land to Abraham and to Christ. If we ask how long they were to have it the answer is, for an everlasting possession. Now the promise of everlasting possession carries with it by implication the promise of everlasting life; for when a man dies he ceases to possess anything. Our laws recognize this principle and divide the property of the dead among the living.

The Same Promise was made to Isaac

Now Abraham had a son named Isaac who was heir to the same promises that God had made to Abraham. And God appeared to Isaac and said, "Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and I will bless thee: and unto thy seed will I give all these countries: and I will perform the oath which I sware unto Abraham thy father: and I will make thy seed as the stars of heaven and will give unto thy seed all these countries: and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because that Abraham obeyed my voice."

The Same Promise Was Made to Jacob

Isaac had a son named Jacob: to him God appeared and said: "I am the Lord God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac: the land whereon thou liest to thee will I give it and to thy seed . . . and in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed. And behold I am with thee and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest and will bring thee again into this land: for I will not leave thee until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of."

A Summary of the Story of Abraham

God had promised Abraham everlasting possession of the land from the river of Egypt to the Euphrates. It was the land that Abraham had walked through.

It was the land in which Isaac dwelt. It was the land on which Jacob slept.

It was on this earth, not in heaven, or on any other planet.

Here is Paul's comment on the story of Abraham: Heb. 6:13: "When God made promise to Abraham, because he could sware by no greater he sware by himself." Heb. 6:17: "God willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath, that by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us."

We will now return to our text and consider

The Story of David

Fourteen generations have passed away. The descendants of Abraham have become a great nation. David their king, having subdued all his enemies, proposes to build a house for God. He speaks of his purpose to Nathan the prophet. God spoke to Nathan and gave him a message to David. You will find this message in 2 Samuel 7th chapter, of which I only quote a part: "And when thy days be fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom. He shall build an house for my name, and I will establish the throne of his kingdom forever." Verse 16: "And thine house and thy kingdom shall be established forever before thee: thy throne shall be established forever."

The house that David had in mind to build for God was a house of cedar; but the house that God promised to build for David was a family or line of descendants of whom the chief was to occupy the throne for ever in David's presence, showing that David himself would be there to share in the glory of his house.

When God promised the land to Abraham, he also told him that he should die (Gen. 15:15); so that Abraham understood that his resurrection would be necessary in order to the fulfilment of God's promise. So now in the promise to David he is told that he would die before the promise should be fulfilled. David understood this, and in his prayer of thanksgiving he speaks of God's promises as "a great while to come." He knew that it would be necessary for him to be awakened from the sleep of death by resurrection. This is shown in Psa. 17:15: "As for me, I shall behold thy face in righteousness; I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness."

Summary of the Story of David

David had a throne on this earth in the land of Palestine in the city of Jerusalem.

God promised that one of David's sons should sit on David's throne forever.

David understood that this promise referred to the far distant future.

The house of cedar that Solomon built soon passed away.

The house that God promised to build for David was to stand forever.

Now to return to our text: we have learned that Abraham's seed should have an everlasting possession of the land, also that David's son (also Abraham's seed) sould have an everlasting throne and kingdom at Jerusalem.

The Story of Jesus Christ

We now come to the great central character of our text, Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham. Jesus means Savior; Christ means Anointed. Forty-two generations had come ard gone since the promise was made to Abraham; twenty-eight generations since the promise made to David. Israel is no longer a great nation: most of them are scattered among the nations. The few who still possess the land are under the power of Rome. The sons of Abraham who still clung to the hope of the promise of God made to the fathers, look with longing eyes for some sign that the promised son of David should soon appear.

The apostle Paul tells us that Jesus Christ was a minister (servant) of the circumcision (Jewish nation), for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made unto the fathers (Rom. 15:8). Long centuries of delay had tried the faith of God's people. Now God proposes to confirm his truth by sending his Son into the world. That Son is the son of David, the son of Abraham, on the human side, but also the Son of God.

In the promise to David (1 Chron. 17:13) we read: "I will be his Father, and he shall be my Son." In the first chapter of Luke we have these truth confirmed. Luke1:31: "Thou shalt conceive in thy womb and bring forth a Son ... he shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end .... The Holy Spirit shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee; therefore also that holy thing that shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God."

All the blessings that God purposes to bestow on man come to us through Christ. He is the way. God has not revealed to us any other way. How important then, that we should understand his character and mission. The angel's message, as recorded in Luke, identifies him as the son of his father David, and also the son of Abraham, and thus the heir to everlasting possession of the land with the necessary accompaniment, everlasting life. It also identifies him as the divinely appointed King that is to occupy the throne of David forever. Now the gospel preached to Abraham contained a promise that in him and his seed all the nations of the earth should be blessed. A nation or an individual must in some sense get into Abraham and into Christ in order to obtain the blessing of God: not, of course, in the literal sense, but in the sense of relationship. The Scriptures reveal only one way in which this can be accomplished, that is, by believing the things Abraham believed, and being baptized into Christ. We then become Abraham's seed, and heirs according to promise.

When Christ was on earth the Jews of his time believed in the kingdom of God as promised to David; they understood that it was to be on this earth. But they rejected God's appointed King who said unto them, "Except ye believe that I am he, ye shall die in your sins." To reject the the King was the fatal mistake of the Jew. The Gentile today accepts Christ as the divinely appointed King, but reject the promised kingdom, though God has confirmed his promise with an oath. To reject the kingdom will have the same sad results: those who do this will die in their sins.

Love Delays the Coming of the Kingdom

Now long centuries have passed away;the scoffers have come who say, where is the promise of his coming? since the fathers have fallen asleep, all things continue as they were. The thoughtful may ask, why this long delay? The answer is, God is longsuffering and kind, not willing that any should perish, but all should come a knowledge of the truth. In short, God's love to you and me is the cause of the delay. He does not wish the kingdom to come and you and I should be left out. The invitation is to all, but who will come? "The spirit and the Bride say Come, and let him that heareth say Come: and whosoever will let him come and take of the water of life freely."

And now, dear friends, I must bring this sermon to a close. Why are you looking for a home in heaven when God is offering you a glorious inheritance on this earth? "The heaven, even the heavens are the Lord's but the earth hath he given to the children of men." Why not be content with what God has given? This earth is yet to be filled with God's glory; his will done on earth as in heaven. I now come to the very gravest thought of all: if you reject the gospel as preached to Abraham, you are without God and without hope; you are a stranger to the covenants of promise. As an ambassador for Christ I beg of you to consider the promises made to Abraham, to David, and to Christ, and obtain like precious faith with us; and be ready to meet the glorious Master at his coming.

John Parker.

Giving

PEOPLE TELL me that "I must not, cannot, give tithes as I used to in more prosperous times," that "it is out of the question," that "I cannot starve," but when I read of the little children in Roumania hovering naked in a nest of rags in a deserted house, of the little ones who are dying in the Holy Land for lack of food, of the famine conditions in India as described by Charles W. Posnett in "The Banner of Israel," of Jews pleading for New Testaments, and of the great needs of the cause of truth everywhere; how can I refrain from giving?

Sometimes a little anecdote will illustrate what we want to say better than we ourselves can word it. Such a narrative telling how the people in heathen lands sacrifice to give appeared in "The Youth's Companion" some three years ago. It appealed strongly to me and I hope it will appeal just as strongly to others.

One man was saying to another: "Our minister is always talking about sacrifice. I am getting tired of it: he expects us to give, give, give all the time. He seems to think the church is the greatest institution in he world."

The other man replied: "Perhaps he's right. But I agree with you that we cannot be always giving to the church. There are other things that we must think of. I am afraid our minister is visionary rather than practical."

Both men were wealthy, and denied themselves nothing that they wished to have. Both were members of the church and gave liberally, but neither of them knew the meaning of the word "sacrifice."

A few months later these two men joined a party that ws going around the world. Before they started their minister asked them to observe and remember any unusual and interesting things that they might see in the various countries through which they were to pass. The men promised.

In Korea one day they saw in a field by the side of the road, a boy pulling a rude plow while an old man held the plow handles and guided it. The lawyer was amused and took a snap shot of the scene.

"That's a curious picture! I suppose they are very poor", he said to the missionary and guide to the party.

"Yes," was the quiet reply: "That is the family of Chi Noui. When the church was being built they were eager to give something to it. but they had no money, so they sold their only ox and gave the money to the church. This spring they are pulling the plow themselves."

The lawyer and the business man by his side were silent for some moments, then the business man said, "That must have been a sacrifice." "They did not call it that," said the missionary, "they thought it was fortunate they had an ox to sell."

The lawyer and the business man had not much to say, but when they reached home the lawyer took that picture to his minister and told him the story.

"I want to double my pledge to the church." he said. "And give me some plow work to do please. I have never known what sacrifice for the church meant; a converted heathen taught me. I am ashamed to say I have never yet given anything to my church that cost me anything."

We sing--

My all is on the altar,
I'm waiting for the fire

when in reality neither we ourselves. nor anything that we possess has been placed there to be used as the Master shall see fit. Abraham's surrender of Isaac was absolute. Our sacrifice must be as cheerfully made. must be absolute in surrender and with faith as to results. like unto his.

"Cast thy bread upon the waters and thou shalt find it after many days." The sower goes forth weeping bearing the precious seed, taken from the very mouths of his children; but by and by "he comes rejoicing bringing in the sheaves." So will it be with us who make sacrifice to sustain the cause of truth. Let not the heathen put us to shame.

Elijah a Gentile

In 1 Kings 17:1 we read that Elijah was of the "inhabitants" of Gilead. Because of this statement many conclude that Elijah was a Jew. Let us now see if this is true. We know nothing of his origin save that which 1 Kings 17:1 tells us. Let us now look into this matter. We give below the places where the Hebrew word occurs in all the instances in the Old Testament the Hebrew word rendered "inhabitants."

In Gen. 23:4 it is rendered "stranger," in Ex. 12:45 "foreigner," in Lev. 22:10 "sojourner," in Lev. 25:6 "stranger," in Lev. 25:23 "strangers and sojourners," in Lev. 25:35 "stranger and sojourner,"Lev. 25:40 "sojourner," Lev. 25:45 " strangers," Lev. 25:47 "stranger," or "sojourner," Num. 35:15 "sojourned," 1 Chron. 29:15 "stranger," Psa. 39:12 "sojourner." In the above references the word refers to other than Jews in every case excepting one. This fact should go far toward proving that Elijah was of Gentile extraction, rather than Jewish, and that he was a "foreigner," "stranger," and "sojourner" in Gelead instead of a regular resident. Should this be true and it seems that it is than we have on the mount of Transfiguration a Gentile represention in the person of Elijah; and this scene on the mountain refers to the kingdom, you know. MISPLACED WORRY

Mrs. Silas Bennett was a philosopher. On a certain dismal occasion some of the neighboring women were condoling with her. With commendable cheerfulness she replied:

"I've raised four girls and three boys, expectin' every time they've been twins and red-headed like their Grandpa Bennett and yet they ain't.

"An' I've worried consid'ble over small-pox breakin' out in my big family. So fer, tain't.

"Last summer, durin' July an' August, an' mebbe part of September, I was real melancholic, fearin' I'd got an appendix; but I guess I ain't.

"An' through it all, it never onct occurred to me that I'd be the one to fall through them rotten old meetin' house steps an' breaks my legs in two places; but I be:" New York Times.

Remember the Helping Fund

Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble -in the day of evil, margin - (Psa. 41:1).

We whose names are given below, believing it be he our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

January 4th, after a confession of faith that the Elders considered remarkably intelligent. Miss Ola M. Fleming, of Toledo, Ohio, was inducted into the name of Jesus Christ by baptism. In this way she became a partaker of "the only name under heaven given among men whereby they may be saved" (Acts 4:12). Sister Fleming is recommended to the brethren and sisters at St. Cloud, Florida, where she plans to winter, and to any other believers of like precious faith whom she may visit elsewhere.

Sister Elizabeth A. Salisbury fell asleep Jan. 3rd at the age of 74 years. She was baptized into Christ Jan. 31, 1915, and has since lived a very devoted life to God and his truth. A sister, Sister Strong, and a daughter, Jennie, survive her; and as they are both in the truth, they are comforted and sustained by "the hope of Israel." Words of warning, exhortation, and comfort were spoken from 1 Sam. 20:3 Jan. 6th, after which Sister Salisbury was laid away in sleep till her Redeemer stands upon the earth for her deliverance and salvation.

Plenary Inspiration

"The Plain Dealer," prone to give publicity to Spiritualism, Infidelity, etc., Dec. 30, 1919, gave space to Mr. W. D. Beggs, who wrote a few "sound words" of truth as follows:

"Editor Plain Dealer—Sir:

"It is not at all surprising that there is a class of clergymen today who deny the plenary inspiration of the Scriptures. When Jesus Christ was upon earth he found false teachers who pretended to be the spiritual leaders of the people, of whom he said, 'Can the blind lead the blind; shall they not both fall into the ditch?' We have had false teachers ever since, whose ambition seems to be to get people into the ditch rather than pull them out. The first step in that direction is to discredit God's word, and whenever that point is reached the doubter is very near the ditch.

"The divine authenticity of the Bible has withstood the attacks of some of the keenest intellects of past ages, and every time it has come out of the contest with renewed luster, strengthening the faith of all humble seekers after the truth. The subject has been threshed over thousands of times, and every time the Bible critics have gone down to defeat.

"It is noticible that those who persist in picking flaws in the Bible make themselves conspicuous for their egotism, but are to be pitied for their lack of good judgment They get nowhere themselves, and if they have a following it is a very sickly one. We are assured that 'the counsel of the Lord standeth forever,' and that no power on earth or hell will be allowed to destroy God's word."

Misapplications of Scripture

AN APPLICATION of Scripture is authoritative only as it rests on a right apprehension of its original purpose. That which was expressly addressed to a single class cannot safely be treated as belonging to all alike, nor transferred from one class to another. Twenty-two books of the New Testament out of twenty-seven are addressed to Christians. It does not follow that we must look to the other five exclusively for passages applicable to the unconverted. But it does suggest caution lest we "wrest" the language of epistolary Scripture, and so rob it of its significance by diverting to those without, counsels of remonstrances meant exclusively for the church. As illustrative of such tendency two or three instances of misapplication may be given.

Rev. 3:20

Grigg's familiar hymn, "Behold, a Stranger at the Door!" is based upon this Scripture. It conveys the impression, which has been supplemented by sermonic usage, and is probably uppermost in the thought of the average hearer, that the "door" referred to is that of the obdurate sinner's heart. But the appeal is primarily to the church of the Laodiceans, and its pathetic force lies in the fact that it is to "his own" Christ comes, and that they "do not receive him.' However true it may be that Christ does stand at the door of all hearts seeking entrance, it can only confuse the unbeliever and rob the believing hearer of the tender remonstrance here offered against his ungrateful coldness of feeling, to treat the words in a sense so obviously foreign to their original design.

1 Thess. 5:19

This Scripture, like Eph. 4:30, "Grieve not the Holy Spirit of God," is generally used as a basis of appeal to sinners; sometimes coupled with the warning that a persistent "quenching" of the spirit may issue in "the unpardonable sin." The fact is that, here again, the language is addressed to members of the church. The account of what happened on the Day of Pentecost, when the apostles were charged with intoxication (Acts 2), together with the allusions of the apostle Paul in 1 Cor. 14 to the "confusion" engendered by an impetuous impulse to "prophesy" or "speak with tongues," may hint to us what was in the writer's mind when he wrote 1 Thess. 5:19. Probably some erratic demonstrations had been made in the Thessalonian church by impulsive members, which had suggested violent measures for their suppression. Against such "salvation army" extravagances and "holiness" behavior, lacking in both gravity and decorum, comes the kindly protest, "Quench not the spirit." All incipient life is uncouth and exuberent in expression. It must have time to mature and ripen. Life is self-symmetrizing when left to itself. This kindly caution not to deal too hastily with effervescent and irregular displays of the new life in Christ, ought not to be tortured and distorted into a protest addressed to those who stand outside the field of thought contemplated and addressed.

They spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened.-Mal. 3:16.

Dear Brother Huggins:

Another year is almost gone, and has been crowded with many wonderful things. The fulfilling of prophehcy is indeed a lamp to our feet. We are watching the movements of the Jews, and when I read of the terrible cruelties to those people, I wonder how long, how long? It is again the time to renew our subscription to The Restitution. We could not do without it. We got ours today, and I notice that Sister Hogarth has asked for the poem, "The Church Walking with the World." I felt sure we had it, so I looked among our papers and found it, and will send under separate cover. I will send the paper; you may like to look it over. We love to read the old papers. Many of the writers are asleep awaiting the resurrection, and we believe that time is very near. Time goes so quickly and trouble and strife are everywhere. I would say to the brethren, be faithful, cultivate the Spirit of Christ. If we have not the Spirit of Christ we are none of his. Study the word and live close to God. Trust him fully. In our own strength we can do nothing. Be kindly, affectionate one to another, with brotherly love. We know we have passed from death into life because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death. I wish we could all at the beginning of this new year drop all enmity, have no hard feelings, be gentle and forgiving. If we cannot govern ourselves we cannot expect to govern others. Do not say, "I'll try," but say with God's help I will; pray continually, and I know the Lord will bless us. May God help us to serve him in spirit and in truth.

Carrie Free.

Brother Huggins:

The Church at Salem, Ohio, has been made to once more rejoice because of the willing obedience of Sister Ettie Kent. She is the daughter of Sister Moore, of the Salem Church. She is also the mother of an interesting family of boys and girls whom we hope to interest in the gospel. They have been attending our Sunday School for several years and are among our most intersting pupils. Mr. Kent accompanied his wife at the service. We trust that he may be awakened to the necessity of following his wife's obedience. Brother Pottorf has been visiting the family and holding Bible studies. He will continue his visits. Our services were begun by Brother Pottorf reading the sixth chapter of Romans and commenting on the first six verses. His remarks were very appropriate and interesting. After baptism the writer gave the charge to Sister Kent, stating briefly that she had just entered her trial period, also that her reward depended upon the effort she would make in obtaining a further acquaintance with the Father and the Son. She was admonished to make her calling and election sure by adding to her faith the seven Christian graces. "If these things be in you and abound," you will have an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ. We promised the willing and cheerful help of the Church in her effort to grow from infancy to full womanhood. We also presented the thought that her baptism was her birth out of the water and her spirit birth, the resurrection, depended upon her life as a Christian. The services closed by all extending the hand of Christian fellowship as a promise that each would assist our new Sister in keeping the covenant she had made with the Father and the Son. May we all walk worthy of the vocation wherewith we have been called, is our prayer. Lovingly,

D. C. Robison.

The Wonderful Christ

"What manner of man is this that even the winds and the sea obey him?" What a diversity of attributes are found in him.

The Lion and the Lamb
Power and Meekness
Riches and Poverty
Authority and Subjection
Dignity and Condescension
Justice and Mercy

In courage he is the Lion of the tribe of Judah, but as a Lamb he approches the one sitting on the throne (Rev. 5:7).

All power is given unto him in heaven and in earth , because he said, "Not my will, but thine be done." In riches he is heir to David's throne, and as the Son of God he is heir to the world, the first dominion lost by Adam; but when he was on earth he had not where to lay his head.

In authority he was Lord and Master, but he condescended to wash his disciples' feet. In dignity he was Lord of the Sabbath day, but he humbled himself to death on the cross. In justice he was exact, but in mercy he excelled all. He taught his disciples to pray for their enemies; and on the cross he said, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." And when giving to his disciples the gospel mission he said, "Beginning at Jerusalem."

First he offered free pardon to his murderers. O consistency, thou art a jewel that shines bright in the person of our Lord!

Truth was his guiding star to which he was ever true. No other man could say, "I am the bread of life." "No man cometh to the Father but by me." Nothing but truth caused him to utter such statements. For any other man to say such things would be blasphemy.

He, like his brethren, bore the human nature, the same in which Adam was made; in this he overcame the enemy, and to do so in any other would not benefit us. I do not like the term "sinful nature." When man sinned, his nature was not changed, but his relation to his maker was changed. Possibly I am wrong, but I cannot see it in that way.

George Francis.

"Think on These Things"

Phi'. 4:8

WE ARE not to allow our minds to run along lines that would be unjust. We should learn to apply the test of justice to every thought and word and act, while learning at the same time to view the conduct of others from a different standpoint, so far as reason will permit, from the standpoint of mercy, forgiveness, pity and helpfulness. But we cannot be too careful how we criticise every thought we entertain, every plan proposed that the lines of justice shall in no sesne of the word be infringed by us with our heart's approvel. We are to love and cultivate that which is pure to such an extent that that which is impure will become painful and distressing to us; we will then drop from memory evil things. This can only be accomplished by continually thinking upon those things that are pure, and avoiding the thoughts that are impure. We are to recognize the lovliness and esteem it. When we think on the pure things we must of necessity lift our mental vision to as high a point as possible and, as nearly as we may be able, to discern the loveliness of the perfect character of our God and our Lord Jesus Christ and, proportionately, the lovliness manifested in the followers of Jesus who walk closely in his footsteps. If there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think of these things. Things of any virtue or value, are noble deeds or noble sentiments. We may safely meditate upon these, and as a consequence find ourselves growing toward those ideals upon which our minds, our new natures, thus feed. We will become more and more transformed by the renewing of our minds, and approach nearer and nearer to the glorious likeness of our Lord and Master, being changed from glory to glory, inch by inch, step by step, little by little, during the present life. Our thoughts bring about this attitude; and if our union with the Lord is maintained we shall have part in the first resurrection, which will perfect us forever in the Lord's image and likeness.

The Hebrew Letter

ARTICLE TWO

OUR FIRST article, which embraced chapters one and two and the first six verses of chapter three, contains the proof of the identity of Jesus the Christ as the Messiah of the prophets. The word "Christ" being an official title and is the Greek equivalent of the Hebrew word "Messiah." The stumbling block to the Jew came when the Son of Mary became associated with the prophetic utterances. The veil of unbelief hid from them the product of the Spirit of God in connection with the woman (Luke 1:35; Gal. 4:4). They could only see in him the product of Joseph and Mary. Associated with this was the oft repeated declaration that he would suffer death at the ahnds of his brethren. Their conception of the restoration of the overturned kingdom of Israel as the future kingdom of God, was sustained by the prophetic word. They constantly thought that Jesus would, in his flesh, fulfill these conditions. Their minds were not enlightened when Jesus taught them that after three days he would arise from the dead. Even after he had arisen, and they had proof that he was the one whom they had followed previous to his resurrection, the veil still hid from them the time in which this event or restoration would take place. After forty days they asked Jesus if he would at that time restore the kingdom to Israel. He answered them that the times and the seasons were in the Faher's hands. He then briefly outlined the work that they were assigned to acomplish, and ordered them to wait for the reception of the Spirit that would be given them at Pentecost. From that date the veil was removed, and their conception of Jesus the Christ was clear. Peter preached him as the heir of David's throne, and that he had been raised from the dead for that purpose. Paul preached oim as the power of God and the wisdom of God. The apostles now remembered the many things spoken by Jesus in the flesh that they could not comprehend.

In resuming our subject we note that the apostle changes his instruction from the doctrinal to the certainty of the judgment of Jehovah if they again accepted the law covenant. He cites them to God's dealings with Israel of old. He announced to them that Jehovah had punished them for their unbelief. Their carcasses fell in the wilderness. He warns them against rejecting the one whose name had covered them. They could not escape a retribution of justice (Heb. 3:6-19; 2:1-5). In the fourth chapter the apostle warns them to fear, lest a promise to enter into his rest would be forfeited through the veil of unbelief.

The incentive to hold fast to "the things which they had heard" could only be realized in their faithfulness. The glories of the future sabbath is revealed to them in announcing that God had purposed their future rest in his plan, finished from the foundation of the world. We are informed that the ages were thoroughly adjusted from the beginning. There was but one way to become partakers of the sabbath, or rest, viz., to hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end. They are further enlightened that all things are naked and open unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do. In the eleventh verse it is written, "Let us labor therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief," disobedience, margin. Israel forfeited their promise of rest in the land through unbelief. Had they been faithful to the covenant at Sinai they would have become a holy nation, a kingdom of priests. The dealings with Israel under the law were an example to the Hebrew brethren. The apostle admonishes his brethren to come boldly unto the throne of grace, that they may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need.

In examination of chapter 5 we note that the apostle calls the attention of his brethren to the authority and the honor of Christ's priesthood. He compares the Aaronic and Melchisedec priesthoods. The honor of these priesthoods was not inherited but conferred by the Deity. Each had a human and divine element. The Aaronic possessed the human that they might have compassion on the ignorant and on them that are out of the way. We can only have compassion on our erring brethren in remembering our own frailties. So it was with the Melchisedec priesthood which was a proof that Mary's son fulfilled the prophetic utterances concerning the Messiah. His kingdom could not exist without a priethood. So it must be forever, as Jesus had been rewarded with a continuous or everlasting life. While Jesus was in the flesh he could not officiate as an everlasting priest. It was the honor that God would confer for perfect obedience. It was prophetic and would belong to the one whom Jehovah would immortalize. It was not like the priesthood under the law, having a beginning and an ending. It is to be a continuous priesthood. It was made after the power of an endless life, while the other was made after the law of a carnal commandment.

When the Jew had a clear conception of the two orders he willingly accepted Jesus the Christ as identical with the Messiah of the Jewish prophecies. The veil had been removed and the stumbling block no longer remained. "Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec" was a prophecy which related to one different to the Aaronic (Heb. 5:6). Then followed the statement that the one upon which the new priesthood would be conferred must have a taste of human weakness and the frailties of the flesh. In this condition he had offred up prayer and supplications, with strong crying and tears unto him that was able to save him from death (out of death, margin), and was heard in that he feared. Though a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered. He became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." He then chides his brethren because of their being children needing milk and not able to be nourished by strong meat. These conditions existed because of their dulness of hearing. Instead of their being teachers they had to be taught the first principles of the oracles of God.

The sixth chapter is replete with admonitions and doctrinal points and a surety of a retributive judgment. The apostle calls their attention to the necessity of their leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ (word of the beginning of Christ, margin.), and go to perfection. In verse one he directs them not to lay again the foundation of repentance from dead works (works of death, Diaglott), and faith toward God. The works of death were the ordinances under the law covenant which contained the baptisms (washings), laying on of hands, and of the resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment. The baptisms referred to the ordinace of washing required of the priests; the laying on of hands had reference to the requirements that they lay their hands on the victim to be slain wherein there was an acknowledgement of sin and a petition for its being covered. In this ritual service was a type of the future resurrection in which our sins are forgiven. The judgment was also referred to through the slaying of the covenant victim. Christ was judged a profane person and slain by his brethren. They must lay aside the law ordinances and go on to perfection under the Christ covenant lest they in the end suffer the punishment of the second death. If they returned for protection under the law they migth seek for repentance, but it could not be found. They would become the thorns and briers which are rejected, whose end is to be burned. This is followed by an earnest exhortation in these words: "We desire that every one of you do show the same diligence to the full assurance of hope unto the end. That ye be not slothful, but followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises." As an incentive the apostle calls their attention to the covenant made with Abraham and his faithfulness. In the closing of this chapter the apostle tells his brethren that this hope is "an anchor of the soul both sure and steadfast, and it entereth into that within the veil; whither the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus, made an high priest forever after the order of Melchisedec." We will be priests of this order if we hold fast the hope firm to the end.

OLD AGE TO YOUTH

We are getting old—you and I,
Or soon we'll be along the way;
A few more seasons drifting by
Will find us tossed from out the fray;
But there, now at their morning play,
Are keepers of the future store;
They hold the future in their sway,
They set tomorrow's final score.

Our step is slow, our eye is dim,
And twilight shadows gather gray;
And though we try so hard to win
We're slowing up each passing day,
But youth, who can not doubt nor fret;
Sees truth and hope—and something more;
To them life blooms, is never set—
They set tomorrow's final score.

Our ways are fixed—our time is spent,
As we file out in dull array;
We've failed in life where'ere we went,
And soon cold death will draw its pay.
But youth, too young yet to betray
The silver dreams that go before
Must be built up so they'll not stray—
They set tomorrow's final score.

Teach them the truth—their faith to prove,
Tell them that Christ did die for sin;
And that in God we live and move
And must obey if life we'd win;
For life's a gift from God above
Through Christ his Son, whom we adore,
And youth must know that God is love—
They set tomorrow's final score.

A Psalm for 1920

In the one hundred and seventh Psalm we read of David, the sweet singer of Israel, urging the people "to give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good and his mercy endureth for ever, and he satisfieth the longing soul and filleth the hungry soul with goodness." All the Psalms are praises and thanksgiving to God for his loving, watchful care of all his little ones. Christ Jesus, our elder brother, continually gave thanks to the Father, even before the blessings which he knew God sendeth, were seen; and so all children should be glad and grateful each day and each hour for the good which God already has given us and for that which we know will come to us if our hearts are filled and overflowing with love and gratitude.

David trusted God all the time and even during what seemed to be hard trials, he still felt happy and thankful and his writings, the beautiful Psalms are pure and true expressions of his great love and gratitude to his Father for all his goodness "to the children of men." And because he was happy and thankful while he was just tending the sheep, God gave him more important work to do; other boys were given the sheep to care for and David was called to feed and care for men and women and little children, to tell them of God's ever presence, of his love and care, and protection to each one of us. And so if we all just try as hard as we can every day to love all the work we have to do, and do it joyfully and willingly whether it is school work or something else, and be grateful to God who has given us the strength and intelligence to work for him, and do all the little things we have to do just as perfectly as we can, then some day when it is the right time, God will know that we can do bigger and still better things and lead us into more real joy and peace and pleasure than we ever knew.

Being grateful for the good we have today and thanking God in our hearts every moment—this is real gratitude; all the other good things are only symbols of God's abundant supply and his bounteous blessings which he continuously pours out upon his children; his goodness is always outpouring like the big Horn of Plenty and so, this glad New Year, we can all think of God as the Great Supply which is constantly giving us all kinds of good things—love and truth and strength and joy and the intelligence to see and appreciate all that is good and lovely, and the clear, bright thoughts which enable us to love all of God's creation, the dear little birds and squirrels and the trees with their pretty branches and leaves and all that God has made.

A Happy New Year

The New Year is now with us. On the calendar it is known as 1920; but what shall it stand for in your life? Will it bear a hope of happiness, harmony, and success in every good idea you hold, and failure to every wrong thought you harbor? This New Year entirely is in your hands, dear readers, to do with and make of it as you will.

You do not have to take things as they are. It is for YOU to make of yourself and your life what you will. If you are God-like—that means good, because you were created in the image and likeness of God—you will be able to overcome evil and wrong in every way, and in place of errors you can build up a record of good deeds and work; and these in turn, bring happiness and success to every one who but entertains the right thoughts that make for joy and happiness.

The only way you can be happy is through being busy in good works. With this thought in mind Brother and Sister Alexander D. Donaldson wish you all

A Happy New Year

The New Year's Party

There's a party to be given to the world
on New Year's Day,
They've invited March and April, August,
June and sunny May,
And September and October, February,
too, I hear,
And if I'm not mistaken all the months
that fill a year.

It's a very wondrous party and the invitations read,
"Will you kindly come along and bring the weather that we need
Bring your snowballs and your sunshine,
bring your hail and bring your rain,
Bring your apples, pears and roses, and next year—please come again?"

Can't you see them come a trooping!
What a jolly crowd they make!
Let us give them happy faces—that is better far than cake.
Let us give them good behavior,
gentle words and lessons learned—
Then we'll know the New Year party is a gift that we have earned!

A Reminder

For some unknown reason The Restitution has discontinued the notice of "Words of Life," the official magazine of the "Conditional Mortality Mission." This is to remind our readers that this is the season for renewals or new subscriptions. The magazine is published monthly, and the price is 50 cents a year. Send all money to G. Rothe, 1301 Park Place, Brooklyn, N. Y., who will be pleased to send sample copies to those desiring them.

With Allyn King Foster I will say:

"If I had my way I should make you content by taking you gently to the storehouse of your present blessings and counting them over with you; I should make you peaceful and patient by leading you to the Council Chamber of the Universe on whose portal is the ancient legend: 'All things work together for good;' I would make you powerful and hopeful by kneeling with you at the feet of him who said: 'Be not afraid, I have overcome the world.' I know of no better thought for us to keep with us during this New Year 1920."

The Aged

No matter how many the children the mother always has room in her heart for all; for to her there never are too many. By the same holy law of love, never let it be said or thought that the left-alone old grandmother or grandfather, with no other place to go, but to your family or mine, has become "one too many."

Which Are You

When Mary Sunshine asks her friends
To come and play with dolly,
They always have a happy time,
For Mary is so jolly.
She's glad to have them use her things,
Is not the least bit scary;
And that's the reason that they love
To come and play with Mary.

A generous person always is respected, loved, and honored by all with whom they come in contact. Besides, they retain their own self-respect—which amounts to much—and also receive the commendation of God. Whether you be boy or girl try to follow the example of Mary Sunshine. Be generous.

When Willie Crosspatch plays baseball,
He's sure to start a fuss;
And like as not the game will end
In what is called a muss.
His own way is the only way
He wants—just think how silly!
No wonder that his playmates say,
"Oh, bother, here comes Willie."

A selfish person is no good to themselves or any one else; they are a pest, a nuisance to be shunned by all. Try to so live that your companionship will be courted. A smile will win friends, while a scowl will drive them away. Don't be a Willie Crosspatch.

Tell It In Flowers

To Those I Know, and to Those Also "Whom Not Having Seen, I Love"

Some one has said, "Tell it in flowers. Let the flowers voice the wish of your heart for your friend. It is a beautiful thought, but how can I do this ?"

The flowers are gone and winter is here.
I cannot wish you joy in flowers
That I have plucked in woodland bowers.
For they have fled—the lovely things
Before the time for wintry winds.
No liverworts are by the stream,
No dainty ferns, nor woodbine green,
No odorous violets in the grass
To say good morning as you pass.

But if I cannot tell in these,
The wishes that your heart would please,
My little pansies I'll call back
Across the summer's shining track,
And bid their tender faces smile
With precious thought of Christ, the while
You sit beside your YULE-TIDE fire,
And read the tales that never tire.

Or, bring from Sharon's vale the rose
That can to you so much disclose
Of what the prophets have foretold
Of coming CITY paved with gold;
Or fetch the lillies from the plains
That robed in dress of royal stains,
E'en Solomon could not outvie
Howe'er so hard his weavers try.

O friends, I wish you joy in flowers,
That bloom where Jesus spent his hours!
Dear olive sprays that sing of peace,
When sin is gone, and war shall cease,
I want to wreath your rooms today
With roses from the far away
Entwined with buds from almond trees
That haste to ope e'er winter flees.

Just as your God doth haste to do
The things that he hath promised you
For roses talk of Bethlehem,
Where Child was born who died for men.
And he himself is Sharon's Rose,
And wheresoe'er the traveler goes
In that fair land, those roses speak
Of him, the Lovely One and meek.
(O precious flowers! you soothe us yet
In rasping hours of toil annd fret!)

And so I want white lilies dress
To voice our Savior's righteousness;
And sprigs of cedar, pine and fir
The deepest depths of heart to stir;
And all the flowers to tell of day
When harmful things shall pass away;
When our dear Savior shall be King
And all the world his praise shall sing,
And Earth all glory-around shall be
From Orient lands to utmost sea.

The Yoke of Bondage

A REFERENCE to Paul's epistle to the Galatians shows the brethren of Galatia, after receiving the Holy Spirit, and after starting outright in the race for eternal life, were in Paul's absence brought under the evil influence of false teachers, who "perverted the gospel of Christ," and were led astray by them. Paul writes them in no uncertain language concerning their sin, and the danger to them, unless they return to the purity of the gospel of faith in Jesus Christ. He says: "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel, which is not another; but there be some that trouble you and would pervert the Gospel of Christ. But though we or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you, than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." (Gal. 1:6-8).

"O foolish Galatians, who hath bewitched you that ye should not obey the truth? I am afraid of you lest I have bestowed labor in vain. I desire to be present with you now and to change my voice, for I stand in doubt of you" (Gal. 6:11-20).

It is evident from this earnest language that the noble apostle deemed the offence of the Galatians (whosoever it was) a serious one; and it may be well for us of the last days to search out the nature of their error, and happily avoid stumbling over the same stone.

In Gal. 2:16 Paul points out very definitely, that justification comes not by the law, but by faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Thus indicating that the offense of the Galatians had something to do with the law. In Gal. 3:2-5 he asks, "Received ye the spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?" In other words whence comes the power which ye have to heal the sick, to banish suffering and pain, to restore sight to the blind, hearing to the deaf, and life to the dead? Does it come by observance of burnt offerings, feast days, sabbath days, and other points of the law? or is it by faith of Jesus Christ?

In Gal. 4:9 Paul plainly states the charge against them. His language is so plain that neither they nor we can fail to understand: "But now after ye have known God, or rather are known of God, how turn ye again to the weak and beggarly elements, whereunto ye desire again to be in bondage?" Advocates of the two law theory contend that this offense of the foolish Galatians had reference to the law of circumcision only. But Paul says in his complaint, verses 10, 11: "Ye observe days, and months, and times, and years. I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed labor upon you in vain."

In Gal. 3:10 we read, "For as many as are under the works of the law, are under the curse. For it is written, Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them." Now what was written in "the book of the law," the observance of which, according to Paul, placed mankind under the curse? The ten commandments were written there. The laws of sacrifice and of ceremonies were written there. Numerous other laws calculated to hold in check and govern a rebellious and stiff-necked people, were written there. In short, all of the Siniatic law, recorded in Ex. 21:22,23 was by the command of God written by Moses in a book, and this book was placed in the side of the Ark for the government of Israel. This book has been variously called by inspired writers. "The law;" "The law of God;" "The law of Moses;" "The book of the law;" "The book of the law of God;" "The book of the law of Moses;" and lastly, "The law of God given by the mouth of Moses."

This being so, it unquestionably follows that when Paul says, "The law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith," he had reference to the law as written in the book of the law, not as part of it only. When Paul said, "But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster," he manifestly meant us to understand that we were no longer under the law (schoolmaster), or any portion of it. These foolish Galatians, after having come out from under the law, and after having for a season, "enjoyed the liberty wherewith Christ had made them free," had deliberately returned to bondage, and were again observing days, months, times and years. They had again placed upon their necks the yoke of bondage, the emblem of servitude, which neither they nor their fathers could bear. God forbid that we, in these latter days should, with the example of these foolish Galatians, and Paul's stern rebuke before us, commit the same mistake. God forbid that Paul should have occasion to say of us, "I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed labor in vain;" or that we should observe even one of "the weak and beggarly elements of the law," as a condition of salvation, and thus have it said of us, "Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law, ye are fallen from grace."

Dear ones of the household of faith, and especially those of you who have listened to the seductive arguments of the two-law theory, and other plausible conclusions reached by those who would "pervert the Gospel of Christ," let me earnestly beseech you to "stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled with the yoke of bondage."

S. H. Thomas.

Should Believers
Espouse the League of Nations?

SHOULD CHRISTIANS espouse the proposed League of Nations and Christian ministers advocate it? We answer, "No," for these reasons:

1. It does not acknowledge the living God or his Son Jesus Christ. These are serious omissions. The prophet Daniel accused King Belshazzar thus: "And the God in whose hand thy breath is, and whose are all thy ways, hast thou not glorified." Again, when Nebuchadnezzar, the predecessor of Belshazzar, failed to give glory to God, "he was deposed from his kingly throne, and they took his glory from him. And he was driven from the sons of men; and his heart was made like the beasts, and his dwelling was with the wild asses; they fed him with grass like oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven; till he knew that the most high God ruled in the kingdom of men, and that he appointeth over it whomsoever he will" (Dan. 5:20,21).

Away back in post-diluvian times all mankind undertook to build a tower whose height would reach unto heaven. It was a great league without God, and ended in confusion, just as all such projects have ended. The Sovereign of the universe is too important a factor in this world to be ignored; and Jesus Christ, the Judge of all the nations, cannot be overlooked with impunity. We have the highest respect for the statesmen who formed the league, but it bespeaks too clearly the atheism of the times to receive our support.

2. Because heathen and anti-Christian nations are included. Ultimately the league is to embrace all nations. This means that Christians are bound up together with Mohammedans and idolators, who are positively opposed to our Savior, Jesus Christ. It is a union bordering on spiritual adultery, and very unbecoming to the Bride of Christ at this expectant hour. The ancient prophets denounced the kings of Judah and Israel for just such alliances, and we ought emulate their example by withholding our support.

3. Because the league is supported by the Roman Papacy. Pope Benedict is quoted as strongly favoring the league, and is even said to be one of its promoters. Well might the Pope support such an institution to safeguard himself and his harlot church form the awful judgment of God now impending. But should Christians help the harlot, drunken with the blood of saints and martyrs, out of her troubles? Nay, verily! Instead, we should rejoice that the hour of Babylon's judgment is come. "And again they said, Alleluia! And her smoke rose up forever."

4. Because the next orderly institution in the divine order is the fifth universal monarchy, according to Dan. 2:44. The great war witnessed the overthrow of every Roman imperial throne, consequently the world came officially to the end of the Roman Empire, and the next orderly institution is the throne of the Ancient of Days (Dan. 7:9,10). And while Gentile times end absolutely at the second coming of Christ, an introductory ending took place when the Holy Land was cleared of the Turks, 1918, amid the distress of nations, according to Luke 21:24-26. Therefore to advocate a great world league at this moment looks like a breach of faith in the coming kingdom of God. Let others do as they may, the present writer purposes to stand on the promises of God.

5. Because the league is impracticable. At the very foundation of the League of Nations are the weakness and wickedness of unregenerate human nature. Of course there are noble individual exceptions, but the masses of the nations are unregenerate and degenerate. The natural "heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked; who can know it?"

And there will be more than one nation to consider the treaty only a "scrap of paper." Even before it was ratified Italy, one of the signatory powers, has broken the treaty by permitting the Italian occupation of Fiume. And right in the formation of the treaty and the League, the principle of "self determination," one of President Wilson's fourteen points upon which the league superstructure professes to be built, is grossly violated by the gift of Shantung with forty million Chinese to Japan. It is difficult for some of us to understand how a league, established by injustice, can insure peace and justice to any nation! Furthermore, it is inconsistent to preach that the lion and the lamb can ever lie down together in an unregenerated world. We stand firmly upon the principle of regeneration as essential to world peace. Therefore before rejecting our position let the reader ponder deeply what we have said, for we have tried to speak scripturally and logically. Exchange.

The Hebrew Letter
ARTICLE THREE

IN THE preceding chapters the apostle has continuously and diplomatically led up to the subject of the Melchisedec priesthood, and has logically proven that Jesus was the Messiah proclaimed by the prophets of old. It was proven that the prophetic utterances had their fulfillment in Jesus of Nazareth, whom they had hanged on a tree. These Hebrew brethren had not understood the full import of the name of the Son of Mary. The angel announced his name when the maiden was informed that she should be his mother, and that he should become great, and become the Son of the Highest. This child was to take his Father's name. It is the "I Am" of Exodus 3:14 that Moses was to announce to Israel when he visited them in Egypt. To the Jew it was a name that any Hebrew child might have given him. To the Christian it had a much deeper significance. His name was above all names. He was not only to be a King but a Priest on his throne. The seventh chapter begins with the announcement that this Melchisedec was a King and a Priest on his throne. He was greater than Abrahom whom he met and blessed as he returned from his defeat of the Kings. This Abraham acknowledged by paying tithes to his superior.

In Melchisedec we have a King of righteousness and King of Salem, which is King of peace. The titles here expressed are applied to a human priest and king on his throne. A greater than Abraham, with whom God had made a covenant concerning a seed that should become as numerous as the sands of the sea shore. This seed Paul in Gal. 3:16 announces to be the unit seed, Jesus the Christ. The apostle in Heb. 7 has proven the necessity of a new order of priesthood, the Aaronic having been of the flesh and not suited to an order expressed in Melchisedec. The new priesthood is superior to and typical of the one spoken of in Gen. 14. This priest must be the Son of God and of the geneology and the antitypical Son of God, Melchisedec.

The apostle proves him to be superior to others in stating that the priesthood is of a new order, and that as a priest he blessed Abraham; also that the order was of an unending nature and could not be traced to an order of a priestly character. This priesthood had no human starting point, and no end of days. It evidently began when the pair were clothed with the blood of slain animals. This signifies that this sacrifice covered their sin. The human order began when the Lord God appointed the two sons of Adam Cain and Able as priest under the promise made to the woman (Gen. 3.15). This order continued until Jehovah instituted a new order under the law.

The Aaronic Priesthood was human and was made after the law of a carnal commandment; the Melchisedec was made after the power of an endless life. He gives further evidence of the superiority of their new order by writing: "For it is evident that our Lord sprang out of Judah; of which tribe Moses wrote nothing concerning priesthood. And it is far more evident: for that after the similitude of Melchisedec there ariseth another priest. For he testifieth, Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec." He further testifies, "There is verily a disannulling of the commandment going before for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof." This order was made without an oath but the new order required an oath as follows: "The Lord sware and will not repent, Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec."

The promise under the law was pendent upon "If you will obey my voice indeed and keep my covenant." The honor of the new order lay in the fact that obedience had been rendered. It was said to Abraham, "Because thou hast obeyed, in blessing I will bless thee," etc. The spirit of the oath was in obedience, and then the blessing. Jesus like Abraham, proved himself worthy, and God declared him a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec. This is an unchanging priesthood. It began in the garden (Gen. 3:21), and was the root of the Melchisedec priesthood. The King of Salem, a priest of the most high God, was the link that bound the ordinance to its root, and continued it unto Jesus the Christ, to whom he gave it because he had obeyed his voice. This order belongs to Israel regenerated; and when Jehovah's laws have been written in their minds, Israel must accept Jesus Christ as the Messiah, When they have been planted in the land, having passed under the rod and into the bond of the covenant, the blessings of this priesthood will be given to those who have survived the process of purging, in which the rebels will be destroyed. The land will have been purified and the temple spoken of by the prophet Ezekiel will have been built.

These blessings will not come to Israel without a great struggle. It will be Jacob saved from his trouble. The institution of sacrifices under the temple service will not be a continuation of the services under the law, but be a continuation of the sacrifice of the animals in the garden. It is not clear to our mind just what the significance of these services will be; we know they will be Israelitish, and can only be enjoyed after their regeneration. In the eighth chapter the apostle states: "Now of the things of which we have spoken this is the sum: We have such an high priest who is set on the right hand of the majesty in the heavens, a minister of the sanctuary and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, and not man." He further states that every high priest is ordained to offer gifts and sacrifices.

It is necessary that the high priest under the Melchisedec have something to offer. Further, he argues, if he were (now) on earth, he should not be a priest, seeing that there are priests that offer gifts according to the law, who serve unto the example and shadow of heavenly things, as Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make the tabernacle, See, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern showed thee in the mount. The summing up of things spoken is that the services under the law were shadows of heavenly things. The law was weak and could not continue, therefore the necessity of an ordinance that would continue in the new heavens where Jesus would be the minister of the new order. In this he had obtained a more excellent ministry, by which also he is the mediator of a better covenant, which was established upon better promises. The apostle states that if the first covenant had been faultless, no other covenant would have been needed. This covenant was made at Sinai, and the blessings were conditioned to obedience (Ex. 19:5,6). It was made with Israel. The New Covenant herein spoken of will be ratified after the Lord has come and purified Judah and Israel. This covenant will be made after they have been caused to pass under the rod and into the bond of the (New) Covenant.

We should not forget that this covenant is based upon the everlasting priesthood which speaks of blessings under the new government in which Judah and Israel will be the blessed subjects of the Kingdom of God, the heavens where the throne of the Majesty of these heavens will be established. These are the heavens that will declare the glory of God, and the firmament will show his handiwork. In them hath he set a tabernacle for the sun (the Son) (Psa. 19). This Psalm, when understood, is applied when Judah and Israel become the seed of the blessed of the Lord. Under this covenant all shall know the Lord from the least unto the greatest. In proof of the above see Ezek. 20:33-39; 37:15-28; Jer. 33:14-17; 30:4-10. Our prayer is, "Come, Lord Jesus; come quickly."

Who is a Liar?

"I said in my haste; All men are liars" (Psa. 116:11). "Yea, let God be true, but every man a liar." Why? "That thou mightest be justified in thy sayings, and mighest overcome when thou art judged" (Rom. 3:4).

Men are all under sin. There is none righteous, no not one. There is none that doeth good no, not one (Rom. 3:10,12,18). David said of his enemies, Ye shall be slain all of you, that delight in lies; they bless with their mouth, but they curse inwardly (Psa. 62:4). So they are deceivers, hypocrites, liars; and belong to the class of whom John said there was no truth in him. "When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar and the father of it" (John 8:44). Christ seemed harsh to those Jews, as they claimed God was their Father, but Christ said: "If God were your Father, ye would love me, and believe the truth that I tell;" and because they did not believe, that God was his Father they were liars (John 8:42). And if Christ should say, I know him nott, he would be a liar like unto them (John 8: 55). He that denieth that Jesus is the Christ is a liar (1 John 2:22). And he that denies that Christ was born the Son of God is a liar (John 1: 13; 1 John 3:9). The Grecians are always liars. Why? Because they taught untruths for filthy lucre's sake (Titus 1:11,12). There are many today that teach untruths for money: and contend earnestly for it. They are liars in the sight of God, and in the sight of the believers of the gospel that Paul preached; for the foundation of all false doctrines, is formed on the words that were preached to Eve in the Garden of Eden, "Ye shall not surely die" (Gen. 3:4).

If one claims he is sanctified and cannot sin, he makes Christ a liar (1 John 1:8-10). He that believeth not the record that God gave of his Son hath made him a liar (1 John 5:10). All men are sinners, because they are all born of sinners. Christ could not sin because he was born of God, and God's seed remained in him (1 John 3:9). And whosoever claims that man was the father of Christ is a liar in the sight of God. When one comes in our midst and claims to be an apostle of Christ, and does not teach the gospel that Paul taught, he is found a liar (Rev. 2:2). What is their doom? All liars shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death (Rev. 21:8,27). All men are liars; but some do not suffer the second death. The word "all" is frequently a class word. When we say "all men are liars," we mean all of the Adamic race. But the liars that suffer the second death are the class that have believed, and obeyed the gospel, and have been baptised into Christ, so they have their names written in the "Book of Life." But they could not stand persecution for Christ's sake, so they went into some other body, and did not return to Christ again; so they died out of Christ, and will have to suffer for the deeds done in the body (2 Cor. 5:10). Included in this class are those that heard the true gospel and refused to accept it.

Timely Admonition and Counsel

HONOR THE Lord with thy substance, and with the firstfruits of all thine increase: so shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine" (Prov. 3:9,10). "I love them that love me; and those that seek me early shall find me. Riches and honor are with me; yea, durable riches and righteousness. My fruit is better than gold, yea, than fine gold; and my revenue than choice silver" (Prov. 8:17,18,19)." The Lord renderest to every man according to his work." (Psa. 62:12). "Blessed is the man that heareth me, watching daily at my gates, waiting at the posts of my doors. For whoso findeth me findeth life, and shall obtain favor of the Lord. But he that sinneth against me wrongeth his own soul; all they that hate me love death" (Prov. 8:34,35,36).

"Keep my commandments and live; and my law as the apple of thine eye. Bind them upon thy fingers, write them upon the table of thine heart" (Prov. 7:2,3). "Blessed is the man whom thou choosest, and causeth to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy courts; we shall be satisfied with the goodness of thy house, even of thy holy temple" (Psa. 65:4).

"Yea, if thou crieth after knowledge, and liftest up thy voice for understanding; if thou seeketh her as silver, and searcheth for her as for hid treasures; then shalt thou understand the fear of the Lord and find the knowledge of God" (Pro. 2:3,4,5). Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge him and he shall direct thy paths. Be not wise in thine own eyes; fear the Lord, and depart from evil" (Pro. 3:5,6,7). "The curse of the Lord is in the house of the wicked: but he blesseth the habitation of just. Surely he scorneth the scorners: but he giveth grace to the lowly. The wise shall inherit glory: but shame shall be the promotion of fools." (Prov. 3:33,34,35).

A NEW YEAR PRAYER

So let me live that all my days
Run onwards to unending days,
Since down Time's corridors I see
Sure footprints to Eternity;
Remembering still that all I do
And all I am continues through
This world's dark passage, poorly lit,
Into the shining Infinite.
May all I suffer, love and learn
Light candles in God's House to burn,
And make a little radiance, bright,
Even in that undreamed-of Light.

Remember the Helping Fund

Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble—in the day of evil, margin (Psa. 41:1).

We whose names are given below, believing it be be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

JUST A MINUTE PLEASE

I have only just a minute; only sixty seconds in it; forced upon me; can't refuse it: didn't seek it; didn't choose it; but it's up to me to use it; I must suffer if I lose it; give account if I abuse it; just a tiny little minute but eternity is in it.—Selected.

Editorial

Many renewals to The Restitution are now being sent in. With the cost of all material high, and still going up, all can see the need for money in the beginning of the New Year. Let those who have not yet remitted their subscriptions please do so at once. Thanks.

Contributors should remember that at this time of the year MSS are more numerous than we can find room to print. This makes their articles appear slowly. This fact gives them an opportunity to "let patience have her perfect work" (James 1:4).

The regular session of the Young People's Society was turned into a rally and get-acquainted meeting, on Friday evening, January 2. 1920, at the home of Brother and Sister Titman, Lakefront Ave. Although the weather was very severe a large number braved the cold, and were not sorry for their efforts, as an unusually pleasurable, and by no means profitless evening, was spent. Among visitors present was our new Sister in the truth, Sister Fleming, of Toledo. The Society extends at all times a cordial invitation to visitors whether they be in the truth or strangers from without.—Heloise Crawford.

An Honest Inquiry

FRANKLY ANSWERED

Dear Brother Huggins:

We notice in The Restitution, under date of Dec. 16, 1919, an article "Be Consistent."

Some one seems to advocate the doctrine of a future probation for the dead who have died previous to Christ's coming, and he mentions "Fair chance," "Second chance," etc.

There is really a question with many of us as to whether ever one has had a chance or not before he died. The South Africans who were canibals, for instance; did they have a chance?

We know that the living who do not understand when Christ comes are going to be taught the truth then. Now if the ignorant are taught the truth then, why are not the ignorant of past ages taught the truth too (Acts 11:34)?

We understand that every man must come to a knowedge of the truth (1 Tim. 2:4,5,6). We also understand that there were men that did not come to an understnding of the truth (Matt. 13:10, 11; Mark 1:11; Luke 8:10).

Can you quote Scripture that the first brother mentions and show whether it includes men under both ages or not? Now, dear Brother Huggins, we are not asking these questions with a view to argument, or to try and show anything new, but for the purpose of learning more about the truth. Kindly answer if you find time either privately or through The Restitution.

Yours for the truth.

Editorial Comments

JUST AS long as it is in the mind that all men must have a chance to be saved an unsound premise is entertained. Our correspondent is an honest inquirer, but assumes all the time that a universal opportunity must be so. He can point to no time in the past when such an idealistic condition prevailed, and he has quoted no Scripture which proves it ever will obtain. Jesus Christ was called "the light of the world" when he was here, but "there were men who did not come to an understanding of the truth," is admitted (Matt. 13:10,11; Luke 8:10). A golden age of universal opportunity is the dream of a visionary; it has no analogy, prophecy, or precedent to justify it.

The Subjects of The Kingdom

"We know that the living who do not understand when Christ comes are going to be taught then." We know nothing of the kind. The fifth Bible Lesson has just been republished in a second edition; it also appeared in The Restitution. Instead of all the Canibals of South Africa, Aborginies of Australia, and Red Men of North America being dumped into the Kingdom of God when Jesus comes, we have demonstrated by the Holy Scriptures in this lesson that God is as selective in choosing subjects as in electing saints. for his kingdom; and that instead of all having a chance then a "remnant" only is taken out of the whole. "If the ignorant are taught the truth then, why are not the ignorant of the past ages taught the truth too?" is a question that attempts to be logical, but as the premise upon which it is built is a bank of sand, we can only admire the logic that goes to waste on an assumed premise, unproved, and unprovable.

Is Knowledge Compulsory?

"We understand that every man must come a knowledge of the truth." In proof of this statement we are referred to 1 Tim. 2:4,5,6. But the text does not say what the statement does, or anything like it. Inspiration only says it is God's will that all men should come to a knowledge of the truth. It so happens that acquiring knowledge depends, to a large extent, upon the will of the pupil who is learning as well as upon the will of the Father. God's will when left for others to execute, is not always done. Man has a free will (Ezra 3:5; 7:13). He has power over his own will (1 Cor. 7:13). He can be self willed (Gen. 49:6; 2 Pet. 2:10); sin wilfully (Heb. 10:26); be ignorant willingly (2 Pet. 3:5); refuse the truth or choose it (Heb. 11:24,25); refuse God who speaks to him from heaven (Heb. 12:25); resist the Holy Spirit (Acts 7:51); set at naught all God's counsel (Prov. 1:25, 30); obey God or disobey him (Rom. 6); and be a subject of either praise or blame (2 Cor. 11:2,17,22; Gal. 2:11). So long as man has it in his power to reject or frustrate the counsel of God concerning himself (Luke 7:30) the argumentations and logic of Universalists about the will of God are worse than wasted.

God's Will Not Always Done

That all men should come to the knowledge of the truth is according to God's will; that is what 1 Tim. 2:4,5,6 says. It does not say that "every man must come to a knowledge of the truth." It does not help matters to say that God "will have it so." God "would have" many things in the past which he did not have (Matt. 12:7; Luke 13:34). Again the text does not say, "All men are sure to be saved." It reads, "Who will have all men to be saved." There is an important "if" in the premises, concerning which you may read in 1 Cor. 15:1-3; Heb. 3:14. But lest you read "will have" in the sense of "it must be," we remind you that the original for "will have" in 1 Tim. 2:4,5,6 is the verb "theloo." This verb occurs in many places where even Universalists would not, and could not claim, it expresses the certainty of accomplishment. Paul would ("theloo") that all men were as himself (1 Cor. 7:7). They were not then, have not become so since, and never will be so in the future. Again, he would ("theloo") that all the Corinthians spake with tongues (1 Cor. 14:5). They did not so speak. Then here is a most remarkable contrast of statement: "How often would ("ethelesa") I have gathered your children together, ... but ye would not" ("ouk-etheleesate") (Matt. 23:37). Israel, says God, "would none of me" (Psa. 81:11). "They would none of my counsel; they despised all my reproof" (Prov. 1:20-33). He complains of them as "lying children, that will not hear the law of the Lord" (Isa. 30:9-15). How can men who "will not hear the law of the Lord" ever come to a knowledge of the truth?

Various Renderings of 1 Tim. 2:4,5,6.

In conclusion, we point to the fact that the best scholarship in the world confirms our interpretation. Rotherham reads, "Who wills all men to be saved"; Hinds, "Who wishes"; Revised Version, "Who willeth that all men should be saved"; Campbell, MacKnight and Doddridge, "Who wills all men to be saved"; Luther, "Who willeth that all men should be helped"; Emphatic Diaglott, "Who desires all men to be saved, and to come to an accurate knowledge of the truth."

A Word on Steadfastness

I HAVE just been reading "The Maccabean" wherein is told in graphic words the longing of the Jews for the restoration of their ancient home. Every paragraph is intense with feeling.

Their hopes and aspirations are expressed in words alive with feeling. All the wrongs, injustices, injuries, and persecutions have only inculcated in them the desire for a home where they can be at rest and live their own lives in their own way.

Truly it will seem to them that the yoke of bondage has fallen from their neck when they are restored. But through all these years of suffering and sorrow they have remained a distinct race uncorrupted, generally speaking, by the gentile vices by which they are surrounded.

Truly the Lord has remembered his people for their fathers' sake. For he says he will restore them for "Jacob his servants sake." And they, whether they realize it or not, are gathering back according to his will fulfilling the divine plan as he has ordered it.

How beautiful it will be when all his plan is finished. When the fig tree blooms again, and even the wild olive branches shall also bloom.

When we think upon these things we surely should strive all the harder to perfect our Christian character to meet the requirements which he has laid down for us. Why can't we like the Jew, keep ourselves a distinct people, "peculiar in good works," looking for the coming of the Lord, keeping our lamps trimmed and burning? Why can't we keep ourselves without spot or wrinkle so that no such thing will be found upon his church when he comes? If each one of us would only examine himself each day and try to live as he has told us, then the whole body would be clean, for every one who walks disorderly is a spot or wrinkle on the body.

Then as we see the time of our Savior approaching, "darkness covering the earth and gross darkness the people;" when the peace cry is going forth; when men are "lovers of their own selves more than lovers of God;" when his people are gathering back to the land of promise, let us lift up our heads, for we know our redemption is drawing nigh. Let us live loyal to him who is our helper at all times, praying to him fo his guidance and support, and he will surely hear our prayer. "Even so come Lord Jesus, come quickly."

"Out of Darkness Into Light"

The facts that Paul states in Hebrews seven, in reference to two classes of high priests, those having infirmity, and those not having infirmity; he also states in Hebrews 5:1-4, the same facts in reference to the Aaronic priesthood; yet by a singular process of reasoning and manipulating of grammar, what Paul says in reference to the Aaronic priests has been taken to refer to Christ. Where do the unlettered poor of this world, of whom the apostle James speaks, find themselves, when the leaders of the long lost but found truth in these latter days take the third verse of Heb. 5, and apply it to Christ? This is the reading of verse three, "And by reason thereof is bound, as for the people, so also for himself, to offer for sins." Every word in Heb. 5:15 (four verses), applies to the high priests under the law, who had sins; and not until the fifth verse is there anything said about Christ. The priests under the law could sympathize with the ignorant and erring because they were both tempted and yielded to temptation. But how was it with Christ? Christ too could sympathize because he was touched with the feeling of our infirmities (but those infirmities were not sins). "One that hath been in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin" (Heb.4:15). And here again we repeat, if no sin, no offering for himself, only an offering for those who have sins; but, says your sub-conscious mind, "It was for Christ's 'sin in the flesh.' "The Spirit of prophecy, which is the testimony of Jesus," does not say so It is what your leaders have taught you; you have allowed those leaders to do your thinking. With emphasis we repeat that when Christ offered himself on the cross he did not do so as a high priest, but as a lamb without blemish; and that when he commenced to make offerings, he was in heaven and not on earth. "For every High Priest is appointed to offer both gifts and sacrifices; wherefore it is necessary that this High Priest also have somewhat to offer. Now if he were on earth, he would not be a priest at all seeing there are those who offer gifts according to the law" (Heb. 8:3, 4). The Mosaic law continued in force up to the very hour in which Christ expired on the cross. He said himself, that he came to fulfill, not to destroy. "And took it out of the way, nailing it to the cross" (Col. 2:14).

According to the testimony, there is no possible way for Christ to have been a priest before his death on the cross. God's arrangements are such that they do not conflict, but fit nicely into each other. "For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law: for he of whom these things are spoken pertaineth to another tribe, of whom no man gave attendance at the altar. For it is evident that our Lord sprang out of Judah; of which tribe Moses spake nothing concerning priesthood" (Heb. 7:12-14).

Christ by virtue of his connection with the Brazen Altar as a lamb without blemish and without spot, has been advanced as High Priest to officiate at the altar of incense in the Holy Place, for the benefit of his own household. See Heb. 2:17; 4:14-16; Rev. 8:3, 4.

The apostle says, "For finding fault with them" (Heb. 8:8), "he saith, Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah." "If therefore perfection were by the Levitical priesthood (for under it the people received the law), what further need was there that another priest should rise after the order of Melchisedec, and not be called after the order of Aaron" (Heb. 7:11).

For further proof of this we point the reader to the Israelite's crossing of the River Jordan and entering the land of promise, the Holy Land. Paul says of Moses that as a servant he was faithful in all his house (Heb. 3:5). Now while this was true in reference to the house of Israel, as regards Moses individually, he was not faithful to himself. It is recorded in Deut. 32:51, that Moses trespassed against the Lord in the midst of the children of Israel at the waters of Meribah of Kadesh in the wilderness of Zin; because he did not sanctify the Lord before Israel. The sin of Moses consisted in saying, "hear now, ye rebels; shall we bring forth water out of this rock?" He also smote the rock twice, whereas he was commanded to speak to it and smite it. Now because of this trespass he was commanded to die in Mount Nebo; he was not allowed to go over into the land; although he pleaded with the Lord that he might go over and see the good land that was beyond Jordan (Deut. 3:25, 26). "Let it suffice thee; speak no more unto me of this matter." Here was a repentant man, yet for his sin there was no forgiveness; he had to die for it. God would not condone that sin; he would not look upon it: although Moses was a mediator for Israel, and had secured forgiveness for them, for his own he could not: he had no mediator; God would not listen to him while in his sin. So without a mediator he could not obtain the typical salvation which he pleaded for. This transaction, in reference to Moses proves that a mediator cannot be a mediator for himself; which proves that God's method of salvation by the shedding of blood to make atonement, did not apply to Christ; and therefore he could not have been his own better sacrifice.

The making atonement for a person is not completed at the time the blood of the sacrificial victim is poured out; it must be taken into the holy place and sprinkled upon the mercy seat in the presence of the Lord (Lev. 16:11:14). If in any sense Christ, as an individual, required the shedding of blood to make atonement for himself, then must that shed blood or the evidence of it, be presented before the presence of the Lord in "heaven itself," the antitypical most holy place. Christ could not present that evidence there because atonement would not be complete, and granted until after it, the evidence had appeared in the Lord's presence, and just so long as he stood in need of atonement, God would not recognize him as being worthy to appear before him: and therefore it would be utterly impossible for Christ to ever make atonement for himself. Chist did not appear in the presence of God at the time he shed his blood: he remained three days in the tomb, and not until after his resurrection and immortalization did he enter into heaven itself (Heb. 9:24); which is proof conclusive that he was made immortal without any atonement having been made for him. He was not a mediator before his death, nor in the article of death; and without blood he could not be a mediator, because "without the shedding of blood there is no remission." (Heb. 9:22). The terms of reconciliation with God are based upon repentance and confession of sins; and blood shedding is the only way that the Scriptures teach that expression is given for these things. If blood shedding was necessary before a person could occupy the office of High Priest or mediator, and it is evident that it was, then at no time before Christ's death could he have officiated as such.

Paul says, "For it is evident that our Lord sprang out of Juda; of which tribe Moses spake nothing concerning priesthood. And it is yet far more evident: for that after the similitude of Melchisedec there ariseth another priest, who is made, not after the law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life. For he testifieth, Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec" (Heb. 7:14-17). Immortality was absolutely necessary before Christ could have become a High Priest or mediator. The apostle Paul does not contradict himself; and therefore Heb. 7:27 does not teach that Christ as High Priest offered his own shed blood "first for his own sins, and then for the people's, to make atonement for himself, that is, as interpreted, for his "sinful flesh" nature, or for his "sin in the flesh."

The Prince--Priest
Of Ezekiel's Prophecy

Christ, the Prince of Ezekiel's prophecy, offered for himself and for the people of the land, a bullock for a sin-offering. When everything else fails to sustain the theory that Jesus Christ made himself an offering to make atonement for his own inherited "sin in the flesh," this passage in Ezekiel is cited. The sacrificial offerings of Ezekiel's prophecy are all memorial of the one great offering of Christ on the cross for sin and transgression, even as those offerings under the law of Moses were typical of that great event two thousand years ago. This being understood, the theory makes the claim that inasmuch as Christ had no personal sin of his own, therefore the only way in which he could make an offering for his own sin would be for his "sin in the flesh." If this reasoning is correct, then "the bullock for a sin offering," which is as much "for all the people of the land" as for the Prince, would be to memorialize the offering of Christ on the cross for their own "sin in the flesh"; and as we read of only one kind of sin being offered for, the personal transgressions of the people have not as yet had an offering made for them, and so what Paul says in 1 Cor. 15:17, "Ye are yet in your sins," is a fact.

Christ was a human sin bearer, in its primary and only legitimate sense; and as such he took the position in antitype, the same as the animal did in type; representatively he became sin on the cross when "he became a curse," although in reality he was not sin in the original meaning of the word used in 2 Cor. 5:21, which meaning is in its primary significance, transgression, guilt, being a translation of a Greek word, which is a translation of a Hebrew word. Taking the sins of others upon himself and bearing the responsibility for them in a representative way, when he made the one great offering for sin; the importance of this being so great, and the transaction never to be repeated, it becomes the proper thing in the days of the temple of Ezekiel's prophecy, that this should be memorialized. The sins which had in symbol been transferred to him, and became his own, must be atoned for in a representative if a proper memorial existed, hence we see that the Prince offers a bullock for a sin offering for himself. In the law of Moses there was a prophecy of a human sin-bearer. Aaron and his family were the actors pointing to the future in reference to the coming sin-bearer, not as an animal, but as a human being. The animal was also a sin-bearer. There is truth in connection with both these symbols, that has its answer in Jesus Christ as the one great offering for sin. It was no more necessary that Christ should have been an High Priest when he fulfilled the symbolic prophecy of a human sin-bearer than that he should have been a real animal.

A little history of Mosaic things will make the prophecy of a human sin-bearer plain, and how the typical sin-bearer got clear of the sins that were borne; in no case were the sins any others than those that had been transferred to the animal by the laying on of the right hand of the sinner; for sin in its primary sense, never for such sin as is called "sin in the flesh" in its secondary and derived sense, as a concrete physical thing.

In Leviticus 9:15 we read, "And he brought the people's offering, and took the goat, which was the sin-offering for the people, and slew it, and offered it for sin, as the first." Then in Lev. 10:17, 18, "Wherefore have ye not eaten the sin-offering in the holy place (the place of the Sanctuary, R. V.), seeing it is most holy, and God hath given it you to bear the iniquity of the congregation, to make atonement for them before the Lord? Behold, the blood of it was not brought into the Sanctuary within: ye should certainly have eaten it in the Sanctuary, as I commanded." Now the law governing the eating of the sin-offering is found in Lev. 6:30, and reads as follows: "And no sin-offering, whereof any blood is brought into the tent of meeting to make atonement in the holy place, shall be eaten: it shall be burnt with fire."

GOLDEN TEXT: Revelation 21:4

WATCH YOURSELF GO BY

Just stand aside and watch yourself go by;
Think of yourself as "he," instead of "I."
Note closely, as in other men you note,
The bag-kneed trousers and the seedy coat.
Pick flaws; find fault; forget the man is you,
And strive to make your estimate ring true.
Confront yourself and look you in the eye
Just stand aside and watch yourself go by.

Interpret all your motives just as though
You looked on one whose aims you did not know.
Let undisguised contempt surge through you when
You see you shirk, O commonest of men!
Despise your cowardice; condemn whate'er
You note of falseness in you anywhere.
Defend not one defect that shames your eye
Just stand aside and watch yourself go by.

And then with eyes unveiled to what you loathe—
To sins that with sweet charity you'd clothe—
Back to your self-walled tenement you'll go
With tolerance for all who dwell below.
The faults of others then will dwarf and shrink,
Love's chain grow stronger by one mighty link—
When you, with "he," as substitute for "I,"
Have stood aside and watched yourself go by.

A CHAT WITH THE LITTLE FOLKS

"Good morning, children; you were not expecting me this morning, were you? Well, I am glad to be with you once more; and now that we are comfortably seated, suppose I tell you a little story and see if you can guess the moral to it.

"Once upon a time, a good and mighty king built a beautiful city, and around the city, an enemy built a great wall so high and so strong that no man could climb over it or break it down.

"Every person who lived in this city was noble and good, and there was no doctor there, because the people never got sick; such a ~~thi~~ngs as pain and suffering was unknown. And there was no lawyers, or magistrates there either; for the people in this lovely city never quarreled, and never had law suits, so you see there was no use for doctors, lawyers or magistrates, and so this wonderful city was named 'The city of love.'

"There was but one gate through the wall, and into this city, and over the gate was written these words, 'Whosoever will may come.' But every one who wanted to go in at the gate must first lay aside all his worn and dirty clothes, and put on a white robe which was given; and to each and every person who complied with these conditions and was allowed to enter in through the gate, was given a beauiful home in the City of Love, without money, and without price. There were also hosts of other interesting things about this city and its people; but to tell them all would take too much time.

"This mighty king issued a proclamation throughout all his dominions, that the gates of the City of love was soon to be closed, never to open any more, and that anyone wishing a home there, must sacrifice all else and make all speed, lest they arrive too late and find the gate closed.

"A gay party of young people concluded to start at the same time from a certain town, and so journey along together, and after a sad farewell to friends and relatives, who refused to join them, they set out on the road that led up the mountain to the City. The road was somewhat rough in places, and often steep, and hard to climb, but they trudged sturdily along, filled with joyful anticipations of the beautiful home that each would receive in the City of Love.

"After a time they came to where a beautiful, smooth, richly carpeted path, branched off from the rough road they were traveling. Over the path was a golden arch, and a bright screen hid from view what was beyond, but tinkling glass and loud strains of gay music, accompanied by sounds of dancing, and revelry, came from behind the screen, while bold, roguish eyes and eager fingers beckoned them to come behind the screen, but most of our little party of pilgrims set their faces resolutely to the front, and proceeded bravely on their way; nevertheless a few of the weaker ones hesitated, and then, despite the pleading of their companions, turned slowly aside, and passed under the arch, and joined the revelers behind the screen, and soon forgot all about their journey to the City of Love.

"Those still in the race travelled on bravely, helping one another over the rough and dangerous places; but as the hours passed by, they all became footsore and tired, and were longing for a rest, when they came to a beautiful park and grove filled with nice looking men and women. Some were resting comfortably on benches; others were walking about seeking amusement, and hundreds of children were playing on the green grass and everybody seemed to be so happy, that several of our little party concluded to sit down and rest awhile with these nice people, and only two or three were brave enough to push on towards the City of Love. In vain they urged and begged their wavering companions to come on, but they turned a deaf ear to their pleading, saying: 'There is plenty of time; you go on and we will rest awhile with these nice people, and then go on and overtake you'; so the three faithful ones went on alone, resolutely avoiding all bypaths and temptations to linger, or turn aside; and at last their eager eyes beheld the beautiful City of Love just ahead, and joyfully noted that the gate was still open. Eagerly they press onward, and pass safely in, and the gate is closed. Their follish companions are too late."

"Now children, let us try to find the lesson hidden in this little parable; no doubt some of you have already guessed it.

"The City of Love, where sickness and pain are never found, and whose people never fight or quarrel, is the new Jerusalem of the age to come.

The walls around the city, which no man is able to tear down, or climb over, is sin in the flesh, the carnal and disobedient mind of man.

The gate through this wall, which stands open wide, and over which is written the words, "Whosoever will may come," and which is soon to be closed, never to open again; the only gate that offers admission into the City of Love, this gate is our dear Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

The soiled clothes and filthy rags, which must be cast off at the gate by all who would enter, are idolatry, hatred, variance, wrath, strife, heresies, envyings, murder, drunkenness, revellings, and the like; and the robe so pure and white, which was given in exchange for these filthy rags, is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness faith, meekness, temperance, and obedience to God in all things.

The road that leads up the hill, that has so many rough places and steep, dangerous places in it, and so many big boulders and rocks to climb over, and which has so many nice, smooth, easy looking paths, branching off from it—this rough road, which at last leads up to the gate, that opens into the beautiful City of Love, is faith in God, and obedience to his commands; and the rough and dangerous places, the big boulders, and steep places, the smooth tempting, bypaths, all leading gently down hill, and so easy to travel—these are worldly pleasures and temptations, which assail from every side; those who undertake the journey to the City of Love; the lusts of the flesh, the pride of life, the love of forbidden pleasures are boulders that every pilgrim who journeys to the City of Love must meet and climb over; and happy are they who sturdily surmount every obstacle, and happily put aside every temptation, and at last enter through he gate into the City.

Grandpa Thomas.

DAILY THOUGHTS

Behold, I have refined thee	Isa. 48:10
Every man's work shall be made manifest	I Cor. 3:13
The Lord bless thee and keep thee	Num. 6:24
Commit thy works unto the Lord	Prov. 16:3
We will walk in his paths	Micah 4:2
The Lord shall be a light unto me	Micah 7:8
Blessed are they that do his commandments	Rev. 22:14

We cannot always see where the road or river winds—but if we know and are sure where it ends, that's quite enough.

But its ending is not a matter of chance. One has to make out his journey and keep on steadily according to the map, despite hurricanes, rainy days and dark nights.

No matter how long and winding it might be, to feel sure that you are safe and making progress and will anchor at the right dock is the whole thing. A map is of no use unless you consult it, and mark where to look for the light houses.

If we accept the Bible as our chart, our guide, our map, then God will be the Master of our ship, and Jesus the pilot who will guide us safely home.

AN ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

To the numerous friends who have sent loving messages of good cheer during this festive season Brother and Sister Alexander D. Donaldson extend sincere thanks, begging the indulgence of all for not personally acknowledging same. From a business standpoint the month of December is a very trying time. We leave home for business at 7:30 A. M. and often it is much after 9 P. M. when we return. The Young People's Page must be attended to and we devote every available moment of time to it. Besides, we are living in temporary quarters, and things are not as handy as when at home. This also will explain to many good friends why we are so far behind in our personal correspondence. Having thus explained let us wish all wishing, hoping, trusting that before its close we shall have filled our hearts desire, seeing the Lord in his beauty. And to that end, with you all, we earnestly pray.

A Happy New Year

"Come, Lord Jesus; come quickly."

LIFE

With aching hands and bleeding feet
We dig and heap, lay stone on stone;
We bear the burden and the heat
Of the long day and wish t'were done.
Not till the hours of light return
All we have built do we discern.

The error of religion has been that it undertakes to explain the world when its work is to ininterpret it.

Come then and added to thy many crowns,
Receive yet one, the crown of all the earth.
Thou who alone art worthy! It was thine
By ancient covenant, ere nature's birth:
And thou hast made it thine by purchase since,
And over paid it's value with thy blood.

Our hope truly is a blessed hope, and should bring to us two things—a new object in life, and a new and holy occupation of heart and life.

VOLUME 72 CLEVELAND, O. January 27th 1920. NUMBER 4

Is It Worth While?

Is it worth while that we jostle a brother,
Bearing his load on the rough road of life?
Is it worth while that we jeer at each other
In blackness of heart, that we war to the knife?
God pity us all in our pitiful strife,

God pity us all as we jostle each other;
God pardon us all for the triumph we feel
When a fellow goes down 'neath his load on the heather,
Pierced to the heart: words are keener than steel,
And mightier far for woe than for weal.

Were it not well, in this brief little journey
On over the isthmus, down into the tide,
We give him a fish instead of a serpent,
Ere folding his hands to be and abide
Forever and aye in the dust at his side?

Look at the roses saluting each other;
Look at the herbs all at peace on the plain;
Man, and man only, makes war on his brother
And laughs in his heart at his peril and pain
Shamed by the beasts that go down on the plain.

Is it worth while that we battle to humble
Some poor fellow down into the dust?
God pity us all! Time too soon will tumble
All of us together, like leaves in gust.
Humbled, indeed, down into the dust. Selected by Brother Knapp.

Faith and Works;
Christianity and Morality

A Discourse by the Late Dr. L. C. Thomas

Written and Condensed by S. H. Thomas.

YES," SAYS a friend. "I have faith, and I do believe." No doubt you do, and we read in the Scriptures that the devils also believed and trembled (James 2:19); but that kind of faith profiteth nothing.

Genuine faith, saving faith, must precede works, before works can be good in the sight of God. No works are truly good works, except they are done in obedience to the faith.

So long as a person refuses, ignores, or neglects to hear, understand, believe and obey the gospel he is living in disobedience to God. He is neglecting his first, and most important duty, and no matter how good his works, they will fail to justify him before God.

It is a praiseworthy thing to do good to our fellowman, to be good, kind, and helpful to others, in sorrow or trouble, and to be ever ready to assist and encourage the weak and faltering. But there is something infinitely better and higher, and which comes first in the sight of God. It is faith, love, and obedience to him. This is man's first and highest duty; afterwards good works. Thousands do good to their fellow men who do not believe God at all. It is a great and quite common mistake, to ignore faith and love toward God, and at the same time make a great noise about love and justice to our fellowman; but the Bible says, "Without faith it is impossible to please God."

The greatest works ever performed by the noblest men that ever lived, will profit them nothing, unless mixed with faith (Heb. 4:2). Nothing availeth with God in the absence of "faith which worketh by love" (Gal. 5:6).

There is a vast difference between morality and Christianity. A person may be naturally good, kind and affectionate, honest in dealings, give to the poor, and visit the sick; but as long as he does not believe in the Lord Jesus Christ he ignores and neglects God's great salvation, and all his goodness is mere morality, not Christianity; for thieves and robbers may be, and often are, good, kind, generous and just, in their intercourse with one another.

To believe in the Lord Jesus Christ with saving faith, which worketh by love is to believe his gospel and obey it by baptism, for the remission of sins, into the one name and one body. Thus becoming a member of the household of God, a child of God by faith in the Lord Jesus Christ (Gal. 3). This is man's first duty; afterwards good works.

Without this faith and obedience all our good works are mere morality; the result of a naturally good and gentle, though fleshly minded, disposition. But good works, done in obedience to the faith, as a result of the faith, is Christianity, and an indispensable part of Christianity.

"He that believeth the gospel and is baptized shall be saved." He may be weak and prone to stumble and err, but if he has believed and obeyed the gospel, by consenting to baptism, he shall be saved; notwithstanding his many faults and errors. "But he that believeth not shall be condemned." It matters not how good, noble, and generous his life may be, without faith and obedience, it profiteth him nothing; for "he that believeth not shall be condemned."

"In every nation, he that feareth God, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him" (Acts 10:35). But it is impossible to be righteous and work righteousness without faith in and obedience to God's message which he sent by his beloved Son, the Lord Jesus Christ ."putting his words in his mouth," which all must hear, attend to and obey, or be destroyed from among the people" (Acts 3).

We therefore must conclude that in the absence of faith and obedience, all of the good and noble works ever performed by mortal man is but human morality, and of no value whatever in the sight of God. But if done in obedience to the faith and as a result of the faith, good works become then precious in the sight of God.

But while it is a fact that good works without faith and obedience, profiteth nothing, it is also a fact that faith without good works, is equally worthless; for there is no such thing as righteousness or Christianity, without good works. But it is quite easy, and a common thing, to do good works, without either righteousness or Christianity. It is well and most admirable to see all men do good to each other, as opportunity presents; but it is better, infinitely better, to believe God, and let our good works be in humble obedience to his commands, thus glorifying his great name rather than fleshly morality.

In the light of above Scriptures and facts, we must of necessity conclude that as good works without faith is of no avail with God, so faith without good works is equally worthless. God has inseparably joined together these two Christian graces. Neitehr is of any value without the other Separated, they each become weak as things of grass; united, they are able, if practised to accomplish the salvation of the entire world.

A New Year Exhortation

BELOVED BRETHREN:

WE ARE again standing on the threshold of another year, which brings to our minds the rapid flight of time and the solemn thought, "The coming of the Lord draweth nigh."

When we look back it seems as but yesterday to the beginning of the year: still the events of the passing days and weeks tell us that we have really advanced another step in the journey of life; and we are forcibly reminded that our opportunities for usefulness and improvement of our talents, have either been neglected or improved. At such a time as this it is well for us to pause and review the past, and by a self-examination, see where we stand. See if we have lived up to all our opportunities and privileges, or see what failure and mistakes we have made in spiritual things, and so be on our guard that we may not repeat them in the year we are just entering.

In an examination of this kind we ought .to use no half way measures. The great task we have undertaken- that of saving ourselves - ought to be carried forward with our best effort. It is folly for us to act otherwise, for the day is coming that shall declare it, and every man's work shall be made manifest. Our being lenient with ourselves now will be of no avail then. Our besetting sins, which we may belittle now, will stand out in bold relief then, unless we face them with the determination to overcome them, and be conquerors. If we are ever to become a part of that building which will be an habitation of God through the Spirit, the preparation for it must be going on now. Our daily and weekly acts are what make up our character, and it is only the characters that are well pleasing in the sight of the Judge that will be approved. How important then, that we be constantly on our guard that the failure of the past may not be repeated, and every opportunity of doing good may be grasped. The apostle Peter gives us a strong admonition when he says, "Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind: for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin: that he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God. For the time past of our life may suffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles."

Such a course of action may cut us off from the pleasures of the world, but remember there is nothing lost by so doing. No, not even for the present: for says an apostle, "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." Some times I fear we do not appreciate the high calling to God's kingdom of honor and glory as we ougth, or we would act differently. The prize of the high calling is always represented as something that must be striven for, and through much tribulation we shall enter the kingdom: I do not want to discourage any by these remarks. I know that we have this treasure in an earthen vessel; that when we would do good evil is present with us. But these things, instead of diminishing our zeal and weakening our zest, ought to spur us on to greater diligence.

If the past has not been as satisfactory as we wish it might have been, let us remember there is a scriptural way of redeeming or buying back the time. The apostle Paul points it out in Col. 4:6: "Walk in wisdom toward them that are without, redeeming the time. Let your speech be always seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man." He wrote similar language to the Ephesians: "See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, redeeming the time, because the days are evil." If this advice is followed much good can be accomplished during the year before us. Therefore if we remember that our time and talents and the choosing of our companions ought to be at his disposal. His word to us through one of his faithful ambassadors is: "No man that warreth entangleth himself with the affairs of this life; that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier." Yes, to make a sucess of our calling we must not divide our efforts. Let us ponder that the word of the Psalmist, "One thing have I desired of the Lord; that will I seek after."

But someone may be ready to say, "Yes that is all very true, but where shall we make a beginning toward improvement?" Well, let us take the meetings; are they always as interesting as they might be, and if not who is to blame? Is it the fault of the leader or members of the class? How many look up the lesson and come prepared with something to say for the benefit of others? If this is not done we are not doing our duty; for then we expect others to supply that life and interest which we ought to supply. We do not act thus in respect to things of this life. Why should we not so in regard to things spiritual? Take for instance, the sower; he never expects to reap a harvest except in proportion to the seed sown and care given to it afterwards. So likewise I do not think there will be any complaint if we individually do our share to supply the life and interest we think these meetings ought to have.

There is another thought pressing for attention that I sometimes fear we are lacking in, and that is reading. The life we are living today is very complex. There are so many things that demand a part of our time and attention that we hardly have time to give reading the place it so richly deserves. And when I say reading, of course I mean reading the word of God. That such an exhortation is not out of place you may learn from the apostle Paul who admonished one who from a child knew the Holy Scriptures, "to give attention to reading, to doctine." You see how important reading is, for it is placed first in the three duties that he was to perform. If such an exhortation were needed in a day when literature was scarce, what would he say to us of today who are literally swamped with reading matter?

Another thing which I think would help us in our endeavor to live the life of faith upon the Son of God, would be to dwell upon our personal relationship to Christ. The truth ought to be something more to us than a few abstract propositions. Jesus likened his words in us to a well of water springing up into eternal life; and in that wonderful chapter, the fifteenth of John's gospel, we learn that our spiritual life is dependant upon a living union with him. It is very well to know the truth; to put up a strong argument with the alien; to be well versed in the Scriptures and able to fathom the deep things revealed; to hold a high position in the church and be greatly esteemed by our brethren; but let us remember these things alone will not obtain salvation for us. It is not enough for us to take hold of the truth, but rather let the truth take hold of us. It is not enough to know the truth; we must love it and live it. Oh, if we could always remember these things how much luke-warmness and carelessness would be lopped off! How worldliness and selfishness would be purged out, and holy zeal, diligence, spirituality and self-denial take possessions of our affections! Then the fruits of the spirit would be found in us adorning, softening, and beautifying the character, and making us ready for the coming of the Lord.

At such a time as this it hardly seems right to close without some reference to the political aspect. I trust none here are ready to say: "We have heard considerable along that line for the past two or three years; and the Lord has not come yet." That may be so, but what is our duty? Is it to sit down with folded arms in idleness and carelessly watch passing events? Is it to gratify the lust of the flesh, and let the love of the world get hold of us? Is it to mix up in the affairs of this world, and harass our mind with things pertaining to it, and have our attention drawn from better things? Far be it from any of us to act thus in view of the imminence of the time in which we live. The signs of the advent are crowding upon us and if our expectations in the past have not been realized, let us remember the signs bespeak his coming; the only point we can be mistaken in is in not knowing the extent of conditions. We are not alarmists, and have no desire to beget false expectations. Yet we are safe in saying with a writer in one of the secular papers, "The world is in turmoil. The internal as well as the external harmonies of the nations are shattered. We are groping without purpose towards a goal we cannot see."

How true that is! When was there a time so pregnant with evil forebodings among the nations? It is true the world has just passed through a great war in which we were engulfed almost before we realized it. But now everywhere we see the passions of men aroused and their minds greatly agitated in their endeavor to solve the political difficulties that now confront them. Witness the strife between capital and labor in this country. The same is true in England and in many other European countries. It may be on account of conditions such as now exist the spirit saith, "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh." Troublous times indicate the drawing nigh of the kingdom and the time of the saint's redemption when the faithful dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God and come forth, and the faithful which are alive will be caught away in clouds to meet the Lord in the air to be forever with him. In view of what is coming, well may we say with Peter, "Seeing ye look for these things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace without spot and blameless."

Faith, Love, and Works

HAVING NOTICED in some copies of The Restitution that you wanted copy, I will try to write a piece for your consideration. I find that the more I study God's word, and the more I try to spread the gospel news, and the greater number of people I come in contact with, the greater and stronger my faith grows in an all-wise and loving heavenly Father. In my every day walk of life I find that I have many things to be exceedingly thankful for.

Among the many things that I receive at God's great and loving hands, which I am exceedingly thankful for, is the example Christ, the great Shepherd of the sheep, has left us to follow if we ever come in possession of the divine nature. It has been said by our modern so-called Christians that "Christianity does not consist of charitable deeds." Now there is only one of two things true: this utterance was either intended to nullify the true religion of Christ, or it was uttered in total ignorance of Christ's teachings. If you knew that the religion of Christ did not consist of charitable deeds, how would we know, and what would we know to do? Just such doctrine as this you will find scattered all over the world.

Now let us examine God's word concerning this statement. Before we turn to the Bible we will give Webster's definition of the word "Christianity." He says Christianity is "the religion of Christ." If Christianity does not consist of charitable deeds, or in other word, "Love one another as Christ has loved us," we would enquire as to what the religion of Christ does really teach.

We will simply turn to our Guide Book the Bible, for a settlement of this question. Charity, as I understand the Bible, means love, and we have Scripture that says, "Charity endureth all things." Charity surely means love, because Jesus Christ, the wonderful example of love says: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends" (John 15.13).

Then he says further: "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you" (John 15:14). Now we see how we may become the friends of Jesus Christ; by doing his commandments.

In this article let us find what some of his commandments are. Jesus says in Matt. 11:29, 30. "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for my yoke is easy and my burden is light." Again, in 1 John 5:3 we read: "For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments; and his commandments are not grevious."

Now we see whatever his commandments are, they are not grevious to bear. Neither is the duty of the follower of Christ a burden to him. Learning that Christ's commandments are not grevious, we are ready to find what some of the commandments are.

We do not aim to go over the whole list of commandments that go to make a complete Christian or follower of Christ; but we do aim to try to present enough Bible evidence to prove beyond a doubt that "the religion of Christ" does consist of deeds of love one towards another.

We do not write these lines for the purpose of offending any one, but there is a lesson in this statement that we want to teach Jesus says: "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another as I have loved you, that ye also love one another" (John 13:34). Now let us look at verse 35: "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples if ye have love one to another."

In the foregoing Scriptures we have found that if we have the kind of love for one another that Jesus had for us, all men will know that we are the disciples of Jesus. Jesus says, "If ye love me keep my commandments" (John 14:15). Then Jesus says again: "This is my commandment, that ye love one another, as I have loved you" (John 15:12).

How are we to manifest our love one toward another? I will tell you that it is not just to simply say you love Jesus who died for you, but it is the deeds we do that proves to the world that we are the disciples of Jesus. We find that in the apostle's days when the number of the followers of Christ began to multiply, that the Grecians began to murmur against the Hebrews because their widows were neglected in the daily ministration; and we also find that the twelve called the multitude of disciples unto them and said, "It is not reason that we should leave the word of God and serve tables." So they chose out seven men to look after the needy ones. It is just as important today that this work should be done as it was in those days. Let us hear what the apostle James has to say, James 2: 15, 16: "If a brother or sister be naked and destitute of daily food, and one of you say unto them, Depart in peace; be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit?" Listen: "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction and to keep himself unspotted from the world" (James 1:27). "Wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead?" (James 2:20). Yes, we see every day that faith without works is dead, being alone.

When Jesus left Galilee and came to the coasts of Judea beyond Jordan, there came a certain man to him and enquired of him, "What good thing shall I do that I may have eternal life?" Jesus told him if he would enter into life, "keep the commandments." The man enquired again, "Which?" Jesus then tells him the commandments. The man then tells Jesus, "All these things have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet?" Jesus says: "If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and come and follow me" (Matt. 19:21).

Did this young man do what Jesus told him to do? No! "He went away sorrowful, because he had great possessions." He loved his great possessions more than he did his Savior and the cause of the poor.

"Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God. He that loveth not knoweth not God for God is love. In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins. Beloved if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another" (1 John 4:7-11).

How often is the ambitious man mortified with the very praises he receives, if they do not rise so high as he thinks they ought.

It is a great pity that we must experiment with a score of follies, most of them hoary with age, before we can arrive at a point of wisdom.

Character of the Aged

PAUL WRITING [illegible] of M[illegible] down to Titus [illegible] of the church at the Cretans [illegible] speak thou the things that become (or are suited to) sound doctrine: that the aged men be sober, grave, temperate, sound in faith, in charity, in patience. The aged women likewise, that they be in behavior as becometh holiness, not false accusers, not given to much wine (the besetting sin of the Cretians) teachers of good things; that they may teach the young women to be sober, to love their husbands, to love their children; to be discreet, chaste, keepers at home, good, obedient to their own husbands, that the word of God may not be blasphemed."

He tells us what aged [illegible] must be, but not what they must do. The aged women must, like the aged men, be in a [illegible] the life to the holiness they profess; they must not be [illegible], for they were to occupy the responsible position of teachers to their younger married sisters [illegible] be careful of their conduct to control their affections [illegible] families to love and [illegible] good [illegible] worked with God's [illegible] character of their being [illegible] And may the aged women, who have in these latter days been entrusted with the precious truths of the gospel prove as apt teachers of the young. I am trying to fill my God-given mission. Pray for me that it may be a successful one, fruitful in souls won to Christ.

Remember the Helping Fund

Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble in the day of evil, margin (Psa. 41:1).

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Annual Report of the Sister's Society

FOR 1919

THE FIRST meeting of the year 1919 was held Jan. 2nd at the home of Sister Lane at which time the annual election of officers took place. The officers elected were as follows:

Sister Huggins, President.
Sister Wood, Vice-President.
Sister Gibbs, Secretary.
Sister Stroud, Treasurer.

Twenty-six meetings were held with a total attendance of four hundred and twenty-nine members, an average of sixteen members per meeting; and altogether there were thirty visitors. Many calls were made, many letters and cards were written, and quite a number of letters were received. Our subjects for study during the year have been the "Bible Lessons on First Principles," eight of which have been studied. These lessons have been very instructive and edifying. Our motto for the year [illegible] Heb. 13:5, 16. The collections amounted to [illegible] making a total of [illegible] [illegible]

We have lost in the past year one of our oldest members, Sister G[illegible], whom we all loved; was taken from us suddenly by the enemy death. We all miss her. She was a regular attendant and a willing worker, abounding in love and good works. As an auxiliary of the church we feel that our heavenly Father has been very good to us, and has used us to show forth his lovingkindness; and our prayer is that he may continue to do so during the coming year.

Addie Gibbs.

Since making above report, our aged Sister Salisbury, another dear member of the Society, has fallen asleep. She was also a faithful attendant at the meetings, and will be missed by all of us. A. G.

Intelligence has reached us that Miss Esther Ingham, of Rochester, N. Y., is now Mrs. Biers, of that city. Congratulations. As Mrs. Biers was formerly a member of the Megiddo Mission, a religious cult that rejects baptism, it is an added pleasure when she writes: "I really am now persuaded that baptism is a command not done away with. I shall no longer delay to do what I really feel is right." Congratulations again.

According to Gen. Churchill, chief of the military intelligence division of the war department, there are twenty-three wars in progress abroad. The big nations which are fighting for one cause or another are Russia, Poland, Roumania, the Ukraine, and Siberia. Each of the nations is at war with one or more of the new countries of Europe.

Daniel's prophecy shows that while in ancient times universal kingdoms were to obtain, in the last days petty governments were to multiply. As iron and clay will not mix, so these nations will not "cleave" to each other. It is a remarkable fact that the League of Nations proposes to unify, but instead only multiplies "self-determining people"; and the more nations you have existing, the more quarrels and wars are possible. Already the new kingdoms of Europe are causing wars. There is no peace on earth and good will among men now, and will not be till the Prince of Peace comes and says to a turbulent world, "Peace be still."

Unitarian Erudition Exposed

WITH GREAT parade of learning a Josephite friend of mine recently claimed that "virgin" in Isa. 7:14 was "almah" in the Hebrew, while the word "bethulah" was the proper word to express virginity. You will see with a glance that he was seeking to prove that "almah" stands for a married woman while "bethulah" reperesents the unmarried. Is this a fact or is it Josephite pretense of learning?

Editorial Comments

THE FACTS in the case are these:

I. "Almah," according to Young's Concordance, means "an unmarried female.' This is an authority with which Unitarians must reckon. That by usage "almah" means marriageable, or even a married young woman, we grant. Toy appeals to the Aramaic and Arabic languages to prove that this is the conventional meaning. But this kind of evidence is very questionable, as any one may see for himself by taking a list of common English words, which exist also in German and French. Observe what different and discrepant shades of meaning the same word has in the three languages. Gesenius, who gives "almah" the wide range of meaning suggested by your Unitarian friend, appeals to Isa. 7:14 as the only instance in which it refers to a married woman- a very suspicious circumstance in the case. Fairness and candor, however, are probably satisfied when we say that the term means in general a marriageable but unmarrried young woman, a girl, a maiden, and then passing into the stricter meaning of spotless virginity, like our word "maid" ("jungfrau," German).

II. "Bethluh," says your friend, is the word for strict virginity; and if Isa. 7:14 were a prediction of the birth of the Messiah by a virgin he should have used this word, not "almah." Well, the statement is not true in fact. The statement is true in part: there is another word which is employed when the thought of virginity is especially emphasized (Gen. 24:16; Exod. 22:16, 17; Lev. 21:14; Deut. 22:19, 23, 28). There is not the slightest reason to suppose, as we shall soon see, that either Isaiah or Matthew, who reproduces the prophecy (Matt. 1:22, 23), needed a word which would give special emphasis to the idea of virginity. Unfortunately for Unitarian erudition, "bethulah," which they say means virginity, like "almah," passes through a wide range of meanings, and is used for a young woman without any assertion of pure virginity (Amos 8:13). It is even used for a young widow (Joel 1:8)!

In the face of Unitarian protest, then, we may safely say that the prophet Isaiah did not seek to use a word for "virgin" which would specially emphasize virginity. The Hebrew law required that every bride should be found a virgin, on pain of death (Deut. 22:20,21). Hitzig, when commenting on Isa. 7:14, says: "The sense of 'unmarried woman' is demanded; the unstained purity is understood in this connection as a matter of course." A marriageable young woman would necessarily be thought of by the Hebrews as a virgin, no matter what word might be used to designate her, since no young woman not a virgin was marriageable under the law. Therefore when Isaiah said that a "maiden should conceive and bear a son," he would think of her as a virgin, for it was far from his purpose to accuse her of immorality and subject her to death. Matthew, true to the prophetic thought expressed by Isaiah, used the word "virgin" in his quotation of the prophesy. But even Matthew did not lay emphasis on the word; he found it in the Septuagint, and retained it; but if he had substituted for it "maiden," or "young unmarried woman," his meaning would have been exactly the same. The virginity of Mary would have been understood from the fact which he states, that Joseph had not yet taken her to himself, though he had complied with the form of marriage.

The virgin birth of Christ, the reader will perceive from what has been said, goes deeper than words. Isa. 7:14 is a prophecy of Christ's birth, and Unitarians have tried in vain to divert its meaning and emasculate its words. A recapitulation of the prophecy settles the question.

I. Why else should a "virgin," a maiden, an unmarried woman, be selected as the destined mother, instead of some woman already married?

II. Why else should the prophet be careful to predict the birth of a "son"? Why not say a child, a babe, indefinitely, or definitely, a daugther? To Ahaz the sign would have been just as significant.

III. Why else should the comparative poverty of this "son" in his early life be pointed out,

A Specimen of Evangelistic Endeavor

READERS OFTEN send us inquiries about our methods of evangelistic work. We publish herewith a letter which is often sent to friends and acquaintances for the purpose of directing their attention truthward. The Fellow Helpers and many members of the church send out this letter, which gives it considerable publicity. It is published in The Restitution in the hope that it may be suggestive to others in the service of the gospel.

Dear

A friend of yours has given me your name, expressing the hope that I may be able to interest you in Bible study. The brevity and uncertainty of life, combined with the world waxing ''worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived'' (2 Tim.3:13), causing people to ''turn away from the truth, and be turned unto fables''(2 Tim. 4:4), should make you realize the necessity of turning from such ''fables'' to the unchangeable word of God. The Bible only can give the solution of our world problems, and impart salvation to the individual.

Our Bible study consists of 12 lessons, the first of which I inclose with this. If you desire to take the series, they will be supplied gratis; and once a week, either day or evening, in my study or anywhere your convenience may require, you will be given a recitation and review. The complete course requires sixty minutes a week for 12 weeks. However busy you may be, you will surely have ''time'' to give these few moments to the study of the Bible when you reflect that God used 16 hundred years in writing this Book for you. And it was given to you ''without money and without price''(Isa.55:1). Our lessons may be obtained upon the same terms. ''Consider what I say; and the Lord will give thee understanding in all things''(2 Tim.2:7).

Hoping to hear from you soon and favorably, I remain, ''in Christ's stead,''

Very cordially yours,

namely, that he should eat "butter and honey," the food of the less wealthy classes?

IV. Why else should the "son" be spoken of in Isa. 8:8 as the lord of Judah, "Thy land, O Immanuel"? Surely we can say with Alexander: "There is no ground, grammatical, historical or logical for doubt as to the main point, that the church in all ages has been right in regarding this passage as a signal and explicit prediction of the miraculous conception and nativity of Jesus Christ.

RUTH PATE -DEAR SISTER:

Being baptized into the body of Christ only a few weeks ago, I wish all the strength that can be derived from one another. I would like to correspond with the Young People's Society of the Church of God, for I am certainly interested. I would be glad to get the sermon notes from any of the young people who can so help me as there is no church here. We like to read The Restitution. There are six of us here. We need the aid of your society. We live 18 miles from a railroad town. All six of us live near neighbors and can help each other but we feel like we need other help. We have joined the Bereans and I wish to do all the good we can. We want to be put on your corresponding list. By so doing we can be strengthened in the way. I am always glad to hear from any of the brothers or sisters. Brother Almus Adams was here a few weeks ago and preached for us. It was a grand meeting. He gave the best and plainest sermons I ever heard. His words sank deep into the hearts of many. Wishing you success in all your good work, I am your sister in the faith.

Mrs. B. Fenimore.

BROTHER HUGGINS:

PLEASE allow space in The Restitution for me to thank all that have donated to my needs in my old age and affliction. I wish I could take them by the hand and say "God bless you, my brother, my sister." Many thanks to you. You will be rewarded. You are strangers to me in this present life, but soon there will be a union when this earth will be made new. Yes, in that Eden home life will be everlasting, death unknown. The inhabitants will no more say, "I am sick." Alleluia! Brothers and sisters, will you meet them there?

Brother Weeks.

DEAR BROTHER HUGGINS:

I WAS somewhat surprised last evening, looking over the Jan. 6th copy of The Restitution to learn that you were named for Robt. H. Gresham, of Jeffersonville, Ind., the town of my birth. My parents, as well as myself were quite well acquainted with him, his daughter Mary being one of the younger set to which I belonged. My parents moved away from Jeffersonville to Indianapolis, and we lost sight of Brother Gresham who, I think, after some years, went to Ashville, N. C. I never knew what became of him. I think the last I heard of him he was a Christadelphian. I never knew whether he got away from that or not —many did, and became fanatics, or infidels, or went into Unitarianism. His wife and daughter, so far as I know, were not believers. There was no Church of God in Jeffersonville, as far as I know. At one time there was a Christian Tabernacle. Dr. N. Field, pastor, where H. V. Reed and J. M. Stephenson came at one time and held a two week's meeting, and taught the people the gospel, especially along the line of the kingdom. Dr. Field did not believe the "Jew question," as he called it, so many of his members knew nothing of it, and did not care to investigate. Many of those who had studied and believed it came out and formed a class where they could investigate the Christadelphian phase. I cannot seem to recall Robt. H. Gresham being in the number. Anyhow, about that time the Campbellite Church and Tabernacle began to dwindle away as their substantial members increased in knowledge. H. V. Reed and J. M. Stephenson stirred things up greatly; both were fine speakers without hobbies and firm in the faith. We came to California in 1876, the year he wrote the "Certificate of Baptism," so there must have been a Church of God formed after we left there, as I notice he was an "elder," at the time of writing. I presume he died years ago, perhaps in the south. I trust you will pardon this letter, but seeing Robt. Gresham's name in the paper carried my thoughts back many years, and brought up many persons and memories of the past. I know only two or perhaps three persons living who remember Robt. H. Gresham.

This letter is not for publication. It is only a private letter. I presume none of the present subscribers to The Restitution knew R. H. Gresham.

Yours fraternally,

As above letter will be read with interest since it tells of events in connection with the truth in an early day, we give it place under "Communications." As it was only intended for a personal letter we withhold the writer's name. Editor.

DEAR EDITOR OF THE RESTITUTION:

I AM sending two dollars to pay for one year's subscription. I do not feel that I could do without it, as it is all the preaching I have. While I cannot write as some do I wish to speak a word. I only wish that I could write my feelings as they really are. You talk about the isolated ones: I am surely one. I live in Piatt County, and the nearest church of our faith that I know is near Casey, Ill., almost a hundred miles away. I have not heard a gospel sermon preached for over ten years. Not a living soul do I have to speak to about the one faith. Every one seems to be against me; but if God is with us, who can be against us? I am not like some who say, "Oh, some other way will do," and get led away. No, dear brethren, I have searched the Scriptures to find out what I know, and I find that it says one faith, one Lord, and one baptism. While reading The Restitution it fills my heart with joy, and I rejoice in the Lord to know that while I am not permitted to be with those of the like precious faith, that I can have words of comfort from them and know that they are doing good throughout the land. I am poor in this world's goods, but rich in the faith of the soon coming King. I ask all of God's people everywhere to pray for me that I may ever be found watching, and that I may be able to say, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing" (2 Tim. 4:7, 8). So let us all continue to watch, is the prayer of your brother in Christ,

A. Grubbs.

THE CROSS OF CHRIST

In the cross of Christ I glory,
Tow'ring o'er the wrecks of time;
All the light of sacred story
Gathers round its head sublime.

When the woes of life o'ertake me,
Hopes deceive, and fears annoy,
Never shall the cross forsake me;
Lo! it glows with peace and joy.

Bane and blessing, pain and pleasure,
By the cross are sanctified;
Peace is there that knows no measure,
Joys that through all time abide.

THE CHRISTMAS STORY

A LONG time ago the King of Judea ordered his people to go to Bethlehem to be taxed. From a country called Galilee came a man by name Joseph and his wife Mary. When they reached the inn it was filled, and so there was no room for them they were compelled to go to the stable, and that night a babe was born.

Far out on the hills the shepherds watched their flocks. Suddenly there appeared a great light which frightened the shepherds who fell down on their faces. But as they lay there an angel spoke and said, "Fear not, for I bring you glad tidings, for unto you this night is born a Savior." With the angels was a multitude of the heavenly host who sang, "Glory be to God on high; peace on earth, good will toward men."

Then the shepherds made haste and went to Bethlehem. They followed the star to the stable in which were Joseph and Mary, and they found the babe Jesus in the manger. Knowing the babe to be the Savior, they worshipped him.

There also came "three wise men from a country east of Jerusalem" saying, "Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east and have come to worship him. When King Herod heard this he was troubled, and calling his wise men together said unto them, "Search diligently for this child, that I too may worship him." The wise men in time found the future King of Israel, and worshipping him presented him with gifts of gold, frankincense, and myrrh. That night they were warned of God in a dream that they should not return to Herod, for he purposed to kill Jesus, fearing his kingship; so the wise men returned home by another road.

The same night God told Joseph in a dream to take his wife Mary and baby Jesus into Egypt, for King Herod intended to kill the babe. When the king realized that the wise men had outwitted him, he was very angry; but that made no difference for they simply had done as God commanded.

Joseph, Mary and the child Jesus did not return from Egypt until the wicked king Herod died.

BROTHER H. S. LASHER

IF THIS notice meets the eye of Brother H. S. Lasher, will he kindly mail me his present address. Brother Lasher was, and is deeply beloved by the brethren in Brooklyn, and his absence is greatly deplored. Let us hear how the Lord has dealt with you, Brother.

FOURTEEN MISTAKES IN LIFE

To attempt to set up your own standard of right and wrong.

To try to measure the enjoyment of others by your own.

To expect uniformity of opinions in this world

To fail to make allowances for inexperience

To endeavor to mold all dispositions alike.

Not to yield to unimportant trifles.

To look for perfections in our own actions.

To worry ourselves and others about what cannot be remedied.

Not to help everybody, wherever, however and whenever we can.

To consider anything impossible that we cannot ourselves perform.

To believe only what our finite minds can grasp.

Not to make allowance for the weakness of others.

The estimate by some outside quality when it is that within which makes the man.

Not to love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your strength and all your mind.

PERSONAL INSPECTION

SINCE THE first of the year we have read and heard a lot regarding what this one is, or ought to do; what they hope the President will do; what they think Congress should do; what they hope the country will do; when the one question, vital to us all, is, what ought I to do? What will I do?

——o——

ARE YOU A CHRISTIAN?

Your professed faith in Jesus Christ should have made of you a new creature. I beseech you to examine yourselves. It should make you like Christ. Are you growing more like Jesus or less like him? If you are not like him, where is your Christianity? What is the use of it? What is the use of professing it? The great need of the moment in all our churches is more likeness to Christ.

OUR LATEST ADDITION

TODAY we add another name to our list of "Special Contributors." Her home address is the same as Sister Walker's—Aunt Bess—Proctor, Mont.

We regret that there has not been a greater response to Sister Walker's appeal. In the larger and more popular churches, with their Sunday Schools and Choirs, and societies, and committes, some sort of work generally is found to keep those of active minds and willing hands busy; but in our little meetings this not always is possible, and often the younger element, much to their own, as well as the church's detriment, will drift away. It is to stop this that those interested in the Young People's Page are willing to spend their time, their strength and their money. The work is a labor of love, love for our fellow man and woman, especially those of an age needing encouragement. It is not done to glorify A. D. Donaldson, nor yet to praise B. K. Walker. It is done to benefit youth to the glory of God and the praise of his Christ. Both Donaldson and Walker are willing to be shoved in the background, not even letting theid names be known, if one person outside of Christ can be brougth to a saving knowledge of the love of God as revealed in Jesus Christ our Lord, or that one child of God can be encouraged into a greater faith or a firmer hope, showing God's love through deeds of mercy and good will.

Now having read this do you not think that you would like to join us in our work? We do not ask this with any thought of lightening our own labor; our only thought is that you may share the benefits, the blessings of working with God, of fulfilling the mission of Jesus in doing "the will of God." God will give good pay to all those who spend their time in his service, not in dollars of glory here, but in the near future in the kingdom of God. Referring to Jesus we read, "Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be."

Marie K. Thomas, our new contributor, whose article entitled "The Christmas Story," is printed in another column, is but twelve years of age. We believe in catching the young, and this time we have had our wish. Whose name will be third on the list? Don't wait: we are willing; you should be anxious. Come.

"Out of Darkness Into Light"

From the Scriptures we learn that so long as the blood of the sin offering had not been sprinkled upon the mercy seat in the most holy place, which was only once a year on the Day of Atonement, the flesh of the sin offering, to which sin had been transferred by the laying on of the right hand upon the head of the animals, and confession of the sin committed, that it was necessary for the High Priestly family to eat, thereby making Aaron and his sons human sin bearers. This custom continued throughout the year, the priesthood bearing the iniquity of the people collectively and individually, up to the Day of Atonement, these sins not having been actually atoned for nor forgiven, but the responsibility for them was taken from the transgressor and placed upon the priesthood. Now during the year while these sins were borne by the priests, what spared their lives, for to bear sin is to suffer the penalty of death? The answer is found in Exodus 28:36, 37: "And thou shalt make a plate of pure gold, and grave upon it, like the engravings of a signet, Holy To Jehovah. And thou shalt put it on a lace of blue, and it shall be upon the mitre; upon the forefront of the mitre it shall be. And it shall be upon Aaron's forehead, and Aaron shall bear the iniquity of the holy things, which the children of Israel shall hallow in all their holy gifts; and it shall be always upon his forehead, that they may be accepted before Jehovah." Here was the covering for iniquity that saved the life of Aaron. The plate of pure gold engraved with "Holy To Jehovah." Should he have appeared in the presence of God without the mitre upon his forehead, he would instantly have been struck dead. A sin covering was also necessary for Aaron's sons in their contact with sin in conjunction with the various offerings that caused them to use the altar and eat the sin offerings. Speaking about Aaron and his sons, the testimony in Exodus 28:42, 43 says: "And thou shalt make them linen breeches to cover the flesh of their nakedness; from the loins even unto the thighs shall they reach; and they shall be upon Aaron and upon his sons, when they go into the tent of meeting, or when they come near unto the altar to minister in the holy place; that they bear not iniquity, and die; it shall be a statute forever unto him and unto his seed after him." These linen breeches were typical and symbolical of righteousness, which in the arrangements of God covers sin and iniquity.

"Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered. Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin" (Rom. 4: 7, 8).

By the divine methods which have been considered, the High Priestly house of Aaron and himself, were day by day during the year accumulating the sins of the people upon themselves, and still their lives were spared; but the time was finally to come when the blood of those accumulated sins must reach the mercy seat in the presence of God as the evidence that the penalty for God's violated law had been satisfied; the testimony is at hand to prove this. "Also on the tenth day of this seventh month there shall be a day of atonement; it shall be an holy convocation unto you; and ye shall afflict your souls, and offer an offering made by fire unto the Lord. For whatsoever soul it shall be that shall not be afflicted in that same day, he shall be cut off from his people" (Lev. 23:27, 29. This holy convocation might be called a Clearing House for all debts during the year, when a new start was made. With this testimony before us we shall be able to understand Leviticus the sixteenth chapter, verse two: "And the Lord said unto Moses, Speak unto Aaron, thy brother, that he come not at all times into the holy place within the veil before the mercy seat, which is upon the Ark; that he die not; for I will appear in the cloud upon the mercy seat." Verse six: "And Aaron shall offer his bullock of the sin offering, which is for himself, and make atonement for himself, and for his house." We read still further about this bullock for a sin offering in verse eleven: "And Aaron shall bring the bullock for a sin offering, which is for himself, and make atonement for himself, and for his house, and shall kill the bullock of the sin offering which is for himself." Verse 14: "And he shall take of the blood of the bullock, and sprinkle it with his finger upon the mercy seat eastward; and before the mercy seat shall he sprinkle the blood with his finger seven times." This is the final disposition of the sins of the Aaronic household which they bear during the year, sins which were not of their own committing but that of others who brought sin offerings to the priests and of whose flesh the priests ate that they might bear the iniquity of the transgressor. From these human sin bearers it was transferred to the bullock, whose blood was sprinkled upon the mercy seat and atonement and forgiveness found for them. These human sin bearers were not allowed to eat of the flesh of the victim whose blood touched the Mercy Seat and made atonement for the sins which they bore. Had they done so then would they have been their own sin bearers. This was not to be: they could only bear the sins of others and still live. So in the antitype: had Christ died bearing his own personal sins for which he died to make atonement, then would he have died in his own sin, and the grave would have held him. Here is the evidence that these human sin bearers could not be bearers for sins for which atonement was made by the blood of the victim being sprinkled upon the Mercy Seat. Lev. 16:17: "And the bullock for the sin offering, and the goat for the sin offering, whose blood was brought in to make atonement in the holy place, shall one carry forth without the camp; and they shall burn in the fire their skins, and their flesh, and their dung." Lev. 6:30: "And no sin offering, whereof any of the blood is brought into the tent of meeting to make atonement in the holy place, shall be eaten; it shall be burnt with fire."

After the sins borne by these human sin bearers had been gotten rid of by transference to the animal, and atoned for by the blood being sprinkled upon the mercy seat, then the individual sins and transgressions of these human sin bearers were dealt with. At this point is where Aaron and his sons were not typical of Christ. We have already pointed this out; nevertheless, here were actual sins of a personal character, and as such they are taken care of. Aaron and his sons were part of the congregation, and the evening and morning burnt-offering were just as much for them as for the sins of any individual Jew, but apart from this on this particular Day of atonement treated of in Leviticus 16th chapter.

There was the goat of the sin offering for the people whose blood was brought within the veil and sprinkled upon the mercy seat. Verse 15, which was for them too. "Then he shall kill the goat of the sin offering, that is for the people, and bring his blood within the veil, and do with that blood as he did with the blood of the bullock, and sprinkle it upon the mercy seat, and before the mercy seat." Further on, in verse twenty-four, the burnt offering is dealt with; Aaron and his house have one and the people have a separate one for themselves upon this particular day of atonement, evidently teaching total and complete consecration to the service of the Lord in those who serve and are served.

That typical human sin bearers could not be the bearers of their own sin is proven by the following testimony. To eat of the flesh of the sin offering in official function is what made men human sin bearers. Lev. 4:3: "If the anointed priest shall sin so as to bring guilt on the people, then let him offer for his sin, which he hath sinned, a young bullock without blemish unto Jehovah for a sin-offering." Now of this sin-offering the anointed priest nor any of the sons of Aaron were allowed to eat. "And the skin of the bullock and all its flesh, with its head, and with its legs, and its inwards, and its dung, even the whole bullock shall he carry forth without the camp unto a clean place, where the ashes are poured out, and burn it on wood with fire; where the ashes are poured out shall it be burnt" (Lev. 4:11, 12).

Christmas All The Time

Let's have Christmas all the time,
You and I;
Make the gladdening joy bells chime
As the days go hurrying by.
Kind words spoken bring bits of cheer
Into homes all dark and drear.
Orphaned child's deep sorrow soothe
With a smile or touch of love.
Time's too short to nurse our woe,
We to work must swiftly go.

Let's have Christmas all the time,
You and I;
Eyes fixed on that lovely clime
Where the fount of tears shall dry,
Singing all the while to men
Song once sung at Bethlehem,
Telling of the Crucified,
Who for us poor sinners died,
Bringing these sweet peace and rest,
To the lonely, troubled breast.

Let's have Christmas all the time,
You and I;
They who would to glory climb
Have no time to moan and sigh.
Men are dying! saving these
We our own deep sorrows ease;
Blessing others we are blessed,
Cared for, succored when distressed,
Have our Savior close beside,
Our tired feet to safety guide.

Let's have Christmas all the time,
You and I;
Help to lessen woe and crime,
Champion truth and purity,
Bringing near and still more near
God's great, glad millennial year,
When the song the angels sung
Shall in truth on earth be done;
And we finding the lost child there,
Have the answer to our prayer.

This beautiful poem was written by Auntie Wince. We are sending it to you, hoping it will help someone else.—Clarence and Helen Doll.

Love, Faith, Hope

Love is the brightest star
In the constellation;
Love shineth from afar,
Blessing every nation.
Love ne'er will bring a sigh,
Sad heart or tearful eye;
Pure love will never die,
Love, sweet love.

Love driveth fear away;
Cross words no longer
Will in their wrath hold sway
Where love is stronger.
Then let us not bewail,
Nor let our courage fail;
Love will at last prevail,
Love, sweet love.

Faith is the message line
Stretched from earth to heaven,
Where all our prayers ascend,
And our sins forgiven.
Faith helps us on our way,
Faith keeps us day by day;
Faith is our staff and stay,
Faith, blessed faith.

Faith is the eye which looks
Up to the kingdom "mountain,"
Where the pathway leads to God
By the crystal fountain.
Though now we cannot see
The end of the kingdom way,
We know God there will be,
Faith, blessed faith.

Hope is the anchor strong
Through the surges rending,
With its links of cable strong
From the ship descending.
Hope in God, the danger's past,
Our anchor in the deep holds fast,
Hope will give us rest at last,
Hope, our hope.

Hope is the beacon light
With its message bringing,
Some rescue ship in sight,
To the sailor clinging.
Hope grips his fingers fast
Into the shattered mast,
Hope gives him strength at last,
Hope, our hope.

The Hebrew Letter

ARTICLE FOUR

TO UNDERSTAND this epistle we must search the Scriptures and become somewhat familiar with the services under the law of Moses. These services are antitypical of which Jesus the Christ is a type. They were the shadows of the things to come. Every beast that was slain was an antitype of the coming one. The tabernacle pointed to the conditions under the rulership of Jesus, the Son of God, and his saints. The tabernacle was the place where Jehovah met his chosen. It was a pattern of the true tabernacle which was in heaven. "See, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern showed thee in the mount." Every thing used in its construction was as pure as nature could make it. The craftsmen were the most skillful that could be had. The hangings were made by hands that were directed by the spirit of the Eternal One. The gold must be pure, the silver and brass must be without alloy. The altar was made according to a pattern of the most costly material. It was divided by curtains or vails. Into the first the priests could enter. Beyond the first vail was the second. This divided it into the Holy and the Most Holy. Into the Most Holy only the High Priest could enter once a year on atonement day when there were provisions for bearing away the sins of the year. On these occasions the people stood without to receive the blessing of the High Priest on his exit with the tidings that God had accepted the sacrifice offered.

The apostle gives a brief account of the tabernacle. He then proceeds to compare the one made with hands and the significance of the sacrifices made. The most significant thing in the service was the effusion of the blood of bulls and goats. The apostle states very plainly that the service of the first must pass away before the second could be established. Further, that these services could not make him that offered perfect as pertaining to the conscience. It was composed of carnal ordinances imposed on them until the time of reformation. These services could not remove or forgive sin; they only cover it. Once a year it was borne away as appointed under the law by the most solemn service. Before this coud occur the High Priest must offer a sacrifice for himself, and then for the people. This every well-informed Hebrew knows. Jehovah had provided in his purpose a means whereby sin could be cancelled or blotted out. The services from the beginning were required to have faith in their offering. Abel's faith was accepted because it was in accord with the instructions of the Lord God. The faith was in the fact that the woman's seed would crush the head of the serpent's seed. This necessitated an animal sacrifice in which there was an effusion of blood. This service was antitypical of Jesus the Christ. In Heb. 9:11-18 the apostle presents the true tabernacle and its High Priest. He states that it was not by the blood of bulls and goats, but by his own blood he entered a greater and more perfect tabernacle not made with hands; that is to say, not of this building or creation.

He then attends to the service of purifying the tabernacle by sprinkling. Through this service the flesh was purified. It not only affected the building but rendered the priests and the people sufficiently pure to stand before the Eternal One. This was effected through the blood of bulls and goats. The writer then proceeds to present the One who, through his own blood, offered himself without spot to God to purge your conscience from dead work to serve the living God. He then states: "For this cause he is the mediator of the new covenant, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first (law) covenant, they who are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance." Jesus had obtained eternal redemption for himself by which he was able to redeem all those who had died previous to his resurrection. The power of his resurrection would apply to all the faithful from the death of Abel to the resurrection of Christ. Abraham's faith was recorded: "Abraham saw my day and rejoiced." It is expressed in the 11th chapter and the 19th verse. Abraham received Isaac in a figure. These passages express the truth that the blessings of the resurrection can come to only those who have been overcomers.

The apostle then proceeds to show the necessity of the death of the Son of God. Where a covenant is made the death of the testator must have occurred. He further states that the benefit can not be distributed while the testator liveth. When a will is made it can not be probated until the one who made it has died. This proof must be given to the court having jurisdiction over such cases. In our state the law creates and establishes the Probae Courrt, which attends to those cases.

The apostle continues his instruction to his brethren by stating that the tabernacle was dedicated with blood, and without the shedding of blood there could be no forgiveness of sins. Without a careful study of their subject we are liable to not come in touch with the significance of the service. These services were a shadow of things to come, and have their fulfilment in Jesus the Christ. We have often wondered why the writer referred to the services under the law. By careful study we have learned that they were referred to to prove the real necessity of the death of the Christ. You will note that the blood was first in all the tabernacle and temple servnces. It is written (vs. 19) that Moses took the blood of bulls and goats, with water and scarlet wool and hyssop and sprinkled both the book and the people. In this service the blood is spoken of first, and is antitypical of the blood of the Christ. The effusion of blood signifies death. There was no place in the Jewish creed for the death of their Messiah. When Jesus spoke of his death they rejected him in these words, "We have heard out of the law that Christ abideth forever. And how sayest thou that the Son of Man must be lifted up? who is this Son of Man?" (John 12:34). A careful student will see that the services under the law could not point to their Christ according to this understanding. The apostle therefore proves in a logical manner that the services must have their fulfilment in the Son of God, born of the Virgin Mary. Again they (the Jews) announced that the throne of their Christ would exist forever, and the scepter of his kingdom would be a scepter of righteousness (Psa. 45:6, 7). This proof is given in Heb.1:8 and is a quotation from Psa. 45:6, 7.

Their doctrine of the Christ was but half a truth, and rejcted the Christ of the prophets. Let us beware of believing a gospel in which is not taught a Christ who died and who fulfilled the prophecies that announced the death of the testator under the law covenant. If he never died the covenant can not be ratified, and "we are yet in our sins." The death of body only will not answer the requirements of the law. Paul declared in 1 Cor. 15 how that Jesus died and was buried and rose according to the Scriptures. The "how" is expressed in Isa. 53. He poured out his soul unto death. No proof here that an imaginary Christ escaped death and went to heaven, or preached to spirits in prison. Nor could he have pre-existed with the Father. Let your faith in the Christ possess a full truth—that our Christ is Jesus the son of the woman. A careful study of this epistle will prove that every part of the law finds its fulfilment of prophecy in Christ. We can truly say, Christ abideth forever, and that his throne, when established, will continue forever, and his scepter will be a scepter of righteousness. We are confident that the Christ covenant has been ratified through his death and the beneficiaries will be given to those who have have kept the faith and run the course marked out by the gospel of Christ.

SLOGAN : WE STAND FOR UNITY, TRUTH, AND RIGHTEOUSNESS

SPICES AND EXTRACTS

FOUR THINGS that never return: the spoken word: the sped arrow; the past life; and the neglected opportunity.

I RECEIVED your good letter not long ago, and how much encouragement and cheer it gives to one who is alone to receive such words of exhortation from one of like precius faith. How I wish I could meet with our people to study. One cannot know how hungry we get to hear the truth, unless they have been isolated. Perhaps we are scattered for a reason. God's way is best. It leads to rest, for our Father planned it all. So we must run with patience the race that is set before us, and despise not the day of small things. I certainly appreciate your letter and will be glad to hear from you whenever it is convenient for you to write.

TO BE clean, to be honest and thorough; to be filled with the spirit of service; to be true to our best; to grow into the spirit of Christ—these, after all, are the supreme things of life.

THERE IS always something to take the joy out of everything. If I could never know of the awful things going on, I might turn myself loose and just enjoy life. But it is not meant to be so, in these last days; and sometimes I wonder why it was my fate to live in this age.

IN SOME ways it is worth a lot to witness the events of the present day. It is intensely interesting if it is terribly wicked. It seems that I notice the wickedness and foul mindedness of the world so much more keenly after associating so much of the time with children, who are pure in mind, compared to the world.

THERE IS just one thing for us to do, that is, to do right, and do the very best we can. There is no doubt but that the day we are looking for is fast approaching. We see signs that our elders never saw. Some times I wonder if we must live better lives than they because of what we know. They knew these things would happen, but there were many prophecies not fulfilled. So they lived in much more peace of mind than we can. I do not believe there are any of us, if we would be real frank about it but what worry some about earthly conditions and wonder if they are really prepared to meet the Lord. As for myself, I would like to know just what I ought to do.

GOD HATH made many sharp cutting instruments and rough files for the polishing of his jewels; and those he especially loves and means to make the most resplendent, he hath oftenest his tools upon.

WE ARE certainly living in wonderful times. All nations seem to be in distress and perplexity. They cry peace, there is no peace. We have great need to have on the gospel armor and be ready with the sword of the spirit, which is the word of God, to fight for the Master. God's word is very beautiful and when it fills our hearts and minds all is joy and peace. I trust you may have God's best blessings on your work in his service, and be the means of bringing blessings to others.

HOW GRAND it will be when the Lord comes and there will be no more sickness and death! Oh that we may be worthy to escape the trials and tribulations that are coming on this sin cursed earth, is my prayer.

YOUR LETTER surely did me a lot of good. Yes, we went 225 miles to have the children baptized.

LET US be patient. These severe afflictions not from the ground arise, but often times are celestial.

SORROWS overwhelm us. Yet God finds music in everything. From a bruised and broken heart God's touch causes melody to flow forth.

LET YOUR religion be seen. Lamps do not talk, but they do shine. A lighthouse sounds no drum; it beats no gong; yet far over the waters its friendly light is seen by the mariner.

KNOW YE not that the saints shall judge the world? Question: Am I worthy to stand beside

Jesus Christ and help judge the world? It is one thing to be a member of the church; another to be worthy to judge the world. Let each examine himself and see if he is worthy to judge others.

RECEIVED your letter; it was such an encouragement to me. I let Sister - - - - read it. She said tell you to be sure to write to her. She is certainly interested. I feel greatly relieved since my baptism to know I am on the right road. I want you to write to me and help me all you can. We have a Berean Society organized here. Report: Met Sunday Nov. 16 at 2 P. M. Opened with singing, "Jesus Will Give You Rest." Prayer. Lesson No. 2 Berean Book. Gathered great information from it. There were present, adults 7; children 6. Closed by singing "What a Friend We Have in Jesus." Miss ———presided at the organ.

IF I knew Jesus would come for me today, would I be satisfied with my life? Is my heart pure and filled with godly love?

A GRATEFUL God has placed me in the world where life is a struggle and temptations are many, rather than in any easy place. I am sure it is the best way to develop character.

THE WORLD seems to be made up of capitalists, laborers and people. Who are the people? The signs indilate we are in the end of this age. Therefore we should strive to be overcomers so that we may be associated with our blessed Lord in his kingdom. God will not suffer his children to be tested above what we are able to bear. And may we all truly say 2nd Tim. 1:4-8. May God bless and keep all you Bereans till his glorious appearing and kingdom; and may we all then merit the applaudit, "Well done."

THOUGHTS CULLED FROM BIBLE HELPS ABOUT THE FOUR GOSPELS

MATTHEW WAS a Jew. He wrote his gospel to the Jews. They worshipped God, and believed that the Old Testatment Scriptures mere a divine revelation. They were expecting a Messiah who was to be their King. Matthew wrote his gospel to prove that Jesus of Nazareth was that Messiah of prophecy. He traces the descent of Jesus from Abraham, through David to prove that he was the rightful King of the Jews. Matthew's gospel is of the kingdom. He used the expression "the kingdom of heaven" many times. His gospel deals with the past, for he rests the logic of it upon Old Testament revelation. He records especially sermons to the people, for this form of teaching was used by the Jewish Rabbis. The principal theme of his gospel is "The Messiah."

Mark was of Roman descent. He wrote his gospel to the Romans. They worshipped Rome as their God and thought they were born to rule the world. They considered the man who was the greatest conqueror most worthy of their attention. Such was Caesar. Mark wrote his gospel to prove that Jesus was all powerful. His gospel is one of action and is Roman in its movements. Free use is made of such words as "straightway," "quickly," immediately," "forthwith," "at once," etc. As the Romans cared little for past or future, Mark deals with the present, and records especially miracles to show the power of Jesus. His theme is "The Almighty King."

Luke was an educated Greek physician. He wrote his gospel to the Greeks. They worshipped man, and made their gods in the likeness of themselves. They loved keen minds, and strong, graceful bodies and bent all their efforts to developing them. Luke wrote his gospel to prove that Jesus was a perfect man. He gives prominence to the human feelings of Jesus, yet shows his complete mastery over human nature. His gospel is one of sympathy and good cheer. He deals with the future because the Greeks were looking to the future for the comfort that they hoped to bring to mankind through intellectual civilization. Luke records especially parables drawn from the every day life of man to teach lessons of justice, love, and forgiveness. His principal theme is "The Divine Man."

John was one of the twelve apostles. He wrote his gospel to the early Christians. They were men of faith who needed light concerning their spiritual life. John wrote to prove that Jesus was the Savior of the world. Such expressions as "light of the world," "water of life," "bread of life," "the good shepherd" are commonly used. His gospel pertains to the spiritual life and deals with eternity. He records especially talks with his disciples. His principal theme is "The Savior."

THE DEATH OF JESUS

Part II.

MEMORY TEXT: And he was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth: he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth (Isa. 53:7).

1. And when they were come to the place which is called Calvary, there they crucified him, and the malefactors, one on the right hand, and the other on the left.
2. Then said Jesus, Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do.
3. And they parted his raiment, and cast lots.
4. And the people stood beholding.
5. And the rulers also with them derided him, saying, He saved others; let him save himself, if he be the Christ the chosen of God.
6. The soldiers also mocked him, coming to him and offering him vinegar.
7. Saying, If thou be the King of the Jews, save thyself.
8. And about the sixth hour there was a darkness over all the earth until the ninth hour.
9. And the sun was darkened, and the vail of the temple was rent in the midst.

10. And when Jesus had cried with a loud voice, he said, Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit, and having said this, he gave up the ghost.
11. And all the people that came together to that sight, beholding the things which were done, smote their breasts and returned.
12. And, behold, there was a man named Joseph, a counsellor; and he was a good man, and a just.
13. This man went unto Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus.
14. And he took it down and wrapped it in linen, and laid it in a sepulchre that was hewn in stone, wherein never man before was laid.
15. And the women also, which came with him from Galilee, followed after, and beheld the sepulchre, and how the body was laid.
16. And they returned, and prepared spices and ointments; and rested the Sabbath day according to the commandment (Luke 23:33-56).

Loving hands carry our Lord to the grave,
To the tomb, where the olive boughs wave,
Sadly his trusting friends, tenderly weep,
As in the garden they laid him to sleep.

Practical Notes

Our lesson today is about the death and burial of the Lord Jesus. He was really dead. The Scripture predicted his death many years before it took place. They told all the particulars, even to the soldiers casting lots for his coat. Let us remember while we study his death, that "He was wounded for our transgressions." What an impressive funeral train—Nicodemus, Joseph of Arimathea, all his acquaintances, and the women among whom was his mother—these follow to the grave. Tenderly, and amid tears and silence, they wrap him in spice and clean linen and lay him to rest. But the priests are not satisfied; they want the tomb guarded for fear the disciples will steal the body and report a resurrection. It is well they did so, for now we know they did not steal him, but that the angel rolled the stone away and Jesus arose.

Notes on the Lesson

1. Calvary.—The same as Golgotha—the place of a skull (Matt. 27:33). Malefactor.—One who commits a crime.

2. They Know Not.—Do not realize.

3. Cast Lots.—They cast lots upon the coat, which was knit or woven (John 19:23).

3. Christ.—The anointed.

8. Darkness.—For three hours there was a darkness—not an eclipse of the sun, for Jesus was crucified at the Passover, when the moon was always full, or at the fourteenth day from new moon.

9. Veil of the Temple. The partition between the holy and most holy.

10. My Spirit.—Life. Gave up the Ghost.—Breathed out the life.

11. Smote their Breasts.—An expression of sadness or fear.

14. Sepulchre.—A vault, hewn out of the native rock.

Suggestive Topics and Questions

1. The Death. Where was Jesus crucified? (1). How many criminals were crucified with him? After being nailed to the cross, how long did he remain until he died? (Mark 15:25; Luke 23:46). What occurred between the sixth and ninth hour? (8). Was Jesus cricified at the passover? On what day of the moon or month did the Passover come? Was it full or new moon when the darkness occurred? Can we have an eclipse of the sun when the moon is full? Why not? Was the darkness then, an eclipse, or was it something unusual? What occurred in the temple when Jesus died? (9). What occurred at the grave yard? (Matt. 27:52). What effect did these things have upon the people? (11).

2. The Burial.—Who took Jesus down from the cross after he was dead? (John 19:38, 39). In what did they wrap the Savior? (John 19:40). Where did they carry him? (John 19:41). What kind of a sepulchre was in the garden? Tell who were present at the burial. What was placed at the door of the tomb? Who placed a guard around the tomb to watch it? What was the object of the guard? What precaution was taken in reference to the stone? (Matt. 27:62-66).

Indiana Bible School Building

THE CONSTRUCTION of the basement under the North Salem Church for kitchen and dining room purposes for Bible School and Conference meetings, is progressing nicely. The building has been raised, new walls constructed, windows placed, excavation about all done, and the inside walls cemented. The building committee, F. A. Stilson, Marshall Logan, and David Fetters, are to be congratulated on getting this work enclosed so the cementing can go on inside during the cold weather.

Those that have subscribed to the Repair Fund are kindly asked to forward your subscription to the state Conference Treasurer, Marshall Logan, Plymouth, Ind. The churches that have not made up their part are hereby solicited to do so at their earliest convenience in order that the work can be completed and paid for.

The establishment of a permanent place for holding the annual Bible School and Conference will be a distinct advantage for the state Conference work. It was decided to undertake this work at our last annual state Conference, and it is to be hoped that it will be fully completed not later than June 1st, so that our coming yearly Bible School and Conference can be held in it.

Visitors this week were Sister Moses, of New Medford, Ohio; and Brother and Sister Cantwell Drabenstott, of Hartford City, Indiana. Brother and Sister Drabenstott's loyalty to "sound doctrine" is proverbial; and we have greatly enjoyed their presence among us.

Sister Herron, after a lingering illness, fell asleep in Jesus Jan. 20th. In her case we all feel the comforting assurance of the declaration, "He giveth his beloved sleep.' In pastoral calls for the last nine years we always found Sister Herron sunny and optimistic, although suffering from an incurable malady. We shall miss her personally; and Brother Herron has suffered an incalculable loss in which he has the unfeigned sympathy of the brotherhood. As a tribute to her stability and faithfulness in the truth, her funeral sermon was preached from Rev. 2:10: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."

The League of Nations is having a struggle to live, and time alone will show whether it will succeed in consolidating international power or succumb to "the force of circumstances." That it has been put forward with an entire ignoring of God and his word is not a hopeful augury. And President Wilson's declaration that the League is the only hope of mankind is lamentable, because if this be the only hope, then indeed is mankind hopeless. There is only one hope presented to men, the hope that is a Person and all that is bound up with him. We fear that these endless international deliberations are a prelude to "the rulers take counsel together against the Lord and against his anointed" (Psa. 2). -Words of Life.

A Few Reasons

You claim that only the righteous are spoken of in 1 Cor. 15th chapter, particularly in the 22nd verse, "In Christ shall all be made alive." Please give a few reasons why you so understand this chapter.

Editorial Comments

OUR REASONS are many, but we are content with stating the following:

I. The death of believers can only be intended by the "sleeping" in verse 20.

II. The individuals said to be raised are "they that are Christ's." By no stretch of imagination can the wicked be called "Christ's."

III. This cannot apply to any of his enemies, all of whom he is said to "put under his feet."

IV. The corruptible putting on incorruption, and the mortal putting on immortality, can apply to believers only.

V. "The dead shall be raised incorruptible" cannot by any means apply to sinners, unless they are raised immortal. Immortality destroys the possibility of probation. Those who quote this text to prove universal resurrection prove, if they prove anything, that future probation is for "incorruptible" beings. But then such beings have no need of such probation!

DEAR RESTITUTION:

ANOTHER year has rolled by, and may we all try to do more good in the future than we have in the past. After reading so many good articles from the dear ones of the household of faith, it makes us feel better and inspires us to want to write, too. I have always felt that someone else could do better than I, so this is my first letter.

I think we should all try. By so doing we improve our own minds, and may be a light to others. If it was so we could all meet, talk, and sing of the beautiful truths of the Bible, what a joyful time we would have! But as we cannot we must try to help each other through our little paper, The Restitution.

We think it is great to be living now. But how much greater it will be to live when Jesus comes and makes everything pure. Paul says it hath not entered into the heart of man what God hath in store for those who love him. This, dear ones, is enough to make us each try to live so we will be worthy of everlasting life when Jesus comes, whose right it is to reign. We are on probation now, and have been blessed with good minds so that we can discern the good from the evil. We should always feel that some one is following us, and try to set for him a worthy example.

We do not know the day or the hour when our Lord is coming. How sad it would be to be left out of his number. But what joy it will be if we are ready and waiting to meet him and hear him say "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make you ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord" (Matt. 25:21).

Yours in hope of new life,

Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Sprinkle,

—o—

DEAR BROTHER HUGGINS:

IN RECENT issues of the paper Sister Wood-Knapp and Sister Hogarth have emphasied the importance of giving more attention to gospel truths and less to the "nonprofitable." I believe in this they are showing real friendship for The Restitution. An article that tends neither to the conversion of the sinner nor the edification of the disciple is "nonprofitable." Their contributions in Dec. 16th Jan. 6th issues are well worth reading again.

These sisters and others have called attention to good derived from short published letters and from private correspondence. In former years "they spake often one to another." I quite agree with Brother S. H. Thomas that sometimes one's best thoughts are given best expression in private correspondence. In such cases it should be passed on "to others" without change of words. In the free and frank expression of private correspondence writer and reader are drawn more closely together than in formal contributions

One of the best friends The Restitution has ever had, Sister S. Roxana Wince, of Pierceton, Ind., besides contributing to the paper, has long been a great letter writer. Her letters to the sick, grief stricken, or troubled in any way, as well as to the more fortunate, are all appreciated. Auntie Wince has lived near to Jesus for so long that she seems to be used as a "special messenger" for Jesus to carry his choicest blessings to those for whom he gave his precious life. From far away British Columbia, from the sunny slopes of Alabama, and from other places comes word of her letter that are greatly appreciated. On the 10th of February last year, her birthday, friends reciprocated. She told us through The Restitution that when that flood of tokens and messages of love and appreciation, and prayers for her poured in, she considered it a prayer meeting. Let there be another prayer meeting this year, and let there be a double attendance.

Sincerely yours,

G. M. Alexander.

DEAR ONES OF THE BELOVED FAITH:

I HAVE not tried to write to you for a long time although I have not forgotten you. Since reading Brother John Parker's sermon on the gospel as it was preached to Abraham I feel like saying "thank you;" for it is something which I think ought to be made plain. If the saving faith of the gospel is not contained in the oath-bound covenants that God made with Abraham and David, I do not understand the record. I believe if each one was written up in a tract that it would be a great help to everyone, especially the younger. So many say, "How are we to know which one is right of the many faiths? Each one claims he is right and condemns the others." I say to such confused people, Who preached the first gospel sermon? They never can tell, so I point them to Brother Paul who said that God preached the gospel to Abraham, and he believed it, and we must do the same. How few know anything about these things! Many times when I have finished telling people about the promises God made to Abraham, they will say, "I never heard that before." Many times I feel sad at heart, and tears start when people will listen in earnest. Men and women of all ages tell me I never heard the gospel before. How can we blame them when they have never heard? They join churches, and pay their money; but never hear the saving truth of the gospel. What a pity!

I am glad Brother Parker wrote that sermon; and there is enough left for another one. Without saying any more, what do you think about the two oath-bound covenants put in a tract so we can hand them out in letters and on every occasion possible? We have no axe to sell, but we can help some on the printing and take time to hand them out. I am in earnest about the matter, but will submit to what Brother Huggins and others think best. The paper is fine this week. I looked up the Elijah subject and find that he did not come on the stage of action until one thousand years after the call of Abraham, and that brings him about the close of Solomon's reign. If he is a Gentile, all right; Ruth was a Gentile, too; and Obed her son is in the line for Christ. Thank God, for he had us Gentiles in mind all the time. I want to thank Brother J. J. S. for calling our attention to Elijah. I have learned something.

Brother Robison's Hebrew Letter is good, also Sister Carrie Free's little exhortation is timely. How much we need the rejected King, and how glad the poor Jews will be when they behold him in his beauty. Then they will look up and say, "This our God; we have waited for him; we will rejoice and be glad in his salvation." How much we ought to thank the good Father for the wonderful blessings that will soon be poured out on both Jews and Gentiles.

Your sister in the saving faith of the gospel.

Mrs. Clark McClellan.

We Mothers

SOME TIME ago a dear sister wrote me these words: "I keep my faith bright by brightening the faith of others." I had no doubt heard those same words before, but I commenced to ask myself, Do I really bring joy to my own life by my service to others when done for Jesus' sake? Do we? It may be true we were trying daily to teach the word to our little ones, but does the common, every day routine of labor make us forget to do all to his glory and not chafe under the harness? There is real joy, sisters, in seeing how many little things, a word here and example there, that we can crowd into those litttle lives and memories by our constant prayers, watchings and teachings. Watch, first of all, the word. Try and apply it to our own life so that those dear ones around us can see we have been with Jesus and learned of him. Do not let the common every day duties drown the greatest opportunity of giving to mothers, that of moulding those young lives before they are too old to mould in the way of truth. Mother, does the necessary washing, mopping, and cleaning take all your time? Is it your first duty? If so who will read, talk, amuse, and be the moulder of those given you? Are we supposed to allow the cares of this world to choke out the word? Are we supposed to allow the social duties, parties, or pleasures to take our time? No.

I hear you say, "Beware, mothers dear, for we are just as liable to not have time on account of keeping our house just so, as we are to waste our time in pleasures." We strain at a gnat and swallow a camel. Is our house always neat, sweet, and clean? There is nothing nearer to godliness than cleanliness; but which comes first? Mother, don't deceive yourself; every hour those children need you. When they are grown and gone, and your opportunity with them, can they say, "Well, my mother was a lovely house keeper, but it took all her time." Would you not rather they should say, "The desire and work of my mother's life was to see us learn the truth." So many good Christians make the home sweet and clean by working constantly, and by so doing they surely are doing a Christian duty; but those same busy mothers have never made a practice of teaching the word daily. They have never taught their little ones to pray; they don't take time to see what the children read; they don't take time to read to those too young to read for themselves. They have no time for their neighbor's children, they would much rather not be bothered; rather let them go elsewhere, learn elsewhere—anything just so we can get through our work! Why, if our Lord tarries, and time should last a hundred years, Mothers will find work and dirt, but alas! how long before our opportunity is gone!

This is a strange place in this article perhaps to tell a story, but one comes to my mind, and I will tell it. During the late war a big negro was in the trenches, and the firing being very hot, he got very excited and jumped up on the side of the trench shouting, "Hay dar, you ol Jumans, let dem bullets come; let em come; I'll eat dem all!" Just then a big shell struck close, burying Sambo entirely. When they dug him out, he stood up spitting the mud out of his mouth. He said, "Ah, brudders, dats what I call sarvis."

Well, let us not be like Sambo and think that burying ourselves in the common cares of home life can really be all that is required of us in service. God's will requires more at our hands. Our Lord wants service daily. We are bought with a price; we are his to work for him. Our children need us; our neighbors need us; the community needs us—needs our service daily, hourly, all the time.

Lastly, let us turn to Prov. 22:6. There we read "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." Oh, let us pause long enough each day to try to brighten the faith of others, and so work for Jesus. The word "mother" is beautiful and means so much; but "Christian mother" means much more.

Mrs. Chas. Thomas.

Remarks

ON DECEMBER 2nd I returned from the Iowa meeting in a snow storm, which marked the beginning of a continued spell of very bad weather; cold and much snow, more than for the same time of year for 20 years. I anticipated this, so put in all the time possible during the months of September, October, and November, so as little time would be lost. We ought to get the gospel to the world as speedily as possible, so the Lord will not say, "I require their blood at thy hand." But as I have said before, I am satisfied it is not going to be the orthodox and world only, who are going to be surprised when Jesus comes. The Lord warned his own people and told them, "In an hour when ye think not, the Son of Man cometh."

It is evident from this that Jesus knew that a condition would exist at the time of his coming that would have its effect upon the church, a time when we might think we had been premature in predicting his near coming, which would cause, in some at least, a state of carelessness. Cannot we see this is the very thing we should look out for? Somebody has got to keep awake and watch, and when we see the brethren getting drowsy, give them a good shaking and wake them up.

Brethren, we appeal to you to be aroused and heed the warning. Jesus made the above statement for the good of all. If we fail to be warned and he finds us asleep, and we hear him say, "could ye not watch with me one hour?" and then the climax, "sleep on." A soldier found sleeping at his post of duty would be court martialed; and why? Because his own safety and the lives of others were depending on his vigilance. How much more needful for us to be alert when people's eternal welfare is depending upon us. This does not mean that I should hurry round and wake up the sleepy brethren when it is their duty to keep awake and watch. The brother or sister who is really alive and fully awake to the conditions of these times is active in every department of the work. Were you ever in a large packing plant and noticed how systematic the work is done? From the time a hog is bought until it reaches the cooling room, a large number of men have had a hand in the work.

One lesson to be learned is that there is some parts of the work, in preparing it for the cooling room, some of the men he passes before, would not be capable of doing. So men are expected to do just the work they are capable of doing, and they have only a certain amount of time to do their part, and that is while the animal is passing by them; and if they miss or hesitate, it goes on, so that chance or opportunity is gone for ever.

So our opportunities come and go, and when passed are gone for ever. A similar opportunity may come some time, but that particular one with all its possibilities can never be recalled. Think what they might mean; some one might be led into the light of God's truth and into the kingdom by taking advantage of that very opportunity. If such a thing should confront us at the judgment, how awful it would be. This should make us stop and think. How many opportunities during 1919 have we let pass, and to resolve that during 1920 we make them less, and as far as is possible, not to let one single opportunity slip by. What a vast improvement there would be in the church and its work. In the above illustration you see how the company puts every one in its working body as they are fitted and as it pleases them. So in the church, the body of Christ; God sets the members as it pleases him, and according to their several abilities, and every one must do his part of the work. If they fail, it more or less clogs and hinders. Then why not every one do their part and make the work so much more efficient? It is certain we are going to be compelled to give an account of our stewardship, and according to how we have served we will be judged, and will hear the "well done" or "depart," as it may be. part," as it may be.

Some who attended our meeting earlier in the season have asked me to return and bury them in baptism. So I am on the ground for that purpose, and hope to be able to report more added to the body in our next report. Pray for the work and God's truth.

Almus Adams.

Obituary

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.--Psa. 116:15.

John Wesley McCrory was born near Ashland, Ohio, August 8, 1845, and when one year of age came with his parents to Elkhart County, Indiana, where he grew to manhood. He purchased land in Marshall County and removed four miles south of Plymouth in 1870. He attended common schools and rounded out an education in a private school in Goshen, Indiana, and for a number of years was a sucessful teacher in the district schools of Elkhart and Marshall counties. He was a man of full average intelligence and had no superiors in his chosen profession as a farmer. On October 9th, 1873, he was married to Julia Logan and at once took up their residence on the farm until her death in 1904. To them were born six children, two of whom—Inas and Byron— preceded them in death, and the four survivors are Mrs. Utinsy, of Chicago, and Melvin of Fenwood, Wisconsin. He is also survived by two brothers and two sisters, Neal, of Lincoln, Nebraska, and Francis M., of Plymouth. Mrs. Sarah S. Thompson, of Kendalville, Ind., and Mrs. Caroline Logan, of Lapaz, Ind., and also nine grandchildren. Since the death of his wife he has made his home with his daughter, Mrs. Adams, except two years which he spent in proving up a claim near Williston, North Dakota. Two months ago he contracted a heavy cold which terminated in pneumonia and heart failure to which he succumbed Saturday, Jan. 3rd, 6:30 P. M. GOLDEN TEXT: Matthew 5:14-16

"LET THERE BE LIGHT"

"And God said, Let there be light; and there was light" (Gen. 1:3).

Let not the argument of human reason
Whisper within thyself: It must be so;
This false belief, though only for a season,
Is the effect which mortal thoughts bestow.

Can love be less than love, administering
Sickness and sorrow, false belief and fear,
Dimming the glory of each bright tomorrow,
And casting over every joy a tear?

Where is thy faith, O faithless generation?
Lift up thine eyes toward the clearer height,
See the bright truth, with radiant revelation,
Vanquish each shadow of receding night.

"I WILL MULTIPLY THY SEED AS THE STARS"

GOD HAD given to "the righteous man" whom, as Isaiah says, he had "raised up from the east," a beautiful laughter loving boy. He was a regular little giggler, fairly bubbling over with innocent merriment, so much so that his very name was given because of its significance; for Isaac means "laughter." His mother had laughed and he would laugh, and his children would laugh after him.

But when this beautiful boy was about five years old, large enough anyway to carry a big armful of wood, God bade Abraham his father, offer him up as a sacrifice. That was a hard thing to ask, wasn't it? You young people may think so, but Abraham was not at all afraid. God had promised that his children should have the land of Canaan forever, and he believed him.

When he told his servants to stay behind till he and his son went on farther and worshipped and came again, it shows how sure he was that God would raise Isaac again to life even if he did offer him up on the altar he was about to prepare.

He knew that when the Almighty God had promised a thing there could be no failure. And the Lord was so pleased when he saw that Abraham's faith had not staggered at the terrible test, that "he sware by himself because he could swear by no greater," that because he had done this thing, and had not withheld his son, his only son, that in blessing he would bless him, and in multiplying he would multiply his seed as the stars of the heavens, and as the sand that is upon the sea shore, and that his seed would possess the gate of his enemies. The stars that we can see with the naked eye are not so countless as one might think, but there are 100,000,000 ten thousand times too small to be thus seen. Do you think my dears, you could sit down and count one by one such a countless number? You never would. Yet God said to Abraham, "So shall thy seed be," The great men of Harvard University have been busy for years hunting for new stars of this size, and they have found eighteen. They are found in the Milky Way, and are of the fifteenth and sixteenth magnitude. And if those of this magnitude are so countless, what about the still smaller ones so far away that the most powerful telescopes cannot make anything out of them but a cloud like mist--a dusty, smoke like haze?

The promises of God are wonderful, set as they are in the very heavens, and hitched to the sun, the moon, and the stars. How could Abraham doubt the word of a God who was the creator and the ruler of such countless worlds as these; and how can we? Isaac, when offered, would be burnt to ashes, and yet Abraham believed that that same Isaac would go back with him when the sacrifice was over to the young men who had been left to care for the ass! I cannot otherwise explain the words, "when we come again." Abraham would not lie nor prevaricate. He said what he was certain would come to pass, for long before Isaac was born God had promised that "his seed should be like dust of the earth," that he should be "the father of many nations," and that the everlasting covenant should be established with the son that Sarah was to bear.

BACK TO GOD

RECENTLY, while in Brooklyn, William Jennings Bryan preached in the Academy of Music. Among other things he said:

"The paramount need of the world today, as it was 1900 years ago, is a whole-hearted, whole-souled, whole-minded faith in the living God. A hesitating admission that there is a God is not sufficient; man must love with all his heart, and with his soul, and with his mind and to love he must believe. His belief in God must be a conviction that takes hold of his very life, grips every nerve and fibre of his being and dominates his very impulse and energy. The thought of God is the greatest thought that can enter a human mind or heart, and a sense of responsibility to God the most potent influence that acts upon a life."

YOUTH AND AGE

IN ANOTHER column we print a "little piece" written by an eleven year old girl showing that no matter how young you are, you have some talent that can be used to the glory of God. Following is Longfellow's showing that also in our age we still can be active in the Master's service. God has done much for us; let us all do our little in publishing the glorious news of his love.

NOT TOO LATE

It is too late! Ah, nothing is too late.—
Cato learned Greek at eighty; Sophecles
Wrote his grand "Edipus," and Simonides
Bore off the prize of verse from his compeers,
When each had numbered more than fourscore years;
And Theophrastus at four score and ten
Had begun his "Characters of Men."
Chaucer at Woodstock, with the nightingales,
At sixty wrote the the "Canterbury Tales."
Goethe at Weimar, toiling to the last,
Completed "Faust" when eighty years were past.
What then? Shall we sit idly down and say,
The night hath come; it is no longer day?
—For age is opportunity no less
Than youth itself, though in another dress.
And as the evening twilight fades away,
The sky is filled with stars invisible by day.

AN ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

WE WISH to thank the Young People's Society in connection with the Church of God at Cleveland, Ohio, who, through Frances H. Russell, acting Corresponding Secretary, sent us such an inspiring letter of appreciation, thanks, and good wishes. Only those engaged in such work-as ours know the good such letters do. In reply permit me to say may the eternal God bless thee in your every undertaking done in his name. And repeating your own sweet sentiment may we suggest:

Go make thy garden fair as thou canst,
Thou workest never alone,
Perchance he whose plot is next to thine
Will see it and mend his own.

Paul said: "Let us not be weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap if we faint not. As we therefore have opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith."

DO NOT SWEAR

BECAUSE it is not manly.
Because it does not help you in any way.
Because it always does you harm.
Because there is never a good person who likes those who swear.
Because it gives you a bad name.
Because it hurts your father and mother.
Because- and this is the greatest of all reasons—Jesu, in Matthew 5:34 says, "Swear not at all." If we swear we commit sin against God and his Christ.

The little Miss who sent us the above writes: "I am sending you a little piece, and if you think it will do any good please print it in the paper. I will try to write again if this is all right. My name is Jennie Thomas. My mamma is Mrs, Chas. Thomas. I am but eleven years old."

Well, Jennie, we have printed your "little piece" believing it to be all right, also in the hope that it will do much good and that we shall receive many "little pieces" from your pen, or as it was in this case, your pencil.

MORE THAN VIRTUE NEEDED

VIRTUE by itself is not enough, or anything like enough. Strength must be added to it, and the determination to use that strength. The good man who is ineffective is not able to make his goodness of much account to the people as a whole. No matter how much a man hears the word, small is the credit attached to him if he fails to be a doer also; and in serving the Lord he must remember that he needs avoid sloth in his business as well as cultivate fervency of spirit.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

HOW MANY of you each week look up, read, and commit to memory the Golden Text? It is worth all the trouble and time it takes, and we trust you all do it. No one can know too much of God's word, especially when we study it for the purpose of living and practicing it. Now let us all turn to 2 Tim. 2:11 and carefully read it. If it is beyond your understanding ask mother or father to explain it.

"MAKE 'EM GOOD"

"Make 'em good,"
I hear the prayer
Of my little boy of three.
He learned it from his sister's prayer;
Just so much he has understood.
Can we pray more than he?
"Make 'em good."
It is a prayer
Wide as the earth and sky and sea,
Baby, I seek to learn your prayer:
The sweet repeatings understood
Bless all the world and me.

The Restitution

A Paper Representing the Church of God, and Devoted to the Exposition and Defense of the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God and the Name of Jesus Christ.—Acts 8:12.

VOLUME 72 CLEVELAND, O. FEBRUARY 10th, 1920. NUMBER 6

Is It Nothing To You?

Is it nothing to you that a sin-sick world
Is lying in darkness and night,
And with never a bright cheering beam to shine
With glorious gospel light?
Is it nothing to you that the millions there
Go down to a Christless grave,
And with not a word of the loving Lord,
Who suffered, their souls to save.

Is it nothing to you that they groan and wail,
In anguish and sorrow and pain?
Shall the Savior who died on the cruel cross
Have given his life in vain?
Is it nothing to you that the last command
Of him whose dear name you bear
Was to preach the gospel to all the lands,
Proclaiming it everywhere?

Is it nothing to you? Is it nothing to you?
That the harvest is great and the reapers are few?
O hasten to tell through the world so wide
The love of the crucified.—Selected by Sister S. Roxana Wince.

A Comforting Hope

WE DO not wish you to remain in ignorance, Brothers, with regard to those who have passed to their rest, that your grief may not be like that of others, who have no hope. For, as we believe that Jesus died and rose again, so also we believe that God will bring, with Jesus, those who through him have passed to their rest. This we tell you on the authority of the Lord—that those of us who are still alive at the coming of the Lord will not anticipate those who have passed to their rest. For, with a loud summons, with the shout of an archangel, and with the trumpet call of God, the Lord himself will come down from heaven. Then those who died in union with Christ shall rise first; and afterwords we who are still living shall be caught up in the clouds, with them, to meet the Lord in the air; and so we shall be for ever with the Lord. Therefore, comfort one another with what I have told you (1 Thess. 1:13-18, From the 20th Century N. T.).

Paul said: "He that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the spirit shall of the spirit reap life everlasting." What will your harvest be?

A Letter to a Russellite

ON THE PRE-EXISTENCE OF CHRIST

DEAR FRIEND:

I SEE you still persist in believing that Jesus was older than his mother! I frankly confess I know of no Scripture that necessitates this view. On the other hand, there are many plain declarations of the word clearly against it. While from the stand point of reason you admit it "looks absurd," you say the Bible teaches plainly that Jesus became the son of Mary. Where? I know not of any passage.

Again you say, "Jesus was before any creature" in point of time. Let us see: "Thou madest man a little lower than the angels" (Heb. 2:7). Here speaking of "man" or his "son." God says he made "him" lower than the "angels." Here we have positive proof of two things:

1. God made the "angels" before he made "man;"

2. Man when "made" was created lower than the "angels;"

3. Therefore man could have never been the creator of angels, though they could have created him. Now in Heb. 2:9 we find these words: "But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels." Here, too, is positive proof of three things:

1. God made the "angels" before he made "Jesus;"

2. Jesus, when "made," was created lower than the angels;

3. Therefore Jesus could never have been the creator of angels, though they could have created him. Hence your statement falls; also your contention that he "created all things" for, as can be easily seen from the foregoing, manifestly he did not make the "angels."

"Before I formed thee in the belly I knew thee, and before thou camest forth out of the womb I sanctified thee and I ordained thee a prophet" (Jer. 1:5). Here we are told "before" Jeremiah was "formed," God "knew" him and "sanctified" and "ordained him a prophet." Are we to conclude, then, that Jeremiah pre-existed? What do you say? Hundreds of thousands say "yes," and therefore teach the pre-existence of man! Titus 1:2 says God "promised" Paul "eternal life." When? "Before the world began." Did Paul pre-exist? "Before Abraham was, I am." Here we are told Christ was "before Abraham." Shall we conclude, then, that Christ pre-existed? Yes, say you. Then those who believe that man pre-existed might point you to Jer. 1:5; Titus 1:2 and other passages of similar import to prove that man, too, pre-existed! What proves too much proves nothing. How did God "sanctify" Jeremiah "before he was formed?" How did he "promise" Paul eternal life "before the world began?" How was Jesus "before Abraham?" The one answer to these questions is this: Not any of these pre-existed. God had a plan. In it Jeremiah was to be "a prophet:" Paul was "promised" eternal life; and Christ was to be the "Redeemer" of the race. Being the "Redeemer" it would place him in that plan "before Abraham" or any one else in preference and in glory. It would make him the central figure of the divine plan of the ages. Rom. 8:29, 30; Eph. 1:4, 5 teach the same truth that in God's plan (Eph. 2:9) each "saint" was "chosen" "before the foundation of the world." In selecting the ones of this "plan" Jesus was first chosen; then the "saints," such as Abraham, Paul, etc. Hence Jer. 1:5; John 8:58; Titus 1:2 do not teach the pre-existence of these men, but that each had a place in the divine plan.

Col. 1:16, "In him were created all things (American Version, Revised Version, American Bible Union, Wakefield, Emphatic Diaglott, Douay, New Version). What an array! Surely "in" is correct here instead of "by"! How was everything created 'in him?" Why, in the divine plan he was the final reason why Jehovah created all things. Everything hinged upon the creation of a Redeemer. Philip Melancthon, who was professor of Greek at Wittenburg, had this to say: "In him was created all things, that is on account of him." Editor of Eusibius said this: "All things were created for the sake of and unto him." Now these men were trinitarians; hence not biassed in my favor in regard to this text. Finally Hugo Grotius said: "Chrysostom understood by the passage that the world was created for Christ." Hence there is nothing in Col. 1:16 to prove pre-existence.

Rev. 1:8; 1:11; 21:6; 22:13 teach the same fact that John 8:58, Rom. 8:29, 30; Eph. 1:4, 5; 2:9; Col. 1:16 teach, that Jesus was the central figure of the divine plan, the final cause of the carrying out of this plan. Without his blessed personality being in that plan, it would collapse. Hence he was the reason why God created all things, and will be the cause why God will "gather all things together in Christ Jesus" (Eph. 1:10). He is the author (alpha) and finisher (omega) of our faith. Let us now consider your interpretation of these texts: If he was the "beginning," the first created then he is also the "end"--the last thing God will create! Can he be the first and last thing that God will ever make?

John 1:1-14: "In the beginning was wisdom, and wisdom was with God, and wisdom was God. Through it was everything made that was made. And wisdom became flesh" (Lindsay's Version, Wakefield's Version). Here these eminent translators have rendered "logos," "wisdom." Are they right? Let us see: Logos means a word spoken, speech, doctrine, reason, thought expressed, and wisdom. So the word can be so rendered. What then, does the passage mean? Why God in the beginning created all things in "wisdom." Without it he created nothing. "It was God" in the sense of love being God, that is, one of his attributes. This divine "wisdom" was transmitted through the laws of heredity to the flesh vessel -- Jesus Christ -- he thus becoming the "wisdom of God to us" (1 Cor. 1:30). But if "logos" is to be rendered "word" then it would mean the word of God -- creative energy -- by which "God formed the world" (Heb. 11:3). This "word" power later on being committed to Jesus, who thus became the "power of God" unto us (1 Cor. 1:24). So he could say to the winds "peace be still," and they would obey his voice. So whether "logos" is rendered "wisdom," which I prefer, or "word," it does not clash with the idea that Christ's existence commenced when God begat him of the Virgin Mary. "Wisdom" in Prov. 8 is merely a case of personification. It is no person. In the Greek Septuagint the Hebrew word here is rendered "logos," thus proving to my mind that "logos" of John 1:1-14 means "wisdom."

But you may say, "Wisdom is a person." If so then it is a woman! See Prov. 8:1-3; 9:1-4. Here wisdom is declared to be a "she" and a "her"! Was this Jesus? Inasmuch as it can not be Jesus, and inasmuch as "logos" is the word in the Greek Septuagint here rendered "wisdom," and inasmuch as "logos" occurs again in John 1:1, it follows that "logos" there can not be Jesus. Hence your arguments fail to stand.

John 1:10. "The world was made because of him" (Sinaitic Version). The Greek word "dia," here rendered "because of," and in the King James Version "by," is rendered "for" one hundred and seventeen times. Here are examples: Mark 2:17; 1 Cor. 2:9. There is no reason we know of why it should not be "for" in John 1:10 or Heb. 1:2. Now in the latter passage "dia" is rendered "for whose sake" or "on account of" by Chandler; Lindsay; Beesham; Diaglott.

I believe now I have answered all your arguments. I shall now submit some new arguments why I believe Jesus to be younger than his mother:

1. "I will be his Father" (2 Sam. 7:14). Does this mean "I am his Father"? Would it not if Jesus then existed? Suppose a woman said, "I will be a mother," would we understand her to mean she was then a mother? Would she not then be one if she had a child? So with the Father. If he then had a "Son" would he not then be a "Father"? But inasmuch as he said, "I will be a Father," it follows the existence of the "Son" then spoken of was future.

2. "And now saith Jehovah who is forming me from the womb" (Isa. 49:5, Young's Version) Could this "me" exist before it was "formed"? God formed man of the dust proves, does it not, that "man" did not exist till "formed"? Then do not the words, "who is forming me from the womb," prove the "me" not to exist till "formed"?

3. "Before the child (Immanuel) shall know to refuse the evil and choose the good, the land thou abhorrest shall be forsaken of both her kings." But if "Immanuel" existed then, it is safe to say he knew not enough to "refuse the evil and choose the good"! This is clearly evident, for the "land" spoken of then had both of its kings. Shall we say this was the pre-existent condition of Jesus--a know nothing!

4. Isa. 11:2 says certain things "shall" happen to Jesus. What are they? He is to have "understanding," "wisdom" and a "quick understanding;" Bear in mind, these things were future at that time. God "shall" do them. If Jesus then existed he at that time lacked these things: "understanding," "wisdom" and a "quick understanding," or would God give him something he already had!

5. Can there be a conception without a begettal? Can there on the other hand, be a begettal without a conception? If not, who conceived Jesus, if he was begotten before the world was? If some person did, then had he not two mothers? These questions deserve an answer.

6. "I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth" (Matt. 11:12). Here the "Father" is said to be "Lord of heaven and earth." Acts 17:24 tells us that this same "Lord of heaven and earth" "made the world and all things." If he did then Christ did not. Heb. 2:7-10 proves Jesus did not create the angels, for he was "made lower" than they. But sometimes it is argued that God created all things through the instrumentality of Jesus. There is no proof for this. Here is a text that destroys the theory: "God himself that formed the earth and made it" (Isa. 45:18). If God "himself" made the world then positively no instrumentalities either of angels or Christ, were used. The work was was strictly personal. The "himself" precludes the idea of instrumentality.

Your friend,

John R. Fiske, Jr.

Stick To Your Job

DID NOT Jesus? Was he ever idle after he entered upon his ministry? Did ever a day pass when he was not about his Father's business? Even when resting in the quiet congenial home of Lazarus, there was one to sit at his feet and learn of him. At other times there were sick people to make well, dead ones to be raised, little children to bless, maniacs to restore to reason, hungry ones to be fed, the gospel to be preached everywhere. He kept at his job. That is how he accomplished so much in so short a time. Keep at yours. It is the only way you can accomplish anything for Jesus. Keep on giving, keep on talking, keep on praying, learning, teaching, living as God wants you to live.

So many wonder how I manage to write to so many who are strangers to me save by the bonds of the gospel of grace, carry on a wide correspondence with friends whose faces I know, answer hard questions, and at the same time write for our papers, and do work on the farm that few young people would think of doing. I can do it only by sticking to my job as Jesus stuck at his; do it by using every spare moment, by living on simple fare and by eliminating all unnecesssary work.

Doing a little every day is the secret. If a letter cannot be finished or a question answered in the time set apart for writing in one day, I take two, and sometimes a whole week of the quiet morning and evening hours to complete it, though my evenings are usually spent in reading. People complain that they have no time to read or study the Bible, no time to teach their children the way of life, no time to write, or for family prayer, yet find it easy enough to make time for pleasure jaunts, for visiting and all worldly tasks. Are such persons true servants of Jesus? Do they really want to be saved? Stick to your job, as Paul stuck to his. He set out to win the race, and nothing could stop him. The Jews might chase him from city to city, they might take oath to kill him, He might go hungry, half clothed, walk robber infested roads, face madly dashing waves, be bitten by vipers, be imprisoned and chained, might suffer the loss of all things as his Master had before him; but he was not going to give up his job, for enduring to the end meant that he would be made a king in the grandest empire that earth has ever known, meant that a crown would be given him that would never be laid off, as the proud William of Germany has laid off his, and that when Jesus comes again, he would be endowed with a life as indestructible as the life of God. Ah! Paul knew what he was about when he stuck to his job, declaring "without fear the whole counsel of God." "These light afflictions were to work out for him a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory," and through his work the thousands whom he had won for Jesus, and were "his glory and his joy," the stupendous task of bringing back the world to the sinlessness of Eden, would be bravely laid hold of and carried on, they winning other converts and these still others, to work, to suffer through fearful persecutions, and to die by the millions for the sake of Christ, until at last the goal would be reached. And did not our blessed Savior know what he was about when he stuck to his work so patiently, so persistently?

Was it not for "the joy set before him that he endured the cross, despising the shame?" Did he not see as he suffered, a resplendent vision of the many sons that were to be brought to glory through his sufferings? The agony of Gethsemane, in view of his approaching death on the cross was terrible, for "he sweat as it were great drops of blood," and yet he did not give up, for there was no other way of saving his people and the world.

He stuck to his task through shame and derision, and death. Let us stick to ours.

S. Roxana Wince.

IF THE atheist asks me if I can understand God I answer that it is not necessary that my finite mind shall comprehend the infinite mind before I admit that there is an infinite mind any more than it is necessary that I should understand the sun. We must deal with the facts about us whether we can understand them or not.

"Hallowed be Thy Name"

IF IT were not tragic it would be amusing to observe the delight that the ordinary "orthodox" church goer evinces when he or she hears an old fashioned "hell fire" sermon. It might be good for some of our folks to get out somtimes to listen to the spiritual pabulum fed to guileless and fashionable folks, too, somtimes, and see the burning pastures where the gospel may be said to be cooked. One may not always happen to strike it though. He may go to places of public worship of all denominations for months on end, and hear sensible and even eloquent discourses on the love of God and kindred subjects; then suddenly the bottom drops out, as it were, and the preacher boldly faces a civilized audience with this barbarous old fashioned doctrine that ought to make their blood run cold—but it does not! I wonder why? May be after a long enough interval it has the thrill of novelty; may be it is a sort of admiration for the antique. At any rate when some garrulous, wild and ignorant fanatic of the Sam Jones or Billy Sunday type comes to town all, or nearly all the protestant churches organize for his support, the local press is at his back and causes his face to shine out in the front page of the newspaper; and even the magazines have articles about him, his oddities, his methods, his manner, and his family relation, etcetra ad infinitum. The street cars can't haul the crowds that struggle to get in range of his voice, and he carries off a small fortune for a week or so's ministrations in the crude wit of the baseball field and the slang of the slums, the main effect of which is to terrorize into spiritual submission after the manner of the sabre rattling Kaiser.

One would think that after months of quiet tuition by dignified monitors under gothic arches with solemn music, that the ordinary citizen would resent this rowdy recrudence of a barbarous past; but for some reason there is an undercurrent of affection for the dear old dogma that is kept hidden, like poor Rachel's idols that she took with her from her father's mantel shelf, as a keepsake maybe, and over which the old gentleman made so much trouble that she stuck it deep in the camel's stuff and sat on it, and fibbed about it maybe. But what must have been father Jacob's surprise when, at some of the future camps when the furniture was all spread out, his eye happened to fall on the old popinjay that his father-in-law made so much fuss about? I wonder what he said to Rachel, and whether he frowned or grinned. Well, that is how some of us feel when we run up against this old idol of eternal torment, all decked out in modern garb like a wax Madonna in an Italian procession, or maybe more like an Indian fetish at a war dance.

And what is the net result of all this promenade of ferocity and falsehood? Only the defamation of the Creator of heaven and earth when the Bible exhorts us to learn to love. I believe there are thousands of people in these states who have never heard of the name of God except in association with the word "damn." To such he appears only in the street corner parlance as a damning God, and is always on the tongue's end, and this name is continually blasphemed. I have known men who could hardly express themselves in an English sentence without introducing the name of the Most High in this profane connection, not bad fellows, either; but the impression of savagery and denunciation is so woven into the warp and woof of their being that it has become a part of their life.

Who is to blame for this? Principally those who, for a couple of millenniums, have with all kinds of display of sanity and Bible sanction, urged this doctrine that has so "charged God foolishly."

Who May Baptize?

SEEING SOME enquiry in The Restitution as to who are legally authorized to perform the rite of baptism, my contention is any baptized believer of the true faith. Luke 1:5 gives us the name of Zacharias, a priest of the order of Aaron of the Levitical priesthood; his wife was of the same line. They were both righteous, walking in all the ordinances and commandments before God blameless. A child is here promised. Fifteenth verse tells what manner of person he would be. The latter part of the verse says, "He shall be filled with the Holy Spirit"; in other words, he would be an inspired prophet. He was moved by the Holy Spirit. He was circumcised, according to the law, the eighth day. A proper person for the mission he had to fill.

Luke 3:2-4: "He came into all the country about Jordan, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins" (Matt. 3:5, 6). We see John fulfilling his mission baptizing saducees and pharisees.

Why did they come to Jordan to be baptized? I answer, because he was preaching the gospel, and was legally authorized by having been inducted into the commonwealth of Israel, by complying with the law. Verse 13: "Then came Jesus of Galilee to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him." Why did he not go to some of the pharisees or sadducees to be baptized, as some say it makes no difference who performs the rite? Because John had a legal authority. I contend if anyone was going to become a citizen of America, he would go to the persons that had or were vested with authority to make out the papers. It is just so in becoming a citizen of the household of faith, as is shown by the Master himself by going to John. Matt. 28:19, 20 Jesus gives his command to his disciples without a doubt. They baptized into the one faith. Also in Acts 2:38-43 we find the apostles fulfilling the mission they were sent out for; and all cases where the gospel was to be preached, or the ordinance of baptism administered, we find it was done by one legally authorized. For example, the house of Cornelius; the house of Lydia; and the case of Paul; also Phillipian Eunuch. To my mind, then, one to administer the ordinance of baptism must have the faith, having been baptized into the Christ is all the prerequisite necessary.

Communication

They spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened.-Mal. 3:16.

DEAR RESTITUTION READERS:

THIS IS my first attempt to write The Restitution. I know I will not be able to write a long and interesting letter; as many of our dear writers; but I thihk it is our duty to do what we can, be it little or much. We know we are not all talented alike. God understandeth, and we will be rewarded, if we only do what is in our power to do. How many of us are doing this? Let us not neglect, but work harder than ever this year. The Lord is so near at hand, and the night soon cometh when no man can work. We do not know the hour or the day. He has given it to the wise to understand that the Scriptures have been fulfilled. He who is not ready should make himself ready before it is too late. The Bridegroom is coming soon. Oh, may our lamps be trimmed and burning brightly when he comes. Many will say to the wise, "Give us of your oil, for our lamps are going out."

It is little duties that count. Then if we are willing to work our Lord will help us. He is more willing to help us than we have courage to ask him. But we must not neglect our duty. Work and pray; work out our own salvation with fear and trembling, for fear we do not enough. But may we be able to say at that day, "We have finished our course, we have kept the faith, and a crown of righteousness is laid up for us, and not for us only but also for all those who love his appearing."

We know that each one shall be rewarded as his deeds have been, either good or bad. God knows and understands us all. So let us fight lawfully if we expect to win and wear a crown of righteousness. We cannot save ourselves. If we want to be called and chosen we must be faithful even unto the end, for they that are called and chosen and faithful to the end shall be with him on Mount Zion. Oh how we would like to be one of those whose name is written in heaven..

I have been greatly benefited by the many good pieces in The Restitution. Dear Brother Huggins, may the Lord give you many years to work and bring more into the fold of Christ, showing them the narrow way. Jesus says, "narrow is the way." So we see it today. Few people seek and find it. Everything seems more attractive and draws people away from the truth, but the little flock need not fear. He will give them the kingdom. Let us not faint nor give up, but work while we have the opportunity.

Your brother looking for the soon coming King,

C. STORJOHN.

Remember the Helping Fund

Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble—in the day of evil, margin (Psa. 41:1).

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

JESUS said: "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt and where thieves break through and steal. THE BIBLE GOD'S BOOK

TO THE young man who is building character I present the Bible as a book that is useful always and everywhere. It guides the footsteps of the young, it throws a light upon the pathway during the mature years and it is the only book that one cares to have beside him when the darkness gathers and he knows that the end is near. Then he finds consolation in the promises of the Book of books and his lips repeat, even when his words are inaudible, "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I shall fear no evil, for thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me." "I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also."

Editorial

If those in the faith who are rich do not devote their riches to Christ and the truth, they can have no hope of a foundation laid up against the time to come.

---o---

When a slave was purchased in ancient times, all the property which he possessed was considered as belonging to his master. When a man is bought by Christ, all he has becomes his Master's, and he is the steward of these possessions.

We regret the temporary loss by removal of Sister Heloise Crawford, who goes to Florida, and Sister Zephene Brown, who leaves us for West Virginia. We shall miss them both and hope for their return as speedily as Providence may permit.

The motto of the United States, "E Pheribus Unum," means "from many to one," because it consists of a large number of states which make up, in the aggregate, one nation. But with God in reference to his manifestation in flesh, it is just the reverse. His mode of operation is from one to many; from Christ to a multitude of saints countless as the stars.

The numerous beliefs and creeds which profess to be founded upon the word of God, all differing and contradicting each other as well as the word of God, has led simple minded people to say that "anything can be proved from the Bible." Such an assertion as this is blasphemy against the God of truth. If it were true, it would be better for him never to have spoken. If such a statement were to be made about our writings we should consider it an insult. Only one thing can be proved from the Bible, and that is the truth.

February 1st, after the morning exhortation on "Fellowship with Christ," Mr. Chas. Hudson and Mr. Geo. Mowery were baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus. Both these young men have a wide acquaintance among the brethren and sisters, and many have been the prayers of the household of faith in their behalf. Their obedience was a matter of joy to all. In the last day of the last days it is rarely that business men can find time to investigate the truth and come to a knowledge thereof. And even after this knowledge in a few cases is acquired, it is rarer still to see them obey. We are much gratified that brethren Hudson and Mowery, although business men, have overcome the evil influences of these degenerate times, and have cast in their lot with the people of God, "counting the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt" (Heb. 11:24-26).

On Friday evening, January 23rd, the Young People's Society met at the home of Brother and Sister Hamilton. Owing to the severe weather conditions, the attendance was rather small, in all, sixteen members and six visitors being present. The most important feature of the business meeting was a proposed amendment to the Constitution, which will be voted on at the next regular meeting.

Sister Viola Stroud was in charge of the religious nteeting, the lesson being, "The faithfulness of God." The leading point brought out by the leader was that as God is not a man that he should lie (Num. 23:19), and as every word of God is pure (Prov. 30:5), he is a shield for all those who put their truse in his infallible word, for "He is faithfull who promised.

A MORNING PRAYER

Our Father who art in heaven:

We thank thee for the joy of living, for the beauty of life, for the power to enjoy it. May we do naught this day that would cast a reflection on thy good name, but in all things may we strive to walk in the footsteps of Jesus. May we endeavor to walk hard after him who lived to do thy will. May we show our appreciation for what thou hast done for us by doing good unto all men, especially unto those who are of thy household. Increase faith, make our faith more steadfast and our love more abundant. We ask this to thy honor and praise through Jesus our Lord.

The Female Element in Geneology

OBJECTIONS ANSWERED

The Jewish and Unitarian objection to Christ's geneology is that even allowing it to be genuine, it fails to prove Jesus to be the seed of David, because it makes him out to have been so only on the male side: the female side not being reckoned in Jewish geneology.

Editorial Comments

WE FRANKLY admit, to begin with, that so far as the strict geneological tree is concerned, the female element is not recognized. However, we just as frankly deny that the Jewish geneologies ignored the female element in reckoning extraction. The proof of this allegation is abundant in the writings of the Old Scriptures. The interposition of a female was sufficient to continue a geneological line in the absence of a male link; men were reckoned the sons of fathers whose real sons they were not by reason of their marrying the father's daughter. To this statement, so amazing to unbelievers, we append convincing proof. In 1 Chron. 2:21, 22 we learn that Jair was begotten of Segub, son of Hezron, son of Phares, son of Judah, one of the sons of Jacob. The statement reads, "Hezron went into the daughter of Machir, the father of Gilead, whom he married when he was three score years old: and she bare him Segub. And Segub begat Jair." According to the arguments of our correspondent's friends, the Jews and Unitarians, Jair ought to be reckoned of the house of Judah, because he was the son of Hezron who was of the tribe of Judah, though his mother was the daughter of Machir of the tribe of Manasseh. According to their arguments, the mother ought not to be allowed to have any effect on the geneological status of the son. Contrary to the contention of these friends, the mother did have effect, the female element was counted. In Num. 32:41 this same Jair is called "the son of Manasseh," because he was the son of a daughter of the tribe of Manasseh, though his father was of the tribe of Judah. If, then, Jair was the son of Manasseh because his mother was of the house of Manasseh, why was not Jesus the son of David, when his mother was of the house of David?

Now while we are still at 1 Chron. 2, look at the 34th verse which declares that "he had no sons, but daughters." It would follow from this, if the female finds no place in Jewish geneology, that Sheshan should have no subsequent geneology. Is this so? At the 34th verse we are told that Sheshan had an Egyptian servant whose name was Jarha; "Sheshan gave his daughter to Jarha to wife, and she bare Attai," etc. Whose child was Attai according to the objections now under review? He would have to be Jarha's, of course. Not Sheshan's, the father of Jarha's wife. The 31st verse says that Attai and the rest of the children were called "the children of Sheshan."* The offspring of Sheshan's daughter is attributed to the father of that daughter, and is not to be reckoned to the Egyptian. Once more we appeal to you in logic: If Attai can be the son of Sheshan, according to Jewish geneology, when he is only the son of Sheshan's daughter, why cannot Jesus of Nazareth be called the son of David, though descended from David by a daughter only? Let those who cavil at Jesus being the son of David answer these two questions, and then we shall be ready to proceed in the discussion of this important subject.

GOLDEN TEXT: Ephesans 1:3

A SERMON THAT STRUCK HOME

The minster said last night, says he,
  "Don't be afraid of givin':
If your life ain't nothin' to other folks
  Why what's the use of livin'?
And that's what I say to wife, says I
  "There's Brown, that mis'rable sinner,
He'd sooner a beggar would starve than give
  A cent towards buying a dinner."

I tell you our minister's prime, he is
  But I couldn't quite determine,
When I heard him givin' it right and left,
  Just who was hit by the sermon.
Of course there couldn't be no mistake,
  When he talked of loud winded prayin'
For Peters and Johnson they sot and scowled
  At every word he was sayin'.

And the minister he went on to say
  "Ther's various kinds of cheatin',
And religion's as good for every day
  As it is to bring to meetin';
I don't think much of a man that gives
  The loud 'Amen's at my preachin'
And spends his time the followin' week
  In cheatin' and overreachin'."

I guess that dose was bitter
  For a man like Jones to swaller;
But I noticed he didn't open his mouth,
  Not once, after that, to holler.
Hurrah, says I, for the minister—
  Of course I said it quiet—
Give us some more of this open talk;
  It's very refresin' diet.

---

* It reads "Ahlai" instead of Attai, but this is merely a variation common in Hebrew names.

The minister hit 'em every time;
  And when he spoke of fashion,
And a-riggin' out 'n bows and things,
  As a woman's rulin' passion,
And a-comin' to church to see the styles,
  I couldn't help a-winkin'
And a nudgin' my wife, and, says I, "That's you,"
  And I guess it set her thinkin'.

Says I to myself, that sermon's pat;
  But man is a queer creation;
And I'm much afraid that most of the folks
  Wouldn't take the application.
Now if he had said a word about
  My personal mode o' sinnin',
I'd have gone to work to right myself,
  And not set there a-grinnin'.

Just then the minister says, sayes he,
  "And now I've come to the fellers
Who've lost this shower by usin' their friends
  As a sort of moral umbrellas.
Go home says he, and find your faults
  Instead of huntin' your brothers',
Go home," he says, "and wear the coats
  You've tried to fit on others."

My wife, she nudged, and Brown he winked,
  And there was lots o' smilin',
And lots o' lookin' at our pew;
  It sot my blood a-bilin'.
Says I, to myself, our minister
  Is gettin' a little bitter;
I'll tell him when meetin's out that I
  Ain't at all that kind of critter.

A PARABLE

A CERTAIN wealthy farmer wished to go away for a long vacation. He owned two large farms and he also had two sons, whom he decided to leave in charge of his property until his return. Just before leaving, he called them to him and said: "Now boys, I am going on a long journey, to be gone for several months. I have left to each of you the care of a large farm. In my absence, I want these farms run just as I would do it if I were here; and as it would take a long time to tell each of you how I want it done, and you would be unable to remember everything if I did, I have written for each of you a set of instructions. I have made plain everything I wish done from now on until my return. So if you and Tom follow my instructions, on my return you shall be rewarded accordingly."

So saying, he bid his boys goodby. After he had gone they entered into their new duties. Tom took his instructions, glanced through them hurriedly, then said to himself, "Oh pshaw, father must have made a mistake; that is no way to put in a crop a dry year like this. Why, he would have nothing at the end of the year, and I would get the blame. I know just how that crop should go in. There is no need of following these instructions. They are no good. I shall do this thing just as I think best." So Tom threw his instructions in the waste basket and went about the work in his own way.

Jim took his instructions, read them through carefully, then reread them several times. Looking puzzled he thought to himself, "Well, that's funny; that does not sound a bit like Dad's way of doing. But these are his instructions, written in his own writing. I would not do it that way, but he told me to follow these instruction, so, follow them I will." So Jim studying his instructions carefully as he went along, put in the crop on his farm just as his father wished him to.

After many months the father returned. On going to the farm he had left in Tom's charge, he found it in ruins, the place over run with weeds, and utter destruction everywhere. In great sorrow he told Tom that he could not trust him on the place, and sent him out into the world to work for his own living. But when he saw Jim's farm he rejoiced that he had one son that knew how to obey instructions. His farm was in perfect order, and his crops the finest in the country, while everything was just as he would have done himself if he had stayed at home. Because he obeyed him, the father gave to Jim as a reward, the farm he had worked so well, that he might have a home of his own the rest of his life.

Now let us read the meaning of our little parable. The father represents God; the two sons are we who are the children of God; the farm work is the things we do, day by day; the written instruction is the Bible, the word of God. In that book, God has, through Jesus our Lord and his disciples, given us written instructions, that we may live and guide our lives and acts as he would have us do. Some of us there are who, like Tom, glance through our instructions carelessly. Oft we find commands that do not just agree with our ideas. Then we think, like Tom, that a mistake has been made, or that we do not understand it as we should. Anyhow we have not the time to waste, looking up so many different things in the Bible. We will just go ahead and do the best we know how, and everything will come out all right in the end. Then there are others of us, like Jim, who take our instructions, read them carefully many times, as the first reading may not at first be understood, but on careful study, all is made plain and clear. This way is oft times hard. Friends will laugh and jeer at our ways. But what care we? For in the end our reward will be great, if we but follow the instructions our Father hath given unto us: everlasting life and a high position as kings and priests in the ages to come. That is a part of the reward offered to those who follow the instructions given us in the Bible. To those who do not follow these instructions—death! Which method are you following, reader; Tom or Jim's?

AUNT BESS.

PUSHING VS. DRAWING

THERE IS no evidence that there is within any living thing a "pushing" power that can, unaided from above, lift to a higher plane, but there is all about us everywhere conclusive proof of a "drawing" power.

The teachings of Christ abound with expressions of this drawing power. Who has not been touched by the tenderness of the solitude which he embodies in the simile: "How often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathers her chickens under her wing, but ye would not." The crowning illustration of the drawing power is to be found in the language of the Savior when he says, "I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."

GOD THE CREATOR

WHO CAN study God's plan, comprehending the universe and yet minute in detail, without being overwhelmed with the presence of an infinite mind that designed the whole and without whose continued care the world would be engulfed in chaos. Not a heart could beat nor could the lungs expand if the movements of these organs was left to the voluntary act of man. But God has relieved his creatures of concern about blood and breath, that man, freed from a labor beyond his power, may employ his time in the service of his Maker.

When one's belief in God becomes the controlling passion of his life; when he loves God with all his heart and with all his soul and with all his mind, he is anxious to learn God's will and is ready to accept the Bible as the word of God.

We turn back to the Bible for the Ten Comandments, which form the foundation of our statute law, and for the Sermon on the Mount, which lays down the rules of our spiritual growth. The Bible gives us the story of the birth, the words, the works, the crucifixion, the resurrection and the ascension of him whose coming was foretold in prophecy, whose arrival was announced by the angel voices singing peace and good-will—the story of him who gave to the world a code of morality superior to anything that the world had known before or has known since—the story of him who is the growing figure of all time, whom the world has accepted as Savior, and as the perfect example.

COURAGE

Courage! what if the snows are deep,
And what if the hills are long and steep,
And the ways are short, and the nights are long,
And the good are weak and the bad are strong;
Courage! the snow is a field of play,
And the longest hill has a well-worn way;
There are songs that shorten the longest night;
There's a day when wrong shall be ruled by right.
So courage! courage! 'tis never so far

"Out of Darkness Into Light"

Bible Teaching Concerning Sin

The apostle John defines sin in the first Epistle, chapter 3:4, as "the transgression of law"; and in chapter 5:17 he says, "All unrighteousness is sin." Now as God's law carries with it a penalty or punishment as a provision in case it is transgressed, the word "sin" is used some times in a metaphorical sense, that is, the effect is spoken of as the cause; it is an accommodative and short way of expressing the truth, but when it comes to being a matter of fact, is not true. In Gen. 19:15, we read, "And when the morning arose, then the angels hasted Lot, saying, Arise, take thy wife, and thy two daughters, which are here; lest thou be consumed in the iniquity of the city." In this passage the word "iniquity," which is sin, is used for punishment. (See marginal statement.) As a matter of fact, iniquity and the punishment for it are two different things. So long as we understand what the language used is intended to mean, all is well; but facts are what we want. A similar passage is found in Jer. 14:16, "For I will pour their wickedness upon them," that is, the punishment for their wickedness. Then again in Zech. 14:19, "This shall be the punishment of Egypt," but in the margin it reads for punishment, sin.

In Deut. 9:21, Moses says in reference to the children of Israel: "And I took your sin, the calf which ye had made, and burnt it with fire, and stamped it, and ground it very small," etc., etc. In reality the golden calf was not sin; it, however, was the effect of sin or what sin created; it was what was prohibited by the law.

In Hosea 4:8, the sin offering is called sin. "They eat up the sin of my people, and they set their heart on their iniquity." In Hosea 10:8 idol temples are spoken of as the sin of Israel: "The high places of Aven, the sin of Israel, shall be destroyed." Rom. 7:20, 21 Paul says, "But if what I would not, that I do, it is no more I that do it, but sin which dwelleth in me. I find then the law, that, to me who would do good, evil is present." This is equivalent to what he says in verse eighteen: "For I know that in me, that is in my flesh, dwelleth no good thing." What Paul speaks of as "no good thing" dwelleth in his flesh, and "sin dwelling in him," must be the same thing; the terms are used synonymously. Why does he call the evil in his flesh, sin? For the simple reason that it is the cause that produces sin. In and of itself it is not sin. The apostle James will help us to understand Paul's discourse in the seventh chapter of Romans. "But each man is tempted, when he is drawn away by his own lusts, and enticed. Then the lust when it hath conceived, beareth sin; and the sin when it is full grown bringeth forth death." Now, suppose the command is obeyed which says, "Resist the devil" (James 4:7), and "neither give place to the devil" Eph. 4:27); What happens? "And he will flee from you" (James 4:7). There will be no sin to bring forth death (death as the wages of sin). "The fleshly desires are not in themselves sin, but they produce sin if they are allowed to have rebellious operation, and to draw away the individual from the path of obedience. This is where Paul and all his brethren were weak, the free-will power was not strong enough to keep the command of God; and so in Rom. 8:3 Paul says, "For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh." The evil that was in Paul and his fellows, produced sin in them, and as he says, "With the flesh he served the law of sin" (Rom. 7:25). Yet, even if because of the weakness of his will-power, he served the law of sin, not now being under the Mosaic law, sin did not have dominion over him, because he was under the law of grace, with an High Priest touched with the feelings of his infirmities, tempted in all points like he was, yet without sin, who made reconciliation for him, and released him from the dominion of sin and death (Rom. 6:14; Heb. 4:15; 2:17). There were sins under the Mosaic law for which no sacrifices were provided that atonement might be made for them. It was truly a "ministration of death" and was the exponent of justice and not grace.

What Paul failed to do because of his flesh and blood nature, Christ accomplished with the same nature, because he with that nature did not serve the law of sin, but fulfilled the law of righteousness; therefore it could not be said of him, that he had sin dwelling in him as Paul said of himself. If human nature is a synonym for sin, and sin for human nature, it must be so in the primary meaning of the word sin. It cannot be sin as a concrete physical thing, "sin in the flesh," or sin as a metaphor, because that is human nature itself when considered as a moral thing. No word can be a synonym of itself. Hence sin as a synonym for human nature must be sin as "all unrighteousness" and "transgression of law." Human nature as a walking, living, wicked thing, full of "wicked works" (Col. 1:21).

The Scriptures nowhere connect Christ with the word sin only in its primary sense, and that at the time when he was made sin on the cross by becoming a curse. We repeat here, that the original word translated "sin" in 2 Cor. 5:21, means "transgression, guilt," and it does not mean sin as a concrete physical thing. Christ's own human nature did not sin; he controlled it; in every point so far as physical substance was concerned he was made like his brethren, mortal, under the dominion of death. But though in the likeness or exact sameness of sinful flesh (Greek, "flesh of sin"), we have no right to say that his individual flesh was "flesh full of sin" or "sinful flesh." In the Revised Version of Rom. 8:3, there is in the margin an alternative rendering from the Greek, as "flesh of sin." Christ had the same flesh or nature that in all others save himself sinned, therefore it was flesh of sin, of the same kind that sinned in others; but it was not sinful while he tabernacled in it. Now it has been said that because Christ so frequently spake of himself as the Son of Man, and had "a body of sin" like David and Paul, therefore, and because of having "a body of sin," it was the reason why Peter says that Christ bear our sins in his own body on the tree (1 Pet. 2:24). There is no proof for this statement, and it is entirely contrary to Peter's teaching in reference to sin. The most casual reader of the epistles of Peter would never dream that in the apostle's references to sin, he thought of sin in a secondary or derived sense, or sin as a physical concrete thing.

A few references in the way in which Peter uses the word "sin" will show that the theory of physical sin being borne upon the cross has no place in his teaching. 1 Pet. 1:14-18: "As children of obedience, not fashioning yourselves according to your former lusts in the time of your ignorance; but like as he who called you is holy, be ye yourselves also holy in all manner of living; because it is written, Ye shall be holy; for I am holy, knowing that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, with silver or gold, from your vain manner of life handed down from your fathers." Verse 22: "Seeing ye have purified yourselves in your obedience to the truth unto unfeigned love of the brethren." Second chapter, verse 1: "Putting away therefore all wickedness, and all guile and hypocracies, and envies, and all evil speakings." Verse 11, "Beloved, I beseech you as sojourners and pilgrims, to abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul: having your behavior seemly among the Gentiles, that whereas they speak against you as evil doers, they may by your good works, which they behold, glorify God in the Day of visitation."

Verse 21: "For hereunto were ye called; because Christ also suffered for you, leaving you an example, that ye should follow his steps; who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth; who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, threatened not, but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously; who his own self bare our sins in his body upon the tree, that we having died unto sins, might live unto righteousness; by whose stripes ye were healed. For ye were going astray like sheep; but are now returned unto the Shepherd and Bishop of your souls."

Here is the whole narrative by Peter in reference to sin carried right up to the cross or tree, and not a hint about any other sin than those of "transgression of law," and "all unrighteousness." In the previous pages of this pamphlet we have quoted the Scriptures which show how personal sins were borne, and what the Bible teaches in reference to the bearing of sin. It is a marvellous thing that, in view of the testimony of Jesus, which is the "Spirit of prophecy," that such a theory should ever have been invented, as that of the bearing of physical so called sin, as so much concrete substance, as a sacrifice, to redeem man from death. The apostle Peter is the only one who makes the direct statement that Christ bare our sins in his body upon the tree, and therefore, he must be good authority in reference to the kind of sins that were carried upon the tree. It is a very weak thing to say that if Christ bore in his body upon the tree our sins of wicked works, we invite the comment of the enemy. Nonsense! we had none. We were not born. If we were to say "God made Christ to be the transgression of the law (sin)" (2 Co.. 5:21), we should meet with the rejoinder: "Your own book says he was no transgressor."

Before replying to this quotation, we will continue our investigation in reference to the teaching of the apostle Peter regarding sin. In chapter 3: 10-12, we read, "For he that would love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile: and let him turn away from evil, and do good; let him seek peace and pursue it. For the eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and his ears unto their supplication; but the face of the Lord is upon them that do evil." Verse 17: "For it is better, if the will of God should so will, that ye suffer for well doing, than for evil doing." Verse 18: "Because Christ also suffered for sins once, the righteous for the unrighteous, that he might bring us to God." "Suffered for sins once." Does not Peter connect these sins with the doing of "wicked works" that he speaks of in the previous verses? And were not these "sins" those that were borne in his body upon the cross? Is there the first intimation that these "sins" for which he suffered were "sinful flesh" and "sin in the flesh"? The whole of the fourth chapter of Peter where it treats of sin does so as sin of "wicked works" or of thought; not one word about sin in its metaphorical sense.

In 2 Pet. 1:9, the apostle says, "For he that lacketh these things is blind, seeing only what is near, having forgotten the cleansing from his old sins." What is this cleansing but from a morally corrupt state of the mind as the result of sin being conceived and born (James 1:15)? Examine carefully the balance of the letter of Peter and it will be found where he refers to sin or evil doing, it is always so in the primary sense. We will not retort in reference to the quotation made above, for the reason that years ago in our ignorance in reference to how Christ "bare our sins in his own body upon the tree," we said practically the same thing; we desire rather to submit the testimony of the word of God upon the subject, and let the seed sown take care of itself, which it surely will do in "the good ground," and in "the good and honest heart." Paul in Heb. 9:15, says, "And for this cause (to purge the conscience from dead works, verse 14) he is the mediator of the New Covenant; that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first covenant, they which are called might receive the promise of the eternal inheritance." There can be no mistaking the meaning of this word "transgressions" and where they existed; most of them during a period of 1600 years were not in existence at the time Paul says Christ took care of them by the means of his death. Everything depended upon the appearance of a human sin bearer who could in some way bear these non-existing transgressions by dying and then being raised from the dead because these transgressions were not his own in a personal sense. "And if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins." Christ as the antitypical Lamb slain from the foundation of the world (Rev. 13:8) appears in the fulness of time (Gal. 4:4), at the end of the world (Heb. 9:26), and put away sin by the sacrifice of himself. How? By atonement and forgiveness. And this too for sins of actual transgressions from righteous Abel down to the end of the Millennium, when the last repentant sinner will be saved. The Revelator says, "Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood" (chapter 1:5) "After this I beheld, and lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands" (verse 13). "And one of the elders answered, saying unto me, What are these which are arrayed in white robes? And whence came they? And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said unto me, These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb" (Rev. 7:9, 13, 14). In connection with what the Revelator says in his connecting the blood of Christ with "our sins," that there may be no mistake as regards it, being "sin in the flesh" or sins of moral defilement and "wicked works," we will go to the prophet Isaiah: "Wash you, make you clean; put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes; cease to do evil; learn to do well; seek judgment, relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow. Come now, let us reason together, said the Lord; though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool" (chapter 1:16-18). The language of both John and Isaiah being highly figurative and symbolical, still the meaning is clear and specific; and the answer is found in the simple words of Jesus, "Repentance and remission of sins" (Luke 24:47).

Wishing Sister Wince
A Happy Birthday

Dear Sister Wince, we wish you well,
Your generous acts we fain would tell;
Such deeds of kindness ever prove
The emblem of true heavenly love.

May peace and plenty fill your days,
While thus you sing your Maker's praise;
When this vile world is cleansed from sin,
And the new age is ushered in.

May we all there be gathered home
With Jesus, and his kingdom come;
True joy we all then shall know,
While age on age doth peaceful flow.

When Jesus reigns supreme as King,
All nations shall true homage bring;
God's chosen ones of ages past,
All gathered home at last.

Prayer: An Exposition

Lord, teach us to pray (Luke 11:1).

PRAYER CONSISTS of thanksgiving, praise, communion with God; adoration, invocation, confession, petition and dedication or consecration. "The prayer of the upright is his delight." "He heareth the prayer of the righteous," while the prayer of those who disobey God's laws are an abomination (Prov. 15:8, 29; 28:9; Isa. 1). Prayer to be acceptable to God must be in faith and in the Holy Spirit (James 5:15, 16; Eph. 6:18; Jude 20). The prayer most acceptable to God is not in words, but in mind and thought, a mental state while we "walk with God," and commune in mind with him through the spirit, or to be "instant in prayer," and to "pray without ceasing," while in everything we give thanks, and praise God for the blessings we now enjoy (Rom. 12:12; 1 Thess. 1:3; 5:17).

Since God's blessing always followed obedience to his laws, while his curse always followed disobedience, the prayers of the old prophets and fathers of Israel were mostly that the people might turn from sin, and gladly and willingly obey his laws, in order that they might reap the sure fruits of obedience (Deut. 29; 2 Chron. 15). "Give me understanding that I may know thy testimonies;" "Make me to understand the way of thy precepts;" "Make me to go in the way of thy commandments;" "Incline my heart unto thy testimonies and not to coveteousness;" "It is good for me that I have been affliction that I might learn thy statutes:" "Oh how love I thy law! it is my meditation all the day" (Psa. 119).

The first requisite to prevailing prayer is to have a true concept of God. To know that he is all love, and more willing to give us good gifts than we are to give our children (1 John 4; Luke 11:13). Hence there is no necessity to plead or coax God for favors.

Secondly, to know that God is unchangeable in his character and that our prayers cannot produce a change in God, but only a change in ourselves, that will bring us into harmony with God, and with his righteous laws, which must result in our reaping the sure fruits of obedience, of faith, and of love. "For I am the Lord: I change not" (Mal.3:6).

Thirdly, the prayer filled with worry and anxiety about anything is not only a prayer devoid of faith in God's goodness and willingness to bless his children with everything for their good, and therefore must be fruitless, because it is not of faith; but also what is not of faith is sin, and such prayers are sin against the law of Christ that forbids all worry and anxiety, while commanding us to cast all our cares on the Lord (Matt. 6; Rom. 14:23). If we believe God's word that he heareth the prayer of the righteous, and withholdeth no good things from those who walk uprightly, we will only pray for willingness and strength in the spirit to so walk and so live that we may enjoy all the good that must follow.

Fourthly, the selfish prayer, filled with "I," "me," and "my," cannot find a response from a God who is no respecter of persons, and who without partiality pours his blessings on both just and unjust. The water of life will only flow into our lives by the gateway of faith, as long as we keep it flowing out to others by the gateway of unselfish love. Thus only those who give, receive; and "only the blessed can bless." God's favors to the righteous do not come because he changes his laws or purposes in answer to their petitions, but because their meditation on his laws, their hunger for righteousness, their thirst for the living water, and their fellowship with God and with Christ through prayer, brings them into harmony with God's law of good, so that all that is for their good is theirs for the asking, while the Holy Spirit guides them as to what they should ask for. The natural man knows not what he should ask for, while God knows our every need before we ask him (Rom. 8:26; Matt. 6:8); hence there is no need of advising God as to what is best or instructing him in prayer as to our needs.

Fifthly, the carnal or covetous prayer is both fruitless and sinful, "Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it on your lusts" (Jas. 4:3). No whoremonger, nor unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God (Eph. 5:5).

Sixthly, the public prayer in churches or on the streets, when the purpose is to impress men with our piety or eloquence, receives the reward of some men, but none from God (Matt. 6).

Seventhly, the long prayers, full of vain repetitions of the same words over and over again, as though there was merit in much begging from God, or in dead works, or in volumes of words, are a waste of time that could be more profitable employed (Matt. 6) "Be not rash with thy mouth, and let not thine heart be hasty to utter anything before God: for God is in heaven, and thou upon earth: therefore let thy words be few" (Eccl. 5:2).

Eightly, vicarious prayer. Much prayer is based on the heathen view of vicarious atonement that God must be appeased by sacrifices, or reconciled to man by blood, or by the entreaty and pleadings of Jesus,* or by our penances and coaxing of God by prayer. But this is wholly false, for God always loved the world. God changes not, therefore neither sacrifices nor prayer were ever necessary to reconcile God to man, but only to reconcile man to God. The storehouse of all God's blessings is open to the person who will cease from sin, and obey God's laws: and only thus can at-one-ment with God be effected.

Ninthly, the prayer for forgiveness of sin without reformation. I doubt if there is a more fatal delusion in the world than the belief that sin is pardoned without forsaking it. God is as just as any worldly judge, and no worldly judge will pardon and make free the thief or murderer who admits that he cannot quit stealing and killing. Sin is forgiven by God as fast as it is forsaken, and no sooner; and the house swept and garnished must be filled with pure and holy thoughts, and the life must be the fruits of a new heart and of a new spirit, which cleanses us from all sin (Rom. 6 to 9). "He that covereth his sins shall not prosper: but whoso confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy" (Prov. 28:13). "He that committeth sin is of the devil. Whosoever abideth in him (Christ) sinneth not" (1 John 3).

Tenthly, prayer for a higher seat or greater service. Since God's eyes run to and fro throughout the whole earth to show himself strong in behalf of those whose hearts are perfect toward him (2 Chron. 16:9), will he not find and use all the servants he wants for the place for which they are fitted ? Unless we are faithful and fully obey God's laws in the lower seat, and humble place where we are, we are not fit for a higher seat, or greater service. Are we worried, anxious, fretful, impatient, double minded, doubtful, jealous, envious, covetous, spiteful or unforgiving to enemies where we are ? Then let us first qualify in the present vocation, until we graduate above it; and promotion from the Lord is sure. "Commit thy works unto the Lord, and thy thoughts shall be established" (Prov. 16:3). "Delight thyself also in the Lord; and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart. Commit thy way unto the Lord, trust also in him, and he shall bring it to pass" (Psa. 37:4, 5). "In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he will direct thy paths" (Prov. 3:6). "For promotion cometh neither from the east, nor from the west, nor from the south: but God is judge; he putteth down one and setteth up another" (Psa. 75:6, 7). Paul and Timothy were forbidden of the Holy Spirit to preach the gospel in Asia, and they purposed to go into Bithynia: but the Spirit suffered them not (Acts 16:6, 7). So even Paul had to learn the lesson to commit his ways to the Lord, and to acknowledge the Lord's leading in all his ways with no anxiety for the future.

*Probably the writer here says more than he intended. That God is appeased by sacrifices finds a place in the explicit teachings of both Testaments (Gen. 8:20, 21; Eph. 5:2). "The entreaty and pleadings of Jesus" form the very quintessence of Christ's priesthood. To deny these are exercised in our behalf and name is to repudiate the priestly function of Christ. In an article otherwise excellent, we are inclined to think the writer here intended to make a scriptural statement, but was unfortunate in the use of words. Editor.

What Christ Has Done For Us

IT MAY seem strange to ask this question after all that has been written upon the subject, but the truth remains that there is much controversy among Bible students as to the true philosophy in salvation through the death of Christ apart from works of the law. The purpose here is, to answer the question in such a way as to appeal to human reason and also appeal to the reader's fidelity to the word of God despite preconceived ideas which he may entertain about this matter.

Before we can hope for agreement on this question, we must first take the same point of view in regard to the condition of fallen mankind; we must see this as God regards it and as it is unerringly presented in the Scriptures.

The apostle tells us that by Adam's offence sin came into the world and death as the result, so death passed unto all men; for that all sinned. Sin is a corruption in human nature, and when it is finished, it brings forth death. Thus all in Adam die, not as some say, because they inherit death, but because they inherit sin in the flesh, for sin works death—it works according to the law of sin and death. A little innocent child dies and an old sinner lives to be an hundred years old, but both die from the same cause, as the Scriptures put it.

The point we wish to particularly note here is that sin is a moral corruption. The effect of sin upon the moral character of a man causes him to do the things he would not, and the very things which he would do, he fails to do. This desire for right doing Paul speaks of as the "inner man." He explains that though with the inner man one may delight in the law of God, yet with this moral oblique, he cannot do the things in the law. The conclusion of the apostle is this: "Now if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me."

This was the moral condition of the children of Israel when God gave them the law. It was not necessary with God to test fallen men by the law. We may be sure God had full knowledge of their weakness, but it was necessary for men in sinful flesh, to give them the knowledge of sin and to show them just how far they had fallen from the glory of God, and to what extent the image of God had become obliterated in the fallen race of mankind.

The whole human family being alienated from God by the offence of Adam were cast out upon their own resources to live by the sweat of their face in subduing the wild nature of the earth, and ultimately to die from sin as did Adam. But the great heart of God went out after them and yearned for their return, even as the heart of a father yearns for a prodigal son. How much better does this portray the loving kindness of our heavenly Father than the dark pictues thrown upon the theological screen in the philosophies of men. O, the appalling darkness of that mind which sees only vengefulness and vindictiveness in our God whose very name is holy and who is represented as saying, "All day long have I stretched out my hands to a stiff necked and gainsaying generation." "How often would I have gathered you as a hen gathereth her brood under her wing, but you would not." "You draw near me with your lips, but your heart is far from me."

The law was weak through the flesh. It could not take away sin, and therefore it could not make the comers thereunto perfect. But this did not frustrate God's purpose to save the perishing world and bring all the obedient into a knowledge of the truth.

So now he is saying, "Son give me thine heart;" just give me your heart: that is all I will ask of you, and I will do the rest. For I will write my law upon your heart, and I will put it in your mind to do all the requirements of the law in your heart and in your mind, even that with the flesh you serve the law of sin.

But now the apostle tells us if there had been a law given that could have given life, verily righteousness had been by the law. In that case the death of Christ had not been necessary.

Before proceeding further in answering this question, let us consider this man Christ Jesus whom God sent to be the Savior of the world. We have already seen what a horrible pit into which the human race has fallen. This article was promised at the start to be an appeal to reason. Very well; if men in such a position were to be saved, it must be by someone not himself in the same pit: our Savior must be free from sin in the flesh, and he must have the power to save us to the uttermost. The Scriptures assure us that Jesus was born holy and therefore he was called the Son of God. They assure us that he was undefiled by sin though made in the likeness of sinful flesh, and in this particular he was separate and distinct from sinners. But on the other hand, he was made like unto his brethren in that he had infirmities in the flesh: he was not perfect in his organism, but he was perfect in his moral character, perfect in his obedience and perfect in the integrity of his heart. These are things which constitute a man perfect in God's sight.

The things which Jesus accomplished for our salvation are all mentioned in Dan. 9:24, 27, where we read that God had determined a certain period of time upon Israel. "To finish the transgression, and to make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to seal up (wind up) the vision and prophecy, and to anoint the Most Holy . . . . . And he shall confirm the covenant (a strong covenant) with many for one week; and in the midst of the week he shall cause the (typical) sacrifice and oblation to cease."

It matters nothing here that men see in the histories of nations, a wonderful fulfilment of this Scripture. The point is, that these are the things prophetically stated which Christ by his death and resurrection accomplished for us in God's plan.

How did Christ finish, or close up the transgression and make an end of sin ? To answer this, we must again refer to the law that had proven all men, both Jew and Gentile, to be under bondage to sin in the flesh. Again, the law was a ministration of condemnation and death because of transgression.

Remember, that the one who voluntarily offered himself to carry out God's plan of salvation is Christ Jesus. To illustrate how Christ the heir of God, became the agent to carry out God's will, let us note what might be called a conversation between God and Christ, not on the earth, but in some heavenly sphere. If this be objected to as not a proper application of these Scriptures, it matters not as it is merely offered as an illustration.

In Rev. 5 John says: "And I saw in the right hand of him that sat on the throne a book written within and on the backside, sealed with seven seals. And I saw a strong angel proclaiming with a loud voice; who is worthy to open the book and to loose the seals thereof ?"

This book would represent a book having the two covenants, the new covenant written within and the old covenant written upon the outside Then we hear a voice reply, which we recognize as the voice of Christ, saying, "Lo, I am come to do thy will O God: in the volume of the book it is written of me." The apostle tells us when he thus offered himself as a sin-offering, that he took away the first covenant and its sacrifices that he might establish the second, or new covenant. Thus Christ finished or closed up the transgression by taking the law out of the way: for where no law is there is no transgression.

Then Chist made an end of sin. We read that he put away, or removed sin by the sacrifice of himself. How did he do it ? He removed sin in God's plan of salvation by establishing the new covenant in which sins and iniquities are remembered no more.

Christ brought in everlasting righteousness. What is this righteousness and how did he bring it in? This is the righteousness which is of God through faith, the righteousness of the new, or everlasting covenant. Men under the law served God that they might have long life, but this man Jesus was willing rather to lay down his life in obedience to the will or wish of the Father. The law did not demand Christ to lay down his life. He did not do it as a righteousness of the law, but he gave himself as a sacrifice through the eternal Spirit of faith and love to God.

By so doing he had made the law useless for all who are of the faith of Jesus and who have the mind of Christ. As we have already seen, this had not been necessary if men could gain life by the righteousness of the law. But we read that this righteousness by faith was established upon the fact of our unrighteousness and our inability to obtain life by the law.

At the end of this time determined upon Israel, the vision and the prophecy should be sealed up. The word "seal" is from the same word rendered "finish," to "finish the transgression." It is a word with a great variety of meanings, but it is evident that in this place it does not denote to cover up, or hide. The 24th verse was the explanation to Daniel of the vision and prophecy. The thought here is, that when the time determined should expire, the visions of the evenings and mornings when the sanctuary should be cleansed would end with the fulfilment of the prophecy in the cleansing of the true sanctuary in the blood of Christ. The way into the holiest of all was not made manifest while as yet the tabernacle was standing. But Christ the anointed Holy One, being come an high priest of good things to come, "by a greater and more perfect tabernacle . . . . by his own blood he entered once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption."

We see then it was for the obtaining of redemption that Christ closed up the transgression. It was for our deliverance from the bondage of sin and our ultimate emancipation in him, that Christ removed sin by establishing the new covenant in his blood. And this he did that he might bring in everlasting righteousness and the better hope of life through the righteousness of faith. Having therefore established these things he entered into heaven and into endless life through death of the flesh; thus opening up this new way to life through death for all who should follow in his steps; to die unto sin and the flesh, that they might live unto righteousness. In view of the assurance which these things gave, the apostle says; "Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter the holiest by the blood of Jesus; by a new and a living way which he has consecrated for us through the veil, that is to say, his flesh."

These are the things Christ accomplished for our salvation, but they are all received in him by faith. For as through one offence judgment came upon all men in the flesh to condemnation so also by one act of righteousness, when Jesus gave himself according to the will of God, the free gift of God's righteousness by faith, has come within the reach of all men, and this righteousness is unto the obtaining of justification to life. It is by God's grace that we are justified unto life, and we are justified through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. Thus Christ has been made unto us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption. With these things in Christ and we in him, our salvation is complete: we are perfect and complete in him.

The Hebrew Letter

ARTICLE FIVE

IN THE tenth chapter of this Epistle the apostle continues his comparison of the two orders of priesthood, the law having a shadow of good things to come, and the substance which is completed in Jesus the Christ. In these services there was a remembrance of sin, and a fear of punishment. The atonement being of yearly observance could not forgive sin. No one under the law had been able to obtain eternal redemption. The fact that their sins were borne away each year was a sure proof that the institution would pass away and a more enduring one be established. This the apostle proves in his quotation from Psa. 40:6. To understand the Psalmist in this Scripture we must place the writer as the Messiah who is using the language of the Son to the Father. After stating (vs. 6). "In burnt offerings, and sacrifice for sin thou hast had no pleasure," then the Messiah is represented as saying, "Lo, I come to do thy will, O God." This is repeated in the ninth verse, which is followed by "He taketh away the first that he may establish the second. By which we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus the Christ once for all." The apostle states further that the priests under the law standeth daily ministering and offering often times the same sacrifice which can never take away sin. But this man after he had offered one sacrifice for sins forever, sat down on the right hand of God, from henceforth expecting till his enemies be made his footstool."

In the different phases of this prophecy the Jewish idea of their Messiah has no place. Such a character has no type in the new, all because he abideth forever. The true type that fits into every prophetic utterance is the Son of Mary. Since it has been proven that Jesus is the priest over the house of God, the apostle admonishes his brethren to hold fast the profession of the faith without wavering: for he is faithful who promised. They are further admonished to not forsake the assembling themselves together, as the manner of some is. They are then warned that if they sin wilfully there remaineth no more a sacrifice for sin. But a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversary. Such will receive a sorer punishment than was given to those who were put to death under the law. It is evident from this that apostates in their judgement will have sufficient time to be conscious of what they have lost. They will share the punishment of the wicked and slothful servant in the parable of the talents. Jehovah hath said, "Vengeance belongeth to me; I will recompense, saith the Lord." Again he saith, "The Lord shall judge his people."

The apostle closes this chapter with, "The just shall live by faith; but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him." In the last of this chapter the writer gives his benediction in the following language: "But we are not of them who draw back into perdition, but of them that believe to the saving of the soul." The reader should remember that a half truth is of no more value than an untruth. Those who believe in the human paternity of Jesus reject the prophecy given by the angel wherein it is stated that the spirit was the begetting power—a very fatal error. In chapters 1 to 10 inclusive the apostle has proven that the Jewish conception of the Messiah is wrong. They reject Jesus because of his humanity. They can see no further than that he is the son of Joseph instead of the only begotten Son of God. The prophecies that related to his death and resurrection were the stumbling block to the Jew and foolishness to the Greek, but to us the power of God and the wisdom of God. The significance of animal sacrifices had degenerated into mere formal service. There was no heart service in them, therefore Jehovah said, "I have no pleasure in them." The type and the antitype had become as sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal to them. To the Jew their Messiah must reign and not suffer. It seems inconceiveable that such conditions could exist. Their services were not mixed with faith. It had been said, "The just shall live by faith." It was as necessary that the Jews have faith in their sacrificial services as that the Christians have faith in his baptism and the coming of Jesus the Christ to restore all things. The nominal churches today occupy a similar position to Jehovah. Jesus said to the Jews, "By your traditions you have made the word of God of none effect." Without a suffering and dying Jesus your faith is made void. Jesus said with all their pretentions they rejected him as the true Messiah. In the chapters previously reviewed the writer calls attention to the Scriptures foretelling the character of the true Messiah. His logic was conclusive and therefore unanswerable. Both identified the true Messiah as Jesus the Christ, as the Son of the Highest, to whom Jehovah would give the throne of his father David, and that he would rule over the house of Jacob forever.

Meaning of "Generation"

SOME TIME since, I noticed a query in The Restitution respecting Matt. 21:31. The difficulty is, of course, that word "generation" is generally supposed to limit the events recorded within the lifetime of the people then living; a generation being reckoned as about 33 years. Tracts have been written, and books published by the score, with the well intentioned desire to harmonize Scripture and history on that basis, but all have signally failed; for facts are against them. Many have even attempted to affirm that the events referred to were all fulfilled at the destruction of Jerusalem, A. D. 70, and that our Lord's second coming took place then. If "generation" is limited to the average lifetime of 33 years (a comparatively modern idea) then even the destruction of Jerusalem cannot be included, for Jesus said, "this generation" the one including himself to which he belonged. This is an excellent instance for showing that the Scripture needs to be studied, by comparing Scripture with Scripture, and not bringing our own ideas into it, for generally the Bible is its own interpreter.

We find then that the moden meaning generally given to this word "generation" does not bring harmony here. A natural question then arises, Can we find passages where the word undoubtedly has another meaning? Will that other meaning give us the desired result? The answer is, Certainly; nor do we have far to go. Turn for instance to Luke 10:5: "From the blood of Abel unto the blood of Zachariah who perished between the altar and the sanctuary; yea, I say unto you, it shall be required of this generation." To affirm that the people who were contemporary with Christ were responsible for the blood of all the prophets from Abel to Zachariah would be the height of absurdity and gross injustice. If "generation" is taken to mean "race," then all is clear. The reader who is sufficiently interested can find out other passages which bear out this interpretation, and if he searches for them himself it will help to fix them in his memory. It will also show him the wisdom of basing his belief on the plain statements of God's word—and patiently waiting for further light on portions of Scripture that may seem to be contrary. The light will come.

There is one other thought in the passage in Matt. 24:34 that to my mind is worth noticing. There are many instances in Holy Writ where God's judgments are intermingled with mercy. Here is one where the Son of God shows the same characteristic. In pronouncing the doom, "this generation (this race) shall not pass away until all these things be fulfilled," we can surely discern the veiled promise of the continuance of the race in spite of their iniquities. The Jewish race will not pass away until all God's word is fulfilled.

Let us not fail to scatter along our pathway the seeds of kindness and sympathy. Some of them will doubtless perish; but if only one lives, it will perfume our steps and rejoice our eyes.

Our habits, our external arrangements, our dwellings, and the order which we observe in them, are but the extension of our personality. We are all more or less like spiders—stretching out a web made of our own substance.

---o---

There are two ways of attaining an important end—force and perseverance. Force falls to the lot only of the privileged few, but austere and sustained perseverance can be practiced by the most insignificant. Its silent power grows irresistible with time.

---o---

If you speak the truth with moderation separating its substance from all alloy of human passion—you are not to blame for the wrathful opposition it may encounter. But, if you strain it, if you wrest it from its sacred impassibility, if you do not maintain it with absolute sincerity—you are responsible for the revolt which it excites, and for the consequences which may ensue.

A good, finished scandal, fully armed and equipped, such as circulates in the world, is rarely the production of a single individual, or even of a single coterie. It sees the light in one; is rocked and nurtured in another; is petted, developed, and attains its growth in a third; and receives its finishing touches only after passing through a multitude of hands. It is a child that can count a host of fathers all ready to disown it.

The person who thinks he is weak, and keeps saying so, will make himself and others believe it; but he who thinks he can do and proceeds to do it, will likely enhance his capital and surprise others with his efforts. And there is nothing like a poor weak fellow being harnessed up abreast with Almighty power with the heft of the load on the latter. Do not burden yourself with the Lord's burdens.

The Sister's Society met at the home of Sister Lang on Thursday afternoon, January 29th. There was an attendance of fifteen members and five visitors. Calls were to be made on a number of the sisters reported to be ill. Two letters of sympathy had been written and one letter received. Sister Mott conducted an interesting lesson on Part II of Bible Lesson IX. Some time was spent obtaining a clear understanding of the different meanings of the word "Spirit." The meeting closed by all repeating our motto, Psalms 27:1. Ruth Mowery.

In writing on "How Thugs are Grown" in "The Plain Dealer," Feb. 5th, H. W. Kellog, chaplain of the Ohio State Reformatory at Mansfield, says:

"Add to the neglect the positive influences that are to work to make him vicious and even brutal. We have been talking and planning 'killing' for four years. We have been placing a high value on skill of this kind. Of course, it was to kill the Hun, but boys do not stop to discriminate at all. It is the spirit they imbibe, and this is heroism. We are taking boys in here who were brave to 'go over the top.' But they have not stopped shooting and killing since they came home. And then we have laid no restrictions on the purchase of fire arms. A merchant told me the other day that he could not buy guns fast enough to supply his customers; that everyone is arming himself."

The Fruits of Partial Inspiration

"BY THEIR fruits ye shall know them." This was the test our Lord gave by which to try false prophets. Brother Chas. H. Morse of Rochester, N. Y., sends a clipping from "The Rochester Times - Union," and writes: "This shows to what extreme lengths of error a person may go when he denies the inspiration of the Bible. Dr. Crapsey was formally pastor of an Episcopal church in this city." The extract follows:

The church is losing its hold on the people because it is founded on creeds and dogmas which the people and the ministers do not really believe, it was declared by Dr. A. S. Crapsey last evening at the Factory Forum in R. B. I. Hall in an address on "The Evolution of Christianity."

Dr Crapsey said that ministers today were not preaching the old dogmas but that they were not telling the people that they no longer believed in them. Dr. Crapsey laid down the following seven propositions, the truth of which, he said, he was ready to debate with any clergyman or any layman at any time or place. The propositions are:

First—The Jehovah, God of the Hebrews, did not create the universe; the universe created him.

Second—The Hebrew Christian literature, commonly bound together and called the Bible, is not in any true sense the Word of God, but is of human authorship.

Third—The race of man is not in any true sense a fallen race, but has progressed from lower to higher forms of life by means of fixed laws and resident forces.

Fourth—Jesus of Nazareth, the founder of Christianity, was the son of Joseph, by Mary, his wife.

Fifth—Jesus, after his death, did not rise in bodily form from the dead, nor did he ascend visibly into the heavens.

Sixth—Those institutions called churches are not public; they are private institutions, and as such are not entitled to any special privileges under the law.

Seventh—Intellectual integrity is of the essence of morality: a man has no more right to violate his intelligence than he has to violate his conscience.

Re-immersion Scriptural

IN "TEN Lectures," a work of considerable merit which we have in our library, we find the following on the subject of re-immersion, or what is called by those who do not understand the truth, being "baptized again." For the benefit of our dear friends Mr. Austin Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Austin Spindler, and many others too numerous to mention, we transcribe part of what the author of "Ten Lectures" has to say on this important duty. By the blessing of God may it be the means of saving some.

"There is one other matter to which I must direct a moment's attention. That is the question of re-immersion after one was immersed. The reader may never have thought along this line. But there is a case of re-immersion upon record in the Acts of the apostles. The apostle Paul on his third journey found twelve Ephesians who had been baptized with the baptism of John, who upon hearing the things concerning the name of Jesus Christ, were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus (Acts 19:1-5). They, like their teacher, Apollos, knew only the baptism of John, that is they had been baptized in the faith of the things concerning the kingdom of God only. As the record shows, they were partly instructed in "the way of the Lord" (Acts 18:25); but, like their teacher, they required to be "more perfectly" instructed in that way (vs. 26). This more perfect instruction consisted of the things pertaining to the Lord Jesus; and when their faith was thus amplified by the proclamation of the apostle Paul so that embraced all the items of the gospel, their baptism under the sanction of the apostle followed. Since the faith of the gospel in all its items was of such importance in those days that an immersion which took place in the absence of some of those items was invalid, and required another immersion, it is equally necessary in our days that men and women believe all that is embraced in "the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12). Baptism, in order to be valid, must follow, not precede, belief of the gospel. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16:16). Not, "he that is baptized and afterward believeth shall be saved." The baptism of John was "from heaven" in the days when it was in force (Luke 20:4). But when "the things concerning the name of Jesus Christ" were embodied in the gospel, and men and women were required to believe them in conjunction with those of the kingdom, and thereupon be baptized, then belief in the things of the kingdom alone was not sufficient, and when an immersion took place which was deficient in one of those things, a new immersion became necessary. What is the case when one has been immersed in the belief of the immortality of the soul; going to heaven or hell at death; kingdom in the heart, the church or heaven; and other errors which are subversive of the truth as it is in Jesus? Is an immersion which is based upon such a belief a scriptural and valid baptism? In the nature of the case, it cannot be. Then when one holding such views learns the truth, shall he content himself with the fact that he was once immersed, and afterward came to believe the truth? If he really loves the truth, he will not risk his salvation to an immersion based upon a belief which is foreign to the gospel."

Hides from the Sea

SCARCITY of shoe leather has turned the attention of leather men to the creatures that inhabit the sea; and this great source of supply is now becoming available, through the formation of companies that will fish for sea animals heretofore neglected.

The porpoise has for some time supplied an excellent quality of shoe strings; but now skins of the white whale are being used in England for belting and shoe leathers, and the hides of sharks and other great creatures of the sea are being used here for similar purposes.

Sharks weigh as high as a ton apiece; and not only are their skins saleable, but the flesh is good for food and shark meat is now on sale in many cities of the Atlantic seaboard. The government has furnished many recipes which have shark meat as the piece de resistance.

If they could catch a few fish like that deep sea monster caught off Miami six or eight years ago, what a lot of leather they would get! The fish in question was forty-five feet long, weighing fifteen tons, and had in its stomach at the time it was caught a blackfish weighing 1500 pounds, another fish (an octopus) weighing 400 pounds, and 500 pounds of rock which it had swallowed, probably to help its digestive apparatus.

This fish habitat is at 1500 to 2000 feet below sea level, and the specimen caught at Miami by Captain Thomas is one of the very few that have ever come to the surface. Its skin is three to four inches thick, and its cartilages in lieu of bones all indicate the enormous weight of water it was built to withstand. It had no fins, but flukes like a walrus; and in its death throes, after having withstood a rain of bullets and harpoons for thirty-nine hours, it smashed with a blow the propeller and stern of the steam yacht that had come out to tow it to shore. It took nineteen barrels of formaldehyde to disinfect the carcass and prepare it for exhibition.

This great fish has a mouth forty-two inches long and thirty-six inches wide, easily sufficient to swallow a horse at a gulp. Its carcass was on exhibition at Pittsburg in the summer of 1919, and at Nashville, Tenn., in November 1919, and has been shown in other American cities. It is supposed to have been driven to the surface by some seismic shock, as it seemed to be in a dazed condition at the time it was found and killed. Scientists calculate that this is a young specimen, probably about 500 wears old.

The smart alecks, who have had so many sarcastic things to say respecting our Lord's statement that, "As Jonah was three days and three nights in the belly of the ketos (huge gaping fish), so shall the Son of Man be three days and three nifhts in the heart of the earth" (Matt. 12:40), because they claim a "whale's" throat is not large enough to swallow a man, have not had so much to say since this fish was brought to shore. It may have been the very father or grandfather of this fish that swallowed Jonah; but it is far more likely that there are millions of them beneath the ocean's waves and that the bodies of myriads of human beings that have been drowned have found their way into their cavernous maws. Anyway, here is a fish big enough to swallow twenty Jonahs and to provide leather enough to shoe a small sized army.—The Golden Age, February.

Communication

They spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened.-Mal. 3:16.

DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:

I AM at Arkansas City, Kansas, and am glad to see those of the faith whom I used to know. They are Brother and Sister Jacob Reed, Brother and Sister Arthur Chaplin, Sister Hadicke, Sister Randolph, Sister Minnie Chaplin and Sister Ella Vickery. These dear brethren and sisters though few in number, meet each Sunday at Sister Hadick's to study the Scriptures. May the Lord richly reward them for holding fast to the faith during these trying times.

Yes, dear brethren, we are living in a time when we have to watch that the adversary does not draw us into the world. Let us not sleep, but let us be up and have on the wedding garment, for the marriage of the Lamb draweth near. May none of us fail to be there, is my prayer.

Yours waiting for the King,

Hannah M. Baker

Falling Away

Let no man deceive you by any means; for that day shall not come except there come a falling away first (2 Thess. 2:3).

The same question naturally arises in the heart of every one who hears the warning that was asked by the sorrowful disciples on the night of our Lord's betrayal: "Lord, is it I?" Our anxiety is anticipated and answered by him who made the promise: "Before they call, I will answer: and while they are yet speaking I will hear."

The question is also answered in the 15 Psalm: "He that walketh uprightly and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart; he that backbiteth not with his tongue, nor doeth evil to his neighbor, nor taketh up a reproach against his neighbor; in whose eyes a vile person is contemned; but he honoreth them that fear the Lord; he that sweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not, he that putteth not out his money to usury, nor taketh reward against the innocent; he that doeth these things shall never be moved."

Let us take heed: This looks like a long list, but on careful study, is there any more in this than in the one commandment, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself?"

The answer is again given us by Peter in the words, "Ye shall never fall," which comes about "through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus our Lord. According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness; through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue: whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust. And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith, virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity. For if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind (a sure condition for falling) and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if ye do these things ye shall never fall." This looks like a long list, but is all fulfilled in the commandment to love God with all your heart, and your neighbor as yourself. "For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord, and Savior Jesus Christ."

"The redeemed shall walk there (without fear of falling). And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." Doubts and fears go with sorrows and sighings.

Your sister in hope,

Sadie Skeels.

Ashamed of Jesus?

IT IS a mystery to me why any one should be ashamed to take as the pattern of his life a being who never thought a wrong thought, never said an angry, impure or profane word, and who never did a wrong act. Why is it? Why ashamed to take the oath of allegiance to such a being? to become his acknowledged follower? his soldier?

Young people tell me "if they could only be Christians and have nobody know it, then they would become Christ's Is that the way our young enlisting soldier boys acted? Did they say if they could only enlist in the army and fight for the liberty of the world over in France without anyone finding it out, then they would go? Not much! They proudly donned the khaki uniform, and marched away under the leadership of the general of their country. They were not ashamed of him, of their flag, nor of their government. They were glad to go and to give their lives if need be, to save the world from the beastly cruelty of Gentile powers. But when Jesus calls men to enlist in his army that cause of liberty and peace may be truly and finally victorious, how they shrink back: how cowardly they are!

Ashamed of Jesus! How disgraceful! How mean! How traitorous! Ashamed of the purest being that ever lived! Ashamed to own that you want to be like him! Ashamed to be called by his name! Ashamed to put him on as you would a garment! Ashamed to be crucified with him! Ashamed to be buried with him by baptism into his death! Ashamed to own that you are no longer going to live wicked lives, but that you intend instead to be pure, honest, sober, and kind men and women.

Think how the thing looks: how absurd and strange it is to act as you are acting; to deny Jesus, and deny his words, and be denied by him before the Father and the holy angels. The royalties of the world to come are offered you now if you will accept Jesus as your Savior. Will you? The time is growing very short. Not much longer can we plead with you to come and be saved. Every morning I pray for you in far away British Columbia, in Oklahoma, in Washington City, in Oregon, in Texas and everywhere.

Why put off coming to Jesus? He begs you to come. God does not want you to be lost. He is not willing that you should perish, but if you will not come that you may have life, what then? You lose out; that is the outcome of your rejection of the proffered salvation.

We long over you with unutterable love; is it all in vain? Do you despise and hate us because we love you and want you to be as pure and as exalted in being as the angels of light? You may, but we will pray on. Jesus is with us, and you cannot always fight against him.

S. Rexana Wince.

Did the Lord Appoint Matthias?

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS IN THE ONE FAITH:

MUCH HAS been said in regard to the twelve apostles. Who was chosen by the Lord to fill the place of Judas Iscariot? In the beginning of our remarks we will ask you to go with us to Luke 6:12-16. Here we find that he (Christ) went out into a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer to God. When it was day he callen unto him his disciples and out of them he chose twelve whom he also named apostles: Simon, (whom he also named Peter), and Andrew, his brother, James and John, Philip, and Bartholomew, Matthew and Thomas, James the son of Alpheus, and Simon called Zelotes, and Judas the brother of James and Judas Iscariot, which also was the traitor.

Now in Acts 1:15 we find in those days that Peter stood up in the midst of the disciples. The number of names together were about a hundred and twenty.

Now let us go back to Luke 6:13. There we find he only chose twelve, to whom also he showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God (Acts 1:3). Acts 1:23, 24: "And they (the eleven apostles) appointed two, Joseph called Barsabas, who was surnamed Justus, and Matthias. And they prayed and said, Thou Lord which knowest the hearts of all men, show whether of these two thou hast chosen that he may take part of this ministry and apostleship from which Judas by transgression fell, that he might go to his own place. And they gave forth their lots, and the let fell upon Matthias: and he was numbered with the eleven apostles."

"Well," says a Latter-day Saint, "that soul-sleeper has it now. He is just proving our doctrine." But if you please, sir, allow me to ask you, Did the above Scripture prove that the Lord chose Matthias? No, indeed! Again comes the question, "why then did the Lord chose Matthias?" The Lord did not chose Matthias as an apostle. "They (the eleven) cast lots and the lot fell upon Matthias." Yes, that is it. This only proves that they chose Matthias by lot; but the Lord never chose Matthias as an apostle.

Now let us see if we can find anyone to fill this place. To this end we will read Acts 9:10-16: "There was a certain disciple at Damascus named Ananias, and to him said the Lord in a vision, Ananias; and he said, Behold, I am here, Lord. And the Lord said unto him, Arise and go into the street called Straight, and inquire in the house of Judas for one called Saul, of Tarsus; for behold he prayeth. And hath seen in a vision a man named Ananias coming in and putting his hands on him that he might receive his sight. Then Ananias answered, Lord, I have heard by many of this man how much evil he hath done to thy saints at Jerusalem, and how he hath authority from the chief priests to bind all that call on thy name. But the Lord said unto him, Go thy way, for he is a chosen vessel unto me to bear my name before the Gentiles and kings and the children of Israel; for I will shew him how great things he must suffer for my sake. And straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues that he is the Son of God." But where is our apostle Matthias?

Again in Acts 13:46, Paul and Barnabas waxed bold and said, "It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you, but seeing ye put it from you and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles. For so hath the Lord commanded us saying, I have set thee to be a light of the Gentiles that thou shouldst be for salvation unto the ends of the earth." Matthias where art thou?

Now let us compare these Scriptures with Acts 15:22: "Then pleased it the apostles and elders with the whole church to send chosen men of their own company to Antioch with Paul and Barnabas, namely, Judas surnamed Barnabas, and Silas, chief men among the brethren." Also let us read Acts 15:25, 26: "It seemed good unto us being assembled with one accord to send chosen men unto you with our beloved Barnabas and Paul, men that have hazarded their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ."

Read Acts 18:6-10: "And when they opposed themselves and blasphemed, he shook his raiment and said unto them, Your blood be upon your own heads; I am clean. From henceforth I will go unto the Gentiles. Then spake the Lord to Paul in the night by a vision, Be not afraid, but speak and hold not thy peace; for I am with thee and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee, for I have much people in this city." In Acts 19:11 we also find that God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul; but where is Matthias?

In concluding these remarks let me say to you, brethren, that I have searched many times the Scriptures that I might find where the Lord had ever chosen Matthias, to take the place as an apostle of Judas Iscariot and failed; but I do find that the day after Paul came to Jerusalem with James and all the elders were present, as recorded in Acts 21:17-19, that he saluted them and declared particularly what things God had wrought among the Gentiles by his ministry. There are only six of us here, but we are searching for none other things but the truth, and so we have this subject in view we would be glad to have better light on this subject from anyone who can give proof of the same by the Scriptures. As yet we are not satisfied to take Matthias as an apostle chosen by the Lord. Brethren, pray for us and the work at Buckhart. I am yours in the blessed hope of the kingdom of God,

S. Herren.

WHICH LOVED BEST?

"I love you mother," said little John
Then, forgetting his work, his cap went on
And he was off to the garden swing,
Leaving his mother the wood to bring.

"I love you, mother," said Rosy Nell,
"I love you better than tongue can tell"
Then she teased and pouted half the day,
Till all rejoiced when she went to play.

"I love you, mother," said little Fan.
"Today I'll help you all I can.
How glad I am that school does not keep!"
And she rocked the babe till it fell asleep.

Then stepping softly she brought the broom,
And swept the floor and tidied the room,
Busy and happy all day was she,
Helpful and happy as child could be.

"I love you, mother," again they said,
Three little children going to bed,
How do you suppose that mother guessed
Which of them really loved her best?

A GREAT DEED DONE IN THE PROPER SPIRIT

RECENTLY WE witnessed a great sight. For some years past we daily have eaten at Drake's Restaurant, 119 West 42 St., New York City, of which Mr. William Richters is half owner. We would like to describe this vast establishment which never is closed and daily feeds over 6000 persons, and on special occasions nearly double that number, but at this writing time and space forbid. A business interest that each has felt for the other has gradually but none the less firmly led to a warm personal friendship between Mr. Richters and ourself, a friendship which we hope and trust will not only endure while life lasts, but shall be continued throughout eternity in the kingdom of God.

One day after dining we were about to leave the building when one of the under managers invited us to step to the second floor and "see something that was going on there." Of course we went and were glad that we did; for what we saw never will be forgotten while memory lasts. There were about eighty children, ranging between 8 and 16 years of age, about evenly divided between the sexes. Some were black, more were white, a great many were lame, some used crutches, others canes —all were poor, and every one was just as happy and contented as it was possible for a stomach fulled with soup and turkey and vegetables and cranberry sauce and mince pie and fruit and ice cream and coffee to make them. They were that class of children that a stomach so filled made them exceedingly happy. One little fellow was heard to say, "Gee, I've eaten so much I can't walk"; and it was not an idle remark, either; for that exactly was the condition he was in. His little stomach not used to being over indulged, was so filled with all the goodies he simply couldn't walk, but there he was happy. Personally I do not believe he wanted to walk, although he was filled to near the bursting point: he wanted to stay and eat more.

These children were charity wards of the city: they were from the tubercular hospital on Blackwell's Island—not tubercolusis of the lungs, but of the joints, mainly of the knees and elbows. A Mr. Rosen had brought them down to give them a holiday at the Hippodrome; he also had given them little purses each containing five pennies, two nickels, and one dime, all new, bright coins which they were allowed to spend in the 5 and 10 cent store for anything their fancy dictated. In the restaurant a lady patron who refused her name, gave twenty-five dollars to buy little necessary things for the poorest, and the dinner worth over one dollar and fifty cents a person was supplied free by Mr. Richters. Why did he do this? Because he, realizing that he is "a sinner saved by grace" and wished to show his love for God and his faith in the Lord Christ by doing good to those of God's creatures who are less fortunate than himself. What Mr. Richter did he did in the name of God through faith in his Christ. A noble work and God received the glory and praise.

Now, my young friends, What lesson can you find in this for us? I suppose you are saying, "I cannot afford to give eighty dinners at a cost of one dollar and fifty cents each." No, I don't believe you can; neither can I. Until a very short time ago neither could Mr. Richter, but it is not the dinners nor the cost that counts: it is the goodness—god likeness—that is in the heart to prompt the deed, the willingness to execute the thought, and the desire to glorify God: these are the things that count. We all have something that we can and ought to give. It may be money or service, a song, a cheering word, a kind act, a smile. It matters not what it is, as long as we give in love what we have. Give it in the name of Christ to the glory of God. Whatever talents God has given us we must use. If we refuse, we not only lose our reward, but we shall receive condemnation. God's word tells us that even such a little thing as a cup of water given in "his name" shall be rewarded but though we give all our money to feed the poor but do it to our own glory, it shall profit us nothing. "Therefore whatsoever ye do, whether in word of deed, do it all to the glory of God."

WITHOUT AND WITHIN

WITHOUT the storm is raging. Snow is falling fast and a high wind is blowing. It has been so terrible the street cars have not been running all day. The storm is what is known as a blizzard. We are writing in a well appointed, a well lighted, and a well heated room. Were it not that we know of the outward conditions we never could imagine them from our comfortable surroundings. And so it is with those outside of Christ, and those who have put on Christ. To those outside the storms of life rage; it is a blizzard. But those within have the peace of God, a peace the world knows not of, that it neither can give nor take away. Our advice is, Come inside; leave the fury of the storm and have peace.

FOUR WORDS

THERE ARE four words that sum up a Christian life:

First.—KNOW.
Second.—GROW.
Third.—GLOW.
Fourth.—GO.

First: "That I might know thee, the only true God, and his Son Jesus Christ."

Second: "Grow in the grace and knowledge of Jesus Christ."

Third: "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

Fourth: "Go thou and preach the gospel."

Many of us are willing enough to practice the first and second, but we lack courage to let our spiritual light glow before others, or to go out and try to bring in those who know not God. O that we might be re-consecrated, so that we would strive to do the will of God.

VOLUME 72 CLEVELAND, O. FEBRUARY 24th, 1920. ● NUMBER 8

Pushing Hard

Push hard against the iron-barred door,
 If you would dare or do;
Push hard; however strong the bar,
 It may swing back to you.
Count not the weight against your own;
 Nor height nor depth survey,
But lay your shoulder to the bar,
 And push and push away!

Be thoughtful! Use your strength aright.
 Be patient and intent;
Full many a bar has been unlodged
 That never could be bent.
Push hard, push long; pray as you push;
 Use thought as well as strength.
The chances are the tireless hand
 Will shift the bar at length.

But, if the barrier standeth fast,
 However you may try,
And, stolid in its groove, the bar
 Refuse to let you by,
Remember you have prayed, and so,
 However hard the lot,
The bar had slipped before thy touch
 Had love forbid it not. Selected by S. Roxana Wince.

God

God thundereth marvellously with his voice; great things doeth he, which we cannot understand (Job 37:5).

HOW OFTEN in prayer the words found in Psa. 73:25 rise to our lips. "Whom have I in heaven but thee; and there is none upon earth that I desire beside thee." Yet when we are alone sitting is quietness and deep meditation we ask ourselves these questions. "What do you know about the personality of God? Do you know or can the mind comprehend him? Is God to my heart real as the closest of my friends?" We never weary of reading the seventeenth chapter of John. How familiar Jesus converses with God. The language used in his wonderful prayer are the words of friends each having absolute confidence in the other. Listen: "O righteous Father, the world hath not known thee; but I have known thee. Can I claim or rather do I possess this remarkable confidence toward God? Is my knowledge and experience with God such that I can truly say, "I know God and am known of him"?

After Job passed through a terrible affliction, bereavement, and the contumelious conduct of his friends toward him, God revealed himself to Job. After God ceased speaking Job was silent, then the grandeur of God's presence and personality burst in upon his mind, and he exclaims: "I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear; but now mine eye seeth thee." This is the experience of all who are honestly seeking to know God. First comes hearing, then the overwhelming desire to see God. "I will rise now and go about the city in the streets, and in the broad ways I will seek him whom my soul loveth. I sought him, but I found him not. The watchmen that go about the city found me; to whom I said, Saw ye him whom my soul loveth?" When our hearts are in this attitude God removes the cloud and revealed to our raptured gaze we behold him! The authors of many books in my home I have never seen; many are dead, and yet these men and women I know well. Their thoughts are my thoughts; the characters they have created have become to my mind real creatures, alive and present.

It is said that when Dickens finished his masterpiece, "David Copperfield," he wept because he must bid farewell to the characters his mind had created, who had become his closest and dearest friends. The writer for many years has continually corresponded with his nephew, whom he probably never will with his physical sight see, and yet from boyhood he has been my constant mental companion. I know him; I love him; I trust him. No person can weaken or shake my confidence in him. Why? Because in his letters, by his terms of expression and language, I understand him and am drawn towards him even as to my own son after the flesh.

"As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he" (Prov. 23:7). David, before even Christ was born, speaks of him in this wise: "My heart is inditing a good matter; I speak of the things which I have made touching the king; my tongue is the pen of a ready writer. Thou art fairer than the children of men, grace is poured into thy lips; therefore God hath blessed thee for ever" (Psa. 45:1, 2). Where did David obtain this wonderful knowledge? Can you give a more beautiful description of the Christ than this? Could you if you had seen Jesus face to face? I think not. David wrote: "How sweet are thy words unto my taste; yea, sweeter than honey to my mouth! Through thy precepts I get understanding; therefore I hate every false way. Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path" (Psa. 119:105-105). "I hate vain thoughts; but thy law do I love: thou art my hiding place and my shield: I hope in thy word. Uphold me according unto thy word that I may live; and let me not be ashamed of my hope." David, through divine writers, was on intimate terms with many of the ancient worthies depicted in Heb. 11.

This was the source of his knowledge of God. It was the source of the knowledge that Jesus possessed of God (Luke 24:44-49). How then can I know and see God? Simply by understanding his mind and disposition. If the mind of an author is pure, then the thoughts expressed in language are likewise; if impure then contrariwise. Jesus confirms this law in Matt. 12:34, 35.

What is the disposition of God? Many Scriptures reveal it. John said, "God is love." Surely this is true, as no other being is. Listen to these Scriptures which makes God's personality very real to me:

"The Lord hath appeared of old unto me, saying, Yea, I have loved thee with an everlasting love, therefore with loving kindness have I drawn thee."

"The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms."

"He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust."

"Can a woman forget her suckling child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? Yea, she may forget, yet will I not forget thee. Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands."

"For the Lord loveth, judgment, and forsaketh not his saints; they are preserved for ever."

"Whither shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there; if I make my bed in the grave, behold, thou art there; if I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the earth; even there shalt thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me."

The poet Dershavin saw God when he wrote

O thou eternal One! whose presence bright
All space doth occupy, all motion guide;
Unchanged through time's all devasting flight;
Thou only God; there is no God beside.
Being above all beings; Mighty One;
Whom none can comprehend and none explore;
Who fill'st existence with thyself alone;
Embracing all supporting ruling o'er
Being whom we call God and know no more!

Paul declares that God only hath immortality, "dwelling in light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see; to whom be honor and power everlastinng. Amen." We can not see God by our physical eyes. Only is his love and wisdom revealed by the works of his hand. By the revelation of his mind in his word can we see God. As we muse over these, the eyes of our understanding become clarified and we truly see God. We read Psalm 19 over and over again. Surely David saw God in the heavens above, and in the earth beneath. None other than a fool can say, "There is no God" (Psa. 14:1).

Recently I have been reading some thoughts by one of the world's greatest thinkers. I will quote from a few paragraphs. If after reading them you cannot see and appreciate the presence of God, then let us "eat, drink and be merry for tomorrow we die" (1 Cor. 15:32).

Looking out from my window Lake Erie stretches before me; in the distance the sky and the lake seem to meet. There is no visible motion even among the clouds, and there is almost complete silence. Yet the earth is a stone cannon ball travelling round the sun at 1000 miles a minute, and spinning on its axis like a rifle bullet at 1000 miles an hour. If for a few minutes the air stood still the whole surface of the globe would be turned to molten lava by the friction.

This spinning ball on which we all walk like flies on a ceiling, goes round the sun in 365 days. An express train at 60 miles an hour would take a thousand years, so that a train started in 1401 would now be half way round. The stars are suns. Some of these are much larger than our sun. Canopus is said to be forty million times larger. The nearest star to us is twenty-four billion miles away. As light travels 182,000 miles a second the light takes four and a half years to reach us.

Beloved, Sir Isaac Newton once said that his knowledge was compared to a grain of sand to the great ocean beyond of things and knowledge unknown. Why do we abhor vain and proud thoughts? Why do we act like a peacock strutting around showing off our fine clothes and vain thoughts? You recall Job had previously asked his friend Bildad the Shuhite some remarkable questions. Job 9: "Which maketh Arcturus, Orion and Pleades, and the chamber of the south?" Did Job know that the great nebula in the constellation of Orion, took its light 1000 years to reach us?

We all know and can point out in the heavens the great "Milky Way," yet the light of many of its stars takes 3000 years to reach us. The new star map astronomers are now preparing will show 30 millions of stars or suns; but stellar photography shows 160 millions of suns, some of which are nearly 6000 light years distant. We have then a known universe of 180 millions suns and 120 nebula which are suns or systems of suns. The writer asks if we can grasp these facts? He invites us to consider the minute form of terrestial life. He says there is the aphis or green fly of our rose trees. An aphis will produce ninety young, and these will produce eleven generations in a summer. That is to say, that if all the young lived an aphis would multiply in one season to a number expressed in 22 figures. Or as one naturalist has put it, if a hundred of these creatures weigh one grain, the fruit of one fly at the end of the summer would weigh nearly two billion tons, which is more than twenty times the weight of all the inhabitants of the globe.

Again he says: "I look through the microscope at a tenth part of a drop of water and I see creatures like six legged bears, I see beautiful globular structures decorated with irridescent arabesques; I see the tiny soul like diamonds of whose microscopic skeletons some of the greatest mountains have been built, and I see the elemental unicecular animal, the amoeba, who, as has been said, walks without legs or feet, seizes, without hands or arms, eats without a mouth, and digests without a stomach."

Beloved, this knowledge is all too wonderful for me. This writer concludes by saying: "I look through the telescope and I see Orion Nebula like a spash of thin moonshine palely blue (it is a million times the size of our solar system), and I see in the Nebula, or through it, double and triple stars like flaming amethysts and sapphires and emeralds and topazes. I see the plant Saturn with his golden rings; I see the marvellous star clusters," etc.

Beloved, in the face of all this testimony I bow my head in prayer and recall readily the prophetic words: "For since the beginning of the world men have not heard nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye seen, O God, beside thee, what he hath prepared for him that waiteth for him" (Isa. 14:4). I can understand now Psa. 50:22: "Now consider this, ye that forget God, lest I tear you in pieces, and there is none to deliver." Also Psa. 52:1: "Why boasteth thou thyself in mischief, O mighty man? The goodness of God endureth continually."

Geo. B. Aldridge

Reaping What We've Sown

By their fruits ye shall know them (Matt. 7:20).

THE INFALLIBLE test by Jesus for true or false teachers, and for all systems of religion, is the fruits manifested from such teachers and bodies of people, even as every tree is known by its fruits. Thus when statistics show more criminals among Roman Catholics, in proportion to numbers, than in any other religion on earth, we wonder that the adherents of that system cannot see the bad fruits of their teaching, and leave the system.

But it will be more profitable for us to look at our own individual fruits, and at the fruits of the system with which we are identified, since if we would judge ourselves (and correct our lives) we should not be judged or condemned with the world (1 Cor. 11:31, 32). Let us therefore take a mental survey of our own fruits and the fruits of our religious system, and see if we cannot see something lacking in our teaching that accounts for our meagre fruits and scanty works.

There was a time when I said that the Salvation Army and the popular sects had more works than faith, while we, as a people, had more faith than works; but I must say, on deeper reflection, that these sects surpass us in both faith and works since a faith that does not show itself in works, is dead faith, or no faith at all; just as love that is only in word, and not in deed, and in self denial, and self sacrifice is no love at all (1 John 3: James 2).

And now, since we all feel that the time is short in which the bride must prepare herself for the heavenly marriage, it is high time to examine ourselves as to the cause of our small fruits and scant works, some of which I point out as I see them.

Some of our old preachers used to take great pleasure in telling the people that the gospel was free, and they did not want their money, but only their salvation, etc., which not only encouraged a selfish and coveteous spirit in the congregation but also was a sowing from which the poor as well as the preachers, editors, and the cause have been reaping ever since. Would it not have produced different fruits had we taught the believers as Moses did, that none should appear before the Lord empty (Deut. 16:16); or like father Abraham, Malachi, and Paul, that the tenth of all our increase or income was the Lord's (Mal. 3; Heb. 7); or as Paul taught the primitive Christians that a proportion of all our income should be laid aside as the Lord's portion, on every first day of the week (1 Cor. 16)?

But I think I see more serious defects in our past work than the above, that must be remedied if many who are now rejoicing in their doctrinal light are not to be doomed to bitter disappointment when the Master comes to gather up his jewels.

First: I see a defect in pointing the people continually in all our preaching and writings to the future world for the new birth; the new creation; the rest; the peace; the perfection; the enjoyment of Jesus' presence; for sinlessness* and for spirit power, instead of impressing on all that a foretaste of all this must now be enjoyed and experienced or we never will enter the future, heavenly state.

Second: Any informed person who will candidly reflect on our past preaching, our literature and confessions of faith, must admit that repentance was either wholly omitted, or given a very small place in the work, and yet this was the first plank laid in the Christian's platform by all the prophets, by John the Baptist and by Jesus.

Third: The new birth, morally, which must take place in this life (Rom. 6 to 9; 1 John 3), in order to adoption into Christ, or into the reign of God (John 3), was either denied, belittled, or neglected.

Fourth: The fruit, gifts, power, and work of the Holy Spirit in the body of Christ today, was denied or neglected.

Reader, do you think that we would have over 20 states without an evangelist to represent what we regard as saving truth if there were not defects in our past sowing? Would such a condition exist if we had preached a repentance like John the

*We humbly accept all the reproof our correspondent has seen fit to administer, to us in this excellent communication, and pray that many may repent after reading his article. But our repentance, faith, love, obedience—all are imperfect. The truth calls upon us to feel and own this imperfection. If Paul had "not attained" (Phil. 3:12) it is presumption in any of us to think we have: All pretences to entire freedom from sin are contrary to the Scriptures, to truth, and to universal experience. They indicate great ignorance of God's law, and of our own hearts. We shall always have occasion for that prayer: "Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors." Editor.

Baptist preached, and had demanded, before baptism, the fruits worthy of repentance that John demanded? Or is there not danger that such preachers today would be classed with Socialists or Bolshiviki, if they would say: "The proof of a true repentance that I demand of this generation of vipers is: "he that hath two coats let him impart to him that hath none; and he that hath food, let him do likewise' " (Luke 3:7-12).

But without a true repentance (which not only requires a turning from all known sin, but also a walking in the spirit in newness of life), there can be no reception or enjoyment of the Holy Spirit, and without the Holy Spirit no perfect fruit of the Spirit can be borne, no power or life in the body; no gifts nor Christ character. The body without the Spirit is dead, for it is the Spirit that quickeneth (Jas. 1:26; John 6:63; 15:1-27). Hence no genuine repentance means no Holy Spirit; no Holy Spirit means no perfect love or other fruit of the Spirit; and no fruit means a dead tree: a dead person; a dead sect.

We should make it a rule to look for all the good we can find in all persons, sects, and in all literature, and to pass over all error and weakness with that love that seeth no evil, and that covers a multitude of sins, instead of looking only for errors to criticize; for we can never get the good out of what we hear or read if we entertain prejudice against the sect represented. But we cannot be too critical with ourselves, in our deep heart searchings, in the light of the law and life and Spirit of Christ, if we would enjoy his presence always with us, or attain to perfection in character (Matt. 5:48; Eph. 3:19). In the words of Paul: "Night and day praying exceedingly that we might perfect that which is lacking in your faith. The Lord make you to increase and abound in love one toward another, and toward all men, to the end that he may establish your hearts unblameable in holiness before God, even the Father, at the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints" (1 Thess. 3).

The H. C. L.

WE HEAR and read much about the high cost of living pertaining to the temporal food. But Christendom does not think of what the non-essential and unnecessary things cost. For instance, money expended for movies, shows, tobacco, liquors, and all kinds of pleasure of the world is provided for instead of necessary needs. The high cost of living, generally spoken of by the world relates to temporalities. But there is another higher cost of living rarely spoken of, namely, the cost of the spiritual food. The pleasures of this world are foolishness with God. If we partake of them and neglect our duty towards God we shall not be worthy of eternal life when Christ comes and says: "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." If we hear not these words of plaudit we shall lose our inheritance. Hence I could not conceive of a "higher cost of living" than this.

Christ declareth himself to be the bread of life. "I am the living bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever." What is the high cost of living of temporal bread compared to the cost of the bread of life if we do not partake of it? We may eat sparingly and little of our temporal food each day, and not miss it, outside of having a little headache. If Christ were to come you would not miss the temporal food. Then you will seriously question, "Am I prepared to meet the Lord at his coming?" If we partake of the bread of life sparingly we will not be prepared to meet the Lord. We would be numbered with the goats at his left hand and be cast into outer darkness. "There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth."

Let us be up and doing, for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh. Let us eat of the bread of life. "This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof and not die" (John 6:50). Let us study to show ourselves approved unto God, a workman that need not be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth. In the Prohibition drive men of all creeds were preaching 2.75 per cent beer. We were told to keep our children from intemperance by voting dry. Very well, so far as eliminating the make and use of it, I agree. I say that while they were doing this great work, as they claimed, they were really straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel.

House to house canvass was made by them to banish 2.75 per cent beer. A speech on Sunday was made on benefits of prohibition. Then in the evening the movies, theatres, were filled with these so-called church goers and boose chasers. Their children were with them. Trying to keep their children away from the frying pan and dragging them into the fire! Trying to serve God Sunday morning and the devil Sunday evening. The movies are the devil's works. There is no good in them, they do a great deal of harm, and no good. We do not need them to guide us in the straight and narrow way.

I was talking to some friends where I am employed. They asked me if I thought it all right to go to the movies on Sunday. I replied that I did not believe in going at all. They came back at me with this question: "When I work every day, when do you suppose I will get any pleasure if I do not go on Sunday?" I knew my friends were Catholics, so I asked, "Is there any time you would not go?" They said, "yes; forty days each year they denied themselves of everything." I said, "Why deny yourself of everything for forty days and then do anything the rest of the year?" I told them to deny themselves one day each week of the pleasures and divide it up a little instead of forty days all together, and do good all the year instead of just for forty days. They finally agreed that I was right. Let us be steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord. There are none of us, no matter how good we are, but what we could do a little better than we do. We are told to search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and they are they which testify of me. As the time draweth nigh may we let our light shine until the second coming of Christ that we may be joint heirs with him in the kingdom that shall be established on earth forever.

A PRAYER

Leave not a veil before my eyes,
Tear from my mind the shield of lies
And from my soul the web of sophistries;
Yea, though I sicken, shirk and flee,
God, give me eyes to see.

Send me no song so honey-sweet,
That I forget the harsher beat
Of life, the pulsing discords of the street;
Smite me with sorrow as a spear—
But give me ears to hear.

Grant me the will to pay for light,
For vision overtopping sight,
And dreams that are not of the passing night;
Yield, at what price thou shalt demand,
A heart to understand.

Love, like the creeping vine, withers if it has nothing to embrace (Niovini).

A Letter of Recommendation

BROTHER AND SISTER M. E. Bray expect to move to Mt. Leonard, Missouri, their former home, about April 1st. Their parents live in Missouri, and this move is being made that they may better assist in comforting father and mother in their last years. Sister Bray is well and favorably known in Nebraska and many other states by believers through her correspondence with the isolated. We make a positive guarantee that should an isolated member or anyone else suspect a spell of the blues coming on that if information is given this sister, a sure remedy will be forthcoming. Brother and Sister Bray both are the embodiment of southern courtesy. The church body in Nebraska loses two faithful members, but do not expect to lose their good influence entirely as long as their fountain pen holds out. Brother Bray writes but little and does not say much, but hits the nail when he does speak. The writer graciously acknowledges his assistance given in arriving at what the Scriptures teach on probationary possibilities beyond death.

Remember the Helping Fund

Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble—in the day of evil, margin (Psa. 41:1).

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Temptation is a test. Without temptation we would grow faint and weak. We are not to ask that temptation be removed. But our prayer is to be that in the face of temptation God will supply us with strength and power that we might overcome it. This is what makes strength, this is what makes toward perfection.

Editorial

Dating February 12th, Brother W. H. Russell, of Rochester, N. Y., writes: "It may be of interest to you to know that Mrs. Biers (formerly Miss Esther Ingham) and myself were introduced into the only name under heaven whereby man can be saved. Wednesday evening, January 28th, 1920. I am not a quasi-brother any more." This is the best news that we have heard for some time.

During the week the church has mourned with Sister Hudson, who lost a son from the flu (the second son within fourteen mouths); Brother Drenske, who lost his father; and Brother Pott, who also laid his father to rest. Death has been very busy among us lately; and as our loved ones are taken from us, one by one, we pray more ardently for the time to hasten when we can say triumphant, "O death, where is thy sting ? O grave, where is thy victory ?"

On account of sickness in the home of Brother and Sister Huggins, the Fellow Helpers held their meeting in the Sunday School room on Friday evening, Feb. 6th. Sixteen members and four visitors were present. After reports were made, the meeting was turned over to Brother Sterling Russell who had chosen the 45th Psalm for his lesson. A very enjoyable hour was spent in the study of this Psalm, and all were benefited greatly by it. After the meeting adjourned, donations to the amount of $3.40 were collected. -Bessie Nicholls.

Communication

They spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened.-Mal. 3:16.

My Beloved Brother and Editor of the Most Sacred Church Paper to me Beneath the Sun:

I wish to write just a few lines through The Restitution to the isolated brothers and sisters. The Lord came to me by the hand of Brother Almus Adams and preached the gospel of the kingdom of God By this providence my wife also believed on the only begotten Son of the God of Abraham.

Now, Brother Huggins, I want you to aid me by giving names and addresses of all isolated members of the body you know of. I have just read last night a letter written by A. J. Grubbs; and my heart goes out to all such soldiers of the cross. I am so glad he is steadfast and has received the ingrafted word, which is able to save his soul. Brethren, words cannot express the deep feelings of your writer which he has for all the household of faith I still feel as an isolated member myself, but not so much as I did feel in days gone by. Not until Oct. 19th was I a member of Christ's body, but I was just as strong in the faith as I ever can be, yet I was without hope until Oct. 19th. I have battled alone here in this county contending for the faith for over 20 years. I know just what an isolated brother or sister has to contend with. Formerly I would sit for hours reading and searching God's word while my wife either read a news paper or an old catalogue; and when I would undertake to read to her and children, they were so busy talking of what they were going to order they could never hear anything I was reading. My parents also have been in the faith for a number of years, but they had drifted off in the M. E. Church. I myself tried them a while, but saw their folly and drew off from them. So I had to stand alone until Brother Adams came. And now do you brethren, think I could ever forget Brother Adams ? No, never.

Such is a history in the past of the trials of my dark days; but now what a change! Myself, my wife, my earthly father and mother, my nearest neighbor and wife, have joined me: and we have all been baptized into one spirit, and have been all made to drink into one spirit, as recorded in Paul's letter to the Corinthians (1 Cor. 10:2; 12:13).

Now in my closing words, let me exhort you, brothers and sisters in Christ, speak often to each other and cheer the fainting minds by so doing. You will be a wonderful help to each other. And if I am not permitted to meet you in this old sin cursed world, let our prayers ever be that we shall grasp glad hands in the kingdom of God. "Fare'ye well." Yours in the blessed hope,

SI HERREN.

Any of the isolated who would like to correspond with Brother Herren may address him at Buckhart, Douglas County, Missouri.—Editor.

Obituary

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.--Psa. 116:15.

Ann Lichty was born Oct. 10, 1844, at Saulsbury, Somerset Co., Penna. She was married to C. A. Saylor Sept. 25, 1862. Moved to Lanark Ill, in 1862, residing there six years; then moving to Morrill, Brown Co., Kansas, where she resided twenty-four years; moving from there to Tempe, Ariz., in 1892 where she resided until death. To this union was born eleven children, all of whom survive her, and all being present at the funeral except one daughter who resides in Kansas. Her husband died a year ago.

Sister Saylor has been a faithful member of the church of God for many years, and was disinherited by her father because of her acceptance of what she believed to be the faith once delivered to the saints. Coming from old Pennsylvanian German stock of what is known as "Dunkards," it was not an easy matter to make such a radical change, and although it worked some hardship for her in this life it surely laid up treasure in heaven for her and fulfilled Paul's admonition, "All who suffer with him shall reign with him."

A remarkable record was hers; not often does a family of children as large as hers survive and be situated to pay their last respects to a loving mother.

Words of comfort were spoken by the writer using the text, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the spirit that they may rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

"Out of Darkness Into Light"

It has pleased God that these two things should be accomplished for those who as sheep had gone astray (1 Pet. 2:25), by the means of a human sin bearer. What have we in a sacrificial sin bearer, but a highly figurative and symbolic performance: and so far as Jesus Christ was that bearer of sin, the symbolism was based upon actual death and resurrection to show the final object of the figure and symbolism. The symbolism represented the satisfying of justice that the righteousness of God might be declared, for death as the wages of sin is what is due to the sinner: faith in this based upon Christ having become a curse, to represent this thing, is what God demands of the sinner before he grants forgiveness of the trespasses committed. Let it be remembered that no one by symbolism or in any other way, as in the case of King David, can have their sins borne away without faith in the one great offering for sin. God has furnished man a sin bearer accessible at all times as Paul clearly teaches: "But this man, after he had offered one sacrifice for sins forever, sat down at the right hand of God" (Heb. 10:12). "For this he did once for all" for all times (Heb. 7:27); and John says in 1 John 2:2, "And he is the propitiation for our sins: and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world." By faith the sinner whether born a thousand years after or long before Christ offered one sacrifice for sins can bring Christ crucified to God as his offering for sin, even as the Jew under the law of Moses brought an animal. "The obedience of faith" in baptism is where Christ the sin bearer becomes efficacious; and even now for forgiven saints when they sin, that same one offering for sin must be used to make propitiation. As a matter of fact and reality, no one can bear another's sins; but they can bear the consequences and punishment due for transgression; and it is in this way that the Bible teaches that sins are borne.

CHRIST BEARING SINS AND SORROWS

It is argued that because Isaiah says, "Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows," and that Paul says of Christ, "For we have not an High Priest which cannot be touched with the feelings of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin" (Heb. 4:15), also the statement made by Matthew, chapter 8:16, "When the even was come, they brought unto him many that were possessed with devils; and he cast out the spirits with his word, and healed all that were sick"; that here is the proof that to bear human nature is to bear sin. As regards the last passage quoted, we would say that the infirmities and sicknesses of verse 17(which says "himself took," has no other meaning than the statement made in the previous verse, viz., R. V. "And he cast out the spirits with a word, and healed all that were sick." We must not suppose that he "himself took" the insanity of those possessed with devils, nor that he filled himself with the diseases of those he healed. For Christ to have been touched with the feelings of our infirmities and tempted as we are, is no proof that he bare our sins in that way. None of those things are sin, neither are sorrows and griefs. Christ was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, but disease, temptation, and mortality did not make him a bearer of sin, sin in the first instance, became the cause of these things. The things referred to are the effect, and no one can ever make the effect the cause. To do so in the exposition of the truth, is a wresting of the Scriptures. Paul wrote to Timothy saying that he should study to show himself approved of God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth (2 Tim. 2:15). It is because of certain theories, that for some reason must be upheld, that the word of God has been perverted.

We shall now make a quotation from a pamphlet written by a Christadelphian, and published in 1908, that is in practical agreement with what we have written on the subject in this pamphlet.

"YET WITHOUT SIN" (Heb. 4:15)

Plain as is the teaching of Scripture concerning the physical nature of Jesus, and his kinship with us in the experience of temptation and suffering; it is equally clear in its assertion of his sinlessness, and the perfection of his obedience to the Divine will. There is no qualification in the terms employed, but they are as emphatic and unmistakable as language can well be. "Tempted in all points, yet without sin." "He was manifested," says John, "to take away sins; and in him was no sin" (1 John 3:5). The types under the law pointed to him as the Lamb of God, without blemish and without spot (1 Pet. 1:19); and the prophecy designated him as God's "Holy One," and the Most Holy (Psa. 16:10; Dan. 9:24). The writer of the epistle to the Hebrews describes him as "holy, guileless, undefiled, separated from sinners" (chap. 7:26), and declares that "through the eternal spirit he offered himself without spot to God" (Heb. 9:14), while Peter adds his testimony, that "he had no sin neither was guile found in his mouth" (1 Pet. 2:22). With these declarations we may join the words of Jesus himself, "Which of you convicteth me of sin?" (John 8:46). These are plain, indisputable testimonies, and yet they are sometimes so feebly held, that we have known expositors who, following from false premises what they considered to be logical conclusions, permitted themselves to declare that there was "sin in the flesh of Jesus," or that while sinless in his character, he was nevertheless a constitutional sinner.

We are aware that there are no intentional irreverence in these declarations, and to the minds of those who make them the chain of reasoning is supposed to be irrefutable. Writing, however, specially for those who are closely examining this subject for the first time, or for those who are willing to re-examine anew, we would emphasize the declarations concerning Christ's sinlessness which are quoted above, and we would point out that the apostles do not draw a theoretical distinction between Christ's character and Christ's constitution. They have not said that there was "sin in his flesh," or described him as a "Constitutional sinner," although one would have thought that obviously they would have done so if it was part of the essential truth they were commissioned to teach. In their writings concerning him, there is no reference to hereditary sin or original sin. There are non-scriptural, may we not even say, unscriptural expressions, and therefore to be avoided. Paul could say of himself, as we can of ourselves, "sin dwelleth in me," but it is not said of Christ, nay, rather is it emphatically excluded by the declaration of John, "In him is no sin"—no sin, inherited, innate nor acquired. The impulses which in us so often lead to sin are by metonoymy in our case, spoken of as "sin in the flesh"; but since with Christ they never led to sin, we submit that the metonymy cannot be applied in his case.

The plain, literal and repeated declarations of Christ's sinlessness, which are referred to above, must govern the interpretations of passages, which, in their absence, might be supposed to carry a contrary signification. We may say here by way of parenthesis, that we are not unmindful of the words of 1 Peter 2:24, that Christ "bare our sins in his body to the tree," and that some one might retort upon us with the question, how could he do this without there being "sin in the flesh," seeing that the body is flesh? A sufficient answer at this point is that the passage is a figurative representation of the effect of Christ's work, and that in any case it is "our sins" that he bore, not his own.

"THE HIGH PRIEST'S OFFERING, FIRST FOR HIS OWN SINS" (Heb. 7:26, 27)

The most prominent passage which is likely to occur to the mind in this connection is the one in the Epistle to the Hebrews, in which a parallel and a contrast are drawn between Jesus in his capacity of High Priest, and the high priests under the law, and where it is written (chap. 7:26); "For such a high priest became us, holy, harmless, undefiled, separated from sinners, and made higher than the heavens; who needeth not daily, like those high priests, to offer up sacrifices, first for his own sins, and then for the sins of the people; for this he did once for all, when he offered up himself."

Now, if this passage stood by itself, it would appear to imply that Jesus offered himself, not daily, but once for all, "first for his own sins, and then for the sins of the people." But the passage, as we have seen, does not stand alone; it must be interpreted in harmony with the statements that declare that "in him is no sin," indeed the same context speaks of him in contrast to the other priests as "holy, harmless, and undefiled."

In the first place, let it be observed that the type and the antitype, although having an intelligible conformity to each other, even as a shadow has a general resemblance to the think casting it (the law had a "shadow of good things to come"), often show a want of correspondence in some details This is strikingly so in the present instanhe. Reference to Leviticus 9th, discloses that the high priest had to make two distinct offerings—he had first to make his own sin offering, and his burnt offering as an atonement for himself, before he was qualified to present a sin offering on behalf of the people. And this process was constantly repeated. In the case of Jesus there was but one offering by one who himself "knew no sin," but who was made a sin offering for us. What the apostle appears to have before his mind is the contrast between the repeated offering of a sacrifice for sin under the law, and the one offering by which Christ perfected those who were sanctified (Heb. 10:14). "This he did once," then, we understand as meaning this thing, namely, offering for sin. He did this once for all; without it being necessarily implied that he offered first for his own sins.

But although he had no sins of his own to offer for, there was a sense in which this offering was for himself. God had appointed that as the high priest should enter into the holy of holies with blood, so Jesus in his capacity as High Priest, should also enter his presence with (or through) a shedding of blood. He had appointed that Christ should be perfected by suffering even unto death, and accordingly it is written in a perfectly true sense that "not through the blood of goats and calves, but through his own blood (he) entered in once for all into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption" (Heb. 9:12). Christ's offering was, therefore, for himself as well as for the people; but it was not for his sins. Christ, as we are, was in need of "eternal redemption"; he needed to be redeemed from the mortal flesh and blood condition, which he shared with us, and from the possession and dominion of sin— viewing sin as a personified power reigning unto death, through and by means of the mortal condition, which mankind, including Jesus, inherited from Adam. But we in addition to that need, under the divine ordinance, an offering for sins of our own commission.

DEATH OF CHRIST: CRUCIFIXION NOT NATRAL DEATH

It is to be distinctly borne in mind that when the Scriptures speak of the death of Christ, and ascribe certain results accrued to that death, they are results which are related to a supreme act of self-sacrifice,, and not to mere natural death. In the earlier part of these artictle we endeavored to show that Jesus, being of our nature, was mortal, and therefore in the ordinary course of nature, and apart from divine interference, would have died. The death, however, to which he was related as far as his nature was concerned, would have been a death from senile decay—full of years and honor. He was not by nature related to the death upon the cross. This was a special ordinance of God, and although it was wrought into the probation of Christ, and was made the avenue of his deliverance from mortality and the basis of his own exaltation to the highest glory, yet its main object was the provision of a sin offering for us, that is to say, for sins not his own. This is no mere deduction, but it is taught by the writings of the apostles with clearness which is beyond mistake. Paul speaks of the Lord Jesus as one who was "delivered up for our trespasses, and was raised for our justification" (Rom. 4:25). Writing to the Galatians, he says that Jesus Christ "gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us out of this present evil world, according to the will of our God and Father" (Gal. 1:4). We have already quoted 1 Cor. 15:3, which affirms that Christ "died for our sins according to the Scriptures." In Heb. 10, we read of our being sanctified by "the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all" (verse 10), and this act of Christ is further referred to as the offering of "one sacrifice for sins."

Peter says (1 Pet. 3:18), Christ "suffered for sins once; the righteous for the unrighteous, that he might bring us to God." "Our sins," it will be observed, are the subject of frequent mention in association with the death of Jesus; but there is no mention of his sins, for the more than sufficient reason that he had none. He died for sins "according to the Scriptures." Among the chief of those Scriptures is the prophecy of the Lord's servant in Isa 53. We there read of his being "wounded for our transgressions," "bruised for our iniquities," "the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and by his stripes we are healed. All we like sheep have gone astray, and have turned every one to his own way, and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all." "They made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death; although he had done no violence, neither was any deceit in his mouth. Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise him; he hath put him to grief; when his soul shall make an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand" (vs. 9, 10, R. V., margin).

GOLDEN TEXT: Job 19 25-27

A PRAYER

MY GOD accept my early vows,
  Like morning incense in the house;
And let my nightly worship rise,
  Sweet as the morning sacrifice.

Watch o'er my lips, and guard them, Lord,
  From every rash and heedless word;
Nor let my feet incline to tread
  The guilty path where sinners lead.

O may the righteous, when I stray,
  Smite and reprove my wandering way!
Their gentle words, like ointment shed,
  Shall never bruise, but cheer my head.

When I behold them pressed with grief,
  I'll cry to heaven for their relief;
And by my warm petitions prove
  How much I prize their grateful love.

A VISIT

WELL, YOUNG people, I am here again. Good news I bring to our little corner. We may have at least four more names on our contributors' page. Is not that the very best news ever ? And would you like me to introduce you to our contributors to be ? All right. First, we have Marie and Jennie Thomas. They are my little nieces, and two better girls it will be hard to find. They are two of a family of four children, another younger sister Helen whose name I expect to see some day soon with the others, and a wee brother. I know you all love music and you will be interested to know that these four of our young people are fine little musicians and singers. Marie, the oldest, plays the violin; Jennie, the mandolin; and Helen, the piano. The three instruments together make as nice music as anyone would like to hear. They also have very sweet voices, and when we gather round the organ Sunday nights to "sing praise unto the Lord" their voices mingle with the rest in praise and thanksgiving to their Maker.

I see in a recent copy of The Restitution that the Young People Society of Cleveland, Ohio, will be represented by Sister Alice Chappelle. I feel sure that we will have a great deal of pleasure and instruction from her contributions.

Another whose name I expect to see under our pledge is Sister Ashute of Troy, N. Y. She felt as I did at first, that she was too old for the "Young People's Page," but I hope she has decided differently by this time. Always remember Young People, that we may be old in years but at heart we can be as young as we wish. I think that as long as we possess "youthful hearts" we may be assured of a welcome in "The Young People's Page," no matter how old we may be in years. Am I right Editor ? (If we have grace with love, no matter how many birthdays we have celebrated, we always will be young. As an example look at Sister S. Roxana Wince, "Aunty Wince."—A. D. D.)

I wonder how many of you young people keep a scrap book ? I started one when I was nine years old and have added to it ever since, with the result that I now have a very interesting collection of good readings. I know you are wondering why I am telling you all about this. Well, one reason is because I thought perhaps I might induce some of you to start a "scrap book" of your own. Another is that as often as I can I shall send into our "page" original writings; but if anything should happen that I could not do so, then "Aunt Bess' Scrap Book" will come in handy and furnish you with something much better than she could possible do herself.

Last summer our "page" printed two very interesting articles sent in by Sister Marion Hawxhurst. I wonder if I can find her. She surely must be among us. Let me see; Floral Park, Long Island, N. Y. Ah, now I have found her. I just knew you were here. Marion, why have you not answered our call for help ? You have already demonstrated that you have talent in that line. Why wait or keep putting it off until another time ! We need your help ! Jesus needs your help ! Soon he will be here on earth, and if we wish to be with him when he comes, we must enter into his service now. Aunt Bess is anxious to see your name on the pledge. (Marion Hawxhurst is my niece. She is a good, sensible young lady, and a good writer. I know of nothing that would give me more pleasure than have her engaged with us in this work.—A. D. D.).

In California lives one of four young people, who I am sure could send us much interesting reading. Herschel Cripe believes "that Christ is coming back to reign on this earth, and souls do not go to heaven at death, for there is no such promise in the Bible." Come, Herschel, Can you tell us just why you believe this ? We all believe the same thing, but there may be some of us who do not know how to prove our belief. I know you could take the Bible and point out to us Scriptures that would show us why we believe these things and know them to be true. Try it, and if you succeed once, you can do so again by sending in your name to the Editor of "our page" as a special contributor. Always remember, young people, if we succeed in our small efforts, that all wisdom and blessings flow from God, and we must "give thanks always for all things, unto God and the Father, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ" (Eph. 5:20).

PLAIN LANGUAGE

PAUL IN describing the hope used "great plainness of speech" (2 Cor. 3:12), and he warned Titus to use "sound speech," and to the Corinthians said, "I will come to you shortly if the Lord will, and will know not the speech of them that are puffed up, but the power" (1 Cor. 4:19). We have listened to speakers that have used so many big words that an unlearned person needed a dictionary to understand the meaning of many. God's word can be taught in plain language.

It is said of Henry Ward Beecher that he experienced a change in his speech through a servant. He wondered why his Plymouth congregation seemed to lack interest in his sermons, and in studying the matter over wondered if he used language beyond the understanding of his hearers. To test the matter he read one of his sermons to this servant asking her if she understood it. She answered "No." Then rewriting it in more simple language he read it, to her again, asking if she understood it better. Her reply was, "Yes, Mr. Beecher, I understand some of it; but please 'plain' it a little more." So he again wrote in language that he used in speaking to little children. This time when he read it to his servant she understood it all. With fear and trembling he entered his pulpit and delivered that sermon, but was astonished at the rapt attention his congregation gave; and at its close his hearers gave him great praise. That was the cause of Beecher's popularity in after years.

We think there are many preachers that would do better if they would "plain" their sermons a little more.

Yours, for plainness of speech,

E. W. KNAPP.

BROOKLYN ALWAYS has been noted for its education and learning. The congregation of Plymouth (Beecher's) church was made up of Brooklyn's best educated, most learned and deepest thinking people. When somewhat younger that we now are, we took great delight in listening to Beecher preach. We were a great admirer of his style and fluency. Still we never remember of ever hearing him use a word that we did not understand. With Brother Knapp we feel that if greater plainness of speech was used the cause of God and his Christ would be greatly advanced.

WE NEVER heard Beecher preach a doctrinal sermon; he always spoke on good living, good morals, but always with sound sense. He never catered to the mob; he never was sensational. Talmage was just the reverse: he was comical in action and speech, and highly sensational. His congregation was mainly made up of strangers who came to be amused, and they received what they came for. One morning after he had preached an elaborate discourse I heard him say, "You think that a good sermon; so do I. But this morning I saw a woman preach a better one. She had a pail of ashes which she was sprinkling on the icy sidewalk so you and I would not fall. My sermon was words; hers was actions. Of the two, hers was by far the best."

GIDEON WAS ordered by God to destroy the sacred emblems of the idolatrous worship of his own people, and he did it even in the face of what seemed his own inevitable destruction because of his spiritual courage engendered by his faith.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS

THE FOLLOWING is from a little nine year old miss, Helen C. Thomas. I trust she will continue her story, answering her own question as to who this baby boy was also stating how, when he grew to manhood, God used him in performing many wonderful deeds made easy through the schooling he received through his foster mother, and how, in the end, he lost all through neglecting to give the honor and praise to almighty God in whose keeping he had been from birth.

THE BABY IN THE BASKET

LONG AGO there lived a wicked king who issued orders to kell every baby boy. When his mother heard this news she made a basket of bulrushes and spread pitch on it so it would not sink; then placing the baby in it she floated the basket on the river in a place where the king's daughter was in the habit of bathing. The princess soon came and seeing the floating basket she peeped in and saw the little baby boy.

The mother who owned the little baby was watching, and seeing how things were she sent her little girl to ask the princess if she wanted a nurse to take care of the baby, and if she did to come back and get the baby's own mother as the nurse. The king's daughter did want a nurse, so the little girl went to her mother who went to the princess and the baby's mother was hired to be the baby's nurse, and the mother never let on who she was, and so the mother and son were together until the baby grew to be a big man.

Can you tell who this baby boy was ?

THE TWO BOYS: WILL AND WONT

Will and Wont were two little boys
  Who lived in the land of Stir.
And if you'll listen I'll tell you all
  Just what kind of boys they were.

Will was very industrious.
  A boy who was fond of work;
But Wont was as lazy as could be
  A boy who always would shirk.

When Will was told to do a thing
  He did it without delay.
While Wont put off until tomorrow
  The work to be done today.

Will was a boy who had a smile
  For every one he knew.
And minded what his parents said
  And was good to his sister, too.

Wont was a boy who would stare and frown,
  To others he gave no joy.
And those who knew him best would say
  "There goes that ugly boy."

At last when they were aged men,
  Will had a fortune, and more,
He had the respect of all, but Wont
  Went begging from door to door. —Selected by Marie K. Thomas.

WHAT ARE YOU ?

A NOTED evangelist when in Brooklyn once said, "Some apparent Christians are like the dead oak tree with the ivy vine entwined about its branches. At a distance it appears to be one luxuriant growth, but a close examination reveals the fact that the ivy is merely a parasite of the once sturdy oak." Then he asked his listeners, "Are you a live oak, really in Christ, or are you an ivy just hoping ? Do you really belong to Christ ? Are you a Christian or only a church member ?"

The Restitution

A Paper Representing the Church of God, and Devoted to the Exposition and Defense of the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God and the Name of Jesus Christ.—Acts 8:12.

VOLUME 72 CLEVELAND, O., MARCH 2nd, 1920. NUMBER 9

A Picture

IN THE far away land of the Western Sun
Where the deer slips past when the day is done,
And the foes that he fears are asleep and a-dream
To bury his nose in the mountain stream;
Like sentinels true the mountains stand
As hedging and guarding this quiet land,
And the whispering pines, in their stately way
Wave friendly greetings across the way.

The grand old rocks that tower above
Speak of the strength of the Savior's love;
A quiet road comes winding down
From the upland far by the little town
To the shimmering lake by the side of the way,
Where a brook ripples past in the limpid play.
There's a spot of gold of beauty so rare
That no one could pass it with careless air.

No miracle here but a labor of love;
Of untiring hands that can mountains move,
A loving service of tenderest care
That mirrors itself in each blossom fair;
A low stone coping, a mass of bloom;
Clambering vines still seeking more room;
Rosebud and blossom in riotous glow
Speak of the treasure lies hidden below.

Flowers of purple and azure gold
Walls of beauty embrace and enfold
A pure white shaft, with a name thereon
That has borne the cross and will wear the crown;
Sweet and pure as the flowers her friends
Was the life she lived; and its memory lends
A paramount grace to the [illegible] so rare
Where, resting, lies one of "his jewels" fair

The above lines were written on February 8th, 1920, the anniversary of the death of my beloved Aunt, Mrs. H. M. Thomas, of Proctor, Montana. A slight tribute to the memory of one reverenced and beloved by all who knew her. Frances T. Chapman.

MOST IMPORTANT OF ALL

CHRIST, with surpassing power of condensation, compressed into one sentence the four commandments that relate to man's duty to his heavenly Father when he proclaimed: "Thou shalt love thy Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind." How many of us are thus loving God?

"Out of Darkness Into Light"

THE CONNECTION OF BAPTISM WITH CHRIST AS A SIN OFFERING

Paul says in Hebrews 10:22: "Having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water"; and in chapter 12:24 he says, "And to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel." In I Peter 1:2 we read, "Unto obedience, and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ." Paul says in Hebrews 9:22, "And without the shedding of blood there is no remission."

With this decree of God man will have to be satisfied; the question is how can the repentant sinner benefit by "the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel," even of forgiveness of sins. Peter shows that this blood of sprinkling, was the blood of Jesus Christ. By turning to Leviticus 16:15 we learn that the blood of the sin offering, that was for the people, was taken within the veil, in the Most Holy place, and there it was sprinkled upon the Mercy Seat, and before the Mercy Seat seven times. This was the evidence in the presence of God, who inhabited the Cherubim above the Mercy Seat, that a sin offering had been killed for the sins of the people, that atonement might be made for them (their sins covered), so that they might be forgiven, that is, that they might have remission for their sins, and not be put to death by the judgment of God. Now, in our day and generation, in the place of bringing the blood of a goat or bullock into the presence of God, we by faith bring "the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot" (1 Pet. 1:19). Christ is our Paschal lamb, "For even Christ our passover is sacrificed for us" (1 Cor. 5:7), and his blood sprinkled upon the door posts and lintels of our earthly tabernacles, in evidence so that the destroying angel will not enter therein. How is it done? How does the shed and sprinkled blood of Christ touch us? By a rite established for the Church of Christ by his own authority. That ritual is baptism. "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit" (Matt. 28:19). This is the explained name of Jesus: "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; he that believeth not shall be damned" (Mark 16:15, 16).

The ritualistic symbol of baptism is a figure of the sacrificial death burial, and resurrection of Jesus Christ. It is in baptism that the heart is sprinkled from an evil conscience (Heb. 10:22), and as Peter says, "which also after a true likeness doth now save you, even baptism, not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the interrogation of a good conscience toward God, through the resurrection of Jesus Christ" (I Pet. 3:21).

Paul in Romans 6:3-5 shows the connection that baptism has with the mode of Christ's death, and also its connection with the resurrection of Christ from the dead. "Know ye not, that as many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we should also walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection." We have already considered that the only kind of death that Christ died was that which represented "death as the wages of sin"; it becomes then quite appropriate that those who have earned such a death because of their sins that are past, that they should join themselves to such a death; this they can only do in figure and symbol, and yet be saved. Baptism accomplishes this for them, bringing about the confession of sins, and the suffering of the penalty due for sins, all of course by means of the symbolism founded upon an actual fact, the death of the Sinless Victim. This then secures forgiveness and remission of sins, by and because of the death of Christ. The wisdom of God not only saw fit that the death of the sacrificial victim should represent the death due to the transgressor by the transference of sin to it; but also that the sinner should be a partaker of such a death. Paul in 2 Cor. 5:14 says, "For the love of Christ constraineth us; because we thus judge, that one died for all, therefore all died." All died in symbol and figure with Christ to satisfy the penalty of violated law, and thus declare the justice and righteousness of God, for where there is no penalty for the transgression of law, there is no declaration of the righteousness of the law, and the author of it. Law without punishment for its transgression falls flat and does not uphold or declare the righteous provision in the law. This penalty by baptism into the death of Christ is symbolically satisfied by the one who is baptized. Paul says in Gal. 2:20, "I have been crucified with Christ." He also says in Col. 3:3, "For ye died, and your life is hid with Christ in God." "But if we died with Christ, we believe that we shall live with him" (Rom. 6:8). "For the death that he died he died unto sin once" (vs. 10). That is, he died unto or in obedience to the penalty of the law, he died a violent death. There is another truth connected with baptism that follows death, which is resurrection, and without which everything preceding would prove abortive. "Else what shall they do that are baptized for the dead? If the dead rise not at all, why then are they baptized for them" (1 Cor. 15:29). "We were buried therefore with him through baptism into death; that as Christ was raised from the dead through the glory of the Father, so we also might walk in newness of life. For if we have become united with him in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection" (Rom. 6:4, 5).

WHY WAS JESUS BAPTIZED OF JOHN?

Matt. 3:13, 16.

To sustain the doctrine of atonement for the inherited sin nature of Jesus the baptism of Jesus by John the Baptist is cited. The argument runs something like this: "Inasmuch as John's baptism was for the remission of sins (Mark 1:4), and as Jesus had no personal sins to be remitted when he was baptized by John, therefore it was for his 'sin in the flesh,' or 'sinful flesh' nature." Where is the remotest justification for such a conclusion in view of the fact that baptism was instituted for moral results and purification? With as much propriety could we ask the question, Why did Jesus celebrate the Passover, seeing that he was a Jew who had never sinned, and therefore needed not that the blood of the paschal lamb should be sprinkled upon the house in which he lived to save his life from the destroying angel? Remember that the blood of the Passover is mentioned only in connection with sins that can be remitted or forgiven; and that this is impossible with such sin as metaphorical "sin in the flesh," or "sinful flesh," both remaining in evidence so long as the forgiven saint lives. In Luke 22:15, 16, it says, "With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer." What caused such a desire? It is recorded in Psa. 69:9 that "the zeal of thine house hath eaten me up"; and in Isaiah 42:21, "He magnified the law, and made it honorable." Jesus was regarded by his own nation as an imposter and blasphemer, as the evidence of the New Testament clearly shows. John says, "He came unto his own and his own received him not"; and the Psalmist says, "The reproaches of them that reproached thee are fallen upon me"; and Isaiah says, "He is despised and rejected of men"; "Yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God and afflicted." As a Jew among Jews, how would he have been regarded had he not kept the ordinances of the law when his own people did not discern who he was? And as a Jew he was a citizen of the Commonwealth of Israel, and was obliged to observe its ordinances, or he would have been a transgressor, whether or not it was for the same specific reasons as for the ordinary Jew who was obliged to observe the Passover or suffer death according to the strict interpretation of the law. Just so was it in connection with his baptism; for from what both Matthew and Luke say, we are justified in believing that God commanded that the Jews should be baptized with the baptism of John for the remission of sins. Jesus as an obedient Jew would desire to obey this ordinance or ritual, even though he knew that he had committed no sins to be remitted. John recognized the fact that Jesus had no need to be baptized for the remission of his sins as other Jews had, for this is what is recorded: "But John forbade him, saying, I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me" (Matt. 3:14). "And Jesus answered and said unto him, Suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness. Then he suffered him" (verse 15).

13

Jesus was one of the "all Jews" and had he not been baptized there would have been one item of righteousness omitted that would have made him a sinner, for James says, "For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, is guilty of all" (chapter 2:10). Here are the Scriptures that cause us to believe that the baptism of John was a command to be obeyed. "Then went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan, and were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins" (Matt. 3:5, 6). "And all the people that heard him, and the publicans, justified God, being baptized with the baptism of John. But the pharisees and the lawyers rejected for themselves the counsel of God, being not baptized of him" (Luke 2:29, 30). The counsel of God is his law or command. Jesus did not put himself with these lawyers and pharisees, whom he on a certain occasion denounced and condemned. As Paul says that there is no remission without the shedding of blood (Heb. 9:22), and as John's baptism was for the remission of sins, it was quite appropriate that the one whose blood was to be shed for that object should be there present, and make a close connection with his coming death, by a figure and symbol of his own death; therefore, in connection with his baptism being an act of obedience to fulfill all righteousness, we do not think it would be doing harm to the Scriptures to suggest that he was baptized into his own coming death, as he said his blood was shed for many for the remission of sins (Matt. 26:29).

Allen D. Strickler.

The Hebrew Letter

ARTICLE SIX

THE TEN preceding chapters are complete in themselves, as they are conclusive evidence to show that the faith of Jewry was false, and therefore was of no value in the salvation of those possessing it. In the 11th chapter the apostle is careful and logical in defining the true faith which was the mainspring of the ancients from Abel down. This faith is defined of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen.

He further states that by it the elders obtained a good report. He then gives a list of those who had been faithful to the covenant made. Abel is the first witness cited and the character of the faith defined. The writer shows that Abel had faith in the promise made to the woman (Gen. 3:15). His offering identified the true faith. It pointed forward to the one great sacrifice that would take the place of animal sacrifices. The result of his obedience in offering his sacrifice was more excellent than that of Cain. Through its acceptance he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts. Abel is a true type of those preceding and following the death of Jesus the Christ. All must be counted righteous through faith in the Christ. He must be identified through scriptural witnesses. It must be shown that the testimony of Jesus is the Spirit or life of prophecy. He must be seen as the seed of Abraham and heir to the land promised to his father. Further he must be accepted as the son of David, the son of Jesse, and the heir to his kingdom. Without these things, our faith is void. Through them we are counted righteous and heirs to the promises. Enoch was counted righteous because he walked with God, and was not, because God took him. Noah, through faith, built the ark to the saving of his house. He condemned the world and became heir of the righteousness which is of faith. Abraham is credited with having obeyed when called. He left his home country, not knowing where he was to go. He had no promise of an immediate inheritance, but looked for a better country. He sojourned in this land of promise with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise. He looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God.

This chapter reaches the summit of the apostle's argument. We have this peculiar faith not only defined (verse 4), but is further exemplified by the acts from Abel down. Each of these had the test presented in a different manner. Each was accompanied by different acts, but bringing the same result, viz., They were counted righteous by their faith. Each kept in mind the character of this faith. It was things hoped for, a conviction of unseen things. These unseen things are eternal. This thought is emphasized by the author's statement in verse three. In faith we perceive that the ages have been so thoroughly adjusted by God's command that, not from things then manifest, the things now seen have come to pass. Jehovah adjusted the ages in his purpose concerning the earth and man. They were so thoroughly adjusted that the acts of man could not change them. This is plainly seen in "As surely as the Lord liveth he will fill the earth with his glory." It is further stated that the earth was made to be inhabited. Again, Peter states that the earth is to be filled with a righteous race. This is the fulfilment of Jehovah's purpose. Sin may reign for a season but in the end it will be destroyed.

We spoke of the different manifestations of this peculiar faith. This is peculiarly exhibited in Abraham and Moses. The former was isolated in the land of promise, and led at each step to do God's will. As he advanced in his trial period his disappointments were supplied by the promise of a future inheritance of the land. In Ishmael's rejection the seed was to be counted through Isaac, Sarah's own son, a much more worthy character. Ishmael was begotten and conceived of the flesh. Isaac was a child of promise. It is written, "In faith Sarah received strength to conceive a son when she was past age, because she judged him faithful who promised." When Abraham was called to offer Isaac he obeyed, not doubting. It is written that Abraham received Isaac in a figure. God delivered Isaac from being slain because of his father's unwavering faith. It was announced by the angel, "I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son from me." Abraham's richest blessing followed this act: "Thy seed shall possess the gates of his enemies, and in thy seed shall all the nations be blessed." Paul in Gal. 3:16 states that his seed is Jesus the Christ.

We shall speak of one more example of this peculiar faith. Moses by faith, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharoah's daughter. He chose to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. He refused the crown and the Egyptian throne, esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt. The peculiar faith is expressed in "the reproach of Christ was great riches." Further, "he had respect unto the recompense of rewards." The unseen things revealed through faith were to Moses the great reward.

Remarks

THE MONTH of January has, like many others, its quota of trials; but the cause of rejoicing far outweighs the trials. For the present sorrows and misgivings are not to be compared to the glory that is to be revealed in us. So let us think as lightly of our trials as possible. Some we know take them more serious than others, just as sick people do. Some when ailing a little groan and think they are going to die, while others who are really sick, make no demonstrations, are hopeful and expecting to get well.

So in the church: trials have so much more affect on some than others. Some are always magnifying their trials and telling us how much greater they are than any one else, when, perhaps, they are small compared to even the one they are talking to. Jesus never complained about what the Father imposed on him. Did not Paul glory in tribulations? God knows just what trials it takes to fit us for the kingdom of God. He does not put these trials on us to see how we will act, or because he wishes to afflict us; no, they are for our good, and until we know this, and view them as such, we will go on complaining, which is displeasing to our heavenly Father who loves us, and will never impose more upon us than we can bear. Did you ever notice when you are in trouble and go to God in prayer and trustfulness, that soon something came to make you rejoice and forget your trouble? As children, we know the Father can supply all our wants, and will give us what is best, may be not all we want, but all we need. How cheerful we ought to be.

You remember when I reported my trip to Buckhart, Mo., I stopped off at Kansas City and spoke three evenings, and some of the people who attended my first meeting were there, Sister Whitten being one. Her youngest daughter, Mrs. Lillie Gooch, was the only one in the family I had not baptized. After I left she decided to go to Oklahoma to live, and wished to take the Lord with her, and rejoice in hope, so wrote me to return and baptise her. So on the 7th I started arriving the next morning. Over 20 years ago Bother Whitten moved to Walcott, Kan., near Kansas City, and during one of my visits to the old congregation, where he was one of my first converts, he asked me to come there and hold a meeting, and the result was three men were baptized. Brother Medley and Brother Thorp still live there; and now Brother Whitton's daughter has moved there. She was but a small girl at the time of my visit mentioned above. So it was decided to hold the meeting there. The school house I spoke in before, had been moved across the street to be used as a place for meeting. So here I was after the lapse of years standing in the same building talking to the same people. I found Brothers Medley and Thorp had not been idle; they had talked the truth and stood by it through many an onslaught. At first but few came, but the interest increased.

In a late report you remember I told you a little history was some times necessary in order for you to understand some of my reports, and this is one of those places. Twenty-six years ago tomorrow, or February 4th, 1894, in St. Paul, Neb., I baptized Sister Emma Fugate, and her niece. At the time her sister Addie was staying with her going to school. The next year they moved to Belton, Mo., and I never saw them for twenty-four years. Two years ago I went to Kansas City and found these two living in the same house, Addie being now married. She again attended the meeting, but did not yet see the necessity of pulling away from error, and standing out for the truth. But all these years Sister Fugate had stood firm as a rock, and pleaded with "Addie," as we all call her; and now comes the part all my readers are interested in.

When I go to Kansas City or near there I always let Sister Fugate know, so if possible she can attend the meeting. So when I got started in the meeting I made my home with Brother Medley. After a few days one evening Brother Medley came to the sitting room door and said, "Some one wishes to see you." Judge my surprise to find Addie and her older sister whom I had never met before. Sister Fugate had been all these years teaching these sisters, and now they told me they were there for any further instruction needed, and to be baptized. The Sunday before Sister Gooch, the last member of the Whitton family said she wished to wait no longer, so in the baptistry of the Advent Church in Cheasley Park she was buried with Christ. Sister Gooch is an active worker, and will always stand for the truth. Then comes these two sisters sixty miles to be buried in the likeness of Chris't death. Think of Sister Fugate's rejoicing when after these years of waiting she knows them to be safe in Christ. Addie was compelled after baptism to return home, but Sister Lawrence remained for three meetings, but on her arrival home found Sister Fugate just staring to come, so she set her house in order and came back. I wish the household of faith could know these faithful sisters. In the meantime, others had expressed a desire to leave the associates of darkness, and come into the full light of God's truth.

After closing at Wolcott, I went by invitation to the Advent Christian Church in Kansas City, Kan.; and it was here we baptized these last mentioned. In my October report I told about stopping in Kansas City and finding Brother Si Herren's brother, and his daughter being interested; so this time two of them came, bright young ladies and so earnest. I know the angels rejoiced to see them. On Sunday we had an all-day meeting, and the result was Monday we had to meet again and baptize three more. Sister Morgan, another active earnest worker, the daughter of Brother and Sister Carpenter. I baptized Sister Carpenter when she was a small girl. They have been readers of The Restitution for many years. At the close of my meetings I went to visit our old standby Sister Calkins, who got me into my first series of meetings thirty-three years ago. Sisters Fugate and Lawrence were there, and I took the flu, or at least the prevailing sickness. I got so hoarse I could hardly speak. Sister Fugate is a trained nurse, and Sisters Lawrence and Calkins not far behind. So by their ministration I soon regained my strength. I thought of what Jesus had said, you shall have more fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters. I pray our heavenly Father if these sisters ever need help, they may fall into just as kindly hands. On Sunday I hardly knew whether I could speak or not, but I said I will trust in God for strength, as some were coming from a distance. So I spoke three times and had three additions, and felt better when through, than when I began. I knew God had heard and answered my prayer. The month's work was finished. I went to Brother Herren's in the evening; a few came in and I talked to them till train time.

I feel there is more to be done here. We know God directs his work. Tuesday morning I arrived home, found all moderately well, and am now getting ready for the next month's work. Brethren, pray for the success of the cause.

Almus Adams.

Remember the Helping Fund

Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble—in the day of evil, margin (Psa. 41:1).

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Editorial

All enquiries with editorial responses are now being published without the writer's name. Many reasons might be given in explanation of this change in our policy. Suffice it to say that many brethren ask information on points without committing themselves to the doctrine which the question suggests, yet more than once readers have gotten the impression that the interrogator believed what he only asked about. Again, some espouse a theory in sincerity, are sure they can vindicate the truth of it, and then if editorial strictures demolish it, they have a feeling of resentment because they feel publicly criticised. If the inquirer's name had not appeared no personal antagonism would have been incited. Others again are deterred from coming to us with their scriptural difficulties from the dread of publicity. We believe our readers are interested in the questions submitted, and not in the persons who ask them. We therefore ask them to come to us with their difficulties assuring them that henceforth all their inquiries will be treated confidentially.

The regular meeting of the Young People's Society was held Friday evening, Feb., 13, at the home of Brother and Sister Novy. A new amendment to the Constitution was voted upon and passed. The acting corresponding secretary reported having sent out seven letters and receiving one. The religious meeting was conducted by Brother Harry Titman and Brother Lawrence Gibbs. The subject was a debate on the doctrine of the Trinity the question being worded as follows: "Resolved: That there are three persons in the God-head." The affirmative was upheld by Lawrence Gibbs and the negative by Harry Titman. Needless to say that the arguments of the affirmative were simply swept away in the face of the overwhelming arguments of the exponent of the truth. However, the debate served its purpose, which was to show the members the views of the Trinitarians and above all, how they might successfully disprove their arguments.

Caught Napping, Baptized

COLONEL CODY was baptized into the Catholic Church the night before he died. Mrs. L. E. Decker, his sister, announced today. Colonel Cody had been a Christian all his life, she said, and, although he belonged to no denomination formally, was very devout.

He was baptized, she stated, because the mother of Colonel Cody and his sisters died when they were very young, and they were not sure at this time, that he ever had been baptized. The Catholic Church was chosen at the request of his wife, who is of that faith.

Colonel Cody was unconscious when the baptism took place, and no attempt was made to rouse him, because Mrs. Decker said, "we were sure it was what he would have wanted had he been awake, but we feared he would not become conscious enough to realize what was being done before he passed away.--Selected by F. The Baptism of Children

Dear Brother Huggins:

I HAVE three little grandchildren, aged about nine, eleven, and thirteen years respectively who earnestly and persistently desire baptism. I hesitate to comply with their request lest I confer a ceremony that would not be valid in the sight of God. Will you please let me know what you would consider an age of responsibility in a child of normal intelligence: and in your church what rule do you follow when children apply for membership? An early reply will oblige,

Your brother in the Lord.

Editorial Comments

THERE IS not and cannot be "an age of responsibility." Responsibility is a question of knowledge; and age has but little to do with knowledge. "He that believeth" (the gospel) is the condition in the premise. "What hindereth me to be baptized?" is a question that is answered in these words: "Thou mayest, if thou believest with all thine heart." The question, then, is not of age but understanding and belief. Let us not despise youth. "Out of the mouth of babes and suckling thou hast perfect praise." Jesus was "about his Father's business" when only twelve years old; why should not your granddaughters likewise give God "perfect praise" at their age; and who dare to hinder them? Our custom here is to instruct the children in the truth from the first glimmerings of consciousness; drill them in "Bible Lessons on First Principles" constantly; and baptize them when they acquire sufficient knowledge and express the desire, without considering their age. Neither youth nor age disqualify for the service of God.

"O Lord"

Are not Thine Eyes upon the Truth?"--Jeremiah 5: 3

Dear ---------- ---:

THIS LETTER is written in reply to a letter dated Nov. 29, 1919, and which purports to be an official answer to our former communication.* While you may have authorized the writer to send this letter, you probably have not read it yourself. Be that as it may, we opine you will be loath to endorse its sentiments after a thoughtful reading. The letter is on file in our study, and is subject to your inspection any time you may find it convenient to call.

A PAINFUL SURPRISE

In many respects the letter will be a painful surprise to you. To our personal knowledge for ten years you, whom the communication pretends to represent, have claimed that we were "narrow," personal, and mean, while you posed as "broad," magnanimous, and spiritual. It must be humiliating to you that a public document like this letter should now be sent out, for which you are sponsor, showing that just the reverse of what you have claimed is the truth. In our former letter we disowned all personal feeling and invited you back to our fold and shepherd care upon the sole condition that you accept the gospel. To this brotherly epistle, so biblical in its only condition imposed, you now respond in a voluminous letter in which there is not a text of Scripture quoted, or a Bible thought expressed. Its phraseology betrays the fact that it was begotten and born in a lawyer's office instead of a pastor's study. And as to the gospel, about which we asked you to express your faith, the letter shys away from it like a Methodist circuit rider. Like a child when reprimanded for some fault, you artfully try to "change the subject."

"OPEN COMMUNION" ABANDONED

In evading committal on the gospel you have unconsciously sacrificed the doctrine of open communion, as we shall presently see. Rejecting the truth because of the personal weaknesses and sins of believers is a threadbare subterfuge, and is as old as Cain. In the past you have tried to justify the "broadness" of indiscriminate communion by distorting a Scripture which says, "Let a man examine himself, and so let him eat." On this ground you have plead that the church had no authority to say who shall commune; that, you claimed, must be left to the communicant himself. Allowing, then, that we are as bad as you say, you cannot exclude us from fellowship without abandoning open communion! You cannot maintain this "broad" principle of fellowship and at the same time excommunicate us, even if we are deceivers as you charge! The moment you refuse our fellowship on any pretext whatever--no matter what crime we may be guilty of-- open communion is repudiated and close communion avowed! If "let a man examine himself" applies to a Baptist, why does it not apply to us? Does personal offence make the difference? Is sinning against you worse than sinning against God? If we are guilty of all you charge against us, how does that justify you in evading a confession of the gospel? We are commanded to confess the truth "before men," bad as they are (Matt. 10:32); and Christ witnessed a good confession before Pontius Pilate, rascal though he was (1 Tim. 6:13, 14). Are you "ashamed of the gospel" (Rom. 1:16) because we are bad? What kind of gospel is it that hides behind personalities? God's eyes are upon the truth; yours are upon self; we are seeking the things of Jesus Christ; you are wholly absorbed in things your own (Phil. 2:21). Parading personalities smells of egotism and is always bad taste. But to exalt them above, and to put them before, the gospel, and then demand their adjustment, gospel or no gospel, is surely a new thing under the sun (Eccl. 1:9).

CHRIST'S LAW OF OFFENCES DENIED

The seriousness of an offence depends upon the dignity of the person sinned against. Perhaps this is why, in this case, personal offences are rated higher than the gospel. However this may be, the plan proposed to effect reconciliation shows great ignorance of the law of Christ. That law reads:

> If thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: . . . . but if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established. And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it to the church: but if he will not hear the church, let him be unto thee as a heathen man and publican (Matt. 18:15-17).

This is Christ's law concerning personal offences. It requires nothing of the offender: all its mandates relate to the offended. He is told exactly what to do. Now in the present case we are the offenders, and you are the offended. We have nothing to do; you have everything to do. Have you done the things which Christ requires? No, although you have been exhorted by a third admonition to obey. Do you, repentant now, propose to obey the law of Christ? No, indeed; you supercede that law by one of your own devising. When "wilt thou cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord?" (Acts 13:10). If you had accepted "Our Confession of Faith," fellowship relations would have been assumed immediately, and then all personal offences could have been reconciled according to the law of Christ. A church only has jurisdiction over its own members. You are not members of our church, and we are not members of yours. Neither one, therefore, has jurisdiction over the other. Adjustment of personal offences is impossible where there are no fellowship relations. Your criminal charges against one of our Elders is a direct violation of 1 Tim. 6:1 and Matt. 18:15-17. We positively refuse to hear, much less to consider, evil reports against any member of our church which comes from the gossip shops of an unfriendly world.

*The "former communication" here referred to was published in The Restitution Oct. 28, 1919, page 174.

"FARE YE WELL"

We call heaven and earth to record that we have done what we could in your behalf. Having shown no disposition to "endure sound doctrine" (2 Tim. 4:3), but a decided tendency to "put it from you" (Acts 13:46); having shown no desire to "contend for the faith" (Jude 3), but rather to cover it with a bushel of personalities, exalting persons above doctrine, we are under the painful necessity of turning our attention to those who "will hear it" (Acts 28:28). Time is too precious to waste in personal wrangles with a people who are as creedless as the Campbellites. Life is short; time is fleeing; the coming of Christ hastens greatly. However, should interest prompt you to reply to this letter we shall welcome individual responses as reciprocating our courtesy of personal address.

"Fare ye well" (Acts 15:29).

Communications

They spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened.—Mal. 3:16.

DEAR BRETHREN:

I WOULD be glad if you would bring the following thoughts before your readers, re latter statements of verses 3 and 5 of James 5th chapter, called to our minds by our son's study of this chapter. "Ye have heaped treasures together for the last days:" "Ye have nourished your hearts as in a day of slaughter." All reliable scriptural signs prove to us that we are living in the last days. The world has witnessed and just passed through the greatest slaughter of history, as affecting the whole world more or less. It is a fact that during this period the rich have become enormously richer, and many erstwhile rich have become millionaires over night, so to speak. With these thoughts in mind, read again the two passages quoted, but according to the readings of Rotherham, the Revised Version, and Emphatic Diaglott (latter interlinear reading)—"Ye have heaped treasures together in the last days;" "Ye have nourished your hearts in a day of slaughter" ("as" omitted), thus stating hundreds of years ago exactly what has occurred within the past past five years. Then seventh verse, "Be patient therefore brethren unto the coming of the Lord;" eighth verse, "For the coming of the Lord draweth nigh."

The above thoughts will doubtless be as refreshing to you as they were to us.

Sincerely yours,

H. DICKEL AND FAMILY.

DEAR BROTHER HUGGINS:

EARLY LAST fall and again recently while in Kansas City, Kansas, I was invited to speak in the Advent Christian Church. They kept insisting that we were so near alike we should work together. The fact was I had talked on prophecy and the kingdom and coming of Christ—all themes on which we are practically one. But if I had talked on some other themes I wonder if they would still insist we were so near alike? Finally, I suggested this: Is there any common ground upon which all who believe in conditional immortality can meet and work together? He thought there was, and suggested we each write to our church papers and start the matter, and see what would come of it.

Now I suggest we discuss this question through The Restitution, and if any of you wish you can write me direct. But if it is talked through the paper all can see and know what is being said. It is a question that concerns the whole body.

In discussing the question, let us keep in the spirit and observe these rules:

1st. Several bodies of people believe we are mortal. Upon that point we are all one.

2nd. These same bodies of people believe in the resurrection of the literal dead. Upon that we are agreed.

3rd. These same people all believe in the second coming of Jesus. Upon this point there is no chance for discussion; we all believe alike.

The chance for discussion on the second point is so remote we can put that by as practically settled.

The third point would, in all probability, provoke some discussion. But let us keep this in mind: we all believe in Jesus' personal return. What he does when he returns is where the difference arises. Now this is the vital question, so far as unity is concerned: can we leave that for that time, or must that be settled and believed now? The question is: can we preach the second coming of Christ and say nothing about what he is to do when he comes?

I am not discussing the question: I am only trying to get it before us in a way to be discussed intelligently. I just received a letter from the minister referred to above, and he said he had written to their paper, "Our Hope," and had had two responses; one from a man I am well acquainted with; the other he says he thinks is a Russellite. This is the first surprise in the move. But here I quit, asking the brethren to take it up at once and let us see what the final result will be.

Yours for unity on vital truths,

ALMUS ADAMS.

Obituary

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.—Psa. 116:15.

Mrs. Le'ah Orr-Jones, daughter of Austin and Anna Orr, was born July 11th, 1886, near Scircleville, Indiana. She was reared to womanhood on the farm and received the usual common school education.

She was married to Edward E. Jones, September 1st, 1906, and became the mother of two children, Joseph Austin and Martha Maxine. They lived on the farm for eight years and have lived in Frankfort since.

She died at her home, 354 S. Alhambra Street, February 16th, 1920. Her mother had preceded her in death when she was eight years old. She leaves her husband and two children of her own household, her father and step-mother, Mr. and Mrs. Austin Orr, her aged grandfather, Nathan Orr, and many other relatives to remember her life of merit and worth.

She was a woman of more than ordinary intelligence and was held in high esteem by her friends and neighbors. She had heard the gospel message taught and believed in Jesus as the Savior, and had it in her heart to yield herself in obedience to the Master's call, and so expressed herself to the writer very recently. She had enrolled as a member of the Indiana Berean Home Class Bible Study that she and her husband might more perfectly know the Scriptures and our duties in accord with their teachings, but the enemy, death, has cut her course short. We can only lift our eyes to the courts of heaven and say, "Thy will be done."

Funeral services were held at the St. Paul M. E. Church, in the neighborhood of her childhood on Wednesday, February 18th, at 2 o'clock, conducted by the writer. The house was filled by her old time friends and associates in respect to her memory. Burial was made in the adjacent cemetery.

GOLDEN TEXT: Isaiah 48:10

IN THE CRUCIBLE

OUT FROM the mine and the darkness,
  Out from the damp and the mould,
Out from the fiery furnace,
  Cometh each grain of gold,
Crushed into atoms and leveled
  Down to the humblest dust,
With never a heart to pity,
  With never a hand to trust.

Molten and hammered and beaten,
  Seemeth it ne'er to be done,
Oh! for such fiery trial,
  What hath the poor gold done?
Oh! 'twere a mercy to leave it
  Down in the damp and the mould:
If this is glory of living,
  Then better be dross than gold.

  Under the press and the roller,
  Into the jaws of the mint,
Stamped with the emblem of freedom
  With never a flaw or dint;
Oh! what a joy the refining
  Out of the damp and the mould!
And stamped with a glorious image
  Oh, beautiful coin of gold. —Selected by G. W. Alexander.

SOMETHING FOR YOUR BENEFIT

Brother J. S. Lyon, of Citronville, Alabama, has written us a long letter—full eight times as long as the one he has written you—telling us of himself, his family, his surrounding, and going into great detail as to his methods and plans concerning this great offer he now makes you and which, if you accept, will be of so much benefit to you, and at the same time give him a great deal of extra work.

Brother Lyon in offering his services is purely unselfish: he has but one motive, and that the benefit of youth to the glory of God. He wishes you to get better acquainted with God and with his Christ. He wants you to know your Bible better. He is desirous that you become better acquainted with each other. I am sure you are one with him in all these things, that you will read his appeal with care, and that you will write him just the sort of letter he asks you to. Then, having done this, you will see what it means to you. Write him today.

THE APPEAL

DEAR YOUNG PEOPLE:

THROUGH THE kindness and permission of Brother Donaldson we are in this way introducing ourselves to you. I am sure all are glad to have three more young folks added to the household of faith. We need all we can get to carry on the Lord's work as the older ones fall asleep. I often wonder how many young people there are altogether in the church. The new ones are my children, Malville, aged 20, attending the University of Alabama, Dorothy and Margaret, aged 18 and 15, high school students in the senior and sophomore classes.

Now we want very much to become acquainted with the others in the church, and have this proposition to make to you: If you will send me a nice long letter telling interesting things about yourself, home, and church, I will promise that you will receive ten letters from the other young folks of your own age. Does that not sound tempting? Write right away, and don't forget to tell your age.

J. S. LYON,
CITRONEVILLE, ALA.

ALL FOR GOOD

THERE ARE ninety and nine blessings in most lives to one misfortune where good health, intelligence, integrity, commonsense and energy exist.

Looking at the bright side of life and doing one's best is half of life's battle.

Impatience, procrastination, and idleness are the chief causes of drifting into misfortune, of getting into the quicksands of trouble instead of landing in the snug harbor of peace and rest.

The burdens of life considerably lighten when we face them manfully. Every fibre of one's being must be interwoven and work in full harmony if we wish to meet with success in our occupations.

To have the disappointment of a door shut in front of us is something, but not everything. Many a time to be stopped and forced to take another road has turned out to one's great advantage.

It is a good thing to know, to realize "that all things work together for good to them that love God," to have reached the height, to know and understand that some seeming misfortunes really are blessings brings us near to God indeed.

ECCLESIASTES 9.10

WE SEEK him everywhere
  Amid the throng.
We've sought here and there
  And sought him long,
Hoping among the mob
  He'll chance to dwell—
The man who knows his job
  And does it well!

We know of labor's need,
  Nor hold them light,
But oh the man who knows
  His business right!
Workman, or cop, or clerk
  He makes a hit,
The man who knows his work
  And tends to it!

The world has constant use
  For men like this,
Who's works not fast and loose
  And hit or miss.
It seeks, with heart athrob,
  Where he may dwell
The man who knows his job
  And does it well.

IN THE CRUCIBLE

THE POEM that heads our department today deals with the precious metal, gold. It might interest you to know that during 1915 the world's output of gold was a little over 23,000,000 ounces, every grain of which had to go through the crucible of fire to have any value. Gold is used quite extensively, and those having a great abundance of it are considered rich. As a word "gold" signifies richness in the things of this world.

Did you ever see gold as it came from the mine? With but a very small percentage it all has to be "molten and hammered and beaten." In its natural state it is far different from that which we see, "stamped with the emblem of freedom," "Oh beautiful coin of gold." Surely the refining—separating the dross from the gold—is what gives it its value and makes it desirable.

In many places the Bible speaks about gold. Read the 19th Psalm and see there what value David puts upon it as compared to those things we receive by serving the ever living God.

Then Peter in his first epistle, first chapter, has recorded some exceedingly precious thoughts concerning our "hope" and "inheritance reserved in heaven for us, who are kept by the power of God through faith"; and in the 7th verse he writes, "That the trial of your faith being much more precious than gold that perisheth though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ." Previous to this the apostle speaks of "manifold temptations," which is the trial of faith mentioned. We want you to read this entire chapter and see for yourself with what we have been redeemed and the outcome of that redemption. Always remember "The word of the Lord endureth forever."

To make gold pure it is put through the crucible: to make the Christian pure he too must go under the crucible of affliction. He must "suffer for Christ." No stone can be polished without a lot of chiseling and rubbing. No metal can be pure without refining, and no Christian can be pure without suffering. Read Heb. 7:1-11, noting carefully verses two and six, and ask yourself this question, "Am I better than my Lord?" Then knowing why trials and temptations come our way, let us ask God for strength to overcome them, that strength that cometh through having a strong, unswerving faith in Jesus as "the Christ, the Son of God" our Redeemer, realizing that each time we overcome we are purer, more Christ like, more pleasing to God.

THE RICHES OF THE WORLD AND THE RICHES OF GOD—A CONTRAST

JOHN IN his Revelation, 3:14-20, is writing to "The angel of the church of the Laodiceans." brings out in strong contrast the difference between those make-believe Christians who trust in the riches of this world and not knowing that they are in want in all things, and those real Christians who have the real riches—gold—of faith, and are covered with the white raiment of the perfection of Jesus.

Read it for yourself and decide as to which class you wish to belong, knowing that to him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne.

A CONFESSION OF FAITH

THIS LETTER is all the way from Corvallis, Oregon. It was written by Miss Gladys Barber. You will notice she is but 13 years old. When children of such tender years write the letters they do, it casts great credit on their parents, for the home influence must be of the very best.

THE LETTER

I AM writing a line for our page. I wonder if Mary Lee is away on a visit. Perhaps she will write a letter soon.

I am 13 years old and a true believer in the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ. I adore and love him who first loved me, and gave his life that we might live. I want to be worthy of a place in that new city when he comes.

I hope some of the other girls will write soon. I expect they will do better than I have. Now if I have made any mistakes I think our Editor will correct them for me; don't you think he will?

I will try and do better next time. We must do all the glory of God and Jesus our Savior, and he will be pleased with us when he comes. Love to all.

The Editor has not made any corrections or alterations. The letter appears just as it was written. Our opinion is that a better letter, or a better confession of faith never appeared in The Restitution, no matter who the writer, their age, or the amount of space occupied. We hope to hear from Gladys again.

SIGN POSTS

THE MAXIMS preached to his employees by a prominent manufacturer, who has made a pronounced success in a business where the failures are uncommonly high, are guideposts to success in any line of endeavor. Here are a few of the flash lights:

"Even a fool can be about right. It's your business to be dead right!"

"Do your work a little better than anyone else and you need not look for favors. They will chase you."

"Don't swallow any man's 'say so.' Use your brains. Don't let the other man do your thinking. If you do, he'll get paid for it—not you."

"Tell the truth, if it leads you out of the window. It is better to go out yourself than to be kicked out."

"Learn to see the good in things; look for the good in people. Study the strong points of your house."

"Learn to do things without being told! Be first to catch your own errors—if you make them. Be first to see an opportunity, an improvement, an idea, a better way. Demand touch of yourself—and get much."

"If you say you will be there, be there. If you say your will do a thing—do it. Do not make an appointment unless you are sure you will be on time and then regard your word as sacred, and be there—on the dot.—Sel. by J. F. Hogarth.

KEEP YOUR minds so filled with truth and love that sin, disease, and death cannot enter in. It is plain that nothing can be added to the mind already full. There is no door through which evil can enter, and no space for evil to fill in a mind filled with goodness. Good thoughts are an impervious armor; clad therewith you are completely shielded from the attacks of error of every sort. And not only yourself are safe, but all whom your thoughts rest upon are thereby benefited.

It is the evil thinker who injures himself with what he would have harmed others. Good involuntarily resists evil. The evil thinker takes his own dose and dies of his own physic. The right thinker is safe, and abides under the shadow of the Almighty. His thoughts can only reflect peace, goodwill, health and holiness.

Let us all try to be good pure thinkers.—Selected by Georgia Gazeley.

The Cup of Blessing

1 COR. 10:16, 17

IT IS the cup, though it be the juice of many grapes, even as it is one loaf, though it be many grains. The grains cannot maintain their individuality and their own life if they would become bread for others: the grapes cannot maintain themselves as grapes if they would constitute the life giving spirit. Then we see the beauty of the apostle's statement that the Lord's people are participants in the one loaf and cup. There is no other way that we can attain the nature than by accepting the Lord's invitation of his cup and be broken with him as members of the one loaf, and to be buried with him in baptism unto death, and thus to attain with him resurrection glory, honor, and immortality (John 6:53). Gladly, Lord, we can appropriate to our necessities the merit of thy pure nature sacrificed for us for our justification. Gladly, too, we will partake of the cup of suffering with thee, realizing it to be a blessed privilege to suffer with thee. And we know that the time is near at hand when in the everlasting kingdom of the future we may live with thee and be like thee and share thy love and thy glory, as thy bride. Oh, brothers and sisters, that we may be faithful, not only in the performance of the symbol, but also the reality. Blessed Lord, we hear thy word saying, "Ye shall indeed drink of my cup, and be baptized with my baptism." Lord, we are not of ourselves able thus to sacrifice, but thy grace is sufficient for us, for we are wholly thine now and forever.

Brother Recker.

Israel in History and Prophecy

IT IS stated by H. L. Hastings in one of his Anti-Infidel tracts that a certain man was once asked, "Do you know a word that would state a fact that would prove the inspiration of the Bible?" The answer was, "Israel." Why would this word state so much? Turn it over in your mind a few times and see what it suggests. Do you not see a very small people wandering the hills of Palestine watching after their flocks? This same small people wending their way into Egypt as a hungry, food seeking family? In Egypt we see them increasing in numbers; but wearing the yoke of servitude. Later we see them wending their way back to the rugged, forsaken hills. We can hear the rumblings of the distant thunders of Sinai, the voice of God proclaiming among other things, "Thou shalt have no other gods beside me." We watch with interest the progress of their homeward journey, and see them as they fall by the thousands; but God's plans are worked out with them by the rising and more faithful generations. Even their leader and law giver is not permitted after viewing the land, to enter. But faithful Joshua leads them onward over the Jordan, into province after province, and city after city till they have become possessors of their own promised, and long hoped for home.

But even here they could not be kept in harmony with heaven-given law; they were disobedient children. They made unto themselves new gods: instead of falling prostrate before, and worshipping their own true God, they worshipped idols. Some, no doubt, ever remained faithful. They, when as a people of world wide fame and great prosperity, were worshipping God; but on the other hand, when they went after false gods they were a down trodden and afflicted people. The surrounding nations were used as God's chastening rod to chastize them for their wickedness; but still only a remnant was induced to hold on to the heaven-given precepts that had made them a separate people from the rest of the world. We see them as a mighty kingdom with prosperous cities. Again we see them as being run over by their near relation, and other tribes of the desert. But lastly we see them wending their way again into the land of an enemy, the land of Babylon. Here they are made subjects of the mightiest king that at this time had ever swayed the scepter of empire. Here they were sorely tested—extermination at one time confronted them—but the work and pleadings of a daughter of the captivity awakened the sympathy of the mighty monarch, and thy were saved.

Is it possible to read such history and not see the hand of the great Jehovah imprinted indelibly upon it? Can we not see his footsteps in all their wanderings, and his eternal power so vividly displayed that the word "Israel" itself seems to be written in ever living characters of the most brilliant hue? But we must not stop here, only to wonder a little at what became of the vast number that never returned to their homeland, at the end of the seventy years of servitude in this godless land. Various have been the opinions advanced at this point. Some contending the various European nations have sprung from them, and perhaps some of Israel's blood does course along the channels of our arterial system; yet I am convinced that no existing people except those know as Jews can be called Israel. It was amalgamation with other nations and races, that lost the majority of the ten tribes to the sight of humanity; but I believe that a remnant of them is preserved among the Jews, and when Israel returns from the north country, Russia (Jer. 23:7, 8), she will return in what the world today terms the Jew; and so from other countries.

To say that any modern nation or nations is Israel, admits that Israel is amalgamated into every other blood. Various Israelitish tribes were always permitted to intermarry, and while in strange countries Israel, and Judah have become so mixed that we only know them as Jews; and perhaps it is the same among themselves. True, expositors think they find many things in some modern nations that fulfill promises to Israel as per the prophets, but God did not say that other nations would not do many things he said Israel would, and we can prove nothing by applying prophecies of Israel to any one but Israel. Israel has yet plenty of time to make good everything God has spoken of her, and we believe she will, as she has in the past; and this should be sufficient to the honest investigator. Here at the end of this digression, and also the end of the Babylonian Captivity we again see, shall I not say Israel, in a remnant returning to their former and much beloved land. If the reader wishes to know why I say, "Israel in the whole of her twelve tribes," or a remnant of the twelve tribes returned to their ancient home, I give the following reasons:

(1) "Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, all the kingdoms of the earth hath the Lord of heaven given unto me; and he hath charged me to build him an house in Jerusalem, which is in Judah; who is there among you of all his people? The Lord his God be with him, and let him go up" (2 Chron. 36:22, 23). This proclamation is as broad as the Medo-Persian kingdom, and surely some at least of the ten tribes claimed to be God's people and took advantage of the proclamation, and went up with others of Judah.

(2) About 280 B. C. Ptolemy Philadelphus, king of Egypt, wished to have the Hebrew Scriptures translated into Greek, and history informs us that six men were sent from each of the twelve tribes.

(3) Jahn, an able writer says: "Cyrus' . . . general permission . . . extended to the Israelites in Assyria, Gozen, and Media, as well as to the Jews at Cheber and Babylon."

(4) History informs us, "A great number of them (the ten tribes) went back to Judea along with the Jewish captivity of Babylon, though they were from that time blended with them" (Modern Universal History, Vol. 2, P. 155).

(5) "And this house was finished on the third day of the month Adar, which was the sixth year of the reign of Darius the king. And the children of Israel, the Priests, and the Levites, and the rest of the children of the captivity, kept the dedication of the house of God with joy, and offered at the dedication of the house of God an hundred bullocks, two hundred rams, four hundred lambs; and for a sin offering for all Israel twelve he goats, according to the number of the tribes of Israel" (Ezra 6:15-17). This is positive proof, that "all Israel" were represented at the dedication of the temple after the return from Babylon.

(6) And there went up some of the children of Israel, and the Priests and the Levites, and the singers, and the porters, and the Nethinims unto Jerusalem, in the seventh year of Artaxerxes the king" (Ezra 7:7). Here again is proof that some of Israel went up to Jerusalem.

(7) Jesus commanded his disciples saying, "Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and to any city of the Samaritans enter ye not: but go ye rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel" (Matt. 10: 6, 7). Who were they sent unto? Not nations afar off; but the Jewish cities of Palestine. If those witnesses prove anything they prove that Israel was in Palestine after the Babylonian Captivity, and amalgamated with the Jews: and that proves that Moses knew what he was saying when he uttered the following solemn words: "The Lord will bring a nation against thee from afar, from the end of the earth, as swift as the eagle flieth; a nation whose tongue thou shalt not understand; a nation of fierce countenance, which shall not regard the person of the old nor show favor to the young" (Deut. 28:49, 50). This beyond a doubt is a prediction of the Roman invasion, and proves that Israel as a whole was afflicted by that. When this prophecy was uttered Israel was undivided; every tribe was included; and so every tribe must be afflicted by the Roman invasion. Israel, then, as a whole, was represented in Palestine in the post-Babylonian age, and remained there till carried away by the Romans. God ever "will leave a remnant, that ye (Israel) may have some that will escape the sword among the nations, when ye shall be scattered through the countries" (Ezek. 6:8). Here is the miracle: Babylon with all its boasted population and power has passed away. All the rites and ceremonies of ancient Greece and Rome have fled and are gone; but Israel, the little Palestinian nation, though scattered and pealed, still lives, and holds the wealth of the world. Surely God has a future for her.

"Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? So run, that ye may obtain. And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown, but we an incorruptible. I therefore so run, not as uncertainly; so fight I, not as one that beateth the air. But I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway."

The Hebrew Letter

ARTICLE SEVEN

THIS LETTER being addressed to the Hebrew Christian and not to the Gentile, must refer to the observance of the law more frequently than if it had been addressed to both classes. The object in this epistle was to prove to the Hebrews that Jesus the Christ is identified in the one whom the Scriptures pointed to as the Messiah. Isa. 9:6 speaks of a child born, and a son given, upon whose shoulders would rest the government promised. In this text the prophet associates it with the covenant made with David (2 Sam. 7:12-18).

This testimony is concerning Jesus the Christ, and is the spirit of prophecy. Unless it contains this testimony it is not the spirit, and is therefore a dead body. The reason why the Jews were so bitter against Jesus was that he claimed that these prophetic utterances were applied to him. The Jews had no objection to the application of these Scriptures to a Christ, but when one whom they believed to be of human origin, that is the son of Joseph and Mary, they became very indignant and were ever ready to stone him. The stumblingblock to them was when Jesus was declared to be the prophetic Messiah. This thought is emphasized in John 1:40, 41. When two disciples of John the Baptist followed Jesus, whom John declared to be the Lamb of God which beareth away the sins of the world. They were convinced of his identity as the Messiah of the prophets. When Andrew found his brother Simon Peter he expressed himself thus, "We have found the Messiah."

This is an acknowledgment that their former knowledge of the Messiah was an error. Nathan's confession (vs. 42) completes the testimony. "Rabbi, thou art the Son of God; thou art the King of the Jews." These testimonies remove the gross error that Jesus was the son of Joseph. In the beginning of this epistle the writer mentions that the prophets had been his witnesses previous to the coming of his Son. In these last days he hath spoken to us by him. Now if the words spoken by the angels were steadfast and those who transgressed received a just retribution, a retributive punishment, those who reject the Son would be held for the same punishment. They were therefore admonished that God had witnessed of his Son that he had spoken words that contained the great salvation. The testimony was attended with signs and wonders and with divine miracles and gifts of the Holy Spirit, according to his own will. The acknowledgement that Jesus was a prophet and a teacher sent of God, as witnessed by the doing of miracles, was no evidence that such believed in his Sonship. They could believe these things and still reject him as the prophetic Messiah. There can be but one man by or through whom salvation can be obtained, and that is the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth. This is applied as well to the Gentile as to the Jew. Therefore it is needful that all accept the name that Jehovah filled with his Spirit.

We are privileged to announce, as did the Lord God to Moses concerning the Jews, Exod. 23:21: "Beware of him, and obey his voice, provoke him not; for he will not pardon your transgressions: for my name is in him." He is judged unworthy who believes not in Jesus as the only begotten Son of God (John 3:18). The Father gave an able testimony as Jesus came up out of the Jordan, and also on the mountain in this language, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." This testimony was concerning his Son, not the son of Joseph. The world today is being rapidly converted to a false Christ. In their creeds they have introduced one who has no connection with the covenants of promise with Abraham and David. We have stated that the vital truth that Jesus the Christ is the Messiah is applied to the Gentile as well as the Jew (1 Cor. 1:23, 24). The apostle here answers both classes and states that to one it is a stumblingblock, and to the other, foolishness. He states that the Jews required a sign, and the Greek seek after wisdom. God testified of his Son with signs and wonders and with divers miracles and gifts of the Holy Spirit (Heb. 2:4). These the Jewish elders and wise men rejected. Their stupidity and traditions carried them to cling to the law and reject the law giver and the Mediator under this law. Their sacrificial offerings had become so formal that he had no desire in them. Jesus expressed it in these words: "This people draw nigh unto me with their mouth and honoreth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me." When the Jewish elders claimed to follow and believe in Moses Jesus informed them that if they had been or were his true disciples they would believe in him because Moses spoke of him.

In conclusion, let me briefly speak of what Paul wrote to the Corinthian Church. Despite the position taken by both Jew and Greek he stated, "We preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumblingblock, and unto the Greeks foolishness: but unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God." "It is written," says the apostle, "I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent. Where is the wise? where is the scribe? where is the disputer of this world? hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world? It is written, The world by wisdom knew not God; because the foolishness of God is wiser than men, and the weakness of God is stronger than men." The foolishness of God and the weakness of God can only be expressed in the worldly wise; the power of God and the wisdom of God are brought to view in his purpose of the ages and the resurrection of his Son. Without this power and wisdom the whole race would be visited with a retributive judgment which is final. Thanks to our merciful Father, through his power and wisdom is given to the called and chosen ones life eternal. We are further admonished, "Not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called. But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; he hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty." If these articles shall have strengthened some who are weak or caused one to give up an error for the truth, the writer will be well paid for his weeks of study.

The Restitution Sunday School Leaf

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS

MEMORY TEXT: But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept (1 Cor. 15:20).

1. Now upon the first day of the week, very early in the morning, they came to the sepulchre, bringing the spices they had prepared, and certain others with them.

2. And they found the stone rolled away from the sepulchre.

3. And they entered in and found not the body of the Lord Jesus (Luke 24:1-3).

4. And the angel said unto the women, Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified.

5. He is not here: for he has risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay (Matt. 28: 5, 6).

6. The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew and hanged on a tree.

7. Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Savior:

8. For to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins. And we are his witnesses of these things.

9. And so is also the Holy Spirit, whom God hath given to them that obey him (Acts 5:30-32).

10. Now when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week, he appeared first to Mary Magdalene (Mark 16:9).

11. And he was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve.

12. After that, he was seen of above five hundred brethren at once (1 Cor. 15:5, 6).

13. Him God raised up the third day, and showed him openly:

14. Not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God;

15. Even to us, who did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead.

16. And he commanded us to preach unto the people, and to testify that it is he which was ordained of God to be the Judge of the quick and the dead (Acts 10:40, 42).

Practical Truths

In our last lesson we followed the dead Savior to the grave. We considered the funeral procession, and saw them wrap him in linen and spices, and today we are to consider his resurrection. When the women came to the grave early on Sunday morning they found an empty tomb. Jesus was not there. While they were wondering what had become of him, the angel told them he had risen from the dead. Soon after he appeared to Mary, then to the disciples. The best witnesses of his resurrection would be those who had been constantly with him and known him before his death. Second, they must see him dead and know that he was dead. Third, they must see him alive and know that he was the same person they had known and known to be dead, and now know to be alive. Such indeed is the testimony of the apostles.

Notes on the Lesson

Firstfruits.—First ripe fruit. Used here as a pledge of the resurrection.

1. First Day of the Week.—It is probable, nay certain, that Jesus was raised just three days from the time he was buried, as he was to lay three days in the heart of the earth. Being buried at six o'clock, or the beginning of day, he would necessarily rise at the very beginning of the first day.

2. They Found the Stone Rolled Away.—The angel rolled the stone away (Matt. 28:2). It must have been a large stone, as there was only one stone used, and it blocked up and closed the whole doorway. It must have filled the entrance, as we read that it was sealed, probably with wax, and received the impression of the Governor's ring.

5. He is Risen.—This is direct and positive testimony from the angel. See the Place.—He shows them where they had placed him, but he was gone. The tomb was empty.

6. Raised up Jesus.—Notice it is here stated that God raised up Jesus. Twenty-five times at least in the New Testament it is affirmed that God raised up Jesus. The doctrine that Jesus raised himself from the dead, therefore, cannot be true. See texts.

7. Prince.—The son of a king. A person possessing highest place or authority. One who expects to suceed as a king.

8. Witnesses. Those who know by personal presence; those who can give testimony.

13. Openly.—This resurrection proof is not a secret one. Five hundred witnesses at once are given by Paul in 1 Cor. 15:6.

14. Chosen.—They were chosen witnesses. Chosen because competent from their acquaintance with all the circumstances.

15. Did Eat and Drink With Him.—This probably was one of the strongest proofs of his literal resurrection. An apparition could not eat and drink.

Suggestive Topics and Questions

1. The Empty Tomb.—What is first cited as a proof that Jesus had risen? Ans. The disappearance of the dead Savior. Was the tomb empty? (Matt. 28:6; Mark 16:6; Luke 24:3). Who was first at the sepulchre? Was Jesus gone when they came there? What time did they come to the sepulchre? (Mark 16:2). What time did Jesus arise?

2. Who Raised Jesus?—By whom was Jesus raised from the dead? (Acts 2:24, 32; 3:15, 26; 4: 10; 5:30; 10:40; 13:30, 33, 34; 17:31; Rom. 4:24; 6:4; 8:11; 10:9; 1 Cor. 6:14; 15:15; 2 Cor. 4:14; Gal. 1:1; Eph. 1:20; Col. 2:12; 1 Thess. 1:10; 2 Tim. 2:8; 1 Pet. 1:21; Heb. 13:20).

3. The Witnesses.—Who are the witnesses of Jesus' resurrection? (8). Are there any other witnesses beside the apostles? (5). How was the Holy Spirit a witness? (9). See Acts 2:14-18. Was the giving of the Spirit at Pentecost a proof that God had raised Jesus from the dead? (Acts 2:33).

An Open Letter to Dr. Shields

INTERESTING CORRESPONDENCE

THERE IS attributed to you in today's issue of "The Globe" a statement regarding the Lord Jesus Christ which, if correctly recorded (and "The Globe" seldom errs in that respect), has no right to pass unnoticed, for it is of too serious a nature.

You are quoted as saying that "Jesus Christ is to us the only wise God." This statement is in itself self-contradictory, but coming from a man of your position and learning, and appearing in a daily paper of the standing of the Toronto "Globe," which professes to be an expounder of Biblical exegesis through its editorial columns, this fact will be overlooked, and multitudes will accept your statement without taking the trouble to examine it, and verify it with Scripture. Much as I admire some of the work you have accomplished, and the zeal you at times exhibit, I feel that I should be unfaithful did I not write to you both privately and publicly regarding the matter.

The very name "Christ," which means "anointed," is conclusive proof that your statement cannot be true. Any man's own common sense must assure him of the fact, added to which the evidence of Scripture is abundant. The Scriptures testify that "God anointed Jesus . . . and that God was with him" (Acts 10:38). Did God anoint himself? I challenge you to bring forward one single statement of the Lord Jesus where he can honestly be said to claim the title you so boldly confer upon him. Is it any wonder that our churches are constantly losing ground in the hearts of earnest men and women? Is it any wonder that God refuses to bless, and that infidels increase in number and in the satire they heap upon so-called Christianity, when such absolute nonsense is taught from the pulpit? The Bible is the most common sense book in existence, but though I am writing to a professed friend of Christianity, I cannot refrain from saying that your ministers do almost as much harm as you do good by the caricature you make of God's word in many of its fundamental teachings. I am quite prepared to meet you in the columns of any paper or magazine you choose, and see who it is that is bringing discredit on the Bible. In the interest of truth I trust you will respond. If you cannot find a paper willing to accept such a controversy, I shall be happy to do so, provided you adhere to your declaration that the word of God is the sole authority.

Trusting to have a reply at an early date,

Yours sincerely,

R. H. JUDD.

In reply to above article "The Globe" sent Brother Judd the letter following:

Mr. R. H. Judd, Dear Sir:

We cannot possibly find space for a controversy such as you invite. We suggest that you write Mr. Shields so as to be certain that the quotation represents his views. Thank you for your pamphlet.

Yours very truly,

THE GLOBE.

Brother Judd's response follows:

Editor "The Globe," Sir:

REPLYING TO yours of the 18th inst., I am not at all surprised at contents of same, for I have been aware for a considerable time past that it is not your policy to allow anyone to advocate in your columns anything that savors of criticism of what you term "evangelical truths." You have again and again refused to publish communications from men whose belief in the integrity of the Scriptures is, if anything, more pronounced than your own, and of those whose errors you seek to shield. It is admitted that they are sincere and earnest, and that along many lines they are doing "good work"; but that very fact makes it the more important on account of their influence, that extreme care should be exercised in their utterances. When a man of the position and bearing of Rev. Dr. T. T. Shields says that "Jesus Christ is the only wise God," it is important indeed that such an error be refuted. He certainly is partaker of another man's sins who seeks to withhold from the public an exposure of the error. The Globe not only refuses to discuss the matter, but actually prints a commendation of the statement in the issue of yesterday. You say you "cannot possibly find space," yet much space is daily devoted to details of the most harrowing crimes, and a large corner of the front page is set apart each day for matter of the most trivial nature. These, to you, are of more importance than vital Bible truths. Your defence of a man takes precedence to your conception of God himself.

Yours faithfully,

R. H. JUDD.

Editorial

We are pleased to have with us again Sister Vira McIlrath after a long absence in the East.

The Sunday School Cradle Roll has recently gained three additions by the birth of three sons. The proud parents of the "boys" are Brother and Sister Chas. Pate, Brother and Sister Quay Brandt. and Brother and Sister Mackenzie.

The reference in Rev. 16:15 is to the temple watchman. If the superintendent found him asleep, he quietly stripped him of his robes and left him asleep; and then his loss of garments convicted him of neglect, and he was dismissed.

In Matt. 23:29 Christ refers to the customary form of Hebrew salutation when a guest enters a dwelling: "Blessed be the comer in the name of Jehovah." He will be unseen to the Jews until they are prepared to salute him with the welcome accorded to a guest who comes in Jehovah's name.

The Fellow Helpers' Society held their meeting at the home of Brother and Sister Gibbs on Friday evening, Feb. 27th. Fifteen members were present and five visitors. After a few reports were made the meeting was turned over to the leader, Bessie Nicholls, whose subject was "Everlasting Punishment." After the meeting adjourned, a collection amounting to $2.75 was taken up.

The papers now report that Germany has completed an accord with the Reds of Russia. Germany binds herself to re-establish railways, posts and telegraphs, and to send engineers and technical workers and experts into Russia to reorganize the mines and factories. The Allies are too slow again. Peace with Soviets today means war tomorrow. It does not require prophetic foresight to see that Europe is doomed to an invasion by Germany and the Bolshevik hordes.

Double Meanings

WHAT DOES Paul mean when he prohibits "jesting" in Eph. 5:1? A jest, according to the dictionary, means "something ludicrous; joke; fun; object of laughter; merriment." Does Paul design to forbid Christians indulging in jokes?

Editorial Comments

PAUL'S PROHIBITION relates to jokes of a particular kind. The Emphatic Diaglott translates the verse: "Also indecency, and foolish talking or loose jesting; things not consistent; but what is more becoming, thanksgiving." Macnight's translation is still nearer the original thus: "Also obscenity, and foolish talking; and double meanings are things not proper; but thanksgiving rather is proper." Both translations show that Paul is not forbidding talking but "foolish talking"; not jesting, but "loose jesting." Foolish talking is the kind of speech by which one's neighbor is rendered contemptible. We speak of this as "buffonery." Obscene language is tabooed.

The word "entrapelia," translated "jesting" in our version, denotes "artfully turned discourse"; and is used either in a good or bad sense. In the good sense it signifies urbanity in discourse. In Eph.5:4 Paul uses it in the bad sense. When the word is thus used it means artfully turned discourse in which chaste expressions convey lewd meanings.

Personal Pronouns: Do They Include the Speaker?

DO PERSONAL pronouns include the writer or speaker? You will, of course, understand the motive I have in asking this question. For the benefit of the reader I may say that understanding the writer is included in pronouns has led othodox commentators to claim that Paul expected Christ to appear in his lifetime; and Christadelphians build upon this foundation some of their strongest arguments for the theory that the righteous dead emerge from the grave mortal.

OUR CORRESPONDENT refers, we presume, to 1 Thess. 5:15, "We the living, who remain at (eis) the coming of the Lord, shall not anticipate them who are asleep." This and similar statements by the apostle led the Thessalonians to imagine that he should be alive at the second coming of Christ, consequently they looked for the day of judgment to happen in their lifetime. The same vain imagination many learned orthodox still entertain, although twenty centuries have confuted the error. Truly these orthodox folk are blind, much blinder than the Thessalonians were; for they ascribe, not to Paul only, but to all the apostles the error of believing the coming of Christ would happen in their day, because in their epistles they speak of the Lord's advent as then at hand. But in charging this mistake to the apostles these modern "wise men" have forgotten a few things: they have forgotten (if they ever knew) that Paul in writing the Thessalonian letter, especially the second epistle, expressly teaches that the day of Christ was not at hand, but at a considerable distance in the future. Literally, according to the Greek he said, "Now we beseech you, brethren, concerning the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and our gathering together around him; that ye be not soon shaken from your purpose, nor be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter as from us, intimating that the day of Christ is at hand. Let no man deceive you by any method; for that day shall not come unless there come the apostacy first, and there be revealed that man of sin, the son of perdition" (2 Thess. 2:1-3). They likewise forget that the text which they quote to prove Paul made a mistake in his expectation, was written by the Lord himself. This Paul expressly affirms: "Besides this we affirm to you by the command of the Lord" (1 Thess. 4:15). If Paul erred in this statement, his inspiration was a delusion; and the Lord who inspired him was as much in error as Paul himself. Charging Paul with making a mistake here is in fact charging the Lord with error!

We have not the slightest grounds for saying that Paul imagined that he would be alive at the coming of Christ. The Christadelphian argument that personal pronouns include the speaker, is quite "orthodox," but thoroughly unscriptural. "We the living, who remain at the coming of the Lord"; and "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed" (1 Thess. 4:15; 1 Cor. 15:51), are the expressions by which it is sought to prove that Paul included himself in the word "we." By the first "we" orthodoxy seeks to prove that Paul would be among the living at Christ's coming; by the second "we" the Christadelphians teach Paul will emerge from the grave mortal and then be "changed"! Admitting the argument we can just reverse the reasoning and the conclusion, thus: "He who raised up Jesus, shall raise us up also by Jesus, and shall present us with you" (2 Cor. 4:14). Here Paul includes himself in "us," so this proves that Paul thought he should be of the number dead, and would be "raised up" by Jesus at his coming. Are we not now ready to receive the facts in the case?

Now the truth of the matter is this: personal pronouns are not to be understood as including the writer or speaker personally. They are figures of speech, used to draw the reader's attention, sometimes to soften a harsh sentiment, without intending to represent the writer, either as of the number, or of the character of the persons with whom he classes himself. The evidence cannot be gainsaid: Paul reckons himself, in Gal. 1:23, as among the number of those whom he formerly persecuted: "They had heard only that he who persecuted us," etc. Then in Psa. 66:6, we read (the reader will notice the pronoun "we"): "He turned the sea into dry land; they went through the flood on foot; there did we rejoice in him." In the same manner Hosea speaks of Jacob in the words, "He found him in Bethel, and there he spake with us" (Hos. 12:4).

It is thus made transparent to the reader by Bible usage that orthodox learning and Christadelphian duplicity have no foundation in the book of God. The figure of speech whereby a writer or speaker identifies himself with the class of people whom he addresses has a singular propriety, especially when the church of God is contemplated. All believers make but one collective body, of which Christ is declared to be the head, and which is united by the mutual love of all the members. Appropriately enough, individuals may consider everything happening to the members of this body, as happening to themselves. On this principle Paul considers himself as among the "we," whether living or dead; whether raised from the dead or changed at the coming of Christ. We can see from these facts how unjust it was in Orobio and Gibbon to represent this figure of speech as an artifice of New Testament writers to induce people to accept the gospel, and to scare them by creating in them the expectation of Christ's return during their lifetime. The same facts also convict orthodoxy and Christadelphians of "wresting the Scriptures to their own destruction."

Communication

They spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened.-Mal. 3:16.

DEAR BROTHER HUGGINS:

THE WRITER is just home from Galimore Gap, N. C., where he held a meeting at the old Galimore Gap Church, near where you and I helped (?) the Methodist Prayer Meeting when we were in school. Had a good meeting, although because of sickness, bad roads, and cold weather, the attendance was not very large, numbering from 23 to 46. Sunday afternoon, Feb. 29, we had the pleasure of baptizing Brother James H. Case, Dewey King, John Taylor and his wife, Sister Taylor. Some years ago we baptized Sisters Case and King who now have their husbands with them. We expect, the Lord willing, to visit this place every fifth Sunday. However as Brother Huggins will not be there, we shall try not to get into any more trouble in prayer meetings.

The meeting closed March 2nd, and that night we went to Hendersonville and spent the night with Brother and Sister Patterson. The next day, while standing near the depot waiting for our train Brother Huggins' brother, W. B. Huggins, passed by, and after greeting each other he insisted that I take dinner with him as I had an hour to wait on my train. I did so, and when I entered his home whom should I meet but the Editor's mother, our old Sister Huggins. Right away she wanted to know how "Robert" was, what he was doing, etc. She is very anxious for a letter from the absent one. After dinner we left for home where we arrived next day and found all well.

J. M. Anderson.

True Happiness

HAPPINESS: "The agreeable sensations which spring from the enjoyment of good." "Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding. For the merchandise of it is better than the mechandise of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold. She is a tree of life to them that lay hold upon her; and happy is everyone that retaineth her" (Prov. 3:13-18).

Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom: and with all thy getting, get understanding (Prov. 4:7). He that hath mercy on the poor happy is he (Prov. 15:21; Psa. 41:1; 112:9). Whoso trusteth in the Lord, happy is he. O taste and see that the Lord is good: blessed is the man that trusteth in him. Blessed are all they that put their trust in him (Prov. 16:20; Psa. 34:8; 2:12). The Lord is a God of judgment: blessed are all they that wait for him (Psa. 30:18). Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord, and whose hope the Lord is (Jer. 17:7). Behold I lay in Sion a stumblingstone and rock of offence: and whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed (Rom. 9:33).

Happy is the man that feareth alway. I have set the Lord always before me: because he is at my right hand, I shall not be moved: therefore my heart is glad and my glory rejoiceth: my flesh also shall rest in hope (Prov. 28:14; Psa. 8, 9). Behold we count them happy which endure (James 5:11). Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him (James 1:12). If ye suffer for righteousness sake happy are ye. If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye, for the spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you (1 Pet. 3:14; 4:14). Moses chose to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. Why? Because he esteemed the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt: for he had respect unto the recompence of the reward. Moses had faith in God and his promises, and was happy in serving him that he might gain the reward, eternal life (Heb. 11:25-29).

Paul's happiness in this life consisted in doing the things that pleased God, and not making any compromise with man. And today we think that a man who does good to his fellow man, expecting the praise of man for it, is not doing what is well pleasing to God: he is not reaching the true happiness that comes from serving God through evil and good report. For we consider our highest duty is to serve God acceptably, and in looking for the reward which means for us true happiness when it is bestowed.

MOTTO: SEARCH THE SCRIPTURES DAILY

SLOGAN: WE STAND FOR UNITY, TRUTH, AND RIGHTEOUSNESS

NOTICE

AS QUERIES concerning the payment of dues are constantly coming to us, a word of explanation may help. Isolated members who join the National Society by direct application shall pay one dollar per year into the national treasury. All members of affiliated societies shall pay annual dues of twenty-five cents each.

The treasurer of affiliated state societies should send one half the state dues to the National Treasurer each quarter, October, January, April, and July. In the case of local societies joining directly with the National, send one half your dues to the National Treasurer, providing your duties do not exceed twenty cents per month. In that case, not more than ten cents per month is to be sent to the National Treasury. These dues, too, should be sent quarterly. The annual dues of twenty-five cents per individual should be collected by the local or state treasurer and sent to the National Treasurer as nearly the time of the annual conference as possible. Some societies pay in advance; others, at the close of the year.

For the benefit of local and state societies that have not remitted dues for the current Berean year, we wish to say that payments are now due for October and January. To those who have been prompt in sending in their dues, we wish to express our thanks. Send all dues to the treasurer.

A SUGGESTION CONCERNING SHUT-INS

BEREANS, when you are having your meetings in a home try singing a song or two over the telephone for any shut-ins, old folks, or sick folks, you happen to know. You will find that they appreciate being remembered and enjoy the singing.

REVIEW OF THE PENTATEUCH

THE PENTATEUCH or five books of the law is composed of the first five books of the Old Testament, namely, Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy. The author of the books is commonly thought to be Moses, but as his death is recorded, it is probable that Joshua took up the work where Moses left off.

Genesis is a history of beginnings of generations—heavens and earth, sun, moon, stars plant life, animal life, man, marriage, sin, redemption, prophecy, Israel and God's purpose looking toward Christ. Since Genesis is the history of beginnings, it is rightly placed the first book of the Bible for it lays the foundation for all that is to follow. The principal characters are Adam, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Joseph.

One writer divides Genesis into three great divisions:

1. Generation (chapters 1, 2).
2. Degeneration (from the garden of Eden to Abraham, chapters 3-11).
3. Regeneration (through Abraham and his seed—Isaac, Jacob, Joseph).

In pursuance of the plan to elect and prepare a special people for a great purpose, the writer goes back to the very beginning of things: and as he comes down the course of history, he singles out the righteous in their generation, till he confines himself entirely to the sons of Jacob.

Adam, Noah, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob mark the five great stages of progress. Other names are dropped as soon as they fall out of the line of the onward march, and with increasing clearness there is a purpose to be served by the family that comes to the front. The covenant made with Abraham in Gen. 12:1, 2 and 17:1-14 is the key to the whole Bible. On it is founded our faith and hope of our future abiding place.

The family of Jacob having come to the front, the last chapters deal almost exclusively with him [illegible] his twelve sons. They having gone down into Egypt to get food. The book closes with the death of Joseph.

Exodus means going out, and takes up the story of the chosen people where Genesis left them. After the death of Joseph a new ruler rose up in Egypt who oppressed the Israelites. At the age of eighty Moses was sent to their rescue, and on account of his slowness of speech, Aaron was made his spokesman. Pleadings with Pharoah were in vain, and before he would consent to the departure of the Israelites, ten plagues had to be inflicted upon the Egyptians.

But the Israelitish troubles did not cease with the crossing of the Red Sea, for many complaints came from them against their leaders, and from lack of faith they were not permitted to enter the promised land at once; but spent forty years in the wilderness, until all adults who left Egypt except Caleb and Joshua died.

While in the wilderness at Mount Sinai the ten commandments were given; also detailed instructions for building the tabernacle, with all the ceremonies pertaining thereto. The book closes with the rearing of the tabernacle, with a cloud covering it by day and fire by night.

Leviticus begins with regulations for the offerings and ritual of the tabernacle. In these, we learn how the people might draw near to God and commune with him. Under these laws we find sacrifices, burnt offerings, the meal offering, peace offering,' sin offering, trespass offering, priests duties, feasts, blessings and penalties, vows and tithes, and the priest's character and mode of life.

Numbers, so called from the census recorded in chapters 1-4, gives the story of the Israelites from Sinai to the plains of Moab. Chapters 1-4 treat of the enumeration of men of war, priests, and Levites. In chapter 6 we find the Nazarite vow. Other important things found in this book are the purifying of the Levites, keeping the Passover, the murmurings of the people. Miriam's rebellion and leprosy, the spies, sin of Moses and Aaron, death of Aaron, the brazen serpent, and cities of refuge.

Deuteronomy is a book of speeches by Moses and covers a very brief period of history. The Jews had a tradition that Joshua wrote the account of the death of Moses; and it is quite possible that he recorded these speeches. The book would still be the book of Moses because it is practically only a record of his speeches. His first speech begins at nearly the close of the forty years wanderings, so that a new generation had grown up which had not heard the law at Sinai: so practically the whole law is recapitulated. In addition to the recapitulation of the law, we find the song of Moses, and his death. No other prophet rose up in Israel like Moses, but Joshua takes up the work where Moses laid it down.

AN INDIANA BEREAN.

A LETTER

DEAR BEREANS:

I HAVE received so much help from your letters, and I am glad to see so much interest. I think we should all write more. It gives us stronger faith, and it helps to strengthen our faith that we may live better Christians to make our calling and election more sure.

As this is the first time I have tried to write, I hope it will find its way into the columns of the dear Restitution. The terrible times in which we are now living, in which human life is valued as no more than the beast of the fields, and all other crimes as common as the air we breathe, we know that our dear Lord is near, even at the door. For when you see these things coming to pass know ye that the Son of Man is near. Let us do our best that we may be among the chosen few when our Lord comes. Pray for us.

I would like to correspond with the Berean members in order to learn more about the work.

Your sister in Christ,

MAUD DIMMICK.

Obituary

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.--Psa. 116:15.

Martha J. McCleland died at her home in Michigantown, Indiana, February 24th, 1920. She with her brother, Benjamin B., the only surviving member of the family, recently removed from the farm to this place that they might better enjoy their remaining days. She had not been well for some time, and took suddenly sick with pleuro-pneumonia and only lived two days.

She was the daughter of Alvin and Sallie McCleland and the youngest of a family of five sons and five daughters, and was born February 5th, 1856. She had spent her life upon the old homestead north of Scircleville and kept the home for her brothers till the death of Sanford July 19th, 1918. The surviving brother being unable to continue the farm work they had given up the old home.

She had heard the gospel preached, and receiving the good seed of the kingdom of God she was baptized by J. S. Hatch in 1898, and united with the Church of God at Hillisburg. She was a careful student of the Bible, and sought to discharge her every duty in accord with the will of her Savior, Christ Jesus. Less than two weeks ago she had enrolled as a member of the Berean Home Class Bible study that she might the better know the great truths of God's revealed word, and be the more thoroughly furnished unto all good works.

In the circle of her acquaintance she was beloved for the fine qualities of character and disposition she possessed and manifested in all her associations. In her death the church loses a substantial member, and the community a good friend and neighbor.

Funeral services were held from the home at 10 o'clock, February 26th, where her relatives, friends and neighbors gathered to pay their last tributes to her memory and listen to words of comfort and hope as we found them in 2 Cor. 4:17, 18; 5:1-5. Burial was made in St Paul Cemetery in the neighborhood of her youth. Here we leave her in the sweet sleep, resting in Jesus, till he comes.

GOLDEN TEXT: 1 Tim. 6:11, 12

BABYHOOD

What is the little one thinking about?
Very wonderful things no doubt!
  Unwritten history!
  Unfathomed mystery!
Yet he laughs and cries and eats and drinks
And chuckles and crows, and nods and winks,
As if his head were full of kinks
And curious riddles as any sphinx!
  Warped by colic and wet by tears,
  Punctured by pins and tortured by fears,
  Our little nephew will lose two years;
  And he'll never know
  Where the summers go:
He need not laugh, for he'll find it so!
Who can tell what a baby thinks?
Who can follow the gossamer links
  By which the manikin feels his way
Out from the shore of the unknown sea,
Tossing in pitiful agony—
Of the unknown sea that reels and rolls,
Specked with the barks of little souls—
Barks that were launched on the other side,
And slipping from heaven on an ebbing tide!
  What does he think of his mother's eyes?
  What does he think of his mother's hair?
  What of the cradle-roof that flies
  Forward and backward through the air?
What does he think of his mother's breast—
Bare and beautiful smooth and white,
Seeking it ever with fresh delight—
  Cup of his life and couch of his rest;
What does he think when her quick embrace
Presses his hand and buries his face
Deep where the heart throbs sink and swell
With a tenderness she can never tell
  Though she murmur the words
  Of all the birds—
Words she has learned to murmur well?
  Now he thinks he'll go to sleep!
  I can see the shadows creep
  Over his eyes in soft eclipse,

  Over his brow and over his lips,
  Out of his little finger tips!
  Softly sinking down he goes!
  See! he is hushed in sweet repose!

MAN IN his wisdom has thought out many inventions. But he can not tell what a baby thinks.

SO RUN THAT YE MAY WIN

HOW TIME is flying, how much is happening, and how much is still needed to secure that peace and rest so eagerly desired! On earth there is "distress of nations with perplexity" (Luke 21:25), and it only is from the throne above that we may ever hope to realize that security of mind and freedom of action that man has desired from the beginning of time.

For a time weapons are laid aside, but all over the world there is a seething current of restlessness and estrangement between class and class. There is discontent and organized lawlessness among the ranks of workers, scarcity of needful things, famine prices for food and clothing, and the various ingredients that make up social and domestic comforts in our home circles; and there is little or no human prospect of early amelioration of these conditions.

How does all this affect us? Can we with Paul say, "that the Holy Spirit witnesseth in every city, saying that bonds and afflictions abide me. but none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy."

We have no such alarming future held out to us. We may have lost dear ones; we may be left with discomforts and hardships and anxieties. But let us remember God is behind them all, and he has promised to guide and sustain us, for it is written, "There hath no temptation taken you but such as man can bear; but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able, but will with the temptation also make a way of escape, that ye may be able to bear it."

That is a cheery and welcome promise for every one of us, no matter how situated or how employed. "Trust in God and do the right" and do your best. God never will be satisfied with your second best. "Ye serve the Lord Christ," and he gave himself for us.

The Bible never speaks of the Christian life as a time of ease, but often as a race, or a fight. At the end Paul said, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith." When all his comrades forsook him the Lord stood by him, and strengthened him. He closes his words to Timothy with this splendid assurance: "The Lord will deliver me from every evil work, and will preserve me unto his heavenly kingdom."

We are told how we should run and fight as Christians. "Let us lay aside every weight and the sin that doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race set before us, looking unto Jesus." "So run that ye may obtain the prize."

That is just it: we are to run so, in such a manner, as to win—just as if we meant it, never thinking of defeat or turning back; and by God's grace we will win. Let no reader of the Young People's Page make any surrender of the things that matter, but give a prompt and cheerful obedience to the Lord who hath bought us, and wishes us to continue in his love, and welcome his daily guidance.

Let there also be much prayer for this Page and its conductor. May it be a true messenger of love and peace and hope and comfort in the Lord, to those who labor and are heavy laden, so that they may go on unto perfection, and so run that they may win the prize at the glorious appearing of our great God and Savior, Jesus Christ.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

IN ISSUE of March 2nd, Brother Judd S. Lyon, of Citronelle, Alabama, made an interesting appeal to the Young People to write him "concerning themselves, their home and their church—or Bible School"—which I trust you have taken advantage of because it was done in unselfishness and entirely for your benefit. In printing the appeal there was a typographical error made in the address. If you have not written Brother Lyon kindly do so at once, mailing letters to above address; also please correct in your address book.

UNITY OF HEART AND MIND

A NOTED clergyman helped some of us when he said, "I have not less faith in the man who is guided by his heart than in the man who is controlled by his head."

Whatever illuminates the heart exerts an influence of good over our mind, though continuous training of the mind and great learning is not to be neglected nor despised.

To be faithful at our post, whatever it be, requires the acquisition of every quality obtainable by both mind and heart to reach the highest success.

"HE GIVETH power to the faint, and to them that have no might he increaseth strength."

DAILY THOUGHTS

Honor the Lord with thine increase	Prov. 3:9

Priceless Treasure

BUT WE have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us" (2 Cor. 4:7). Paul, in the opening verses of this chapter, is speaking of his ministry and the gospel, and he calls the gospel "this treasure" in the 7th verse. And what earthly treasure can compare with it? Not all the gold and silver and precious stones the earth possesses. The gospel reveals to us God's greatness, and his goodness and love to mankind. If we embrace it, we become God's sons and daughters and the heirs of all things. So we should make it the business of our lives to understand and obey its principles ourselves, and then to help others to a saving knowledge of it.

We are the frail "earthen vessels" Paul speaks of. To us God has intrusted this wonderful treasure. His people have never been recreant to this great trust; all through the ages of sin, sorrow and bloodshed, he has always had a little band of faithful ones, who kept the "good news," and passed it on to succeeding Christians. The word from which "earthen" is translated, means fragile, and also recoverable; so that though our bodies are frail and shall ultimately be broken by death, unless Christ soon appears, they will again be recovered in the resurrection, by the hand of the Great Potter. Seeing God has honored us by giving us this service, to bear the water of life to others we, like Paul, should "renounce the hidden things of dishonesty, not walking in craftiness, nor handling the word of God deceitfully, but by manifestation of the truth, commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God." We must empty our hearts of sin and earthly longings if they are to be filled with the pearls of gospel truth. Timothy says, "In a great house there are not only vessels of gold and silver, but also of wood and earth; and some to honor and some to dishonor. If a man therefore purge himself from these, he shall be a vessel unto honor, sanctified, and meet for the Master's use, and prepared unto every good work" (2 Tim. 20:21). We must either be vessels of honor or dishonor;" "vessels of mercy" or "vessels of wrath fitted for destruction" (Rom. 9:22, 23).

The Seven Petitions of Prayer

An Address by Alfred Titman, Before The Fellow Helpers' Society

WE FIND prayers in the Bible recorded in all ages. In every nation and tongue we find some form of supplication to something or someone. In looking over the Bible we find many wonderful things that have been accomplished by prayer. For instance: 1 Sam. 7:9-12; 1 Kings 36:39; 13:6; 2 Kings 19:15, 16; 20:35; 4:32-35. These are just a few of the numerous instances of national and individual deliverances accomplished by prayer.

"THY KINGDOM COME"

Nothing is so adapted to our daily needs as the seven petitions written in the Lord's prayer. The prayer, although concise, is complete in its fulness and each word is the breath of the Holy Spirit. Prayer to God is the request of his earthly sons for the supply of their daily wants. Those who are not sons of God cannot in the full sense pray to God, because they are in a great measure ignorant of him. It is only those who recognize him as their Father, who have been begotten by his word, who can ask him as a Father to supply their wants. The wants which the sons of God solicit their Father to satisfy, are all in prospect of the kingdom of God. "Thy kingdom come" is their first petition; and all their earthly wants are subject to the attainment of that kingdom. When then the prayers of his sons ascend to God, the all-powerful, does he condescend to answer them? The fact that he has opened a way whereby man may make known his requests is, looking at the character of God, the strongest evidence that he will answer those who come to him in the way appointed. The whole course of Scripture history affords evidence that God does answer prayer, and so the way remains open still, the answer will still come. To ensure an answer, then, what we have do is to put ourselves in the position of the righteous.

"THY WILL BE DONE"

Every one who prays "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done" is aware that the will of God does not always coincide with the inclinations of his creatures. It would be wonderful indeed if the will of an omniscient and infinite perfect being should uniformly fall in with the capricious desires and inclinations of those who are finite, fallible, and sinful. Our own inclinations do not agree with each other. We are the subjects of conflicting desires; the will of God could not coincide with our inclinations without coinciding with contraries. The prayer, "Thy will be done," which we all consent to use, recognizing this want of coincidence, begs that in all such cases, God will cause his will to be done rather than ours; therefore let us consent with our whole heart that his will should be done, not merely in some things, but in all things; for why should not all his will be done, as well as any part of it? If we do so, by and by we shall have no inclination contrary to his will. We shall be incapable of cross or disappointment. Everything being as he would have it, would be also as we would have it.

"GIVE US THIS DAY OUR DAILY BREAD"

"Give us this day our daily bread." Doubtless this was especially applicable to Christ's disciples; but it is quite appropriate to our use. How is it answered? Do we by our supplication gain any advantage over our unbelieving fellowmen? Are we directly supplied with food to sustain us, or are we put in specially favorable circumstances for obtaining it? God hears the young birds when they cry and sends them food (Matt. 5:45). God then sends daily food to all men. But on account of the present wrongly constituted condition of society it does not reach all men. Sin intervenes. Even now, however, men seldom perish for want of the bare necessities of life; and why do they not? Simply because there is, even in this evil constitution of society, as much of the light of God permeating it as to force men to organize means for the distribution of daily food. The distribution may be done in a careless way, but it is there; and it is there by the inspiration of God; it is the rays of his light piercing even the thick darkness.

"FORGIVE US OUR TRESPASSES"

"Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those that trespass against us." In explanation of this read Matt. 6:14, 15. How is it that we obtain an answer to this supplication? We find that there is a condition attached to forgiveness, and we must comply with that condition before we obtain any request. We must conform to the gracious spirit of God; we must be merciful ourselves if we would obtain mercy. We are not under the law or condition relating to our former state of sin; we have affected an alteration towards God. God is still the same, but we have changed; and being under a new law God can, with perfect justice, forgive our transgressions against that new law. God is angry with the wicked every day, even while at the same time he causes his sun to shine upon them. He will by no means clear the guilty, yet he is long suffering, slow to anger, ready to pardon, but only when man has complied with his conditions; when the guilty has ceased from sin. When he has changed his conduct, then God will pardon. Here then lies the beauty of God's words, "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those that trespass against us." Those who would participate in God's forgiveness must themselves forgive. They must cease from sin, they must not allow the fleshly passions vent. If we have committed a transgression, "if we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." "If we confess our sins:" that is, if we acknowledge and realize our error and strike out a new path, he will forgive us our sins. We find, then, that God is angry and merciful at the same time; angry with the wicked, merciful with the righteous; or, in other words, he is the perfection of justice. Anger and mercy come forth from him in two continual streams. They are two rivers of action ever flowing forth from him. It rests with man to bring himself into relationship with either. Let him cease from sin, and learn righteousness and God's forgiveness is flowing forth ready for him.

"LEAD US NOT INTO TEMPTATION"

"Lead us not into temptation" is a beautiful prayer, and is expressive of a grand scriptural thought when we learn that temptation is a word which is used in both good and evil sense. In a bad sense, that of seduction to sin. "God cannot be tempted to evil himself, neither will he tempt man into sin." In this sinful sense man himself, not God, is chargeable with temptation (James 1: 13-15). God, all will admit, does lead us into temptation in the sense of subjecting us to trial like he did Israel and Job; but to abandon us in such a predicament would be a contradiction of his assuring promise (1 Cor. 10:13). For a season God does encompass his people about with manifold temptations when necessary, and then subsequently deliver them.' Matt. 26:41 says, "Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation." This is a very reasonable and scriptural prayer.

"DELIVER US FROM EVIL"

"And deliver us from evil." The true explanation of evil is sin. To choose evil is to sin, to sin is to strengthen the growth and finally reap the harvest of evil. God is the source of life, and to keep in unison with him is to live; to depart from him and follow our own bent, is to die (Gal. 6:7). On the face of it this is a statement we are compelled to accept without demur. It is true in the natural and physical world, and it is equally true in the moral and spiritual realm. Evil ways lead to evil, and good ways lead to good (Ezek. 33:11). The great teacher pointed out that before all men, and before each man, were two ways; one which was broad, and led to destruction; whilst the other was narrow and ended in life (Matt. 7:13, 14). God has dealings with mankind and desires his welfare. He loves the world of men, and desires not that any should perish or reap the fruits of evil, but that all should turn to him and live. God is the power, not ourselves, that makes for righteousness; he is the God who wrote the word, who called Abraham, who revealed himself to the prophets; and who as a living and forgiving Father was revealed in his Son Jesus. Evil, although hateful to God, and the result of sin, is used as a means to an end; and that end is first the perfecting of those who are faithful; and secondly, the destruction of those who are opposed to him and to holy things.

The effectual and fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. It calms and soothes the troubled mind. It strengthens and encourages the weak and fills us with hope and happiness. It is good for us to need things and to learn to pray for them. The more we pray the more we shall understand the power there lies in prayer. One may not think of entering upon a big undertaking without praying, while the many little requirements of every day seem too insignificant. Let us not think so, for we cannot estimate the good effect of little things upon others as well as ourselves, or corresponding bad effect if the power of prayer is not always with us. May we pray for our brethren as well as ourselves. At times all we can do for one another is to pray. Paul often requested the brethren to pray for him, and told them to pray for one another; and is there not encouragement all through the Scriptures for us to pray for ourselves? Let us accept it as a privilege, and so fully realize the power that lies in prayer.

God will have All Men to be Saved

TO BEGIN, this proposition is here made upon the authority of the Scriptures: That God has the power to and will save all men who come to him in and through Jesus Christ, according to the written testimony.

In a former article by the writer in answer to the question, "What things did Christ accomplish that brought salvation to us?" God was presented not the vindictive autocrat which some theologies represent him to be, but as a loving Father who stands with outstretched arms beckoning us to return to him and to the bosom of his love. Again, in that article, God's great desire to save all men was likened to the hovering instinct of the hen to gather her brood under her wing. So when the apostle wrote "who will have all men to be saved"; he used a word expressive of this thought, for whether this word be rendered "who will," or "who wishes," or "who desires," behind the will, or the wish, or the desire there is always to be understood the implied incentive on God's part for those who will return and be saved.

Some reason that if God has willed all men to be saved, and since he has the power to work all things according to his mighty will; then they say, all men must and will be saved. But such an argument destroys all the sentiment of God's desire and represents him, not as our heavenly Father, but an arbitrary being and men the coerced playthings of his arbitrary will.

On the other side of this question is the Calvinistic idea, that God wills all men to be saved and calls all men, but the call is effectual only upon such as God's irresistible will has predestined to be saved. If one sees any discrepancy in that logic, the Calvinist explains that God does this to demonstrate his sovereign will, and therefore we have no right to question that.

The poet Burns aptly expresses the inconsistency in this doctrine in his satire upon Calvinism, saying:

> Who sends one to heaven and ten to hell.
> All for his glory.

Thus seen, we are forced by right reason to reject both Universalism and Calvinism.

Then it is said, that God gives to every man a chance to be saved in this life, and if he is not saved, it is his own fault. In the first place, it is not true that God gives every man a chance to be saved in this life. For over four hundred years from the flood there is no record of any man having a chance to be saved. Not one is said to have been put on probation for life.

When the chance did come, it came only to Abraham. Out of all the men in the whole world, only one man was put on probation.

No man can be put on probation for life unless he knows the terms upon which life is offered. We know that the gospel was preached to Abraham, and the apostle tells us that the gospel was preached to them that are dead, that they might be judged that they might be put on probation as men according to the flesh, but might live according to God in Spirit. The verdict in Abraham's case was, that as a man in the flesh he was unworthy of life; so we read that he died not having received the promises. Again we are told that Abraham as a man had nothing wherewith to boast before God. But as touching the resurrection, Jesus tells us that Abraham lives unto God—lives unto God in spirit. Just what that is, we are not capable of knowing. However, we do know that Abraham has not entered into life and will not live until the resurrection of the just.

Then the law came and for sixteen hundred years men were tried under it—were put on probation under righteousness of the terms, that the man which doeth these things shall live by them. Here out of all the nations of the earth, Israel only was put on probation, and with the exception of those who received a good report through faith, they all lost out; for the judgment came, not only upon Israel, but upon all men in the flesh unto condemnation; so they all died by sin and all of fleshly Israel died in their sins. Now did Israelites have a chance for life under the law? They never had a ghost of a chance.

But when Christ came, did not some get a chance? (Call it another chance if you wish.) Yes, very many, but they did not get a second chance as men in the flesh. They had to die unto the flesh before they could be put on probation. But that teaches the posthumous probation theory. It does, and not only that, but it teaches that man must die to the flesh before he can be put on probation for life, with any possible chance of attaining it. So now we can understand why God appointed men once to die, but after this the judgment the trial for life, the probation after death.

Now you, my brother, tell me when your probation began? Before you came to God by faith, you know that God would have nothing to do with you; you know that he regarded you as dead, and to all intents and purposes, you were dead indeed unto righteousness—condemned. Did you start on probation in the flesh, or did you not like the good Galatians, begin in the Spirit? And is not God dealing with you now as with one who is alive from the dead? You will no doubt say yes. Well, if God is pleased to deal with you very favorably after death of the flesh; do you not think that God will be pleased to deal very favorably with men who have died and by the power of Christ to raise the dead, have been resurrected unto judgment? Why not? Is it because there is no analogy, prophecy, or precedent to justify that thought? Certainly not; there is an abundance of proof of these things, and besides—it is God's plan.

But what about the canibals of Africa? The aborigines of Australia? Is it possible that God can do anything with such degraded humanity? Now if a missionary, enthused with the desire that all men might be saved, will go to the South Sea Islanders, and by the preaching of a bob-tailed gospel turns a man-eating cannibal into a pretty good sort of fellow, do you not think that when the true light has come to enlighten every man that cometh into the world, and the gospel will be preached by the angels of God; do you not think under such circumstances that the whole earth will ring from sea to sea and from shore to shore with the voice of that great multitude, saying: "Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lord?" Then John says, "I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth (aborigines and all), and to every nation and kindred and tongue and people, saying, with a loud voice, Fear God and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come." This is the judgment that God appointed for men after they once die.

Now God did not call us because of our good looks, or because we had anything in the flesh to recommend us. A cannibal is not pretty to look at, but he may not be so degraded in his nature, and he is no doubt very much better and nearer to nature, than some who claim to be very highly civilized. It is very doubtful if you can find among these uncivilized tribes a moron, or a sadist, or a Jack the Ripper— a degenerate in his human nature. The apostle said some very uncomplementary things about the Corinthians as to their character before conversion. He says some of them were fornicators and idolaters, effeminate (depraved), abusers of themselves with mankind, thieves, drunkards, revilers, extortioners. Now if God is as selective in choosing subjects as in electing saints, we are bound to think that he is not selecting the best grade of men, but the fact is, that God regards faith and not the flesh.

The real truth is, that God has only begun to save the perishing world. He is calling now only such as he wants for his purpose and who knows that some of all grades of moral delinquency is not just what he wants at this time, that in the other age he might show to all the world the exceeding glory of his grace toward them? This a day of salvation to those only who hear his voice. The great day of salvation is in the other age when Christ will have come without sin unto salvation. So the Psalmist looking forward to that time says: "Make a joyful noise unto the Lord all the earth; make a loud noise and rejoice and sing praise: sing unto the Lord with the harp and the voice of a psalm: with trumpets and sound of a cornet make a joyful noise before the Lord, the King: let the sea roar and the fulness thereof: the world and they that dwell therein; let the floods clap their hands, let the hills be joyful together before the Lord; for he cometh to judge the earth: with righteousness shall he judge the world and the people with equity."

Alex. Allen.

Lessons of the Great War

THE UTTER helplessness of humanity in the last explosion of human iniquity in the great war, is one thing that must be apparent to all thinking people. Previously we were being continually told of the progress of civilization and of the advances humanity was making, which was true in many respects. The trouble was that underhand sources of evil were working just as assiduously as the better spirit of good; and while the industrious and the skillful were laboring in the light of day "replenishing and subduing the earth," building railroads, draining swamps, erecting school houses, stringing telephones, and so on, a minor bunch of criminal politicians, working in the dark, were utilizing all the advances made by labor, skill and art for the attainment of their purely selfish ends. Mr. Morganthau, U. S. Minister to Turkey, tells us in his wonderful book how that Enver Pasha confessed to him that the "Young Turk" party, of which he was the head, consisted of about two hundred men. And with these few he sprung a revolution and started a career of crime that eventuated in the destruction of a million Armenians, beside the other damage they did.

Then we are also familiar with the story of the Kaiser and his junkers who, in control of all the German people and in secret connivance with plotters, scattered over the whole earth, made a bold strike for universal empire; and for a while the issue seemed doubtful to those who only trusted in material arms. In considering these things we see that present civilization is so environed about with hidden dangers that even its own safeguards harbor traitors, so that in such circumstances human society is unable to defend itself. The higher the attainment of civilization the easier to topple over. The greater wealth the more plunder for the thieves and delinquents who masquerade in the guise of benefactors and saviors—wolves in sheep's clothing.

In such circumstances there is nothing more consoling in the revelation of God than the fact that all the events that have recently happened, or are happening in the way of trouble and national fret and worry, have not only been forseen and reckoned for, but also have been foretold. "See that ye be not troubled: behold, I told you before" is the Master's watchword to pass round. Nearly all the prophets of Israel have portrayed in various ways how the time of deliverance will be immediately preceded by a time of "darkness" and trouble. Those of us who have been expectantly waiting through all the past centuries for the "salvation of God," have been perfectly familiar with this fact. Where we erred in the past was in supposing each in his own day that things had come to a pass that was not possible to be worse, but we see now what mere local disturbances the events were that perturbed the saints of old compared with this last widest and greatest upheaval of all humanity; and then there is the sign of Israel, the "Ensign for the nations."

When I was a little boy (I was born in 1848) my dear father used to take me out for a walk round Edinburgh on Sunday morning, and he would often speak to me of the prophets and other Biblical themes; for although at that time he had not come to the clearer knowledge in regard to life only through Christ, he had quite a clear conception of his Bible otherwise. On one occasion that I recollect he told there would come a time of great persecution of the Jews, and it would be instrumental in driving them back to their land again. Such ideas, of course, were never to be heard in a Methodist church or anywhere else at that time so far as I had heard, and I can remember how I resented such an imputation as the "advanced state of civilization" that schoolboy like, I supposed we were living in even at that time. But although father could not then give any reason why such a thing should happen, still asserted it as positively as if it were already an accomplished fact. And many a time have I recalled his statements at that time (over half century ago) when over and over again during the last quarter of a century the reports have come to us of the calamities that have fallen on Israel that can be only paralleled by the persecution of the "dark ages." And now that the way seems open again for them to establish the "commonwealth of Israel" as in the days of old, the antisemitic "ruffians of the whole world seem bent on trampling them to the earth with hob-nailed boots." But "every kick is a boost" in the case, for this is probably "the time of Jacob's trouble when he will be saved out of it. And we stand by in wonder and in awe. O that thou would rend the heavens and come down, that the mountains would flow down at thy presence!

What We Must Do to be Christians

HEBREWS 11:6: "But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him."

In order to have faith in God we must know about him, what his will is, and be anxious to do it; we must know what he has done in the past, that he has created all things, that we are the production of his will, and that he has given us life, and all the good things that are provided for us; and that in and by him we live, move, and have our being. Without him we are helpless, and can do nothing for ourselves. In his kindness he has provided the plan of salvation, and has sent Jesus, his only begotten Son, to bring everlasting life and immortality to light through the gospel. We have the offer of salvation by and through him. Then he has made many promises to the faithful ones, which are to be fulfilled when Jesus comes back to this earth again, when he shall reign until all his enemies are subdued by being crushed under his feet.

If we understand and believe all these things, and are living true Christian lives, and are waiting for the fulfilment of the promises that God has made, and are doing the part that he has given us to do, proclaiming the good news to others, that they may also have a share in the blessings promised, when he will make all things new, and all people shall serve and praise him: if we know and believe all these things, then it can be said that we have "faith." Then we are commanded to add to our faith the Christian graces. 2 Peter 1:5: "And besides this, give all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity. For if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ."

Remember the Helping Fund

Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble in the day of evil, margin (Psa. 41:1).

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Sister Fish, of Springfield, Ohio, feasted with us at the Lord's table March 14th.

——o——

March the 30th is a fifth Tuesday, so the next Restitution will be published April the 5th.

——o——

The Vth Bible Lesson, carefully revised, has just been reprinted. It is a beautiful booklet. A complete stock of all the lessons is now in hand.

——o——

The last meeting of the Sister's Society was held at the home of Sister Mowery, on Thursday afternoon, February 26th. Owing to cold stormy weather conditions, only ten members were able to be present. A number of calls had been made and fruit or flowers had been sent to the sick. The Secretary read several letters from some of our isolated ones. We enjoy and welcome correspondence with our brothers and sisters of like precious faith.

Sister Groves as leader conducted the lesson on Part IV of Bible Lesson IX, showing that man is a creature of dust and mortal because of sin. The meeting adjourned by repeating our motto.—Ruth Mowery.

Arguments Answered

VARIOUS ASPECTS OF LARGER HOPE REVIEWED

He that is first in his own cause seemeth just; but his neighbor cometh and searcheth him (Prov. 18:17).

IN THIS issue we publish a communication from a correspondent who seeks to prove that probation applies to the dead rather than to the living; and that salvation opportunities in "the other age" will be more ample than in this. "Aborigines and all" are to be made into a new race by some kind of talismanic means. Read and consider.

NO CHANCE FOR FOUR HUNDRED YEARS

For over four hundred years from the flood there is no record of any man having a chance to be saved.

Editorial Comments

THIS STATEMENT ignores facts which even Sunday school boys and girls are supposed to know. At the conclusion of the flood "The Lord smelled a sweet savor" (Gen. 8:21), "and God blessed Noah and his sons" (Gen. 9:1). Since "Noah lived after the flood three hundred and fifty years" (Gen. 9:28), the people had a distinguished "preacher of righteousness" (2 Pet. 2:5) during all but fifty years of the four hundred; if no man had a chance to be saved during that time it was his and not the preacher's fault. It is during this time that we read of "the Lord God of Shem" (Gen. 9:26); and we can be sure that since God was not ashamed to be called the God of Shem, he has prepared for him a city (Heb. 11:16). There must have been believers subsequent to the flood, as they are called "the salt of the earth" (Matt. 5:13). Without them Sodom could not continue. But for them the world would go to wreck in five minutes. They save the world from putrefaction and summary judgment from heaven

ONLY ONE MAN ON PROBATION

When the chance did come, it came only to Abraham. Out of all the men in the whole world, only one man was put on probation.

THE AUTHOR of these words surely has not read Bible history. Contemporary with Abraham was Lot, who had a "righteous soul" (2 Pet. 2:8); Melchizedek, a "priest of the most high God" (Gen. 14:18), who was greater than Abraham (Heb. 7:7); Abimelech, who was king of "a righteous nation" (Gen. 20:4); and Abraham's wife, Sarah. How could the writer forget Sarah when we are told to "look to Sarah" in the prophetic writings (Isa. 51:2); and in the New Testament she is specially displayed as a model for sisterly imitation: "Even as Sarah obeyed Abraham, calling him lord: whose daughters ye are, as long as ye do well, and are not afraid with any amazement" (1 Pet. 3:6). Abraham and Sarah were "heirs together of the grace of life" (1 Pet. 3:7); Isaac and Jacob were also "heirs with him of the same promise" (Heb. 11:9). It looks like there were a few others on probation along with Abraham !

THE GOSPEL PREACHED TO THE DEAD

We know the gospel was preached to Abraham, and the apostle tells us that the gospel was preached to them that are dead, that they might be judged—that they might be put on probation as men according to the flesh, but might live according to God in the spirit.

HERE IS an attempt to gloss 1 Peter 4:6 into a proof for probation after death. The reader will notice that in the 5th verse the apostle says that Christ "is prepared to judge the living and the dead." From the next verse it appears that by "the dead" the apostle meant the Gentiles, said in many passages to be "dead" in trespasses and sins (Eph. 2:1). Therefore by "the living" we understand those who by their profession of the gospel, are reputed to be alive. "Thou hast a name that thou livest, and art dead" (Rev. 3:1). Read 1 Tim. 5:6. The living and the dead, then, are the Jews and Gentiles.

James Macnight's translation of the 6th verse reads: "Besides, for this purpose the gospel hath been preached even to the dead, that although they might be condemned indeed by men in the flesh, yet they might live eternally to God in the spirit." In justification of this translation Macnight says: "According to the common translation of this passage, the apostle is represented as saying that the gospel was preached to the dead Gentiles in order that they might be condemned by men in the flesh. But as this cannot be the apostle's meaning, I suppose there is here an ellipsis of the word "although," as is plain from the adversative particle which follows. I have therefore ventured to supply it in the translation. We have the same ellipsis in Rom. 6:17."

Commenting on " yet they might live eternally to God in the spirit" the learned Mr. Macnight continues: "As Paul, speaking of the body of the righteous, says, 'It is sown an animal body, it is raised a spiritual body' (1 Cor. 15:44), we may by 'the flesh' here, understand the 'animal body' in which men now live, and by 'the spirit' the spiritual body which the righteous are to receive at the resurrection. This interpretation makes one of the darkest passages of the New Testament intelligible. However, although 'spirit' were taken literally in this clause, yet as 'flesh' in the former clause, does not signify the body separate from the spirit, but human nature as it consists at present of flesh and spirit, so the 'spirit' in which we are to live after death, does not signify the spirit separate from the body in which the saints are raised. Knatchbull supplies and translates this verse in the following manner: 'That they who live according to men in the flesh may be condemned, but they who live according to God in the spirit may live.' But the translation I have adopted is more easy, and gives a sense of the passage more analagous to the Scripture phraseology."

NOT THE GHOST OF A CHANCE

Now did Israelites have a chance for life under the law ? They never had the ghost of a chance.

THEY HAD the promise of the Savior (Gen. 3:15), and the covenant made with Abraham, which the apostle Paul emphatically calls "the gospel" (Gal. 3:8). Unto them was the gospel preached as well as unto us (Heb. 4:2). The gospel is four hundred and thirty years older than the law, and therefore co-existed with the law (Gal. 3:17); and believers who lived under the law are equal heirs with us and with Abraham himself (Rom. 4). They were not saved by the law, but by heirship of the Abrahamic gospel. Some of the most distinguished saints that have ever graced the earth lived during the reign of the law. Examples: Moses, Rahab, Gideon, Samson, David, Samuel, etc. (Heb. 11). They had the gospel, and therefore a gospel chance. Who has any better chance ? If we may have the gospel and yet not have "the ghost of a chance," of what worth is the gospel anyway ?

"ABORIGINES AND ALL"

"I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth (aborigines and all), and to every nation and kindred and tongue and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come." This is the judgment that God appointed for men after they once die.

OUR WRITER has charged that for four hundred years after the flood not one man had a chance to be saved, and that for sixteen hundred years under the law no one had "the ghost of a chance." Four hundred years plus sixteen hundred equals two thousand. God who for two thousand years gave not one man "the ghost of a chance" suddenly takes a notion to give everybody a chance! He has a change of heart and falls in love with cannibals, and decides they are much "better and nearer to nature" than others! Listen, the gospel in being preached by men and angels! "Aborigines and all" are hungry auditors. "All," for once, is a little less than every body! The saints, "a great multitude," are cheated out of this belauded "judgment" after death ! What a pity! But is "the hour of judgment" in Rev.14, really a probation for the dead ? Let us read and see.

As soon as the angel flies with the gospel in vs. 6, "there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen" (vs. 8). The saints themselves are deprived of any chance in this "judgment," and Babylon, too! To these we must add those who worship the beast and his image. Instead of a chance they get "the wine of the wrath of God," torment, fire and brimstone (vs. 10). Not much gospel here! Before the chapter closes "another angel came out from the altar, which had power over fire, and cried with a loud voice to him that had the sharp sickle, saying, Thrust in thy sharp sickle, and gather the clusters of the vine of the earth, and"—preach the gospel ? No: "cast it into the winepress of the wrath of God" (vss. 18, 19). "Aborigines and all" are not there. The saints have no chance to benefit by this gracious judgment (?); neither Babylon, the worshippers of the beast, nor the vine of the earth. By Jeremiah God said, "I planted thee a noble vine, wholly a right seed." Christ said, "I am the true vine. ye are the branches." This is the vine that it is to be planted in the earth. "The people also shall be all righteous: they shall inherit the earth for ever, the branch of my planting, the work of my hands, that I may be glorified" (Isa. 60:21). "The vine of the earth" will be pulled up by the roots, and burned up "root and branch" (Mal. 4:1).

THE GREAT DAY OF SALVATION

This is a day of salvation to those only who hear his voice. The great day of salvation is in the other age when Christ will have come without sin unto salvation.

THIS CERTAINLY stands things in their heads. "The great day of salvation is in the other age." Well, Paul stands things on their feet. Hear him in Macnight's concise and vigorous translation: "God is, by Christ, reconciling the world to himself, not counting to them their trespasses; and hath put in us the word of reconciliation. In Christ's stead, therefore, we execute the office of ambassadors. And seeing God beseeches by us, we pray in Christ's stead: Be ye reconciled to God" (2 Cor. 5:19, 20). In 60 A. D. Paul wrote, "God IS by Christ reconciling the world unto himself." Larger Hope blushes not to say he was not then, has not since, and will not till "the other age," undertake such a work! We are to be ambassadors then, not now; thus charging Paul with falsehood as well as robbing him of executing the office of ambassadorship. And to add to the solemnity of Paul's statement in the case he continues: "For he saith, in an acceptable season I have heard thee; and in the day of salvation I have helped thee; behold NOW IS THE HIGHLY ACCEPTED SEASON: behold, now is the day of salvation" (2 Cor. 6:2). The "highly accepted season" and "the day of salvation" are now. And contrary to the Futurite theory, God Almighty says he will "hear" and "help" us now. Shall we belie God and say he gives not the ghost of a chance until "the other age," or believe that now is the "highly accepted season"? Shall we believe man or God? "Even so Christ being once offered in order to carry away the sins of many, will, to them who wait for him, appear a second time, without sin-offering, in order to salvation" (Heb. 9:28). The salvation at his return is not conferred by Christ upon "aborigines and all," but upon those who "wait for him." Reader, we pray you to accept Christ's sin-offering now. He has already died for you; and when he comes he will not die for you again. "Wait for him" or there is no "salvation" for you at his second coming. Accept him now or he will reject you then. "Now is the highly accepted season: behold, now is the day of salvation."

Dear Brethren and Sisters of the one Faith:

I AM writing to withdraw our appeal for an Evangelist Fund. I have returned the money sent me, as so few seemed interested, and they could not do the work alone. We will have to drop it for the present, hoping to see it brought up in a better and more effectual way in the near future. Pray ye the Lord of the harvest that he will send forth laborers into the field, for the harvest truly is great; but the laborers are few.

Yours in the one faith,

MRS. W. L. ROBBINS.

Brother Huggins:

I NOTICE in my Restitution of March 2nd, in a letter written by Brother A. Adams stating the desire of one minister of the Christian Advent Church of Kansas City, Kans., uniting with us. I understand this Adventist to say there were grounds for unity. Now brethren, if I understand this right it means for the two churches to become one in purpose and under one head. Am I right? Can we give up our profession of faith? Can we afford to pervert God's truth? Nay, verily. If left to me to decide I would have just this to say. If this friend wants to join us in the work, let him come as any one else and confess and be baptized and enter in by the door of the sheepfold. Some one might say I am selfish, and I think the Church of God is the only one which is true. So I do. I would not stay in a church which did not have its name recorded in the Bible.

Let us now put Paul on the stand and see what he says. We will go to Acts 20:25-33: "And now behold, I know that ye all, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, shall see my face no more. Wherefore I take you to record this day, that I am pure from the blood of all men; for I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God. Take heed, therefore, unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Spirit hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God which he hath purchased with his own blood. For I know this that after my departing shall grievious wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise speaking perverse things to draw away disciples after them. Therefore, watch and remember that by the space of three years I ceased not to warn every one night and day with tears. Now brethren, I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified."

Now, brethren, in the face of this writer can we give up our church name? Go with me to Rev. 3:4, 5, 6 and see what Jesus says: "Thou hast a few names even in Sardis which have not defiled their garments, and they shall walk with me in white for they are worthy. He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment, and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father and before his angels. He that hath an ear, let him hear what the spirit saith unto the churches." Study Rev. 3:12. This letter is not written as an offence to any one, but in good faith and spirit of brotherly love. Still asking to remain yours in the hope of the resurrection by which we may enter into the kingdom of God,

SI HERREN.

Texts on Pre-existence Explained

OUR ATTENTION has ben called at various times to the following texts that are supposed to teach that Christ is older than his mother: John 6. Here our Lord speaks of the "bread of life." He says it "came down from heaven." Well, if we can find what that "bread" is we may know what "came from heaven." Lord, tell us what the "bread" is. "The bread which I give is my flesh." So Jesus tells us his "flesh" is the "bread which came down from heaven." So wherever "bread" occurs in this chapter substitute "flesh," and you have Christ's idea. What! did Christ's flesh come down from heaven? Not literally, but in the sense that it was supernaturally produced by heaven. In this sense he himself is said to "come down from heaven." "Every good and perfect gift comes down from the Father of lights" (James 1:17). Inasmuch as Christ is a "perfect gift" he, too, must "have come down from the Father," or heaven. But this would no more teach pre-existence in heaven than it would for any other "perfect gift" of the Father. Children are said to be a "gift from the Lord." Are we to understand that they pre-existed in heaven and literally "came down from the Father," where every gift from heaven comes from? No, we shall say. Then neither would Christ.

John's baptism was "from heaven." Are we to understand that it was practiced in heaven and gradually extended itself to the earth? No, not at all. Then when Christ is said to be "from heaven" are we to understand that he lived there and actually came from there? Not necessarily. The idea in both cases seems to be that Christ and the baptism of John owed their origin to heaven. All sons exist first in the loins of their fathers; later they leave the loins by way of begettal and birth and exist then as separate entities. To illustrate: "Levi paid tithes while in the loins of his father Abraham"; "There shall proceed forth from thy bowels a seed"; "In Adam all have sinned." This is sufficient. Christ is no exception. He, too, existed in his Father's loins, because his Father begot him. Hence he could well say, "I came forth and proceeded from the Father," as all sons do from theirs. Inasmuch as his Father dwelt in heaven if he came out of him, he must necessarily say he was "from heaven" or "above." As to how he "came forth from the Father" this is fully explained in Luke 1: "The Holy Spirit shall overshadow thee and that holy thing which shall be formed in thee shall be called the Son of the Highest."

John 17:5 and Rev. 13:8 teach that in the plan of God, Christ was crucified and glorified before "the foundation of the world." But in reality the crucifixion and glorification did not take place till his death on Calvary and subsequent resurrection. They are merely examples of "God calling those things that be not as though they were." "I have made thee a father," and he then had no children. "Slain and glorified before the world was." Have these already taken place? In all these, allow us to repeat, "He calleth the things that be not as though they were."

"Ye are from beneath; I am from above." If his being "from above" would teach his pre-existence, then their being "from below" would teach theirs. But if those "from below" have no pre-existence, though being "from below," then his being "from above" would need not have any, though being from above. He merely contrasts his divine origin with their earthly origin. If "every good and perfect gift is from above," then inasmuch as Christ was a "good and perfect gift" he, too, must in the same sense as "every gift" be "from above."

GOLDEN TEXT: 1 Cor. 15:55-57

THAT GLORIOUS DAY

THAT GLORIOUS day is coming,
  The hour is hastening on;
Its radiant light is nearing,
  Far brighter than the sun;
In yonder clouds of heaven
  The Savior will appear,
And gather all his chosen
  To meet him in the air.

The saints, then all victorious,
  Will go to meet their Lord;
On earth both bright and glorious,
  Will then be their reward;
And God himself here reigning,
  Will wipe all tears away;
Nor clouds nor night remaining,
  But one eternal day.

O, Christian, keep from sleeping,
And let your love abound;
Be watchful, prayerful, faithful,
The trumpet soon will sound!
O sinner, hear the warning!
Turn quick to Christ above,
Then you in that blessed morning,
May meet him here in love.

EASTER, NINETEEN TWENTY

WHAT A glorious thing it is that one day each year the entire world rejoices with us in celebrating the rising of Jesus from the dead, acknowledging that the dead must rise from the tomb to receive that immortality promised to those who love and serve the Lord.

Easter is a milestone of happiness in the yearly pilgrimage of the saints. It is an enduring testimony to the resurrection of Jesus and a lively assurance of the triumph of love and goodness.

In Easter we see an assurance of the triumph of life. Out of the great unknown has come the hope of immortality. In all ages some men have dared to believe that death did not end all. The grave never has been a barrier to the faith and hope of the true disciple of Jesus. He ever has seen beyond it. The resurrection of Jesus is an eternal testimony that life again takes the place of death. We are not creatures of a day, but children of God. To the believer life is eternal.

Easter assures us of the triumph of righteousness. Our hearts are a battlefield in which contending forces war for the control of our lives. The strength of evil alarms us, and we sometimes fear that it will conquer. But as we meditate on the triumph of Christ, hope is born anew in our hearts, and we are assured of the victory over evil. This, not of our own strength, as we have faith in Jesus, so also shall we partake of his strength and righteousness. The enemies of Jesus murdered him and then tried to destroy his message; but Jesus conquered death, and his gospel has lived in spite of his enemies. Christ and the gospel have been victorious over their enemies, and we also shall win over the great enemy, death. As sure as the sun gives light so sure shall the righteousness of Jesus bring life and immortality to those who put their trust in him.

Easter assures us of the triumph of Christ. The man of Nazareth who conquered death by the power of his life will come again for the purpose of conquering this world of sin. Jesus ended his earthly mission by becoming a sin-offering; but when he comes again he will come without a sin-offering in great power and glory. He will come to rule the world in righteousness. He will also come to raise the sleeping saints, and that is where the great glory of Easter will be. The living changed, the dead raised, they together with Christ forever.

As Jesus died and rose again
Triumphant from the dead,
So shall his servants rise and reign
With their victorious head.

EASTER WAS KEPT ON THE WRONG DAY ONCE

THAT WAS in 1818, when by a mistake of lunar calculations it was celebrated on March 22nd. But it can fall as early as this. It did in 1761. For Easter Day is fixed by the vernal equinox, March 21st, and depends upon the moon. The first Sunday after the fourteenth day of the moon following March 21st is always Easter Sunday. So that suppose the equinox moon is just fourteen days old on the twenty-first of March, and this day happens to be on Saturday, then the next day, Sunday, would be Easter Sunday. So the earliest that Easter may be is March 22nd, and the latest is April 25th. Easter fell on this latter date in 1886, and it will occur again in 1943. Seven years ago, in 1913, it fell on March 23rd, as it did in 1845 and 1856. This is why Easter is called "a moveable feast."

DAILY THOUGHTS

Teach me to do thy will, thou art my God Psa. 143:10
Yield . . . instruments of righteousness unto God Rom. 6:13
Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord James 4:10
Deliver me out of the mire, and let me not sink Psa. 69:14
This same Jesus. . shall so come in like manner Acts 1:11
Let all . . . evil speaking be put away Eph. 4:31
Take heed and be quiet; fear not Isa. 7:4

THE DATE OF EASTER

THE DAY we know as Easter is moveable, that is, it is not always on the same date, but each year varies according to the moon's condition. To those who desire a guide to help them in locating the date, the following rhyme will be of assistance:

Thirty days hath September,
Every person can remember,
But to know when Easters come
Even puzzles scholars—some.

When March the twenty-first is past,
Just watch the silvery moon,
And when you see it full and round,
Know Easter will be soon.

After the moon has reached its full,
Then Easter will be here,
The very Sunday after
In each and every year.

And if on Sunday it should be
The moon would reach its height,
The Sunday following would be
The day for Easter bright.

RESURRECTION PLANT

THE FLORIST told her that if she put the dried up ball of brown leaves into a dish of water it would blossom out into a fresh green plant in a day. Skeptically she did it, and when the twenty-four hours were up, lo! the plant had bloomed, giving out a sweet, heavy oriental odor.

It brought this odor with it from the far-off Holy Land, where it grew. It is another miracle of that miracle land, for it never dies. When it is out of water it rolls up into the dried-up ball, and will keep that way for years until it is put in water again. It is called the resurrection plant (Popular Science Monthly).

THE FLOWER THAT BLOOMED IN THE DARK

SOME TEN or more years ago, we spent our summer vacation with a Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins, Walton, New York. It was a beautiful place about twelve miles distant from town. It was their first year at farming and they undestood very little concerning it. Mrs. Hopkins a woman who acknowledged God, and was graceful in all her ways. Our walks through fields and woods always were a benediction, for in her spiritual mind she saw God in all nature. Her eye was keen to see every blossom—no matter how small or hidden—and in every blade and leaf she saw reflected the love of her Creator.

Mrs. Hopkins did the cooking and connecting to kitchen and woodshed was a covered passage way in which sunlight never shone. A plant rooted without, had in the early part of the season forced its stalk through a little crack in the wall into this dark passage, and during our stay it had blossomed. It was a strange freak of nature, and never shall we forget her face so resplendent of praise and her voice so full of thanksgiving when she drew our attention to this "gift of love that God had sent to cheer her in her lonliness." How sweet it is to give God praise for all our joys and bless him for all our benefits.

The following poem has brought the whole incident fresh to our mind, and we have repeated it with the hope that its telling will be of benefit to you.

THE ROSE BEYOND THE WALL

Near shady wall a rose once grew,
Budded and blossomed in God's free light,
Watered and fed by the morning dew,
Shedding its sweetness day and night.

As it grew and blossomed, fair and tall,
Slowly rising to loftier heights,
It came to a crevice in the wall
Through which there shone a beam of light.

Onward it crept, with added strength,
With never a thought of fear or pride;
And it followed the light through the crevice length
And unfolded itself on the other side.

The light, the dew, the broadening view,
Were found the same as they were before;
It lost itself in beauties new,
Breathing the fragrance more and more.

THE FRIENDSHIP OF BOOKS

A FRIEND is one to whom we can turn, as of right, at all times, in all circumstances, be our immediate needs what they may. We can look to him for guidance and counsel in the everyday routine; for help in difficulty, encouragement in dejection, and consolation in sorrow; for the sympathetic fellowship which gives additional relish to even the simplest pleasures. Manifold, then, are what Montaigne called the "offices and duties" of friendship; and it is, as the lover of literature will insist, with the largest recognition of the import of the word that we may justly speak of the friendship of books.

Books are keys to wisdom's treasure;
Books are gates to lands of pleasure;
Books are paths that upward lead;
Books are friends. Come, let us read.

GOOD BOOKS always are a benefit. The book of most benefit to mankind is the Book of books, for therein is told the love of God to man; therein is told the history, life, and destiny of man; therein is told the sacrifice of him who "died that we might live": that we, through faith in him, might have our sins covered by his righteousness, thus permitting us to see God and live with him throughout eternity. Study this book; accept its teachings; and live forever more.

A WORD OF ENCOURAGEMENT

THE GREATEST oak in our land today was at one time just a short and tender shoot, so small and insignificant that an ant gnawing at it would cut it down and render it lifeless.

So with everything, no matter how large and important now: at one time it was unnoticed.

So with our own efforts: we do not all succeed with our first attempt; in fact, most of us go stumbling through life with very few successes, but many dismal failures.

The boy or girl who sulks at his or her first failure, giving up heart and not retrying never can meet with success.

It is all through swimming that we learn to swim. And so with everything else: it is only by talking in public that we learn to talk in public.

If you only are half in earnest about anything, you never will get anywhere. Though you have hesitated, stammered, and blundered in your attempts don't give up; but go at them again and again until you win. A large part of every man's future has in it the figure of a tremendous but successful conflict.

It is only through perseverance that we win. Persevere.

* * *

EASTER LASTED eight days once. It was then a season of thanksgiving at the rising of the natural sun and the death of the winter. Festivities lasted for an eight day period. Then it was cut down to three days; then to two days; and finally to one day as now. But in England, Easter Monday is still a bank holiday, and in Europe many countries still celebrate Monday and Tuesday.

Easter Meditations

SAD WAS the scene in Cannan's land,
When hope and joy had fled;
When Christ, the Savior of our race,
Was numbered with the dead.

Satan's hosts had gained the day,
And laid our monarch low;
Had bruised his body and "his heel,"
And caused his blood to flow.

Sad were the hearts of those he loved,
Had left in midnight gloom;
The Roman soldiers guard the seal,
Placed on the sacred tomb.

But light breaks in the distant east,
Reveals the glorious dawn;
The angel rolls the stone away,
The night of gloom is gone.

He rose! come see the place,
Where the Lord of glory lay;
No more he sleeps in death's dark tomb,
Now all is light and day.

The guards in terror fear and quake,
They like dead men fall;
Man's power to hold God's chosen there,
Was puny, weak, and small,

O, Jesus, Lord, we ever long,
Thy face divine to see;
Just as thy faithful brethren did,
When God had set thee free.

Full soon we hope to hear thee call,
To life forever more;
When thou shalt come to claim thy own,
And rule from shore to shore.

Bible Lessons on First Principles

LESSON SIX: THE THOUSAND YEARS' REIGN OF CHRIST AND THE SAINTS

I. The Purpose of Christ's Reign is to Subdue "All Enemies"

THE MISSION of Christ's reign is to extirpate "all enemies" from the earth, which is now "subject to vanity" (Rom. 8:20). The specifications of evil here given as vanquished by his reign are representative only:

(a) All human governments will be abolished (Isa. 24:21-23; Rev. 19:11-20; Isa. 17:13,14; Psa. 2:4,5; 110:5,6; 1 Sam. 2:10; Dan. 2:44; 7:13,14; Psa. 72; 74:20; Rev. 11:15).

(b) There will be but one kingdom "under the whole heaven"; the kingdom of God (Psa. 2:1-12; 72:8; Dan. 2:44; 7:27; Num. 24:17; Rev. 11:15; Zech. 14:9; 9:10).

(c) There will be but one religion, the true one; the religion of Christ and his government (Isa. 45:23-25; 52:1,7-10; 66:17-23; Zech. 14:16; 8:23; 9:7; Rev. 5:9-14; Zeph. 3:9; Mal. 1:11).

(d) All idols and idolators shall be destroyed (Isa. 2:18; 42:17; Psa. 97:7; Zech. 13:2).

(e) War "shall cease to the ends of the earth" (Psa. 46:9; Isa. 2:4; 9:5; Hos. 2:18; Zech. 9:10; Ezek. 39:9,10; Rev. 20:1-3).

(f) Premature death will exist no more (Isa. 65:20-23; Zech. 8:4,5).

(g) The land of Israel will be transformed from barrenness to fertility, being made beautiful, fruitful, and glorious (Isa. 35:1; 41:18,19,20; Amos 9:13-15; Isa. 60:13; 65:17-25; Zech. 8:3-8,12).

(h) The city of Jerusalem will be built again, broadened, enlarged, and adorned by the "precious things" of all nations (Psa. 72:10; Isa. 26:15, Revised Version; Zech. 14:20, Revised Version; Isa. 33:17, Revised Version; Jer. 31:38; Isa. 60:10-18; Hag. 2:6-9; Jer. 3:17).

(i) The Jews and Israelites will become fast friends and a united nation, with whom the Gentiles will join to yield a national and happy obedience to the King of kings, the Lord of hosts and ruler of the whole earth (Zech. 8:23; Jer. 3:17,18; Rev. 15:4; Isa. 25:7,8; 2:2,3; 45:14-25; Ezek. 37:21-24).

(j) There will be a sevenfold increase of light, both solar and lunar (Isa. 4:5; 30:26; 60:19; Zech. 2:5; 14:6,7; Rev. 21:11,18,22-26; 22:5).

(k) The earth and its animal inhabitants, to a large extent, will partake of the blessings of the times (Isa. 11:6-9; 65:25; Hos. 2:18; Ezek. 34:25,28; Rom. 8:19-23; Rev. 22:3).

II. The Reign of Christ is a Transitional Period

The subjects of the kingdom of God, the remnants of the Jewish and Gentile nations who "find grace" (Jer. 31:2) and survive as "the left of the nations" (Zech 14. 16) at the coming of Christ and the setting up of the kingdom of God, multiply rapidly with the pangs of child-birth mitigated. They soon develop into numerous and strong nations. Some of the people are righteous, and some of them are wicked. Sin and death continue among both classes in a modified form during the reign of Christ (Gen. 3:16; 1 Tim. 2:15; Ex. 1:19; Isa. 66:7-9; Lev. 23:10-20; 1 Cor. 15:23-26; Mal. 3:18; Jas. 1:18; Rev. 14:1; 5:10; Ezek. 44:22,25; Isa. 66:20; Zech. 8:4; Isa. 60:21).

III. There is a "Little Season" of Judgment After the Thousand Years Expire

During this "season" the just and the unjust of that age, including both the living and the dead, are judged. The righteous are approved and immortalized; the wicked are rejected and consigned to shame and the second death. Mortality has now been abolished by salvation and destruction, and death, "the last enemy," destroyed (Rev. 20; 21; 1 Cor. 15:24-28).

IV. The Supremacy of Christ Ends; God's Direct Supremacy Begins

With the abolition of "all enemies" from the presence of the Lord and from the face of the earth, there comes a change in the administration of the kingdom of God. With all the wicked "cut off," none remain but the righteous, who are redeemed, glorified, and immortalized, and who inherit the earth forever. Christ's work as Prophet, Priest, Savior, and King is now finished; and he presents a redeemed earth and a glorified people to his Father, who takes the kingdom into his own hands and reveals himself without mediation (Matt. 5:8; 1 Cor. 11:3; 15:23-28; Eph. 1:10,22; Heb. 2:5-9; Rev. 21:1-7; 22:3).

Synthetic Remarks

1. THE PURPOSE OF CHRIST'S REIGN IS TO SUBDUE "ALL ENEMIES"

THE KINGDOM of God is designed for gracious ends. Its establishment means the destruction of the wicked, the salvation of the righteous, and the emancipation of the nations from the thraldom of sin. "All the foundations of the earth are out of course" (Psa. 82:5). The riches of the earth are "cornered" by the opulent and hoarded away in the palaces of a surfeited few. In a world of plenty the masses of humanity, through "man's inhumanity to man," misrule, and oppression, are forced to eke out a miserable existence, weltering in poverty, ignorance, and squalor. "The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof" (Psa. 24:1); but his liberality has been selfishly monopolized by the coveteous and fraudulently squandered by the prodigal. The earth is filled with a surplusage of God's goodness which he has lavished upon the sons of men (Psa. 33:5): but his bounty has been rapaciously plundered by pirates and "food sharks" and doled out at exorbitant prices to famishing millions. We are sorely in need of a Savior, a Great One; and God has provided him whom he will soon send to deliver us (Isa. 19:20; Acts 3:20). "Jesus is the One." When he comes he will cure the world's ills by setting up the kingdom of God. It is through the kingdom of God and the reign of Christ that "all rule and all authority and all power" are subdued to God. "He must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death" (1 Cor. 15:24-26). So completely will all things be "gathered together in one in Christ" and put under his feet that God alone is "excepted" from the otherwise universal subjugation (Eph. 1:10; 1 Cor. 15:27). "All enemies" includes evils as well as personal adversaries, which is apparent from the fact that "death" is catalogued as one of them, and is said to be the "last" one destroyed. All evil on earth is to be extirpated by the kingdom and reign of Christ. Evils and enemies are literal, and they must be literally destroyed or cured by a literal Judge and Redeemer. They cannot be literalized into times that are past, nor spiritualized into the history of Christianity, nor celestialized into heaven, nor allegorized into the perfect state after the millennium, nor idealized into oriential abstractions. "All enemies" comprehends more than can be computed; but the representative ones definitely specified in the lesson as among the "vanquished" may be taken as an epitome of them all. Synthetic remarks upon them here would be superfluous.

Fables of Orthodox Theology

A SOURCE of wonder that never grows old, and that has been present with me from my youth, is the mass of fables and superstitions taught in the name of orthodox, religion. The amazing spectacle of profound students and scholars, in ranks of thousands, yea millions, comprising the brightest minds of the world, for two thousand years, believing and teaching as God's truth a mass of fables that put to shame the most primitive legends of heathen mythology.

Taking for their guide and text book the Bible, and professing to believe its teaching, they preach from their pulpits strange and God-dishonoring doctrines not found therein, and refuse to believe and teach its many beautiful and glorious truths.

These churches differ upon some points of what they call theology, but also agree upon many. We will briefly consider in this article one of the fables common to all, namely, the punishment of the wicked, and their condition or state in death.

Modern orthodox churches, both Catholic and Protestant, agree that the real man, or soul, never dies. Only the body dies, so they say, and at the death of the body the soul, if wicked, is captured by fire-proof devils, who "plunge it down to hell in infinite despair."

Many learned and supposed devout priests and so-called divines, have tried to describe this horrible place, with its red hot walls, and bottomless seas of raging, roaring billows of fire, its millions of malignant fire-proof imps and devils, and its innumerable millions of screaming, moaning, blistered, tortured, immortal souls; and we are told that God, in his infinite love, mercy, goodness, gentleness and foreknowledge has decreed a perpetual continuation of this horrible triumph of deviltry—that after countless millions of years, their torment will be no nearer an end, than when it began.

Charles H. Spurgeon, one of the world's greatest theological writers and teachers, says: "When the poor soul shall find itself in the hands of angry fiends, it shall seem in that first moment as though it had been athirst for a thousand years." Benson, the learned Methodist commentator, says: "God himself is present in hell to see the punishment of these rebels, his fiery indignation kindles, and his increased fury feeds the flame of their torment, while his powerful presence and operation, maintain their being and render their powers (faculties) most acutely sensible, thus setting the keenest edge upon their pain and making it cut most intolerably deep. He will exert all his divine attributes to make them as wretched through eternity as the capacity of their nature will admit."

Eminent authors and evangelists, such as Wesley and Watts, tell us that while this scene is being enacted, the thunders of God's wrath shakes hell at its foundation; and that godly parents will go out and gaze over the brink into hell, and see the agony of their ungodly children, and sing praises to God for his judgment, wisdom and power.

Did you say absurd, dear reader? Yes, it is absurd, and it may be that you seldom hear it preached at your church, but it matters not whether you are Protestant or Catholic, the absurdity is a part of the creed of your church, and by accepting a creed that contains such God-dishonoring doctrines, you renounce the truth as it is in Jesus, and place between yourself and your God a gulf that can never be bridged.

In striking contrast to above lurid fables, let us turn to a few of the many plain statements of Scripture concerning the punishment of the wicked.

"The wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23).

"Whoso despiseth the word, shall be destroyed" (Prov. 13:13).

"The soul that sinneth it shall die" (Ezek. 18:4). 18:4).

"The Lord preserveth all them that love him, but all the wicked will he destroy" (Psa. 45:20).

"The wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs; they shall consume; into smoke shall they consume away" (Psa. 37:20).

"The transgressors shall be destroyed together, the end of the wicked shall be cut off." "They shall be ashes, under the soles of your feet, in the day that I will do this, saith the Lord." Obadiah says: "They shall be as though they had not been."

In view of these, and a host of other Scriptures equally as strong, we can but conclude that none but the wilfully blind, only those who wilfully close their eyes, and stubbornly refuse to open them, can fail to see the absurdity of this horrible, and God-dishonoring doctrine of eternal torment in hell.

The Catholic adds still another feature to the popular monstrosity. Cardinal Gibbons, on page 247 of his book, "The Faith of Our Fathers," says: "The Catholic Church teaches that besides a place of eternal torments for the wicked, there exists in the next life a middle state of temporary punishment for those who have died in venial sin. She (the church) also teaches us that although the souls consigned to this intermediate state, commonly called purgatory, cannot help themselves, they may be aided by the suffrages (prayers) of the faithful (priests) on earth." It is a fact that millions of dollars are paid every year by grief-stricken relatives to slick coated and smooth-tongued priests for prayers to release their loved ones from an imaginary place of torment called Purgatory. It seems incredible that modern intelligent men and women, whose judgment is sound and good on ordinary subjects, can be deceived by an artifice so shallow. But a corrupt and grasping priesthood knows full well that if they can but plant their heathen fable deep in the minds of their people, it becomes a certain source of vast revenue to them; for where is there a father, mother, sister or brother, wife or husband who would not feely give their last dollar to help loved ones out of that place of torment?

Dear reader, this foolish and God-dishonoring fable of eternal torments in hell is but one of many taught by orthodox churches, but space forbids mention of others at this time. In conclusion I wish to say most emphatically, that, no church, it matters not how ancient its history, or how numerous, wealthy, learned, or refined its teachers and members; no church which has room in its creed for this horrible doctrine which attributes to a just, merciful, allwise and loving God and Father, a character that a fiend would blush with shame to own, can in any sense be called the true church of God.

S. H. THOMAS.

Walking With Jesus

Every day, every hour,
Let me feel thy cleansing power,
May thy tender love to me
Bind me closer, closer, Lord to thee.

THAT IS our prayer. It is heart felt. Every day this desire to know Jesus better, to become more and more like him, to keep step with him as we walk together, grows deeper and stronger. But how do we succeed in carrying out our desires? It does no good to pray if we do not do our part in bringing about the answer to our prayers. Walking with Jesus, keeping tight hold of his hand all the while, is a pretty solemn thing to do, even for a single day. Not a thing done but what he sees it; not a word spoken but he hears it; not a thought indulged in that is not known unto him. "All is open unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do."

No wonder we are admonished "to think no evil," to "bridle our tongues," to keep ourselves pure, to be patient toward all men. kind, compassionate, forgiving. Are we? What about the naughty thoughts you had about the man you imagined had not made an honest division of some wood in which both he and yourself had an interest? Were they kind thoughts, patient thoughts, thoughts that Jesus would have approved? Would you have spoken them where he could have heard them? You know you would not, and you did the right thing when you went right to the man and asked him how it was, and found that it was yourself that was in the wrong. Then it was that you kept step with Jesus. Then it was that you overcame as he overcame.

In the morning you thought "what a blessed day I am going to have today walking with Jesus." But things go all awry. The child disobeys; he cannot remember; he wheels the manure into the hayfield instead of putting it where the oats are to be sown in the spring. There it is, little mounds of it in long regular rows! And he has been told so many times not to put it there! Can you keep step with Jesus here? Not quite. You find fault. The bridle is not kept on your tongue. You forget to "let patience have her perfect work"; forget that the poor child did not mean to do wrong, did not mean to disobey, but only to help you. How it must rasp on his nerves to hear you fret!

Brother Woodward used to say, "It is a fine thing to be a Christian." Indeed it is; to be holy as God is holy; to let no impure word proceed out of our mouths'; to be "without spot or wrinkle or any such thing"; to walk in the footsteps of Jesus not only one day, but all the days. But we are given only one day at a time. Let us walk that one with Jesus; trust the Father for one day; ask for needful food for one day; pray not to be abandoned when tempted this one day; pray to be delivered from evil today; to be given strength for today; grace for today; and so endure to the end, that we may be saved.

Remarks

UPON RETURNING from our Kansas City meeting, we had intended to go at once to Rene, Col., as previously arranged; but a letter from Sister Grimsley said flu, so had better wait a little. Then bad weather set in. These are conditions over which we have no control. When a rail road man is making the schedule for trains, he knows that between some stations are steep grades, that trains cannot maintain schedule time, so he has to count on that delay, and a higher rate of speed at other points, so in the entire run the schedule is maintained. If by any neglect of the train crew the train gets behind, it is often impossible to make it up, and the result is the train is late, connections are missed, and passengers left.

So in our work: we find up grades and side tracks. Then when these set backs are overcome and we have a clear track: we have to speed up to make schedule time. The main thing is to see that none of the crew neglect their duty. A conductor once told me that the engineer who was pulling our train could never be caught off his guard. He said, "I never signal him to go, but what he is watching and ready." That is what I call efficiency. I heard an engineer once say to his conductor, "You fellows fool around, and don't get started, and seem to think I have nothing to do but make up lost time." So it does not depend on one. So we learn the lesson that it is team work that gets there on time, barring accidents or conditions over which they have no control.

It is said in great league ball teams, the manager who can succeed in getting his team to work together is a winner. So any one person in any of these organized bodies can by neglect of duty, delay the train or lose the game. The manager of the ball team puts each man in the position he is best fitted to occupy, and in that position he is expected to do his best. Just so in the body of Christ. God sets the members in that body as it has pleased him, not us. Then success depends on all working together. The pitcher in a ball game cannot win a game alone; the engineer cannot keep on time alone; and the preacher can never win in the most important of all work, alone. Every member in the body must do his part. It is just as necessary in the body of Christ, as in other bodies. This being true, we ought to ask ourselves if we are in any way neglecting our duty, and so hindering the work. These are matters worth thinking about; and not only that, but put into practice. When the body is completed we will not get in by that fact, but by what we have done.

On the 17th I went to Palmer, where I always receive a hearty welcome. Upon arrival I was conveyed to the house of Brother C. W. Zeller. After a beautiful supper we proceeded to the place of meeting, where we met the balance of the household of faith. How good and cheering to meet those who are sound in the faith, and have cheer in their looks and actions. Did you ever notice the feeling of awe one has in the presence of a corpse? We have about the same feeling in the presence of brethren who are dead spiritually. When we meet with those who are really alive, it puts life and vigor in us. The second night we accepted the invitation of Brother and Sister King; and here we enjoyed a night of rest and a day of talk on the things concerning the kingdom. Then little Neva took the flu, and they were unable to attend any more of the meetings.

The first evening I discoursed from the 91st Psalm, and showed them it is a wrong idea to think we have to wait until we reach the kingdom to receive the blessings of God: many are promised now. We may expect trials and persecutions, but many blessings are promised that make these afflictions light. See the first verse, and consider we are under the shadow of the Almighty, and in verse 2 we can say the Lord is our refuge and our fortress. Then how wonderful, "He surely shall deliver thee from the snare of the fowler, and from the noisesome pestilence."

I am in touch with our people from sea to sea and from Canada to the Gulf, in one way or another, and never heard of the flu that doctors tell us claimed more victims than the war, taking but two members of the church, and one or two this year. It is remarkable. Read the next verse: "He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust. His truth shall be thy shield and buckler." Wonderful promises of great blessings. We do not have to wait for those things do we? I fear we do not realize it as we should. Then note the 5th verse. If we are confident in God's truth and promises, fear flees; and verse 6 tells what we are not to be afraid of. Are we exercising perfect trust, or are we afraid of the pestilence like others? Read verse 7: "A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand; but it shall not come near thee."

Here is a promise: do we believe it, or do we distrust God who so graciously promised this rich blessing? The Jews had similar promises made to them, and they were carried out to the letter, when they had fulfilled their part of the contract. I am afraid we are much like them: when the water supply gets short we begin to murmur, and think we are going to famish with thirst; and when food gets scarce, we are afraid we will starve We should not think of starving, but think about our own lives, how faithful or unfaithful we are. I have worked for the Lord over thirty years, and could fill pages telling you of his blessings and care. Many times it has looked dark and forboding, but in the nick of time help would come; and so many times from where I was not looking. So I never starved. God added the necessary things as he has promised. Read the rest of the chapter and ponder it well. The angels are encamped about us, not always celestial messengers; but they are around us in the shape of brothers and sisters, who become fathers and mothers to us in the time of need, instead of some heavenly messenger. God prompts some good brother or sister to come to us with kind words and a helping hand in our times of need. There is no doubt that at all times the assistance of earthly messengers will not avail. Many ministered to the needs of the Savior, yet times were when this was not sufficient, and the Father would send higher aid. Whichever it is, it never fails to come when needed. If so, the proof is that we have been unfaithful ourselves.

Well, dear ones, I just started out to make a few remarks in connection with my monthly report; had no idea it would lengthen out so, but I was just obeying the promptings of my heart. I took a severe cold and had to close the meeting for a couple of days. I was at Brother Zeller's during this brief illness, but was well cared for and soon at work again. I then visited the home of Brother and Sister Fred Forbes. They took me to their daughter's, south of Palmer, where we enjoyed a day of study, and talked of these things that are most important in these times of unrest. Brother and Sister Lamberson are of the true kind. Then a visit at Brother Frank Forbes, where one can always get over an attack of the blues. Brother Forbes knows that we are not laboring for the meat that perishes, yet he knows we would perish without it, so he said here is a piece to take along with you. How these remembrances gladden the heart; and if Sister King knew how those nice fresh eggs were enjoyed, she would be well paid. We have a son who is making a fight for his life with tuberculosis; and so well has he observed the rules known to effect a cure, that he has made good progress. Fresh eggs are one of the main foods, so Sister King and Sister Forbes who have remembered this and contribute of their stock, will get their reward. A letter came this morning from good faithful Sister Courtney, saying, "We are sending you a case of fresh eggs." Surely the kingdom will be blessed by those faithful ones. We are now starting on a six week's campaign. Pray for us.

Your brother in Christ,

ALMUS ADAMS.

DEATH

AT THIS time when Sir Conon Doyle, Sir Oliver Lodge and a host of lesser lights are doing their best to turn an already unsteady world up side down through their attempts of forcing spiritual doctrine and beliefs on the people. it is refreshing to read the following poem, "Death is Death," from the gifted pen of James Russell Lowell:

Your logic, my friend, is perfect,
Your morals most drearily true;
But since the earth clashed on her coffin,
  I keep hearing that and not you.
Console if you will, I can bear it,
  'Tis a well-meant alms of breath;
But not all the preaching since Adam
  Can make death other than death.

We have lost Brother Faulk by removal to New Zealand.

We have had a pleasant visit from Sister Wick, of Youngstown, Ohio.

The reader is requested to turn to the Young People's Page and make a note of Brother Donaldson's new address.

On account of illness Sister Mae Westfall has returned home. She has submitted to a necessary operation, but letters from her mother and Sister Wm. Eidemiller say she is "doing all right."

Brother Samuel Giles, by investigation, has found himself in harmony with us in all the fundamentals of the gospel, and has identified himself with our fellowship. Brother Giles formerly belonged to a religious body which approximates the truth in some things. Much to the credit of Brother Giles, after a deliberate investigation, he has left the shadow of the truth for the truth itself.

The series of articles by Brother Strickler which have appeared under the title "Out of Darkness Into Light," are now published in book form, and may be ordered at 25 cents per copy. They make a book of 111 pages. It is a book worth having, even by those who may differ with the author in some things. We regard the latter part of the book as specially fine; it teaches the responsibility of enlightened rejectors with such clearness and force that Christadelphians will never be able to answer the arguments. We have only a limited number of these books, so let those who want one send in their order at once. Send to The Restitution Publishing Company, not to the Editor.

The Sickness of Epaphroditus

I HAVE a friend who is a devoted Christian Scientist, and I gave him a few weeks ago Bible Lesson VIII, "The Holy Spirit and Its Gifts." Of all your lessons I think this one is the masterpiece. My friend read and returned it saying that all sickness was caused by "mortal mind" sin. When I cited Timothy, Trophimus, etc., instances which you quote on page seven, he did not hesitate to call these saints "sinners." What case of sickness in the Bible would you use to show that sickness is sometimes separate from sin ?

Editorial Comments

EPAPHRODITUS is a good illustration of sickness apart from sin. Of him Paul says in Phil. 2:25: "I supposed it necessary to send to you Epaphroditus, my brother, and companion in labor, and fellow-soldier, but your messenger, and he that ministered to my wants." Calling Epaphroditus "a fellow soldier" shows how full of danger the work of the gospel was in that age, and the great courage it took for ministers to proclaim it faithfully. Epaphroditus, then, was a bold and courageous man. "He that ministered to my wants" shows that this "messenger" of the gospel was both rich and generous. Yet of this good man, a man so good that we dare a Scientist to find any "mortal mind" in him, it is said in the 26th verse: "He longed after you all, and was full of heaviness, because that ye had heard that he had been sick." The 27th verse goes on to tell how sick he was: "For indeed he was sick nigh unto death: but God had mercy on him; and not on him only, but on me also, lest I should have sorrow upon sorrow." Here we have a "messenger" of the gospel sick—so "low" that he almost died. This is a stubborn fact that no Scientist can explain away. To say Epaphroditus had "sinned" is no explanation at all; besides, it contradicts the Bible. It tells what brought this serious illness upon him in the 30th verse: "For the work of Christ he was nigh unto death, not regarding his life, to supply your lack of service towards me." By "the work of Christ" Paul means Epaphroditus' "fellow-soldier" service by preaching in Rome, his personal attendance on the apostle when he was in need; the fatigue of which service brought on him a sickness which endangered his life. "Not regarding his life" he labored to excess and "broke down." And, mark it, "for the work of Christ"! Here we have, not sin and sickness, but "the work of Christ" and sickness. If any Scientist has an explanation of this to give we will be glad to publish it in The Restitution.

Christian Adventists and the Truth

FRIENDLY CRITICISMS OF LOVE

BROTHER ADAMS, a few weeks since, spoke of an Adventist minister in the West who sought union with the Church of God. That is, the Adventist Church and the Church of God should go together and form one body. As there is unity of faith in both denominations on the question of "conditional immortality," the suggestion at first sounds both reasonable and scriptural. We have personally approached a few representative Adventists with this proposition, but they were not very communicative. They do not "warm up" either towards us or the doctrine of "conditional immortality" which we preach. Excepting "Messiah's Advocate," our name never appears in their papers. They never have "room" for anything we write, although our writings are in defence of "conditional immortality." In fact, they seem to use the term "conditional immortality" without much meaning, for when they are asked upon what "conditions" immortality may be obtained, they appear perplexed. "Conditional immortality" without conditions is a queer use of language, even to Adventists; and yet when it comes to stating conditions, they are reluctant, reticent, silent. The reason they hesitate to say what the conditions are is because they are afraid they will be drawn into stating obligations which some "pious" Methodist has not discharged; and so on with infants, heathen, etc. Conditional immortality, when pressed upon their attention, soon gets them in difficult places; and then the mask falls off, and they tell us that God is a respecter of persons; that the same "conditions" do not apply to all; that Methodists are saved one way, Adventists another; while for infants and heathen there are no conditions at all! Conditional immortality without any conditions!

Objection, then, to union with the Christian Adventist denomination arises from the truth they believe rather than any error which they may teach. As this remark may not be understood we will illustrate our meaning by an article from Elder S. Forsey in "Messiah's Advocate" of March 3rd, page 59. Elder Forsey is writing on "How I Became an Adventist." He says:

"I am not an Adventist because my parents were. They were Methodists, and I was brought up in the doctrines of the Primitive Methodist Church. The training I received from a godly mother, and the ministry of the church very early brought me by the gracious influence of the Holy Spirit under conviction of sin. We were then living in the Western counties of England. Among my earliest recollections I was accompanied by my two elder brothers to a "campmeeting" a short distance from Weymouth, where they were appointed to speak from an old farm wagon drawn up in a meadow, with the people sitting about on the grass. Loitering somewhat behind, as boys will, a little fellow about my own age and size came up beside me, and walked, looking into my face. He said, "Are you a Christian ?" And he disappeared as suddenly as he came. I never knew from whence he came or where he went. He might have been an angel from God for all I knew. I only know that the question was vital to my salvation, and very soon after I was truly converted. I was then about ten years of age, and under deep conviction of sin. I went out to the 'penitent form' in the evening service at the Chapel, but did not find peace that night. The next day, mother and I with my sister Annie went to the minister's house, and there what a blessed never-to-be-forgotten day (March 20, 1870) at No. 2 Spring Gardens, Weymouth, kneeling between mother, sister, and the minister's wife, I found pardon, and my burden of guilt rolled away. I went from my Western home to London in the early summer of the same year.

"I remained with the Methodist body till the year 1888. I became an aggressive worker amongst them; entered the ministry, laboring day and night almost, in the interest of the work. I was known and called by some, who knew me best, a "red-hot Methodist." In the winter of 1885 Elder Miles Grant came to the town of Eastbourne where we lived, I being then married. He held meetings at the Congregational Church, speaking from his large chart every night. Wife and I trudged knee deep in the snow to attend the meetings; and oh, such meetings they were! We were interested and disturbed greatly in mind concerning our former belief: my dear wife, perhaps more so than I was. Nevertheless we felt we were forever spoiled for those things of our early teaching. At least some of the doctrines had been proved to be unscriptural, we were compelled to abandon them. Brother Grant left our town before we became established in the faith, and we were left as sheep without a shepherd. But God knew we wanted to know his truth, and, bless his name, he sent his servants from "Macedonia," Turkey, to bring us into the gracious light and liberty of the "truth as it is in Jesus." Elder J. C. Smith, wife, Sister Alice Cunningham, and Brother Martin C. came to Eastbourne in the early days of 1888, and began a blessed work. The first Sunday of their being there, a meeting was held in the morning in a hired hall. I was invited to attend, and did so, and I said to myself: "I have heard strange things today," but somehow, stubborn as I was, they took hold of me, though I did not care to admit it. On the way home from the meeting, in company with Elder Smith, the late lamented Brother F. Kitcher and others, the subject of baptism came up for discussion, and before leaving the brethren to go to my home, I had seen baptism in its true scriptural mode, and in meeting the wife I remarked: "I think I shall be immersed, my dear." She replied: "If you do, I shall; your God shall be my God, and your people shall be my people." The next Sunday we went down into the sea by immersion with a number of others from the Methodist Church, August 8, 1888."

Our readers know we hold the "Messiah's Advocate" and its Editor, Elder J. J. Schaumburg, in high esteem, therefore our comments upon this extract are in love. It is used only for illustrative purposes. First, then, Elder Forsey was a Methodist, "a red-hot Methodist," entirely ignorant of "conditional immortality." Now in this ignorant state "a godly mother, and the minister of the church," neither of whom knew anything about the gospel of the kingdom, "very early brought me (him) by the gracious influence of the Holy Spirit under conviction of sin." This spirit could not have been "the spirit of truth" (John 15:26; 1 John 5:6), for it communicated to him no truth. It was "another spirit" that goes along with "another Jesus" (2 Cor. 11:4). How could a mother with her "understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them" (her), be "godly" (Eph. 4:18)? How could a "ministry" that did not minister the truth, help him? And how could "the spirit of the truth" operate without any "truth" to operate in? Conditional immortality is not worth much if the Holy Spirit can do saving work without the conditions being obeyed. Keep "conditional immortality" in mind as we read on. Elder Forsey went to a "campmeeting." A boy said something to him, and "he might have been an angel from God for all I know." "Very soon after," he continues, "I was truly converted." The "penitent form" failed him, but "kneeling between his mother, sister and minister's wife," none of whom knew the truth, "I found pardon." So far we have a godly mother, a ministry, a campmeeting, an angel, a penitent form, and kneeling but not a solitary word about the truth. Who ever read in the Bible of a sinner being "truly converted" by an angel? Where do we read in the Book of anyone being pardoned at the "penitent form?" and where do we read in the sacred volume of a sinner being converted while he was "kneeling"?

Our objection to all this insipid "experience" talk is not so much because it is not so, as that it sucks all the life-blood out of "conditional immortality." It leaves the body of truth which Adventists claim to believe as limp and useless as a human body would be without bones. Here is "a red-hot Methodist" ignorant of conditional immortality from top to bottom finding "pardon" by simply "kneeling"! Calling the immortality of the soul "the serpent's lie" now cannot be justified, and all the criticisms and denunciations which they heap upon current orthodox teaching should be stopped since they claim to have been "truly converted" when they believed all these falsehoods. If a man can be saved by believing falsehoods, of what saving benefit is there in believing the truth? None whatever—absolutely none. Elder Forsey was not baptized until 1888. The "blessed, never-to be forgotten day (March 20, 1870)" was when he knelt and got pardoned! "Truly converted" and also "pardoned" eighteen years before he was baptized! Baptism, along with all other truth which Adventists profess to believe, is cast away as worthless junk! There is no need to discuss our "differences" with the Adventists. Let them admit that the truth they believe in common with us is worth something, that it is vital, essential, saving truth, and the unification of the two bodies will result. But so long as they substitute error for truth, and teach that error has as much saving efficacy as the truth, we must stand aloof from them as we do from all other sects which nullify the gospel by teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.

DEAD EDITOR:

I AM a girl of 13 years, and live in the country. I have no church to go to unless I walk two miles. I would like to go very well, but cannot on account of bad weather. I believe the truth and understand the Bible fairly well. I cannot write as others do, but will do as the Bible says. The Lord helps those who help themselves, so I will do the best I can. I am learning things that concern the Bible, and am trying to teach others to do the same; but they will not listen to me. Jesus died to save us from our sins; was nailed upon the cross, and suffered many scorns and insults. Let us try and do as he says, and keep his commandments. I believe in one Lord, one faith, and one baptism, and the soon coming King. I have not been where I have any chance to join the church or put on Christ by baptism, but expect to in the future. I hope that all believers will pray for me.

ELSIE GRUBBS.

DEAR BROTHERS AND SISTERS:

I WOULD like to write a few lines in regard to the question to be discussed concerning the Advent Christian Church. "Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water. Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering for he is faithful that promised, and let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works" (Heb. 10:22-24). "For the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God; and if it first begins at us, what shall be the end of them that obey not the gospel of God?" (1 Pet. 4:17).

In this life only can we prepare ourselves for life everlasting. Tomorrow may be too late for some of us. If we have not been faithful to Jesus we are not ready for tomorrow. Are we helping to build up the church? Are we contending for the truth? Are we sowing to the spirit? If not we are sowing to the flesh, and he that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the spirit shall of the spirit reap life everlasting.

Look to yourselves, that we lose not those things which we have wrought, but that we receive a full reward. When Jesus shall come with all the holy angels with him, his garments shining above the brightness of the noonday sun! Are we ready to meet him? How necessary it is, brothers and sisters, that we should strive with all our strength that we will not be overcome by worldly affairs, pleasures, and lusts which draw away from the spirit. If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his. When Jesus comes he will find some of us loving the world instead of his will. Our Lord has given everyone of us a talent, and we must work to increase our talents. Faith without works is dead. Peter says add to faith, virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness. Let us love one another as God loves us, not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another and so much the more as ye see the day approaching (Heb. 10:25). How important it is that we should come to the Bible and believe its literal testimony, without spiritualizing or mystifying its language. It is very common for ministers to take a text from some of the prophets, and apply it to themselves and to their churches. There is no certainty save the Scriptures only. I believe the Scriptures to be God's word, and endeavor to find the true sense of it, and want to live according to it.

People may call themselves by the names of the various sects to which they belong, and know and think of each other by these names, but it all amounts to just nothing at all. These things are all the thinking of the flesh. Christ will only know them that have his name upon them in his own appointed way. So let us be faithful and walk in the true light. He is our strength and when the trials of life meet us he will help us. He is willing to help us at all times.

Your sister in Christ,

MATILDA FENIMORE.

DEAR EDITOR OF THE RESTITUTION:

DEAR BRETHREN and sisters scattered about throughout the land: I wish to say something but hardly know what to say first or how to say it. I am lonely; I am all alone in my belief. No one will listen to what I say, even though I read the Bible to them and tell them my belief about our Savior, who is soon coming back to this earth to destroy the works of this sin-cursed world and make a paradise for those that follow in his footsteps by doing the will of the Father. They say, "Well, that is a very peculiar way you have of talking." But we know that the Scripture reads that the way of truth shall be evil spoken of. "For the heart of this people is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed, lest they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their hearts, and should be converted" (Acts 28:27).

Sometimes I just wonder what this world is coming to. The people are forgetting that there is a higher power. Their minds seem to be taken up with worldly things, the dollars and cents. We who read and search the Scriptures to find out the way we should walk in this life, and to prepare for the life to come can see how this old world is moving along, fulfilling all the signs of the times. We know that the time draweth nigh, and we should all be working and doing something. But it seems to me that I am in a field where I can do nothing. We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted but not forsaken (2 Cor. 4:8, 9). No, dear brethren, I am not forsaken. While I am all alone here, so far as my belief is concerned, I am just as strong in the one faith as if I had one hundred of the brethren and sisters with me. Why? Because I read and search the Scriptures, and I find that there is just one way, not many ways, or that "some other way" will do. And I want to study to show myself a workman that needeth not be ashamed, ready at all times to give an answer for the hope that is in me, ever looking to Jesus, who is the Author and finisher of our faith, who gave himself for us that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people zealous of good works (Titus 2:14). Although the brethren are far from me, most of them, I ask the prayers of all that may be able to stand the test, let come what will. I can tell by reading The Restitution those that can work are up and doing; and their work is not altogether a failure. How it makes my heart rejoice to hear of the good work! I hope some day that I can have the privilege of being where I can go to church and be with those of the same precious faith; but if not, my prayer is that we may all meet in the kingdom of our Lord and Savior, who doeth all things well.

Your brother in Christ,

A. J. GRUBBS.

Obituary

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.—Psa. 116:15.

Harvey William Elton was born in Omaha, Neb., Dec. 10, 1914, died at Santa Anna, Cal., March 10, 1920. He was the second son of Enos and Carrie Elton.

It was with sad heart that we received the news of little Harvey's death. About a week ago we were at Brother Elton's home, and Harvey had had a little touch of the croup the night before; nothing of a severe nature appeared until a few days afterwards. He coughed considerably, and Sister Elton took him to the doctor, and he pronounced it a case of whooping cough. A couple of days afterwards he lost his voice, but did not appear sick at any time, as he was up and around all the time seemingly well as usual. Tuesday evening we were at their home; nothing but the hoarseness seemed to be the matter. During the night he had several coughing spells, and Wednesday A. M. he was seemingly worse. About 9:30 A. M. after having a coughing spell, he laid down upon the sofa, and Sister Elton thinking he was asleep, was busy at her sewing. She heard a sigh from him, and his face being turned from her, she came to the sofa and went to turn him towards her, but he had quietly fallen asleep to wake no more. Harvey's death was surely a great shock to all who knew him, as he was so generally loved by all because of his quiet loveable disposition. The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by H. L. Ladieu, of Tustin, Cal.

GOLDEN TEXT: Heb. 11:24-26

HE CHOSE THIS PATH FOR ME

HE CHOSE this path for thee.
  No feeble chance; nor hard relentless fate.
  But love, his love hath placed thy footsteps here.
He knew the way was rough and desolate;
  Knew how thy heart would often sink with fear,
Yet tenderly he whispered, "Child, I see
This path is best for thee."

He chose this path for thee,
  Though well he knew sharp thorns would pierce thy feet:
  Knew how brambles would obstruct thy way;
Knew all the hidden dangers thou wouldst meet;
  Knew how thy feet would falter every day.
And still the whisper echoed, "Yes, I see
This path is best for thee."

He chose this path for thee,
  What needst thou more? The sweeter truth to know,
  That all along these strange, bewildering ways,
O'er rocky steeps and where dark rivers flow,
  His loving arms will bear thee all the day.
A few steps more and thyself shall see
This path is best for thee.

HAVE FAITH IN GOD

Being an acknowledgement of God's lovingkindness; also answering many inquiries.

SINCE THE beginning of this month our address has been as above. We hope to make this our permanent abode till Jesus calls to take us to that better and brighter country, where sorrow and sighing shall be unknown, and joy and peace shall endure throughout eternity; where the Christ of God shall rule in equity and justice; where we shall know even as we are known.

In September last we told you we had sold the old home in which we had resided for over thirty-seven years; that we did not know where we were to go, but that we had explicit faith in our God and knew he would provide us a dwelling place. We now wish to testify that our faith was not misplaced, for when our friends heard of our plight we received several offers to share with them their home. We accepted the offer of Mr. Hartt, at the address which has been familiar to you for the past six months. Mr. Hartt, and the Misses Hartt have done everything possible to make our stay pleasant and agreeable, even to the extent of inviting us to spend our summer vacation with them at their country home at Shoreham, L. I.

In the Hartt home the parlors were allotted to our use; the back parlor was our sleeping quarters; while the front was our living room. In the beginning we ate all meals out, but after a while a plan was devised whereby we had breakfast each morning in our room. This simplified matters considerably and made us much more comfortable.

Of course we paid a monthly rental; still the arrangements were far from being on a business foundation. No matter what amount of money is paid it cannot compensate a family for having the privacy of their home invaded. There is one thing that makes us feel good, and that is, after our commingling for such a length of time we parted with friendship more firmly established than it was when we accepeted Mr. Hartt's most generous offer.

We do not know to what extent you are interested in these little personal affairs. We do know we have been most wonderfully blessed in having such comfortable quarters when so many have been without houses; we also know that it is God who has furnished us with them all, and what has been done for us will be done for you under like circumstances if you but place your faith in him who has even the hairs of our head numbered, and who watches the sparrows fall. Our duty is to love God with all our mind and understanding; accept Jesus as the Christ the Son of God; acknowledge him as our wisdom and righteousness and sanctification and redemption; be baptized into the name of Jesus and arise to walk in newness of life. This is the Christian attitude, and if we live up to our duty and privilege God never will forsake us. Do we not read that the eternal God is our refuge and strength, and that his everlasting arms are underneath us; signifying a holding up, a support. We all know what a shepherd is; and is not our God our shepherd? Yea, and he will provide the green pastures and the still waters.

God asks us to love and obey him, and in return he has promised us certain blessings. Many of these blessings are in the future and shall last throughout eternity; but a great many are for the present, and we now can enjoy them if we but ask in faith, nothing doubting. This we did and were rewarded. Let us come boldly to the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need.

So it is with boys and girls. If we allow thoughts and deeds that are wrong to stay in our hearts and minds we weaken our character. No matter how good we try to appear outwardly, sooner or later, when the testing time comes, our true character will be shown to those around us, and we shall fail to achieve those things that are best. So let us keep our heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life.—Sel. by E. W. KNAPP.

A COMPLETE EDUCATION

A GIRL'S education is most incomplete unless she has learned—

To cook.
To sew.
To mend.
To be gentle.
To value time.
To dress neatly.
To keep a secret.
To avoid idleness.
To be self-reliant.
To darn stockings.
To respect old age.
To make good bread.
To keep a house tidy.
To be above gossiping.
To make a home happy.
To control her temper.
To take care of the sick.
To take care of the baby.
To sweep down cobwebs.
To read the very best books.
To take plenty of active exercise.
To be a helpmate to her husband.
To keep clear of trashy literature.
To be light-hearted and fleet-footed.

To know her Bible, to love her God, to acknowledge Jesus as her Savior, and walk in his paths, to be a womanly woman under all circumstances.

BE PATIENT, BE THANKFUL

GRUMBLING is the easiest thing in the world to learn, but it is one of the most unprofitable after it is learned. It is useless to one who engages in it, for it never yet made a rough road smoother, a heavy burden lighter, or a long day shorter. It never mends ills; it always adds to them. And it is useless business to other people, for it furnishes wares that nobody wants.

HOW WE WRITE FOR OUR PAGE

By Marie K. Thomas.

Edith—Why do you want to write for The Restitution?

Marie—Because it will develop my talent. It may help others also.

E.—How do you go about getting subjects?

M.—We either read or have mother read us something from which we form our story. Sometimes we select a piece some one else has written.

E.—Do you think other little girls or boys could write for the Young People's Page?

M.—Yes, especially if some one older than they would assist by reading the piece or suggesting a topic. Then as they grow older they will be able to handle the matter themselves.

E.—After all is said, what do you think should be our greatest object in writing for The Restitution?

M.—My sole object in writing is I believe I am working for Jesus.

E.—Would your advise me to write?

M.—Yes; for while you will help ochers, you will receive the greatest benefit yourself.

E.—I thank you, Marie; you have been convincing. I will try.

THE VILLAGE FIRE ENGINE

ONCE UPON a time the village bought a brand new fire engine. It had bright red wheels, a shiny brass covered boiler, and for many years was the joy and pride of the village fire department, and helped to put out many a fire, with its powerful pump that could throw a stream of water clear over the roof of the highest house in town. But as the town grew larger it became a city and put in a system of waterworks, and the fire engine was left standing in the engine house. When the town had a Fourth of July celebration or some other special event, they would polish it up and draw it through the streets as part of the show.

One night a house caught fire outside the city limits beyond the reach of the water from the hydrants. Some one thought of the fire engine standing ready in the engine house, so they hitched on the horses and drew it to the fire. They put the hose down into a well, got up steam and tried to start the pumps; but they would not work because the pumps themselves, having been neglected for so many years, were all eaten out with rust. While everything looked all right outside, inside it was all wrong and failed to do what was expected of it.

The Restitution

A Paper Representing the Church of God, and Devoted to the Exposition and Defense of the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God and the Name of Jesus Christ.—Acts 8:12.

VOLUME 72 CLEVELAND, O. APRIL 13th, 1920. NUMBER 14

Gethsemane

OUR SAVIOR knelt in solemn prayer,
His heart was burdened 'neath his care;
Alone he to the Father prayed,
By faith and hope his heart was staid.

He unto God in heaven above,
Prayed for the objects of his love;
There 'neath the olive and the vine,
The scene was holy and divine.

His burdened heart 'neath load of grief,
In agony there sought relief;
He to the Father breathed his prayer,
And placed his all in God's kind care.

His sweat like drops of blood descend,
There hope and sorrow sadly blend;
The angels came his grief to share,
And strengthened him his load to bear.

His earthly sufferings now are o'er,
The tomb could hold his form no more;
The angel rolled the stone away,
He rose to endless life and day.

"I am he that once was dead."
I now am your triumphant head;
I now ascend to God's right hand,
Go preach my gospel o'er the land.

Bible Teaching on Responsibility

Friendly Strictures on Brother Allen D. Strickler's Recent Article

TO THE EDITOR OF THE RESTITUTION:

I HAVE read with interest the article by Brother Strickler, especially the last one in The Restitution of March the ninth, and in very much that he states I am in hearty agreement; but there are some of the statements that seem to me to be unsupported by Scripture. I would like to ask him a few questions through The Restitution. I do not wish to be understood as finding fault, as I am convinced that he is further advanced in the study of this subject than I am; but some of his statements present to me a difficulty which perhaps he could make plain. I may say that my views on responsibility are in the formative stage, and I like to feel my way very carefully so that I may hold fast only to that which is true.

In this article of March the ninth, Brother Strickler shows that all mankind have been under divine law from Adam down to the present time, and all with one exception (Christ) have consciously or unconsciously come under the penalty of the law, which is death. Thus far I am in full agreement with him; but he now makes a statement that gives me a feeling of bewilderment; and I find that either I greatly misunderstand him or must dissent from his view very strongly indeed.

BROTHER STRICKLER'S STATEMENT

"Therefore as a matter of fact all sinners, all men and women who by thought, word, or deed have sinned, whether they know it or not, have incurred the penalty of God's law, which is not natural death. This is not only a logical but a Scriptural deduction. If it is not so then the whole system of Bible atonement, forgiveness, repentance, and remission of sins breaks down."

Our Brother admits that this is rather startling: it had that effect on me. He attaches tremendous importance to the truth of his premise that the penalty for sin is not natural death; so much so that he thinks if his premise is not true then the whole Bible scheme for the salvation of man breaks down. So grave an assertion requires a grave and thoughtful consideration.

Our brother is dealing with resurrectional responsibility. Now there is one point on which we are agreed; that is, that all who are in Christ by faith and baptism are responsible to a resurrection, whether they have been faithful to Christ or not. This I think is beyond dispute.

We now come to the question. Are there others who will be raised from the dead and called to account for the use they have made of this life? They have formed no relationship with Christ, and are still in Adam. There is no doubt that many Scriptures seem to teach a universal resurrection. John 5:27 is a case in point, "all that are in the graves shall hear his voice and come forth."

However, our brother does not teach universal resurrection. His claim is that some of those in Adam will be raised from the dead and be judged worthy to die again. The second death will be final.

HOW HE PROVES IT

His method of proving his position is this: first, he shows that all in Adam have been under law, and have by disobedience incurred the penalty of sin, which is death. Having established this, his next step is to divide the whole into two classes.

FIRST CLASS

All those who have been enlightened by a knowledge of God's will.

SECOND CLASS

All those who have lived and died in ignorance.

He then lays down his premises that natural death is not the penalty for sin. If this be true, neither the first nor the second class have yet suffered the penalty. The fate of the first class is, they will be raised at Christ's return and condemned to death. The fate of the second class is, they get off free, for the penalty for sin is never enforced.

This is his case as I see it, and as he himself says, it all hangs upon the truth of his premise that natural death is not the penalty for sin.

What are we to understand by "natural death"? Strictly speaking all death is natural. This is true of Adam before he sinned. If his nature was such that it was impossible for him to die then the law under which he was placed would have been of no force. This is clearly stated in the sentence pronounced on him. He originated from the dust; his doom was to return to the dust. How can we read this account and yet deny that Adam's death was the penalty for his disobedience.

THE LEGAL ASPECT

1. Adam placed under law.
2. Adam by disobedience, incurred the penalty.
3. Adam pleaded guilty.
4. Adam sentenced to death.
5. Immediate steps taken to make sure the sentence would be enforced: he is cut off from the tree of life.
6. The record shows that he died, and died because he had sinned.

Surely we have here a case by which to test Brother Strickler's theory of resurrectional responsibility. Adam was not deceived; he was an enlightened sinner. Without excuse he clearly comes into the class that our brother claims will be raised at the return of Christ to be judged and condemned to the second death.

We will now put the case in question form:

Question: Was not Adam already judged ? Answer, yes.

And sentenced ? Yes.

And executed ? Yes.

Well why is it necessary to reconsider the matter ? God cannot err in judgment.

This is an individual case. Let us take another where many are involved. At the time of the flood many must have been enlightened, as Noah was a preacher of righteousness. Of Noah it is said, "Thee have I seen righteous in this generation." Again we will try the question form:

Question: Is drowning a natural death, Yes.
Then is drowning the penalty for sin ? No.
Is drowning a natural death ? No.
Is it the death penalty for sin ? Yes.

Then why raise the enlightened among them and execute them the second time ?

When God sent Joshua to destroy the inhabitants of Canaan, when God assisted him by casting down great stones from heaven, and by causing the sun to stand still, are we to understand that this was the penalty of their sins ? When God sent Saul to utterly destroy those sinners the Amalekites, is not their sin and the penalty clearly indicated ?

If it is urged that this was not a natural death, we reply with the question, Is there a supernatural death ? Is it not as natural for a man to die when a sword is thrust through his body as it is to die of disease ? The truth is that there are many modes of dying, but there is only one kind of death, that is natural death.

This is clearly shown in reference to Christ in Heb. 2:16: "He took not on him the nature of angels: but he took on him the seed of Abraham." Heb. 2:9 explains this: "He was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death." It had to be natural for him to die, else he could not have served the purpose God had in view.

This same truth is taught in baptism. All who would be in Christ must voluntarily submit to death (in symbol). It is not the second death that is symbolized. This is shown by the fact that they are raised from the dead (in symbol) to walk in newness of life. By one man sin entered into the world, and the penalty followed, natural death. By one man the atonement was made, not by abrogating God's law, but by suffering the penalty, natural death.

A GREAT PRINCIPLE

In Rom. 6:7 Paul announces a great principle that governs all law, human and divine: "He that is dead is free from sin." In other words, he that has suffered the penalty of law is free from the law.

WHY DID CHRIST DIE ?

Was it because he had sin in the flesh ? I think not.

Was it because he inherited condemnation from Adam ? I think not.

Was it because he was made a substitute for other men's sins ? Decidedly not.

There is a great principle back of the Edenic law (under which Adam sinned) that may be stated thus:

The Creator has a right to expect and demand obedience from the creature he creates.

This principle was the ruling passion of Christ's life: "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me." It was in God's plan to rule the world in righteousness, that the chief ruler under him should be put to the test for obedience. The first Adam failed; the second Adam succeeded. Christ had broken no law, human or divine: he was under no condemnation, for he did always the things that pleased God. He died because his Father so willed it.

THE DESIGN OF THE GOSPEL

The design of the gospel is not to save men from dying, but to save them out of death. We are saved by hope to be realized at some future date.

THE SECOND DEATH

The second death is just as much a natural death as the first. This is shown by the fact that our only hope to escape its power is in a change of nature. The second death differs from the first in that in the first condemnation there was room left for God's redemptive plan. The second death shuts this out.

Brother Strickler tells us that in the case of those who are ignorant the penalty for sin will never be enforced. This shows us how far wrong premises will carry us. In his view natural death is not the penalty for sin; and as the ignorant do not suffer any other sort of death, they go free. In this he seems to stultify God's law of sin and death. God is represented as enacting a law which he will never enforce against the great mass of humanity who die in ignorance.

THE TRUTH

The truth is that natural death is the penalty for sin, and has been enforced from the beginning to the present time, and will continue as long as sin is in the world. Nothing I have written is intended to apply to the Jews. They are in a special covenant relationship to God, and may come under a different arrangement.

In closing, I offer my apology to Brother Strickler. I am sorry to differ with him, though I feel that it is in the interest of truth to do so.

JOHN PARKER.

Spiritualism Erroneous

SPIRITUALISM teaches that all that is real is spirit; communication from the world of spirits; intercourse with the dead. This doctrine is a continuation of the untruth spoken by the serpent in the garden of Eden. In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul" (Gen. 2:7). and the Lord God took the man and put him into the garden of Eden to dress and keep it (Gen. 2:15). "The Lord God commanded the man, saying, of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat. But of the tree of the knowlege of good and evil thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die. And the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam; and took one of his ribs and made a woman, a help meet for man. And the serpent said unto the woman, Yea, hath God said, ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden ? And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden; but of the fruit of the tree which is in midst of the garden, God hath said, ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it lest ye die. And the serpent said unto the woman, ye shall not surely die."

Spiritualists today tell the world the same untruth which the serpent told the woman. Eccl. 9:5 declares that the living know that they shall die; but the dead know not anything: neither have they any more a reward; for the memory of them is forgotten. David says: "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence" (Psa. 115:17). His breath goeth forth, in that very day his thoughts perish (Psa. 146:4). Sir Oliver Lodge says, in an article in a newspaper, that life after death continues and he can communicate with the dead David says: Return, O Lord, deliver my soul; save me for thy mercies' sake. For in death there is no remembrance of thee; in the grave who shall give thee thanks ? (Psa. 6:5). Job says: "As the waters fail from the sea and the flood decayeth and drieth up, so man lieth down and riseth not; until the heavens be no more they shall not awake nor be raised out of their sleep." Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, no knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave, whither thou goest (Eccl. 8:10). Sir Oliver Lodge says in his article in the press of March 7th: "Persons able to transmit messages from the other world must be specially psychic." He believes we go to the place for which we are fitted, and death most probable makes no sudden change at all. Beloved, this is a case where the blind be leaders of the blind, both shall fall into the ditch. They have eyes to see, and they see not; and they have ears to hear, and they hear not.

Concerning the spirit of man we read in Eccl. 12:7: "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." We will notice that this spirit refers back to Gen. 2:7, "breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." Young's concordance gives it "breathed into his nostrils the breath, air, wind spirit." This is positive proof that man does not have a spirit which lives after death. Again, in 1 Cor. 15:45 Paul says: "And so it was written The first man Adam was made a living soul: the last Adam was made a quickening spirit" (or life-giving spirit). Spiritualists should say there is life after death but not until the resurrection, which is everlasting life received by the righteous.

If Spiritualists had the proper conception of "being born again" there would be no spiritualism. Jesus says that "he that is born of spirit is spirit:" that is he is no longer flesh and blood, but incorruptible or deathless. Paul says flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God Jesus says that he that is born again can enter the kingdom of God To be raised from the dead to incorruptibility and life at the coming of Jesus is to be "born again" "born of spirit." The spirit of God by which a man is begotten, continuing to dwell in him, eventually by the power of God brings him to the birth, and changes him to incorruptibility, and he becomes a "new creation in Christ Jesus," both in mind and body, and, therefore, being born from above, or born of spirit, he is spirit. Mr. Lodge contends that man is of triple makeup: first the spirit; second, an ether body; third, the earthly body. Ethor body has memory, character and will. The ether body is of the same form as that of the earthly body. When man dies, the spirit lodged in the ether body goes into the next world, leaves the earthly body behind. What an absurd idea; a body in a body of the same form! He uses no Scripture reference as proof, because there is not any in the entire Scriptures to prove his conception. So he has to depend solely upon his theory of imagination. Beloved, what a blessing God has bestowed upon us that he has enlightened us with his gospel truths. And we have something better than our imagination and speculation. Furthermore, we can see a fulfilment of the Scriptures in Spiritualism. In the second epistle of Peter, 2:1.2: "But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction. And many shall follow their pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of" (2 Thess. 2:7 to 12):

"For the mystery of iniquity doth already work; only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way. And then shall that wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming. Even him whose coming is after the working of satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish, because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusions that they should believe a lie, that they all might be damned who believed not the truth but had pleasure in unrighteousness."

Matt. 24:24; Mark 13:22 say:

"For there shall arise false Christs and false prophets and shall show great signs and wonders, insomuch that if it were possible they shall deceive the very elect." 1st Tim. 4:1: "Now the spirit speaketh expressly that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils, speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their conscience seared with a hot iron."

Paul's solemn charge to Timothy in Tim. 4:1 to 8 is:

"I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom, preach the word; be instant in season out of season, reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine: but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers having itching ears, and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned to fables. But watch thou in all things, endure afflictions; do the work of an evangelist; make full proof of thy ministry. For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." 2 Tim. 3: This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come, for men shall be lovers of their own selves, boasters, proud, unholy, traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; ever learning, and never able to come to a knowledge of the truth. Evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived. But continue thou in the things which thou hast learned, knowing of whom thou hast learned them; and that from a child thou hast known the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus. All Scripture is given by inspriation of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."

Beloved, I have given enough Scripture proof to show that spiritualism is erroneous. May we meditate upon God's word with meekness and fear, prove all things and hold fast to that which is good. "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." May we let our light shine before men, and have our lamps burning and full of oil that we may be so prepared when he comes that we may receive abundant entrance in his kingdom, prepared for the elect from the foundation of the world.

ERNEST J. MILLER.

Spiritualism Gaining Ground

MAURICE MAETERLINCK the Belgian author and philosopher, is the latest notable convert of spiritualism. Perhaps Maeterlinck would not care to be called a "convert" since he avows that he has an "open mind" on the spiritualistic theories. Nevertheless, he has just arrived in the United States to lecture on "The Immortality of the Soul" and in an interview stated he had the greatest respect for Sir Oliver Lodge and "accepts generally his theories."

It is surprising that the growth of spiritualism on this continent has not called forth more outspoken opposition or at least comment from the Christian Churches than has been noted thus far. In England where the movement has made tremendous headway the clergymen of the Protestant faith and religious newspapers have been most outspoken in their denunciation. Secular newspapers also have been giving attention to the subject and a writer in the Daily Mail in a recent article said:

"London is medium mad. Neler has occultism had so many fevent disciples. Fashionable mediums are having the time of their lives. Their consulting rooms are thronged with an eager crowd of enquirers, and they can afford to pick and choose their 'clients.'

"Most of them specialize. One is an adept at the direct voice. Another concentrates on clairvoyance or clairaudience. A third is professor of psychometry. Others make a specialty of direct writing on paper or on sealed slates.

"Only a chosen few hold out inducements of being able to produce materializations of the spirit form. Very few go in for every class of phenomena. The consequence is that the earnest seeker of truth is passed on from one medium to another according to requirements.

"Mediums have their own methods of securing information. Most of them have their touts and spies, who busy themselves not only by talking about the mediums and bringing in business, but also by finding out private facts in the lives of the possible clients.

"When a complete stranger comes to a medium the result is usually a number of commonplaces. The medium feels about to get a clue. 'Come back next week and I will be able to tell you. The conditions today are not quite favorable,' he says.

"The client leaves the house and is followed by the medium's spy. Next time, if it is worth while, 'the conditions' are more favorable and the sitting much more satisfactory. The spy has been busy.

"Some mediums are blackmailers. They use the knowledge they gain from and about their clients to extort money from them. Others are professional conjurers, not of the first rank, who find mediumship a more profitable business than legerdemain."

While no doubt many so-called "mediums" are nothing more or less than broken down clever tricksters, this explanation would not apply in the case of spiritualists of the standing of Sir Oliver Lodge and Sir A. Conon Doyle. Both are men of high repute in the scientific world and their conclusions that it is possible for human beings to hold converse with their friends who have departed to another sphere cannot be dismissed so lightly. Sir Oliver Lodge is to visit America soon and his lectures on the subject are likely to make a profound impression. Still it is well to remember that even great men are sometimes mistaken and perhaps that may be so in this case.

In the meantime have the ministers of the Christian faith no word of warning or instruction to give to their people?—The Ontario Reformer.

The Lord's Day

THE DAY spoken of here evidently is not Sunday. Sunday is nowhere in Scripture spoken of as the Lord's Day. Besides, one day would not be sufficient time to receive and write the things recorded in the book of Revelation. It must have been the day of the Lord spoken of in 1 Cor. 5:5; 2 Cor. 1:14; 1 Thess. 5:2; 2 Pet. 3:10; the 1000 year day, beginning when the Lord himself shall descend from heaven and gather his saints to himself (1 Thess. 4:16, 17), and ending when he shall deliver the kingdom up to the Father (1 Cor. 15:24, 22), that God may be all and in all. The time when the saints who are accounted worthy shall have had it said unto them, "Come ye blessed of my Father," and shall inherit eternal life (Matt. 25:34, 46). The fact that John fell at his feet as dead when he beheld the one resplendent with glory, is symbolical of John's death; and the laying on of his right hand (hand of power) and saying that he himself had been dead, and was brought out of the death state by the power of the Father, and had received the keys to unlock the grave and death, which power he had now used on John, shows that John was now in spirit, in spirit life in symbol, and the vision presented to him was a panorama of history pertaining to the plan of salvation, as enacted from Patmos to the time of real resurrection and glorification of the overcomers. Hence "the Lord's day" of Rev. 1.10 is the day of the millennial age.

Remember the Helping Fund

Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble—in the day of evil, margin (Psa. 41:1).

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

STILL WATERS

THE LORD is my Shepherd, he makes me repose
Where the pastures in beauty are growing:
He leads me afar from the world and its woes,
Where in peace the still waters are flowing.

He strengthens my spirit, he shows me the path
Where the arms of his love shall enfold me:
And when I walk through the dark valley of death,
His rod and his staff will uphold me!

The Young People's Society met Friday evening, March 26th at the home of Brother and Sister Lang, 2318 Scarborough Road. After a brief business meeting the lesson was turned over to Sister Viola Meermans who gave a quiz. By quoting texts or recounting incidents and calling on the different members for the names of the characters involved, she brought before the society many of the interesting stories of Bible history.—Alice Chappelle.

The Fellow Helpers held their meeting Friday evening, March 19th, at the home of Brother and Sister Robert Meermans. On account of the inclemency of the weather, only ten members were present. The lesson on "The Second Advent, Millenium, and the State Beyond," was very well handled by the leader, Brother Tabor. This is a subject which, although very familiar to all who are in the faith, always reveals some new thought when presented again and helps to clarify our understanding of the wonderful state of the world when the curse has been removed and the righteousness of the Lord shall cover it.—Marvel Gibbs.

Apocalyptic Numbers Explained

I NOTICE in a recent issue of your most valuable paper that you will answer inquiries without giving the name of the writer. Another family and my own would like for you to give your understanding of Rev. 7. Who do the 144,000 represent, and who "the great multitude"? I certainly appreciate your efforts to give the people the truth.

Editorial Comments

IN THE 6th chapter of Revelation, and also in the first verses of the 7th chapter, we are told that apostasy prevailed; but from the apostate "tribes of Israel's sons" the sealing angel of the east imparted divine knowledge to 144,000. This is called "sealing them in the foreheads." As Revelation is hieroglyphically communicated, we are not to suppose that this is the literal number of the sealed. The 144,000 represent the total number of the saved. They are called "the redeemed from the earth" in Rev. 14:3. That the 144,000 is a miniture representation of an unknown predetermined original is indicated by way of interpretation in the chapter after the symbolic number has been used in calling them "a great multitude, which no man could number."

WHY THE SEALED ARE 144,000

As the sealing work was upon "the twelve tribes of Israel's sons" it was natural to give the total in harmony with the number of the tribes. Any nucber multiplied by itself will produce a square. Thus 12 times 12 equals 144- thousands, furlongs, etc. It is the square of twelve. As the symbol of a commonwealth or city, it is applicable only to a community whose citizens are based upon the square of twelve. In the Apocalypse this root is sometimes doubled. Thus in Rev. 4:4 there are "twenty four elders"; and in chapter 21:12 there are twelve gates and twelve angels at the gates. The reason for this addition is that the holy square, "the new Jerusalem," will be composed of two classes, the Jews and the Gentiles. To represent these two classes united in one square, the root it doubled in the elders, the gates, and the angels.

THE GREAT MULTITUDE

Now "after this" (vs. 9), or rather, "after these things," as in the 1st verse (for the Greek is the same in both verses), "I beheld, and lo, a great multitude." John not only sees two classes, the Jews and the Gentiles, represented by 12 and 24; but he sees them in two states: as sealed but still in a mortal state, they are 144,000; as immortalized and gathered, as a "great multitude." "They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat. For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters; and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes" (Rev. 7:16, 17).

Jesus Christ the Same Forever

THERE IS one verse in the Bible that is meaningless to me. I refer to Heb. 13:8: "Jesus Christ the same yesterday and today, and forever." I have heard Trinitarians quote the verse as if they thought it proved the immutability of Christ or his pre-existence or something else; but more frequently I have heard Christian Scientists and other healing cults quote it to prove that since Christ healed the infirm when he was on earth, that was "yesterday," and "today" he will heal "just like he did years ago." Of course I know that these are wrong interpretations of the verse, but what the true meaning is I confess I do not know. You have often helped me; will you help me again?

JUST BECAUSE we do not understand a text is no reason for quoting it to prove some dogma we like to believe. The majority of Scriptures which are quoted by orthodox people are cited for no other reason than that they do not understand them, and therefore they suppose they teach that Christ was God, divine healing, or something else! Trinitarians believe that although Christ was God and therefore immutable as God, yet he changed himself into the babe of Bethlehem! If so, he was not "the same yesterday, and today, and forever." According to their theory of "incarnation," Jesus was God "yesterday," and a man "today." The Christtian Scientists' idea of the text is a more transparent stultification of it still, if possible. Because Christ once healed, they seem to think that to be "the same" he must "heal forever." That is, Christ always continues to do a thing after he has once done it! Is Christ always doing the same thing? Will he heal "forever"? If so, "mortal mind" will always exist to be healed-- the very thing Scientists deny. Let us turn from the foolishness of men to the wisdom of God and be refreshed.

The reason why Heb. 13:8 is "meaningless" to our correspondent is because he has been perplexing himself with the words in the passage without looking at the connection in which they occur. "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and today, and forever" is merely a transition from what has been said to what follows. Now what had been said? This: "Remember them which had the rule over you, who have spoken to you the word of God: whose faith follow, considering the end of their conversation" (vs. 7). By "remember" the writer either means to "remember them in their bodily wants," or "remember to imitate them in their faith and conduct." The former meaning agrees with the 3rd verse; but we think it is plain from what follows that the course of these "rulers" is past, and that therefore the remembering enjoined has to do with the imitation of their faith and teaching. "Who have spoken unto you the word of God" confirms our thought. This statement, written in the past tense, shows that the speaking was over, and that the "rulers" referred to are those mentioned in Heb. 2:3 as those who heard the Lord, by whom the word of God was "spoken" and "confirmed" to them. "Imitate their faith" is Macknight's translation.

Now among these "rulers" held up for imitation we may mention Stephen, James, etc., but as Jesus is "the captain" (Heb. 2:10), he is mentioned by name: "Jesus Christ, yesterday, and today, is the same, and forever." The argument is this: "It was Christ whom these 'rulers' preached, when they spoke the word of God to you: Christ supported them to the end because he was their 'captain' and the 'author and finisher of their faith'; and he remains 'the same' with regard to you." "Yesterday" refers to the time past, when their "rulers" pass-from them, probably in martyrdom; "today" to the present (when the writer was living); and "forever" relates to all subsequent time.

Hold firmly to this thought as you proceed to read the next verse: "Be not tossed about with various and foreign doctrines." What connection is there between the statement, "Jesus Christ, yesterday, and today, is the same, and forever," and "be not tossed about with various and foreign doctrines"? "Jesus Christ" and "the doctrine of Christ" (the gospel) are often interchangeable in the New Testament. Preaching "Jesus Christ" in Acts 5:42 means preaching the gospel. So in 1 Cor. 1:24; 2 Cor. 4:5. In 2 Cor. 3:15 Paul terms the Mosaic covenant "Moses," because he was the minister of that covenant; therefore he naturally terms the new covenant "the Lord" in the 17th verse, because he was the author thereof. This is why in Paul's writings "Christ" and "Jesus Christ" are so frequently put for the doctrine of Christ. "Jesus Christ, yesterday, and today, is the same, and forever" is a declaration that the doctrine of the gospel, when the apostle wrote, was "the same" as at the begining, and will continue to be the same forever. The gospel is not subject to alteration; and he who perverts it, whether man or angel, forfeits his claim to salvation (Gal. 1:6-8).

GOD SPEAKS

I GAVE you Law, to guide,
  That needed not my hand:
With Reason, to decide,
  And Conscience, to command.
Ye are not beast or tree,
  Ye are not stone or clod.
Your upward path is free,
  Ye are the sons of God.

And shall ye then descend
  From your divine estate,
The craven neck to bend
  And call the yoke your fate?
Wake from the sloth of sin
  And give to me your heart,
The day is growing dim,
  My life I'll soon impart.

Lesson VI

The Thousand Years' Reign of Christ and the Saints

II. THE REIGN OF CHRIST A TRANSITIONAL PERIOD

As the first coming of Christ was followed by the Christian dispensation, so his second coming will be followed by the millennial age. When the kingdom of God is inaugurated and the reign of Christ is in process of administration, adequate machinery will exist on earth for the control and final extermination of evil. In the procedure of extirpating evil from the earth, however, we must let God lead us every step of the way, and depend entirely upon what he has said in lucid and perfect statements. When we read that "many people," "many nations," and "strong nations afar off," which were formerly "scattered" at Babel (Gen. 11:8), now become unified and "flow" to Jerusalem "like a river" (Isa. 66:12), to participate in national and international concerts of prayer before the Lord in Mount Zion (Isa. 2:2; Micah 4: 2,3; Zech. 8:22,23; Jer. 3:17; Rev. 15:4; Isa. 25:7,8; 45:14-25), we must recall the fact that these peoples and nations are raised up from a "remnant" which was spared in the conflagration attending the coming of Christ (Micah 4:7; Zech. 8:6; Lesson 5). Magnificent, national, international, and millennial statements like "all nations shall serve him," "all nations shall call him blessed" (Psa. 72: 11,17), must be qualified in harmony with antecedent advent judgments. They are so qualified in the same chapter where the statements are made. Blasts of judgments: storms, both terrific and destructive, attend the re-establishment of David's throne under Christ (Rev. 4:1-5). These destroy the majority and discipline "the remnant." Psa. 72:6,7 records this element in the case clearly: "He shall come down like the rain upon the mown grass: as showers that water the earth. In his day shall the righteous flourish; and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth." "Surely the people is grass" (Isa. 40:7). To mow down the grass means to mow down the people. Observe, then, that "the righteous" are to flourish, not sinners; and that the millennial rain descends "upon the mown grass." All the sons of Belial are "thrust away" like thorns when David's son takes his throne (2 Sam. 23:6). Instead of the Sodomites and others, "lewd fellows of the baser sort" (Acts 17:5), who have lived in the past, and who were so abominably mean when they did live that God killed them for their iniquity (Gen. 18: 20; 13:12); instead of these being raised from the dead* and given "a chance" as subjects during Christ's reign, as Russellism teaches, the wicked who are living at the time are mowed down like the grass, and cast into the oven (Matt. 6:30). At that time "the righteous," and the righteous only, "flourish." It is after the grass is mown that "he comes down like rain" to "strengthen the things which remain, that are ready to die" (Rev. 3:2); it is after the storm of judgment at Christ's coming has passed over that "the sun of righteousness" (Mal. 4:2) breaks through the dispersing clouds "like the light of the morning, when the sun riseth, even a morning without clouds, as the tender grass springing out of the earth by clear shining after rain" (2 Sam. 23:4). The adults are "the grass" which is mown; the children are the "tender grass which springs out of the earth," and which is nourished by the copious rains and fructified by the "clear shining" sun after the storms and clouds have disappeared. "He that remaineth, even he, shall be for our God" (Zech. 9: 7), and God shall be for him (Zech. 13:9). Like the farmer, God saves a "seed," the fittest and the best, the children of the time, who have not yet formed any bad habits or imbibed any false doctrines (Deut. 1:39); and by mitigating the pangs of child-birth, like the type of Israel under Moses (Ex. 1:12,19), a people "shall be born," another "generation" shall be raised up in righteousness which speedily grow into nations and kingdoms (Psa. 22:30,31,27,28). The "children shall continue" (Psa. 102:28), be painlessly prolific (Isa. 66:7-9; 60:9), enjoy longevity (Isa. 65:20-24), and multiply from a "remnant" and "seed" into "many people" and "strong nations" with amazing alacrity. The reader is asked to note this fact well; for it puts world-burners to shame and at the same time pulls up Russellism by the roots. This scriptural truth may be compared to a two-edged sword: with one edge we slay world-burning, and with the other, Russellism. "All nations whom thou hast made shall come and worship before thee, O Lord, and shall glorify thy name" (Psa. 86: 9). These nations are "made," and made in the way here explained.

The first thousand years after the establishment of the kingdom of God will blend the elements of perfection and imperfection, immortality and mortality. Immortality will be displayed in Christ and the saints (Phil. 3:20,21; Luke 20:36); mortality in the subject inhabitants. The millennial reign is not a perfect state. It is during this time that Christ puts down "all rule and all authority and all power, and all enemies" (1 Cor. 15: 24,25); but if these "enemies" are to be subjugated then, it is surely evident to the reader that they must exist: for that which does not exist cannot be "put down." There are "enemies," then, in the kingdom of God at first. All things that offend and those who do iniquity are to be gathered out of the kingdom (Matt. 13:41). The reign of Christ is a transitional period intervening between the purely animal age of now and the purely spiritual age of eternity. Some have overlooked the composite state of the millennium, the admixture of good and evil, and have reached the conclusion that although the subjects of the kingdom are mortal, yet if they are righteous they shall "live on"—meaning that they shall continue to live to the end of the thousand years, and are then immortalized without dying. The only death they can conceive of during this time is for the wicked, and only for them in cases of contumacy. In contravention of this idea the saints are called the first fruits to God and the Lamb (Rev. 14:1-4). Since Christ and the saints are both called "first fruits" (1 Cor. 15:23; Lev. 23:10-20; Jas. 1:18), analogy requires us to find the nature of the harvest in the first fruits—Christ and the saints. They are "samples" of the harvest. Neither of them "lived on" until they were immortalized. On the contrary, both were faithful and obedient unto death (Phil. 2:8,9; Heb. 5:7; Rev. 2:10). If man's obedience to the gospel should give him immunity from death, ungodly men would rush pell-mell into it from sinister motives that of present gain and advantage. Probation necessitates a mixed condition of good and evil to afford scope for the exercise of faith. There must be no present visible benefit allotted to those who serve God which seemingly is withheld from those who serve him not. The difference between these two classes will be made conspicuous in the day of recompense (Mal. 3:18). "Without faith it is impossible to please God" in any age (Heb. 11:6). Conditions in the millennial age, therefore, must be such as to give room for faith, which is "the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen" (vs. 1; 2 Cor. 5:7). Then the existence of sacrifice in Christ's reign (Zech. 14:21; Mal. 3:4; Isa. 60: 7) points to death as still in operation among those who offer. Again, the fact that the saints exercise the double office of kings and priests also argues that sin and death still exist (Rev. 5:10) or those kingly and priestly functions would be superflous. Boys, girls, the aged with staff in their hands, and "old men who have filled their days" are all separately and distinctly spoken of (Zech. 8:4,5; Isa. 65:20), showing that there is still the imperfection of birth, childhood, old age, and the completion of natural life without the idea of judicial infliction for contumacy. "The child shall die an hundred years old; but the sinner being an hundred years old shall be accursed" (Isa. 65:20). The word "child" in this text is used in contrast to the word "sinner"; "die" is also opposed to "accursed." The passage means, then, "The child (righteous) shall die," etc. a positive assertion that natural death continues to prey upon the righteous of that age as well as upon the sinner (Ezek. 14:22,25,26). And Paul's declarations in 1 Cor. 15:23-26 confirm this conclusion. He says there is a "first," an "afterwards," and a "then" in the "order" of resurrection. According to his understanding there is a resurrection at "the end," a necessity which grows out of the fact that the subjects of the kingdom have been subject to death throughout the reign of Christ. Paul is certain regarding the fact that the reign of Christ results in putting down "all enemies," including "death," which he says is "the last." Add to this the wholesale infliction of death upon myriads at the close of the millennium (Rev. 20:8,9), and the conviction is irresistible that death, "the last enemy," is of common occurrence throughout the millennium. In fact, calling death "the last enemy" implies that all other enemies are abolished before it, and that therefore it lives longer than any of the rest, reaching clear down to "the end."

MOTTO: SEARCH THE SCRIPTURES DAILY

SLOGAN: WE STAND FOR UNITY, TRUTH, AND RIGHTEOUSNESS

THE RESULT OF OBEDIENCE

WHAT IS obedience? It is the compliance of a command. The obedience we are considering now is in baptism. The command is, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned" (Mark 16:15, 16).

We have our choice whether we comply with this command or not. We also have our choice whether we shall believe the gospel and obey by going down into the waters of baptism. If we believe and obey, we shall have salvation for obedience is unto righteousness. If we do not obey we are under condemnation of sin unto death. The wages of sin is death (Rom. 6:23).

Let us take the better choice. Philip preached the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ (Acts 8:12). The two are inseparable.

If we wish to attain unto the things concerning the kingdom of God, we must accept the name of Jesus the Christ and become obedient. Christ means anointed. He is heir to the kingdom and is the prince. When he comes into his kingdom, he will be King of kings.

How can we be heirs? "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus, for as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ" (Gal. 3:26, 27). So when we have been baptized into the name of Jesus the Christ, we are received as having been anointed, and are heirs to the kindom. For as many as are led by the spirit of God, they are the sons of God. For the Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God; and if children, then heirs; heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together (Rom. 8:14, 16, 17)).

This kingdom to which we are joint heirs, is not a kingdom set up in our hearts, as some declare, That is a man made kingdom, and is somewhat collapseable. The greatness of the kingdom shall be under the whole heaven, and shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High. It is an everlasting kingdom and will not be broken in pieces, but will break and consume all other kingdoms.

How and when are we to become possessors? Jesus died on the cross, was laid in the tomb and rose from the dead the third day, according to the Scriptures. He is at the right hand of God. Jesus said: "I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also" (John 14:2, 3). He is coming again that we may dwell with him. How is he coming? He shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God (1 Thess. 4:16). He is not coming noiselessly. All who are looking for him to come, will hear him. Are we who are living to be the only ones who will hear him? Oh, no: the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord (1 Thess. 4:16, 17). We shall be changed from mortality to immortality, and from corruption to incorruption, and receive eternal life which is the gift of God. This is when we cease to be heirs and become possessors.

Then shall we be rewarded according to our works. An heir cannot live by faith alone: he must have works with his faith. Our position in the kingdom will depend upon what our works have been. Jesus will reward us for our works when he comes. We shall be kings and priests, and reign on the earth (Rev. 5:10). The earth will be our home or habitation. Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection, on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign wih him a thousand years (Rev. 20:6).

And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new. And he said unto me, write; for these words are true and faithful (Rev. 21:5). When this comes to pass there will not be war and strife as it is now, Neither will there be the cry for peace. Peace shall reign eternally. "Behold, I make all things new." Dear ones, this is the result of obedience. Those of you who have not yet obeyed, do not delay. You want to have a part in all the glories to come. Jesus is coming soon, but how soon we cannot tell.

Yours looking for his coming,

JESSIE M. WILSON.

WE ARE not sent into this world to do anything into which we cannot put our hearts. We have certain work to do for our bread and that is to be done strenuously; other work to do for our delight and that is to be done heartily; neither is it to be done by halves or shifts, but with a will; and what is not worth this effort is not to be done at all.

Go in peace, soul beautiful and blest.

GOLDEN TEXT: Psalm 124:8-8

THE CAGED BIRD

HIGH AT her window in her cage
The old canary flits and sings,
Nor sees across the curtain pass
The shadow of a swallow's wings.

A poor deceit and copy, this,
Of larger lives that mark their span,
Unreckoning of wider worlds
Or gifts that heaven keeps for man.

She gathers piteous bits and shreds,
This solitary, mateless thing,
To patient build again the nest
So rudely scattered spring by spring.

And sings her brief, unlistened songs,
Her dreams of bird-life wild and free,
Yet never beats her prison bars
At sound of song from bush or tree.

But in my busiest hours I pause,
Held by a sense of urgent speech,
Bewildered by that spark-like soul,
Able my very soul to reach.

She will be heard: she chirps me loud,
When I forget those gravest cares,
Her small provisions to supply,
Clear water or her seedsman's wares.

She begs me now for that chief joy,
The round great world is made to grow—
Her wisp of greenness. Hear her chide,
Because my answering though is slow.

What can my life seem like to her?
A dull, unpunctual service mine;
Stupid before her eager call,
Her flitting steps, her insight fine.

To open wide thy prison door,
Poor friend, would give thee to thy foes;
And yet a plaintive note I hear,
As if to tell how slowly goes

The time of thy long prisoning,
Bird! does some promise keep thee sane?
Will there be better days for thee?
Will thy soul, too, know life again?

Ah, none of us have more than this:
If one true friend green leaves can reach
From out some fairer, wider place,
And understand our wistful speech.

THE WINTER BIRDS OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

MY DEAR YOUNG PEOPLE OF THE RESTITUTION:

SEEING THAT others are invited to the page I decided to try too. I do not intend to write on a religious topic because there are others that can do it better than I. I think I will write a letter on the winter birds of this region. Most of the readers of The Restitution live in the United States; I live in British Columbia.

First, then, we may ask what is a bird? John Ruskin says that the bird "is a little more than a drift of air brought into form by plumes; the air is in all its quills; it breathes through its whole frame and flesh and glows with air in its flying like a blown flame." The birds were the work of God's hands, and are well worth thinking about.

Here we have for winter birds owls, woodpeckers, snowbirds and chich-a-dees. The owls need no description. The woodpeckers are the red headed type. The snow birds are a dull gray color or rather grayish white. They are about the size of a bluebird and at a little distance cannot be distinguished from the snow. But I think that the sweetest are the chick-a-dees. These tiny birds are about the size of a wren. They have a black patch on the breast just below the throat. Their tails are also black. The rest of the body is black and white. There is a flock of these birds here that I call "my chickens." There are seven in all, and they are very tame. I hang a piece of suet on the fence for them and scatter crumbs on the snow. A chick-a-dee will fly down, seize a crumb almost as big as its little self, and fly away with it. In a moment he is back for another piece. Many birds fly quite straight, but the chick-a-dee rises and falls with each flap of his wings. They have tiny legs just like a needle, but they are very tame if one is careful not to frighten them.

If our Editor thinks this is worth publishing, I will come again and tell you of our winter animals.

ETHEL M. HOWARD.

TO THE FIRST ROBIN

THE FOLLOWING little effort was Louise M. Alcott's first published poem. It is claimed it was written when Miss Alcott was but eight years of age. We have a double reason for printing it: on account of its worth; also to encourage our young readers to send us their efforts.

Welcome, welcome, little stranger,
Fear no harm, and fear no danger;
We are glad to see you here,
For you sing, "Sweet spring is near."
Now the white snow melts away;
Now the flowers blossom gay;
Come, dear bird, and build your nest,
For we love our robin best.

WE HAVE WITH US TODAY

TODAY WE print the first regular article from the pen of our latest special contributor, Sister Ethel M. Howard. Sister Ethel lives in far off British Columbia. She is fifteen years of age. Her today's article treats of the winter birds she sees in her home region.

In the introduction Sister Ethel states, "I do not intend to write on a religious topic." To our way of thinking when we write concerning nature we write concerning God; and it is impossible to write of God in a reverent spirit without being religious. God has but two ways of acquainting mankind with himself: one is through the revealed word, the Bible; the other, his wonderful works as shown in nature. We trust that Miss Ethel soon "will come again" and tell us of Canada's winter animals.

A wag once said that he knew why there were no marriages in heaven, because, judging by the attendance at all church services there would not be any men there. We wonder what this this wag would think of our list of special contributors. So far only those of the female sex have volunteered. Boys, will you not step forward and save the honor of the males? We still have room for two or three more. Who will be next?

---o---

WILL IT RAIN?

BIRDS ARE excellent barometers. A number of our birds—swans, wild ducks, coots, moorhens and others—build their nests either on the banks of a river, or floating on its surface attached to the reeds or water grasses. These birds it is said, never by any chance get caught by floods and, if you see a swan's nest, say a foot above the river level, you may be sure that during the next few weeks there will not be rain enough to raise the river above that height.

The common robin knows a great deal about forth coming weather, which he will tell anyone who takes the trouble to consult him. If he sings in the morning, it is a certain sign of bad weather.

The common cricket is a good rain prophet. If he chirps loudly and constantly, you may expect rain. Another insect, the gossamer spider, is equally as clever.

FEEDING THE BIRDS

ON WAVERLY Place, New York, each day at noon, a man brings a bag of grain to feed the pigeons. The birds know he is their friend and come from distant points to be fed. It is a beautful sight to see them all about this man. At times there are so many pigeons the street is impassable. Loving kindness with good deeds always are appreciated, and each day the man with the bag of grain has an audience that applauds him.

The Restitution

A Paper Representing the Church of God, and Devoted to the Exposition and Defense of the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God and the Name of Jesus Christ.—Acts 8:12.

VOLUME 72 CLEVELAND, O. APRIL 20th, 1920. NUMBER 15

"I will Lift up Mine Eyes"

Mine eye, O my God, I will lift unto thee,
And thy words in my troubles, my slogan shall be,
From thee my help cometh, who the heavens hast made,
Created the earth, and the pillars have stayed.
Thou wilt not suffer my foot to be moved
From the path that so long I have walked in and loved.
I can trust to thy keeping; thine eye doth not sleep,
For thou art my shade and thy shadow is deep
So deep that sin cannot smite me by day,
Nor the night, the moon's arrows about my head play.
Thou, Lord, wilt preserve me from evil and sin,
Wilt preserve me when going and when I come in,
Wilt preserve me and lead me in path that's before,
That says I may be, henceforth, evermore.

Birds on a Statue

I WATCHED some birds across a city street
Affrighted at the sound of coming feet,
They scorned the teamster's proffered grain to share,
Viewing each lure askance as though a snare,
While little children brought their crumbs in vain,
Eager some mark of confidence to gain,
Distrustful of each human move, at last
They flew upon a statue, where they passed
Long restful minutes on the arms and head
That, never having moved, they knew were dead.
O what a travesty on gentle man!
That even little birds have learned to scan
Him first, if he indeed be flesh and bone,
Or harmless bronze, or cold protecting stone.

Church and State Problems

A Few Pointed Questions Concerning Various Bible Subjects

THE EDITOR OF "THE PLAIN DEALER":

YOU RECALL, of course you do, (for editors are supposed to possess all knowledge) that Job had a great controversy with his three friends, Zophar, Eliphaz, and Bildad. The debate waxed so warm that Job exclaimed, "Oh that one would hear me! behold, my desire is, that the Almighty would answer me, and that mine adversary had written a book." God answered Job by asking him a series of questions that Job and no other man can answer (Job 38, 39, 40, and 41 chapters).

Job's adversaries did not write a book; he could only answer their verbal statements. Paul Bellamy is now publishing a series of articles in "The Plain Dealer." The writer does not know him personally, but he is writing "a book" on the troubles existing in the modern church. Permit me (a working man) to point out to him that so far he has utterly failed in his diagnosis of the strange disease now prevalent in the church which, because from fear of contagion, the working man stays at home and does his own thinking. In all judicial matters and questions arising in the United States, the constitution is the final arbiter, and that as interpreted by the nine distinguished and learned gentlemen at Washington, constituting the Supreme Court of the United States. Since all churches, no matter what their creed, own allegiance to God the Creator and preserver of all things seen and unseen, it is proper that all should recognize that he alone is the sole authority and source of final appeal in answering the questions the working man is asking the churches today respecting the reason of his existence and final destiny awaiting all.

All churches claim that God speaks and makes known his mind through the Scriptures known as the Bible. If so, and the writer surely believes God does, then all questions now being asked and upon which there is such a diversity of opinions, as wide apart as the east is from the west, should at least, as the working man views it, meet with a greater unanimity than expressed by the ministers today.

Jesus said, "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself" (John 7:17). Paul adds that "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works" (2 Tim. 3:16, 17).

If this is true the working men desire to propound to Paul Bellamy and to the clergy in general the following questions.

1st. If man is immortal, where in the Bible is it so stated ?

2nd. If heaven is to be the reward and final abode of the righteous, please direct us to chapter and verse ?

3rd. If Christ is a King, over what territory does or will he reign, and who are the subjects in that kingdom ?

4th. If there is an intermediate state, purgatory, hell, or the "spirit land," where does the Bible locate them ?

5th. What does the Bible teach man must do to be saved ?

6th. What did Christ mean by saying, "But be ye not called Babbi; for one is your Master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren. And call none your father upon earth; for one is your Father, which is in heaven. Neither be ye called masters; for one is your Master, even Christ." "But he that is greatest among you shall be your servant" (Matt. 13:8-11) ?

7th. If at death a man still lives, why does the Bible teach that not until Christ returns will there be a resurrection. Why does the church today teach the opposite ?

Dear Editor, probably you, like the ministers, after reading these questions will have "cold feet" and avoid giving them publicity. Hence the reason the working men stay at home, read their Bibles, and do their own thinking.

Respectfully yours,

GEO. B. ALLDRIDGE.

Corrupt Christianity

WHAT IS true Christianity founded on ? The religion taught by Christ. How can it be corrupted ? By injecting into it errors or mistakes; by teaching error. Who teaches error ? All those who teach a different gospel from Paul's. If any man preach any other gospel, let him be accursed (Gal. 8: 9).

Why do not people believe Paul's gospel ? Because prophecy declares the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine (2 Tim. 4:3). In the latter days some shall depart from the faith (1 Tim. 4:13). Have any departed from the faith ? Yes. What does this show ? That we are in the latter days. What will happen in the last days ? Perilous times, evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse (2 Tim. 3:1, 13). What brings this state of things ? A class of men "ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth." Why do they not come to the truth ? Because they are men of corrupt minds, and have no judgment concerning the faith (2 Tim. 3:8). Why have some erred concerning the faith ? Because they did not avoid profane and vain babbling and oppositions of science falsely so called, and were men who were lovers of their own selves, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof. Paul commanded to turn away from such (1 Tim. 6:20, 21; 2 Tim. 3:2, 5). Paul in his charge to the elders of Ephesus, said there shall men among you arise speaking perverse things to draw away disciples after them (Acts 20:29, 30). Read 17th verse to end of chapter, showing that believers should "corrupt Christianity." And there were false prophets among the people, as there shall be false teachers among you who have forsaken the right way (2 Pet. 2:1-15). Those who preach another Jesus, or another gospel, their minds are corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ (2 Cor. 11:4; Gal. 1:6). Every spirit that teaches that Jesus Christ is not come in the flesh, is an antichrist (1 John 4:3). Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the traditions of men, and not after Christ (Col. 2:8). Men of currupt minds and destitute of the truth: from such withdraw thyself (1 Tim. 6: 5). For we do not corrupt the word of God; but as of God, in the sight of God, speak we in Christ (2 Cor. 2:17). For that day (of Christ) shall not come except there come a falling away first. Then shall that wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume (2 Thess. 2:3, 8). We read of those who depart from the faith and speak lies, forbidding to marry, to abstain from meats: which are to be receive with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth.

If thou put the brethren in remembrance of these things thou shalt be a good minister of Jesus Christ (1 Tim. 4:2, 3). These things we are commanded to teach. What are we commanded not to teach ? Refuse profane fables, shun profane and vain babblings; give no heed to Jewish fables and commandments of men, that turn from the truth. Whatsoever is not of faith, is sin. Unto them that are defiled and unbelieving is nothing pure. They shall turn away their ears from the truth and shall be turned unto fables (1 Tim. 4:7; 2 Tim. 2:16; 4:4). There is a class who hold the truth in unrighteousness. All unrighteousness is sin. He that committeth sin is of the devil. As they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not convenient: being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, coveteousness, maliciousness, full of envy, murder, deceit, malignity, whisperers, backbiters, haters of God, know the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all that do such things (Rom. 1:18, 32). All these things are corrupt, and the ones that do and teach these things "corrupt Christianity," and shall utterly perish in their own corruption (2 Pet. 2:12).

Christ's Death Necessary

HAVING READ many expositions of this subject, I find no two in exact agreement. Looking at the question from different standpoints, they come to somewhat different conclusions. As death is closely associated with law, it is necessary to keep that fact in view in our investigation of the subject.

The violation of God's law caused Adam's expulsion from the garden, and from the tree of life; therefore his death was a natural consequence by virtue of his dust nature. Adam being our federal head, we were involved in his fall, inheriting the consequences of his disobedience. Christ, the second Adam, appears as our deliverer out of the limbo into which we had fallen by the disobedience of our federal head, the first Adam.

Christ, by the grace of God, and obedience to the divine law, restores our race to the condition in which we had access to the tree of life. In Adam we are dead, but in Christ made alive. This it appears to me is our second chance (Federally, yes. —Editor.) "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive" (1 Cor. 15:22). "For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead" (1 Cor. 15:21). "For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous" (Rom. 5:19).

The law of inheritance of good and evil is here plainly brought to view. Obedience to righteousness brings liberty, while disobedience brings bondage and death. The work of delivering man from the bondage into which he was placed, by Adam's sin, was laid upon Christ; therefore he is our Savior. This he understood when he was only twelve years of age, saying to his parents, "How is it that ye sought me ? wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business ?" (Luke 2:49) Indicating at that early age that God was his Father. How small and contracted are some men's minds who contend that Joseph must be the Father of Christ, ignoring the fact that Isaac, the son of Abraham, was super-naturally conceived after it ceased to be with Sarah after the manner of women. The conception of John the Baptist is another instance of divine interposition (Luke 1:18).

Moses, a type of Christ, was like Christ consigned by the king to perish when he was a child. Moses was like Christ in that he spoke God's words to the people, being a mediator in type; he, like Christ, died before entering into the promised land, and in the full strength of manhood; "his eye was not dimmed nor his natural force abated." God by Moses testified, saying, "I will raise them up a prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth; and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him" (Deut. 18:18). In harmony with this Paul says, "But when the fulness of time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons" (Gal. 4:4, 5).

By the testimony of Moses and of Paul we learn that Jesus Christ was of our race, and we cannot perceive of any benefit to our race by his death, if he were of divine or angelic nature. The length, depth, and height of the apostasy is seen by the time it takes reformers to grasp the truth on this subject, the human nature of Jesus Christ. The brilliant John Thomas who stands in the first rank of reformers in unmasking the deformity of the apostasy, was not clear on this subject.

In "Usebia" a shield is used, the sides of which are of different colors. Now a question: What is the color of the shield ? the idea being that Christ is human and divine.

"There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body. And so it is written, the first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a quickening spirit. Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual" (1 Cor. 15:44, 46). God made Adam at the first. "And God saw every thing that he had made, and, behold, it was very good" (Gen. 1:31).

Now it seems to me that both Adams were placed on an equal footing to start the race for eternal life: the first failed by disobedience, involving his posterity in his fall; the second Adam won the race by obedience, gaining eternal life for himself and for his obedient brethren, who walk in his footsteps. The trial of Jesus in the race for life eternal was not of one that could not possibly sin, as stated in Smith's Bible Dictionary. That condition would deprive Jesus of any merit in the work of overcoming. "The wages of sin is death," but Christ did not earn the wages; therefore it was impossible for death to hold him in its grip. The justice of God was here involved, therefore his triumphant resurrection and exaltation to a seat at God's right hand on his throne.

Now the necessity of Christ's death in the race for eternal life is because the Sovereign Ruler of the universe had so decreed; so that the prayer of his well beloved Son that if possible the cup may pass from him did not change the divine purpose.

To prove perfect obedience, he must die. The same is required of Christ's brethren in time of persecution: "He that would save his life, shall lose it." "But he that shall lose it for my sake shall find it." To the church of Smyrna the Master says, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life" (Rev. 2:10). It is written: "Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is the devil" (Heb. 2:14).

And in the final drama, when he drained the cup of woe on the cross, he cried with a loud voice saying, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me ?" This was the climax of woe, and in all the suffering of the human race, it is doubtful if there is anything to equal Christ's lonely and bitter cry. Judas had betrayed him; Peter had denied him; his own nation had nailed him to the cross. All this he foreknew; but to be forsaken of his God was unexpected wormwood and gall. "All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all" (Isa. 53:6). And again: "For he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him" (2 Cor. 5:21). As the finale of this drama how comforting it is to read, "He shall see the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied" (Isa. 53:11). His death "rent the vail of the temple in two from the top to the bottom"; thus declaring the way open to the immortal state within the vail, and consequently the royal proclamation of the gospel to all nations.

GEO. FRANCIS.

The Mosaic Record of Creation

THEOLOGY ALSO asserts that the Mosaic cosmogony is contradicted by the discoveries and progress of science, and that therefore Moses could not have been inspired. This objection deserves a full and fair consideration, and ought not to be met with what objectors can only regard as evasions. Such as the assertions that the first chapter of Genesis is poetry, or a series of seven prophetic visions or the mere clothing of a theological truth. To urge such suppositions is not to defend the ark of God, but to abandon it to the enemy. If the first chapter of Genesis be poetry, or vision or parable, it is not historic truth, which is just the very identical thing that its objectors try to assert. There are in this chapter none of the peculiarities of Hebrew poetry. The style is full of dignity, but it is that of prose narrative. There is no mention of prophetic vision. It is not said, "The vision which Moses saw." The prophet or historian is kept entirely out of sight and the narrative begins at once without any preface. The book of Genesis is history. It is the historical introduction to all following revelation, and the first chapter, as the inseparable beginning of the whole, must be historical also. Some indeed hold, that in teaching the Bible a distinction is to be made between statements relating to religion and those relating to physics, that the former are to be received and the latter disregarded. But, what are we to do when a truth is both religious and physical, such as God created the heavens and the earth? If the first chapter of Genesis be not given to teach us the facts and order of creation, why is it there at all, in all its circumstantiality? Are we to believe that the divine revelation begins with an unscientific misstatement of truth. If the first chapter be the offspring of human error, where does divine truth begin?

The first supposed difficulty in this Mosaic statement is the age of the world. According to the teachings of geology and astronomy the existence of the heavens and the earth is to be reckoned by myriads of thousands of years. According to Moses, it is alleged, they are of yesterday. To know whether the difficulty is real, it is first necessary to know what Moses has actually said. And here it is not intended to propose anything new, but to revert to the ancient exposition of the phrase "in the beginning"; for upon this the question really turns. The proposition is, "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth", and here it is necessary to observe that "Reshith," the Hebrew for "beginning," is in the original without the definite article. Moses says "in reshith" (not in the reshith). The antiquity and correctness of this reading are proved by the Septuagint, Chaldee, and Syriac versions. It is also found in the Evangelist's allusions (John 1:1). The uniformity of the reading and the care with which it had been preserved for centuries—notwithstanding the natural temptation to supply the article—testify that there was a uniform traditional meaning attached to it different from that possible if the word had the article. What this meaning is, is plainly seen in the first verse of John's gospel, for it is commonly agreed that John here makes a pointed reference to Gen. 1:1, and that in the words "the the beginning" he expresses duration or time previous to creation. Dean Alford says "in the beginning" is equivalent to "before the world was." Tholuck, Meyer, Dellette—all are agreed that "beginning " refers to duration or time. Lucke also says that the phrase "in the beginning" includes the idea of premundane existence.

The sum then of all that has been said is that the words "in the beginning" refer to duration or time, not to order; and thus therefore the first verse does not mean "at first God created the heavens and the earth." In the beginning of creation he created the heavens and the earth. How long ago, it is not said. The Hebrew word is indefinite, and can include millions and millions of years just as easily as thousands. The statement of Moses is therefore not contrary to the discoveries of geology which alleges the earth to have existed for myriads of years before the creation of man. Moses' words are big enough to take in times indeterminate, exceeding the powers of human comprehension.—Selected by Brother R. H. JUDD.

The Image of God in Man

And God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him: male and female created he them (Gen. 1:27).

And Adam lived an hundred and thirty years and begat a son in his likeness, after his image: and called his name Seth (Gen. 5:3).

Take ye therefore good heed of your souls: for ye saw no manner of similitude on the day that the Lord spake unto you at Horeb that ye make yourselves a graven image, the similitude of any idol-figure, the likeness of a male or female (Deut. 4:15-20).

ISAAC LEESER, in commenting, in the Jewish translation of the Old Testament, says: "The great King of Israel did not make himself manifest under any bodily shape . . . a loud voice was heard, audible words reached the ear of all at once, one impression was made upon all alike. Hence the prohibition against the folly of representing the invisible and incomprehensible under any outward shape, even the most beautiful and strong. All will fail of reaching him, consequently all are odious to deity."

"Professing themselves to be wise they became fools, and changed the glory of the incorruptible God into an image made like corruptible man, and to birds, and four-footed beasts and creeping things" (Rom. 1:22, 23). According to the true teaching of the Scriptures, man's mortal body cannot be the image of God, since God was never manifested to man under any human or animal form, only as his character and will was revealed through angels, who took God's name, or through Jesus, who manifested God to the world (Ex. 23:21). "Ye have neither heard his voice at any time, nor seen his shape"—only through his angels (John 5:37; 14:9).

Since "God is spirit"—universal and omnipresent—and "in him we live and move and have our being" (John 4:24; Acts 17:28), no finite form can represent him. I once received a mild rebuke that I have never forgotten when preaching on God in the form of man; with eyes going to and fro throughout the whole earth; with ears open to our prayers; and with a right hand, where Jesus now sits. The man simply remarked: "Yes and he also has wings and feathers, for 'he will cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust' (Psa. 91:4)." I saw later that all these expressions were only accomodations to human weakness to reveal God to our finite senses.

The image of God in man, therefore, is the reflection in man of God's love, wisdom, reason, judgment, holiness and character, in a finite degree Since Pentecost it is called "the inner man," or "the mind of Christ," "the Spirit of Christ and of God," actuating and controlling the new man in Christ Jesus. Since God is holy and God is love, the man who is living in sin, and who is walking after the flesh, or beast nature, or carnal mind, loses the image of God by sin, and is classed with "a generation of vipers," or with "children of the devil." Therefore Adam, by transgression, lost to a great extent the image of God, so that in Cain and in Seth we see two opposite characters born: one a "son of God" in the likeness and image of Adam and of God, before Adam sinned; and one who "was of that wicked one, and who slew his brother" (1 John 3:12).

It is not said of Cain or of wicked men that they are in the image of God, therefore the image must consist in the reflection in man, in a limited degree, of the wisdom, love, holiness and character of the invisible Creator. "God is love, and he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and he in him." The carnal man conceives of God both in form and character like himself, because he can conceive of no higher ideal than himself.

"For God created man to be immortal, and made him to be the image of his own eternity. Nevertheless through envy of the devil came death into the world; and they that do hold of his side do find it . . . . For righteousness is immortal" (Wisdom of Solomon). Thus the image of God in man is connected with righteousness. God is always and everywhere present through universal spirit (Psa. 39:7, 8). The holy place and the most holy represent two conditions: the human plane, and the spirit plane; the mortal, sinful state, and the immortal, sinless state, separated by the vail, which represents the flesh or carnal state of mind (Heb 10:20). Finite comprehension of an infinite God must be very imperfect and limited. "Canst thou by searching find out God? Canst thou find out the Almighty to perfection? It is as high as heaven; what canst thou do? deeper than hell; what canst thou know" (Job 11:7)?

IF WE FAIL NOT

SOWING IS toilsome work. The Christian's life in this world is a life of labor; but it is not labor in vain; and we are exhorted to "be not not weary in well-doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not."

The day of reaping may be long deferred, but it will surely come. It is pleasant when we can see seed-time and harvest close together, and when the fruit of faithful sowing appears at once to gladden and bless the heart. But this is not always the case. It is the order of divine providence that seed shall be sown in faith and that time must elapse before the harvest can be gathered in.

We need not murmur at this delay. It is wise, it is necessary. We need not be discouraged, nor fear that our labor has been in vain; we must wait. We may sow in other fields, and pursue other toils, but we cannot hasten the Lord's work. He will bring it to pass in his own good time. Doubtless many a seed that has been sown, despaired of, and forgotten, will yet bring forth an abundant harvest; and many a discouraged laborer shall see with glad surprise upon the hills of God, the ripening sheaves that sprang from seed which he supposed had been devoured by birds, or had withered beneath the summer's heat.

"We shall reap if we faint not." The "due season" will come; the time of resurrection, of revelation, of manifestation, of reunion, of reward. Blessed are they which shall endure to the end, and fainting not, shall join with sowers and with reapers, to sing with joy the eternal harvest home.—Selected by Jennie Townsend.

"The Body of Moses," an article in this issue by Sister Susan A. Howard, is worth thinking about. Enoch and Elijah are perplexing problems to those who have learned that man is mortal, and that the earth is to be our home forever, when the traditional view about them going to heaven is still entertained. Under title "More than One Man in Heaven" Mr. J. G. Bird, an Adventist, writes thus in a recent edition of "Our Hope":

"Adventists are accustomed to quote John 3:13, "No man hath ascended to heaven" to prove that men do not ascend to heaven at death. And think by doing so they have achieved over their immortal-soul friend a wonderful victory.

"But if Adventists will take another look at John 3:13 they can see clearly that it is—one thing and the case of Enoch Gen. 5:24, "God took him," and Elijah in 2 Kings 2:11 "Went up . . . into heaven," is quite another. At the least calculations when Jesus uttered these memorable words there were in heaven two real, tangible men, if God's word be true—and assuredly it is true. Why is it that this cannot be harmonized so as to read at least comparatively smooth. God's word should read smoothly, i. e. no contradictions should be apparent to the average reader.

"The question is not whether men actually go to heaven at death—this writer is sure that not one person ever goes to heaven at death; but how does John 3:13 look to you when you place by the side of it the fact of Enoch and Elijah having been translated and taken up into heaven."

Adventists and others who believe in conditional immortality have been quoting John 3:13, "No man hath ascended up to heaven," against the idea that people go to heaven; and now it turns out they believe that when Jesus said "no man" there were at least "two real, tangible men" in heaven! Gen. 5:2;4 2 Kings 2:11; and John 3:13 they cannot "harmonize" or make them read "smooth." They are flat "contradictions" as they understand them, which shows that their understanding is wrong. Years ago we showed in our book. "The Bible: Its Principles and Texts" that Enoch and Elijah died. At the time our book was published our position regarding these two men was repudiated by many and violently opposed by some; but no man has tried to answer our arguments. Our position has weathered the storms of criticisms for ten years, and stands today as solid as ever.

Sanctified Infidels

I HAVE been in doubt for several years about 1 Cor. 7:14: "For the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband: else were your children unclean, but now are they holy." What does Paul mean by the sanctification of the husband and wife; and what does he mean by "holy" children? I have heard the idea advanced, based upon this text as authority, that children of believing parents would be saved for the sake of the parents. This, too, from people who pretend to believe in "conditional immortality." This seems to me to be conditional immortality with all the conditions left out.

Editorial Comment

TO GRASP Paul's meaning in 1 Cor. 7:14 we must regard the context. In the 12th and 13th verses the apostle is advising those who have unbelieving husbands and wives not to put them away by divorce proceedings. Probably some of the more zealous Jewish converts to Christianity, on the authority of Ezra 10:3, had contended that the Corinthians who, before they learned the truth had been married to idolaters, were bound to "put away" their spouses if they continued in idolatry. Paul ordered such marriages to be continued, if both were willing to abide together in the matrimonial compact and live in peace. But as difference in religion often proves occasion of family quarrels, in his second epistle the apostle commanded them in contracting marriages after they knew the truth, by no means to marry idolaters (2 Cor. 6:14).

Now in the 14th verse the apostle justifies the marriage of infidels to show that in case the truth was learned afterwards, the marriage covenant was not annulled. According to the Greek he wrote: "For the infidel husband is sanctified to the wife, and the infidel wife is sanctified to the husband; otherwise, certainly, your children were unclean; whereas, indeed they are holy."

Sanctified "to," not "by"

Our translation reads, "the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband." "En" means into, towards, not "by." The following texts show this: "Know ye not what the Scripture saith to (en) Elias" (Rom. 11:2); "Neither have I written these things that it should be done to (en) me" (1 Cor. 9:15); "To reveal his Son to (en) me" (Gal. 1:6); "By this was manifested the love of God towards (en, to) me" (1 John 4:9). Since the unbelieving husband is sanctified "to the wife," and not "by the wife," we are led easily into an understanding of what sanctification is.

Sanctification of Infidels

The words "common," "unclean," "holy," "sanctify," etc., are widely misunderstood, and no doubt help to confuse our correspondent. Because many things in common use among the heathen were "unclean" to the Jews according to the law of Moses. they used the word "common" to denote things unclean (Matt. 15:11; Mark 7:2; Rom. 14:14; Heb. 10:29). Children were "holy" or unholy, "clean" or unclean by the same standard. Now to "sanctify, to make holy, to hallow" in the Hebrew Scripture, signifies to cleanse a thing from those defilements which render it unfit for sacred use. It is said Moses "sanctified" the people by making them wash their clothes (Ex. 19:10). Sanctify, then, signifies to set a thing apart for a particular purpose. "Prepare them for the day of slaughter" is, in the Hebrew, "sanctify them for the day of slaughter" (Jer. 12:3). God girded Cyrus for military operations against Babylon, heathen and bad as he was (Isa. 45:5); and terrible and unrighteous as were the Medes, Jehovah calls them "my sanctified ones" to destroy Babylon (Isa. 13:3). They were "prepared" to destroy Babylon, and therefore were "sanctified" for that purpose. Infidels, then, are often said to be sanctified because they are fitted for certain purposes. It is easy to see now how an unbelieving or infidel wife may be "sanctified to the husband." "Sanctified to the husband," notice, not to the Lord. The husband and wife, though unbelievers, are fitted to perform their relative duties to each other, by their mutual affection, and were duly sanctified (or set apart for each other's use) in the marriage vows. Their children were, therefore, "clean," "holy" or legitimate.

Fast-fading Fashions

Pemmican Notes of the Editor's Weekly Sermon

The fashion of this world passeth away (1 Cor. 7:31).

AFTER ENUMERATING the domestic relations, husbands and wives, children, sorrows and joys, Paul writes: "The fashion of this world passeth away" (1 Cor. 7:31). The same Greek word translated here "fashion" is applied to Christ in Phil. 2:8, "Being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself . . ." It is also the original of our word "scheme" which means, or formerly meant, to decorate a stage for exhibition. As soon as the exhibit was over the decorations were removed. Thus in this most emphatic way the apostle writes of the fashion of this world; and because it is not of any duration, we must not set our hearts on it inordinately.

I. Since the beginning of time there has been a perpetual changing in the material world, in the constant flux of the animal world as also the moral world. From Nimrod down the history of this world has changed. A thousand questions could be asked which we cannot answer because of this transient state of affairs. For instance, where is the garden of Eden? where are the walls of Babylon? what has become of the art of the Egyptians, the arms and dress of the Greeks and Romans? In spite of history every vestige of former things has been swept away. God is linked with this transient arrangement of things. Promotions are not the matter of caprice but the hand of God is in them. "God is the judge: he putteth down one and setteth up another." "With him is strength and wisdom, the deceived and the deceiver are his. He leadeth counsellors away spoiled and maketh the judges fools. He looseth the bond of kings and girdeth their loins with a girdle . . . He poureth contempt upon princes and weakeneth the strength of the mighty. He increaseth the nations and destroyeth them: he enlargeth the nations and straiteneth them again" (Job 12:16-24; Psa. 75:5-7; Dan. 2:20, 21). In the European events of such moment in the world today and with which we are so familiar. God's hand-writing can be plainly seen.

II Why has God made things as they are? To make the world know he is God and that he governs it; to reveal the corruption of the human heart; to draw out the latent power and ability of men good and bad. If every one honored God the government would be entirely different. But as God deals with incorrigible sinners they must be ruled in a straitened manner. He must do terrible things in righteousness to show that he does still rule. Find Ex. 14:16-18 and read that judicial visitation which destroyed Pharoah, but we learn in verse eighteen that God received honor from the act. It is true he got no converts, but the Egyptians knew that he was the Lord. In Dan. 4:30-37 Nebuchadnezzar was not converted, but after his experience his reason returned and he recognized that the heavens do rule. The severity of God's providence and the astringency of his judgment only show to a hard-headed world that he does still possess the authority over the nations. Even if in a measure he does restrain his loyal church he can not impress the people by love nor reach them by lovingkindness, so he causes the fashion of this world to fade in order to rule, to regulate, to restrain us: to make men out of children.

"And I gave my heart to seek and search out by wisdom concerning all things that are done under heaven: this sore travail hath God given to the sons of man to be exercised therewith. I have seen all the works that are done under the sun and behold, all is vanity and vexation of spirit. That which is crooked cannot be made straight: and that which is wanting cannot be numbered" (Eccl. 1:13-15). This whole arrangement is but a school. Solomon learned out of his contact with the world that all was vanity. Right along with "the mystery of godliness" (2 Thess. 2:7) appeared the "mystery of iniquity" (2 Thess. 2:7). The atheist would question why God should allow this. Down through the second chapter we find the development of one class to the obtainment of glory and another class being deceived through iniquity. God has introduced all this confusion, he is back of all this; but it becomes us as children to arrange ourselves in harmony with his plans, to kneel down and be taught of him. Then Babylon can roar but we know the shepherd's voice; we know the truth, having been taught: and it leads us on and upward.

III. What is beyond these ephemeral things? What is the consummation of God in all this? The kingdom of God is to emerge out of this overthrow of temporal systems. On the ruins of destroyed nations God is to consecrate his kingdom. And the nations are to be destroyed. Today a league of nations has been instituted. Why? Through fear of some stronger power. But while the people are forming this league and looking towards the Central Powers, Paul tells us in majestic wording, "See that ye refuse not him that speaketh. For if they escaped not who refused him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven" (Heb. 12:25). At the inaugurating of Israel's kingdom, God's voice shook the earth: and the simile "to shake" refers to a ship tossed and torn apart by a raging sea. "Whose voice then shook the earth, but now hath he promised saying, Yet once more I shake not the earth only but also heaven. And this word, Yet once more, signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken as of things that are made, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain. Wherefore we receiving a kingdom which cannot be moved, let us have grace whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear; for our God is a consuming fire" (Heb. 12:26-29).

DEAR BROTHER HUGGINS:

I have been reading Brother John Fiske Jr's articles on the pre-existence of Christ and think they are well explained. There is one text which I would like to ask him to explain through the columns of our good paper. It is found in John 17:5. It seems that many believe in that doctrine, and if it is not scriptural it is dangerous to believe. According to the Scriptures can a member of the church of God sue at law an unbeliever? You will find enclosed a postage stamp with which to mail me an answer to this question. Hoping that Brother Fiske will find time to explain the text. Your sister in the one hope,

MRS. B. A. UPTON.

DEAR SISTER HOGARTH:

YOUR GOOD letter I received through The Restitution helped and strengthened me, while at the same time I was made sad. When I receive such loving words of commendation, I am made to feel how far short I come in trying to serve our Lord, many times yielding to temptations, many times doing the things I would not, and leaving undone the things I would do. If I had (which I have not) all talent to write learnedly and fluently; if I had all faith so that I could remove mountains, how gladly would I yeild it all up if I might have more of the meek and gentle spirit of Jesus; more of the love and forgiveness which he felt towards all, even for his carnal murderers when in his fearful agony on the cross. When I compare my life with the perfect pattern given us, then I see how little I have followed in his steps.

But we have to comfort us the promise of God that if we strive to walk in the narrow way he will cover us with the righteousness which Jesus worked out for us, and which we in our sinful nature could not do. Like you I wish the able writers and teachers to whom we look for strengthening in the most holy faith, would write more on the simple love of God and less on unprofitable things. I have, for a few days, been looking up some Scriptures which I now transcribe that they may comfort you as they always do me.

In Jer. 31:3 God says to Israel: "I have loved thee with an everlasting love." Notice the word "everlasting." What a comfort to know that as long as we desire him, his love will never be withdrawn from us. For if he so loved Israel after the flesh, how much more those who are the seed of Abraham through his own begotten Son. Again, read Rom. 8 from the 35th verse to the end of the chapter. Who or what can separate us from the love of Christ? Nothing but our own turning away from him. "The love of Christ which passeth all knowledge" (Eph. 3:19). 1 John 3:1: "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us." What is it? "That we should be called the sons of God." "He that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God" (1 John 4: 6). How can we dwell in love and thus dwell in God? By loving the brethren as Jesus loved us (John 15:12). By loving our neighbor (Matt. 22:39). In Luke 10:29-38 Jesus teaches us that our neighbor is any one to whom we can do good. Matt. 5:44: "Love your enemies. Do good to those who despitefully use you and persecute you." This is how we dwell in love and thus dwell in God. Doing the things from the heart makes us children of God (Matt. 5:45). If these things are lacking in us no amount of doctrine believed only intellectually can make us sons and daughters of God. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness (Rom. 10:10).

It is hard, and of ourselves we cannot attain to this godliness, but with God's help we can and should strive to bring every thought into subjection to the will of Christ (2 Cor. 10:5; Matt. 19: 26). The only way we can glorify God is by so living that those with whom we are associated will see our good works and thus be convinced of the truth of what we profess. See also John 15:8. "Herein is my Father glorified that ye bear much fruit." So (in this way) shall ye be my disciples." Disciple, a follower. To be like Jesus is to be meek, gentle, courteous. How much more we know than we do.

Yesterday I was looking over some old Restitutions and came across a little article which struck me so forcibly that I cut it out and pasted it inside the cover of my Bible where I could read it often. Two lines I will quote: "For some time we have had a rule not to allow anyone to leave us feeling it was a misfortune to have met us." If we could rise one step higher and by our words and deeds cause those we meet to desire the truth, how we would glorify God.

Dear Sister, I have written a long letter. And now I pray that God may have you in his keeping, guiding and strengthening you in all things of his. You have helped me and I am glad to tell you so.

Your sister in Christ,

FLORA A. KNAPP.

The Body of Moses

AN INQUIRY ABOUT VISIONS

DEAR BROTHERS AND SISTERS OF THE RESTITUTION:

I AM writing you on a subject that has puzzled me for some time. I would like to have it explained by sisters S. Roxana Wince and Flora A. Knapp. In the January number of a monthly paper I saw an article on the body of Moses. The author declared that when the transfiguration of Christ on the holy mount took place (Matt. 17; Mark 9; Luke 9:28-35) that Moses and Elias were there in body, not spirit or soul, but in the body they possessed when alive. The article in question said in part:

"The gospels tell us that, at the transfiguration of our Lord, Moses and Elias (not their spirits or souls, but the two individuals themselves) appeared in glory and spake of his decease which he was about to accomplish at Jerusalem. In order to literally and personally appear, Moses must have been raised from the dead, and Jude in his epistle, verse 9, refers to his resurrection when Michael the archangel contended with the devil about the body of Moses—not the spirit or soul, but the body .... Moses was raised from the dead to stand with Christ and Elias (who had never died) on the holy mount .... Did Moses die again? We are not told in the Scriptures, and do not care to be wise above what is written. Scripture does not say that it is appointed to all men once to die. There are millions we trust who will remain until his coming and so will never die. Nor does Scripture teach that believers only die once. Though it does say that they do not die the second death in the lake of fire, it does not teach that they can only die once. There are exceptions to the general rule, such as Lazarus and Eutychus, the widow of Nain's son, the ruler's daughter. These four died twice a second death, but not the second death. We do well to leave Moses and Elias with God. If he purposely keeps it secret as to their present state and place, we are willing as William Tyndale puts it, to 'leave God alone with his secrets.' I do not say that Moses died again, but I wait till the resurrection day when we shall meet both him and his Savior, and shall then know what we know not now."

What do you all think of this? I understand the transfiguration to be a vision. If it were not a vision, but a literal happening, why would not Peter's vision of the sheet let down at four corners (Acts 10:11) be literal? Also Ezekiel's vision (Ezek. 1st chapter), and Daniel's visions? If the transfiguration was literal why are not the other visions literal? According to Webster a vision means, "act of seeing; an apparition; a fanciful view." A trance is a state of insensibility; transfiguration is a change of form or figure. If the transfiguration was literal, surely all the other visions and trances were, too.

Your sister in Christ,

MRS. SUSAN A. HOWARD.

Obituary

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.--Psa. 116:15.

Rebecca A. Myers died at her home on North Michigan Street, Plymouth, Indiana, March 28, 1920. Death was the result of a lingering illness of some years standing and was not unexpected. She leaves an only son, Justin E. Myers and his family, as the only survivers of her immediate family.

She was born in Madison County, Ind., Aug. 9, 1851, and came to Marshall County with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bryan McDaniels, Nov. 9, 1856, who located in Polk township, a comparatively new country. Here she did her part in the transformation of forest and undrained lands into fertile and productive farm lands, checkered by good roads and dotted with comfortable homes. She was married to Erasmus D. Myers, August 17, 1868, and became the mother of two children, Martha Emma, and Justin E. The daughter died March 22, 1882, and the husband was killed by lightning May 25, 1879. She remained his widow and removed to Plymouth in 1907 to be near her son and enjoy his care and association in her declining years.

She was converted and baptized by Elder Barnhill at the age of eighteen and united with the church of God. She has remained a consistent and substantial supporter of the church and the cause of truth. A woman respected and esteemed by her friends and neighbors and loved by her relatives has passed from the busy scenes of life into a peaceful sleep in Jesus. She was full of faith, confidence, and hope that Jesus the Christ will soon come and awaken her from that slumber and usher her into the glories of his kingdom.

Funeral services were held from the Church of God in Plymouth, Tuesday March 30, conducted by the writer. Burial was made in Oakhill Cemetery.

GOLDEN TEXT: Psalm 124:6-8

GOLDEN TEXT: Luke 16:8

"SCHOOL DAYS"

LORD TEACH me to make this rule,
To think of life as school,
And try my best
To stand each test,
And do my work
And nothing shirk.

Should someone else outshine
This dullard head of mine,
Should I be sad?
I will be glad
To do my best,
Is thy behest.

If weary with my book
I cast a wistful look
Where posies grow;
O let me know
That flowers within
Are best to win.

Don't take my book away
Anon to let me play,
And let me out
To run about?
I grateful bless
Thee for recess.

Then recess past, slack,
I turn me slowly back,
On my hard bench
My hands to clench,
And set my heart
To learn my part.

These lessons thou dost give
To teach us how to live;
To do, to bear,
To get, and share,
To work and play,
And trust alway.

What though I may not ask
To choose my daily task?
Thou hast decreed
To meet my need.
What pleases thee,
That shall please me.

Some day the bell will sound.
Some day my heart will bound.
As with a shout
That school is out,
And lessons done,
I homeward run.

TREES AND PEOPLE

HEREDITY IS a thing that is much discussed among the grown-ups. Some people think that heredity (that is what our fathers and mothers and their fathers and mothers, etc., were before we were born) has more influence on the life of a person than the environment (the influence of our surroundings) in which that person is brought up.

In a magazine article published not long ago a writer illustrated this theory by showing the picture of two trees; one a white pine, the other a yellow pine, which were exactly the same age and grown under similar conditions in the same locality; in fact, only a few feet apart. The growth of the two trees was widely different in spite of the fact that they had had precisely the same environment. The white developed broad in outline and with branches almost all the way to the groumd; the yellow pine had a tall, bare stem, with a shallow, sparce crown. The writer argued that this showed how much more power heredity had than environment.

But there lies a grave danger in believing too much in heredity. It makes it so easy for people to blame their faults on that instead of themselves. If anything is hard to do right it is easy to find a suitable flaw in the character of our parents and say we have inherited that and cannot improve. This is all a great mistake, and there are many people who make it every day

The illustration of the trees shows only this: that if by birth you are an Indian it is impossible to change yourself into a Chinaman. Or, if by birth you are a Chinaman, it is impossible to change yourself into a Frenchman. Just as the two trees each kept certain characteristics of growth and structure, and perhaps color. It is a matter of species. But if the trees were both in the open fields they had no dust on their leaves, while if they were at the side of a much travelled road their leaves would not be clean. That is how environment shows itself. So it is with people. A Chinaman may be raised in France; he may learn to speak the language of that country perfectly; he may adopt the manners and customs of the people among whom he lives until they are more natural to him than are the manners and customs of the country from which he came. But his facial structure, general build and color will retain the characteristics of his race. These are the things over which heredity has supreme power. But beyond that we all are more or less responsible for what we make of ourselves and for the conditions among which we are brought up.

To serve God with all our strength, heart, and mind; to acknowledge Jesus as our Savior and Redeemer; to have strength and nobility and kindliness of character; to be ambitious in our own as well as our Master's service—these are the things that we are free to leave out or put into our characters.

SUPERSTITION

SOME TIME ago we read that the Chinese are so filled with superstition that parents are afraid to give their children the fine high sounding names their love suggests, lest the evil spirit of which they stand in constant fear, should come to understand how precious they are and cause them some calamity. So the little ones are called by such names as Little Stupid and the like, the idea being that when the spirits hear the children being called by such uncomplimentary names they will imagine the parents care very little for them, and will not take the trouble to molest them. Having had a slight acquaintance with some Chinese, and knowing their strong superstition we can readily believe the following news item:

"An industrial university to cost $5,000,000 will be erected in Shanghai if the plans of Chinese educators are attained.

It is intended to conduct the unversity on Amercian lines, with equipment and instructors from the United States.

A novel feature of the proposed university will be the incorporation in it of a complete cotton mill which will employ its students and require them to perform productive toil as well as school work. Three leading Chinese of Shanghai have gone to the United States to visit schools and obtain ideas for the establishment of the university."

This we were glad to read, for where true education is superstition cannot exist, and where superstition vanishes there is hope of the truth concerning God and Christ taking root and flourishing. Let us hope for the best concerning China.

PERVERSITY

SOMETIMES WE wound the dearest hearts—
Perhaps those we love best,
When all our ways and words to them,
Should be the tenderest.

Sometimes we give the ones we love
A frown—when just a smile
Should be the magic touch of joy,
They yearned for all the while.

Sometimes a truer, tenderer way
So much that's sad would save,
If only perverse ways we checked
And our true selves we gave.

KNOW YOUR BIBLE

A FAMOUS portrait painter was engaged upon his own portrait and asked his intimate friend, standing by, for his opinion of the likeness.

The answer was, "It would be better if you could keep to your own portrait, but you seem to be trying to improve upon your own face."

There is a great deal in the manner of bringing the truth forward in such a way that it is not over painted and made ineffective. To know your Bible and stick strictly to the written word always is the safest course.

BOOKS

SILENT COMPANIONS of the lonely hour,
Friends who can never alter nor forsake,
Who for inconstant roving have no power,
All are neglected, perforce, must calmly take.

Let me return to you, this turmoil ending,
Which worldly cares have in my spirit wrought,
And, o'er your old familiar pages bending,
Refresh my mind with many a tranquil thought.
Till, haply meeting there from time to time,
Fancies, the audible echo of my own,

'Twill be like hearing in a foreign clime,
My native language spoke in friendly tone,
And with a sort of welcome I shall dwell
On thee, my unripe musings told so well.

No accident is so unfortunate but that the prudent may draw some advantage from it.

Abraham's Sacrifice

THE MORNING sun rose bright and clear,
On Abraham's tent it gaily shone:
And all was bright and cheerful there,
All save the Patriarch 's heart alone.

When God's command arose to mind,
It forced into his eye a tear,
His soul was chaste and all resigned,
Yet nature fondly lingered there.

The simple morning feast was spread,
And Sara at the banquet smiled:
Joy o'er her face its lustre spread,
For near her sat her only child.

The mother raised a speaking eye,
For all a mother's soul was there;
She feared the desert drear and dry,
She feared the savage lurking there.

Abram beheld and made reply,
On him from whom our blessings flow:
My helpmeet we by faith rely,
'Tis God's command and we must go.

The dutious son in haste obeyed,
The scrips were filled, the mules prepared
And with the third day's twilight shade,
Moriah's holy hill appeared.

When on the mountain's brow they stood,
With smiling wonder Isaac cries,
My father! lo, the fire and wood,
But where's the lamb for sacrifice.

The Holy Spirit stayed his mind,
While Abram answered low and calm,
With steady face and look resigned,
God will himself provide a lamb.

But lo! the father bound the son,
And laid him on the funeral pile,
And then stretched forth his trembling hand,
And took the knife to slay his child.

But when he raised the blade full high,
To execute his God's command,
An angel's voice as from the sky,
Cries, "Abram, spare thine only son."

Now, let no pen profane, like mine,
On holiest themes too rashly dare,
Turn to the Book of books divine,
And read the sacred promise there.

Ages on ages rolled away,
At length the time appointed came,
When on the mountain Calvary,
God did provide himself a Lamb.—Selected by Sister Eidemiller.

The Restoration of Israel

Few, and Scattered Widely; Restored, and Multiplied Greatly

WE ARE told: "The children of Israel shall abide many days without a king, and without a prince, and without a sacrifice, and without an image, and without an ephod, and without a teraphim; afterwards shall the children of Israel return, and seek the Lord their God, and David their king; and shall fear the Lord and his goodness in the latter days" (Hos. 3:4, 5).

This is very explicit, and clearly shows that during the time Israel is without a sacrifice, she is also without a king, or prince; and knocks out the idea that her kingly line was transported to Ireland, from there to England, and other European countries, and is now ruling herself by her own kings. It is after she "returns" to her land that she seeks Jehovah, and David her king, and not while in strange countries. The idea that Israel now has kings is antagonistic to Ezekiel's plain prophecy, which shows that "he" who shall come "whose right it is," is singular and not plural. It should have been plural if the Davidic throne and kingly line were to be transported to other countries, where many kings have ruled in succession. "He" can be only one person; and that the Messiah, and the Davidic throne is overturned till "he whose right it is" shall come, and God gives it him (Ezek. 21:25-27). According to Anglo-Israelism, Ireland was ruled by kings of the Davidic line long before Messiah was born, and the Davidic throne transplanted to that country; and if this is true Ezekiel prophesied falsely, for he declared, "It shall be no more till he comes whose right it is," or till Messiah comes and it is given him. If it is by right king George's throne then he can demand of Christ to stand aside. He can demand, "I have the right to David's throne; I demand my rights." Will Christ be given the privilege, when he comes, of taking men's God-given rights from them? He has been raised up to sit upon David's throne (Acts 2.39). "The Lord God will give it unto him" Luke 1:32). "He then is the rightful heir, and that proves king George is not; and hence kills Anglo-Israelism. No one is promised David's throne but the "he" of the prophecy, and this "he" being the Christ, proves all others to be illegal to heirship to that throne.

The prophets are very explicit in telling us that Israel is to be in the future gathered from among the Gentile nations, and north country from Palestine, which no doubt is Russia; all of which could not be true if she is already gathered in a nation of her own, and not, as some say, now scattered among the Gentile nations of the earth. Read Jer. 11:14; Ezek. 36:24; Jer. 31:8; 23:7, 8; 16:15; Isa. 43:6. God says, "And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, wherein your fathers have dwelt; and they shall dwell therein, they and their children, and their children's children forever" (Ezek. 37:25). Imagine the inhabitants of the British Empire, Ireland, Canada, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, and the United States, with the Jews, all dwelling in the little land of Palestine, with their children and children's children, eternally, if you can! Why, the population would be so dense that standing room would be hard to find; much less room for flocks, vineyards, houses, and fields, as the prophets promise. Yet none of Israel's inhabitants will be left in foreign lands; for God declares, "Now will I bring again the captivity of Jacob, and have mercy upon the whole house of Israel, and will be jealous for my holy name; after that they have borne their shame, and all their trespasses whereby they have trespassed against me, when they dwelt safely in their land, and none made them afraid. When I have brought them again from the people, and gathered them again out of their enemies' lands, and am sanctified in them in the sight of many nations; then shall they know that I am the Lord their God, which caused them to be led into captivity among the nations: but I have gathered them unto their own land, and have left none of them any more there" (Ezek. 39:25-28). This is a positive proof that when Israel is gathered she is gathered from, not her own land; but her enemies' lands, and that none of them are to be left after the gathering is completed; hence room will be found for them in their ancient home land, and room enough for them to cultivate orchards vineyards, and farm crops, as well as own flocks of domesticated animals. The Jews today number about 15,000,000, and the land promised Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob is about the size of Germany, whose population numbers about 65,000,000 and perhaps could be made to support as many as the population of the United States with her deserts and solitary places blossoming as the rose; yet if England and her colonies are to exist there with their children and children's children, the land would be too small; for they would make another population equal to the United States or nearly so. According to Anglo-Israelism Israel will never do one thing the prophets declare she will return to Palestine. Moses told Israel, "If thou wilt not obeve to do all the wods of this law, that are written in this book"—

(1) "Ye shall be left few in numbers";

(2) "Plucked from the land whither thou goest";

(3) "Scattered among the people from one end of the earth, even unto the other";

(4) "Among these nations thou shalt find no ease"; and

(5) "Thy life shall hang in doubt before thee; and thou shalt fear day and night, and shall have no assurance of life" (Deut. 28:58-68).

If the reader will take notice he will see that the whole of Israel is here addressed, and hence the proof is positive that the whole are scattered now; for when they repent they will not be settled in Britain, but their own land, and so completely that we are told, "If any of thine be driven out unto the outmost parts of heaven, from thence will the Lord thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee: and the Lord thy God will bring thee into THE LAND WHICH THY FATHERS POSSESSED, and thou (Israel as a whole) shalt possess it; and he will do thee good, and multiply thee above thy fathers." Few in number gives room for multiplication in the land; and the Jew as he stands today will have room in Palestine to multiply, and more so after the rebels have been purged out from among those who come into the bond of the covenant (Ezek. 20:37, 38): for "they shall not enter into the land."

Arguments Answered

UNDER THIS heading in "The Restitution," No. 12, the Editor gives quite a rousing criticism on what I said in an article in the same issue under title, "God Will Have All Men to be Saved." It is much more encouraging to receive criticism, no matter how sharp, than to be treated with silent contempt. Often things we do are not strictly to the glory of God, because we do not think beforehand; but when we engage with one in discussing divine things, it is not expedient in indulge in satire just to make our position look strong and that of the other to appear ridiculous.

It pleased God to save men by the preaching of the gospel; for it is the power of God unto salvation. God sent his Son into the world to be the Savior of the world. Paul declares the gospel to be that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day, according to the Scriptures. To this apostle the ministry of reconciliation was given, and the word to be preached was: Be ye reconciled unto God; for the one that knew no sin was made sin for us, that we should be made the righteousness of God in him.

It is a fundamental truth that there is no salvation out of or apart from Christ; that his name is the only name whereby we can be saved; for no man cometh to the Father but by him.

Notwithstanding these explicit statements of a fundamental principle, the Editor is teaching another plan of salvation with Christ left out. He tells us that this plan was working full blast under the preaching of Noah, and he says: "There must have been believers subsequent to the flood, as they are called the salt of the earth (Matt. 5: 13)." Well, if there "must have been" where is the record of any? He must produce some of the salt before we believe, other than Mrs. Lot.

Before proceeding further it is necessary to explain some things pertaining to this argument, and the things the Editor has misconstrued to break down my position and to support his position. By whatever means or measure, an insight was given of God's plan of salvation to the ancient worthies: to that extent only, they had the gospel preached unto them. You know some now preach by Photo-Drama. In ancient times the gospel was preached to Abraham by the covenant God made with him, whereby the promise of eternal inheritance was confirmed in Christ, the heir of God and confirmed in Christ to an elect seed as joint heirs with him. Abraham was given considerable knowledge of God's plan of salvation. He saw the resurrection when he should receive again from the dead, the children and heirs of promise in Christ. He saw the kingdom of God, the New Jerusalem, and he saw the blessings of all the nations through faith.

Now Peter tells us that it was for this cause the gospel was preached to them that are dead, that they might be judged as men in the flesh, but live unto God in spirit. Then in chapter 4 he admonishes that we also should be armed with the same mind, to be dead to the flesh; for he that has died has ceased from sin. Now why were the ancient worthies judged in the flesh? And why also should we judge ourselves to be dead as to the flesh? The answer is, that they and we might not come into judgment with the world. So Peter reminds us that the time past of our life may suffice us to have walked in sins of the flesh. Then he warns that God is ready to judge both the quick and the dead for these things of the flesh. And he adds: "For this cause was the gospel preached to them that are dead." For what cause? That they might not come into judgment with the world, having died unto the flesh.

Now that exposition may not be as "vigorous" as Macknight's translation, but it is just as "concise" and sheds more light. It rather seems that MAC is dark as NIGHT on this subject.

Israelites were indeed on probation for life, but not for that life hidden in Christ which is the gift of God through faith. Under the law, probation was for long life as the wages of righteousness of the law, wages for works. So I said that Israelites did not have the ghost of a chance for life. The Editor, while combating this, agrees in part with it saying: "They were not saved by the law, but by heirship of the Abrahamic gospel." Now I ask How does anyone have heirship in the Abrahamic gospel or promise? The answer is: only when he believes into Christ, and in no other way under heaven. Thus we read: "If ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to promise." If Israelites could not be saved by the law, and they could not become heirs of God except by union with Christ in his death by faith and baptism; then they did not have the ghost of a chance for life under the law.

The gospel of sabbath rest in Christ through faith was preached to Israel, and the Editor insists that under the law Israelites had what he calls "a gospel chance for life." So he quotes Heb. 4:2: "For unto us was the gospel preached as well as unto them." He did not quote the whole verse. The remainder reads: "But the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it." Oh, that is quite different. Now if Israelites could not be saved by the law, and the gospel of rest through faith did not profit them, how many were saved? Not one. Beside all that, they could enter into that rest only after Christ came to give them that rest. But under the law they did not have the ghost of a chance to rest from their works.

The Scriptures tell us that God will have all men to be saved. The Editor does not believe that. He told us that God commands all men to be saved, but he does not desire to save all men. "Larger Hope" people believe that God desires all men to be saved; that some time before 40 A. D. he began to reconcile all men in Christ to himself. Jesus was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death; for God's grace unto all men, he tasted death for every man. It was because God so loved the world that he gave his Son, that whosoever should believe into him might not perish, but have everlasting life. Could Larger Hope people put it in any larger terms than that? Now listen to this: "So then as through one trespass the judgment came unto all men to condemnation; even so through one act of righteousness the free gift came unto all men to justification of life" (R. V.). What is the "free gift"? It is the chance for life unto all men; the free gift of righteousness apart from works: it is this promised rest in Christ by faith, that has come within the reach of all men and all must receive it, either to accept or reject it. If not, Christ has died for all men in vain. No man that denies this can stand very high in God's favor, because he is making God a liar.

Will this chance for life through the free gift of God's righteousness come to men in the other age when Christ will have come the second time? Yes as true as God of the Bible lives. In that day when Christ shall judge the secrets of men's hearts; some by continuance in well doing will seek for glory and honor and incorruptibility; to them will be rendered eternal life.

In that day the gospel will begin with the proclamation: "Fear God and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come." Then we are positively assured that when the judgments of God are in the earth, the inhabitants thereof shall learn righteousness. Our dear old Bible is full of anticipation for that time when the Lord will bring judgment unto righteousness. But the Editor translates all these glorious expectations to mean only disaster in a day of doom. He says that when Christ comes a second time, he will bring salvation only to those who are waiting for him. He means that Christ will bring salvation only to such as get saved in this life. But who are those that are waiting? Paul tells us that the whole groaning creation is waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God at Christ's coming with them to judge the world. And the groaning creation is waiting in hope to be delivered from the bondage of corruption and to be made like unto children of God with glorious liberty from sin and death.

Then the apostle says that even we, who have the first fruits of the Spirit, groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, even the redemption from the body. Now if we who are waiting for the adoption and redemption are the first fruits, how many more do you suppose will be saved at the general ingathering?

We see then that God is reconciling the world to himself in this dispensation for a kind of first fruits of the Spirit. But we are assured when God pours out his Spirit upon all flesh in the dispensation of the fulness of times, that he will reconcile all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and in the earth. What a glorious gospel! What a Savior! Then will the Spirit and the bride say, "Come, and let him that heareth say Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will let him take the water of life freely."

IS "THELO" A COMMANDMENT?

In the Editor's exposition of "God will have all men to be saved," says: "1 Tim. 2:4 translated according to Greek reads: 'Who commandeth all men to be saved.'" This is said upon the Editor's own authority, and I have sense enough to see from this and other things he has said, that he has no knowledge of Greek. It is freely admitted here that the use of the English words "will," "wish," and "desire" may, in a given instance, be equivalent to a command; but this gives no one authority to say that the Greek word "thelo," "I will," may mean a command in alike given case. The Editor has not given any example where "thelo" in the New Testament is rendered as referring to a command. It is merely his gratuitous assertion, unauthorized.

The word "thelo" is associated with such Greek words as contain within their meaning the element of charm, a charm or seduction, either of good or evil. So when we read that God will have ("thelo") all men to be saved, we are to understand that he not only wills or wishes, but he draws those he wills to save unto himself by an offering of inducement; reconciles them unto himself by some great expression of his love.

Again, the Editor hazards his knowledge of Greek by saying "To be saved in the Scriptures often means to deliver from ignorance, sin and unbelief." The word "saved" (sozo) occurs in the New Testament about ninety-five times, and in every instance it refers to the saving of life, or saving from perishing. It never once means to deliver from ignorance, sin, and unbelief. A remnant of Israel was saved by faith through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. We are saved in the same way. So all Israel will be saved, if they abide not still in unbelief; for God is able to graft them in again.

ALEX. ALLAN.

Immortality

TO EDITOR THE GLOBE—SIR:

THERE APPEARED some little time ago in your columns an article in connection with the Sunday School Lesson by Rev. G. C. Pidgeon, D. D. on the subject of immortality. It is amazing how readily men of every degree and station in life are captivated by the impromptu expression of some unknown individual. There is something startlingly unique uttered in circumstances that are in vivid contrast; and immediately it is accepted as inspired. Teachings which rest on such unproved assertions because they tally with current sentiment, are not necessarily true. The statement attributed to the dying soldier concerning his comrade killed in battle, is, notwithstanding its attractiveness, utterly false; and the man is yet to be met with who can disprove the facts. His comrade's career was stopped just as effectively as was that of Ahab who was killed by the man who drew his bow at a venture; or that of Abel who was slain by his brother Cain; or John who was beheaded by Herod the king; for "in the day that a man's breath goeth forth, in that very day his thoughts perish" (Psa. 146:4). How anyone can "carry on" without thought, it would be difficult to imagine! Christ said (speaking of death), "we must work the works of him that sent us while it is day; the night cometh when no man can work." So that if we follow his teaching we cannot follow that of Dr. Pidgeon and "accept cordially" the faith of the soldier, of whom, so far as we can judge, Mr. Pidgeon has not even attempted to ascertain whether the said soldier was or was not a professed soldier of Jesus Christ.

How any minister can have the audacity to quote 1 Cor. 15 in favor of the doctrine that men and women do not die, is certainly a conundrum, and requires a very considerable amount of juggling with words, which is not conducive to honest interpretation. To quote 1 Thess. 4:13-18 in support of the theory that a dead man can still "carry on" is to play fast and loose with language in the most culpable manner. How much can any man accomplish while he is "asleep"? Dr Pidgeon does not believe they are "asleep," and consequently, to him, Scripture language is untruthful. To my mind this comes perilously near to making God a liar.

Again, he actually quotes John 11:25, 26 in support of Longfellow's famous assertion, "There is no death." Language could scarcely be more explicit than in this passage that a Christian may "die," but "though he die," "yet shall he live"!! How? By resurrection from the dead

Mr. Pidgeon's attempt to make a distinction between "eternal life" and "immortality" is evidently borrowed from Russellism. He refers to

John 5:28-30 for confirmation, and says, "According to these teachings all men exist after death. Truly so; no one disputes such an evident truism, for if they did not exist (Mr. Pidgeon probably means "live") after death, death would still have dominion over them, and the "after" would not have taken place. Moreover in these passages the life referred to is only obtained by "resurrection"; but resurrection has no place in the life which Mr. Pidgeon contends for, when he assert that any soldier shot dead by a bullet still contiues to "carry on." An old adage truly says, "Things which are equal to the same thing are equal to one another"; and in view of such as axiom our friend would find it difficult to logically and scripturally support the destruction affirmed. Would the reverend gentleman maintain that there is a "distinction" between everlasting life, eternal life, and immortality? Which of these three terms are synonymous? or do they all differ? Daniel 12:2 says, "Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake; some to everlasting life." Christ says life everlasting (or everlasting life: is there any distinction?) is to be had "in the age to come"; and if Mr. Pidgeon denies that in 1 Cor. 15 St. Paul labors to show that "immortality" is given the believer at resurrection, he cannot complain if his knowledge of plain English is thought to be deficient.

Mr. Pidgeon says "eternal life" is a present possession. The word "hath" being specially emphasized, it might astonish some of our friends to know that according to leading Greek authorities the word "hath" in these passages is not used in an absolute, but in a relative sense. If this were not so Scripture would be self contradictory; for Paul makes no such claim as does Dr. Pidgeon. He was "in hope of eternal life" (Titus 1:2), and to him it was a "good hope" because it was the "promise" of God (2 Tim. 2:1), and each passing day brought "salvation nearer than when he first believed. Paul says, "To those who by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory, honor, and immortality (God will render) eternal life." Here clearly enough the terms are synonymous, and the gift of eternal life is given to those who fulfil the conditions. God gives them what they seek for, and glory, honor, and immortality are included and bestowed by the gift of eternal life.

To suppose that these who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ are called into his presence by means of all the awful accompaniments of war, and the terrible accidents with which the daily press abounds, is reprehensible in the extreme. God's plan is immeasurably better and is contained in 1 Thess. 4:16, 17, which Dr. Pidgeon so grossly misapplies. What Dr. Pidgeons's view regarding the ungodly in the future state is, he does not divulge; but it is not hard to surmise. It is becoming customary in these days for men of eminence in the church to say that "their fate is not revealed." thus ignoring the plainest statements to be found in God's word which it is possible for language to employ.

I trust your readers, including Rev. Pidgeon, will carefully and prayerfully consider their responsibility in these things. Is there any wonder that confusion reigns in the churches?

Yours faithfully,

R. H. JUDD.

Remember the Helping Fund

Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble—in the day of evil, margin (Psa. 41:1).

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

LIFE'S BALANCE SHEET

STATISTICS SHOW that out of each 100 young men twenty-five years old, fifty-four will be dependent upon friends, relatives or charity at sixty-five years of age; thirty-six will have died; five will be supporting themselves by work; four will be wealthy; one will be rich.

Nature is our greatest teacher and experience a close second. If we cannot learn from these two masters we must pay a dear price for our stupidity.

Nine out of every ten people earn more than they need, but only one in twenty saves—a sad commentary on the intelligence of civilized mankind.

Silent Lips.

Pemmican Notes of the Editor's Sermon

O Lord, open thou my lips; and my mouth shall show forth thy praise (Psa. 51:15).

DIVORCE THIS statement from the context and it would only mean a request for enlargement in power and prayer. But the fifty-first Psalm is a penitential Psalm. David has sinned, and now penitent, he approaches God. By reading the whole chapter we find that he states the effects of sin.

Firstly, that sin in some respects closes our mouths.

Secondly, that forgiveness of sin opens our mouth in prayer and praise.

Thirdly, the grateful return one should make to God as one who forgives.

I. Sin and trouble produce a sense of shame and guilt. "I am so troubled that I cannot speak" (Psa. 77:4). Reducing us to a state of silence sin shuts our mouths in our communion with God. "So they sat down with him upon the ground seven days and seven nights and none spake a word unto him, for they saw that his grief was very great" (Job 2:13); "Hereafter I will not talk much with you: for the prince of this world cometh and hath nothing in me" (John 14:30). Even amidst Christ's troubles there was a material effect. "I am feeble and sore broken. I have roared by reason of the disquietness of my heart. Lord, all my desire is before thee and my groaning is not hid from thee" (Psa. 38:8, 9). Hehe we have roaring instead of praying; here, instead of serenity, was a disquiet of heart. "I am the Lord thy God which brought thee out of the land of Egypt: open thy mouth wide and I will fill it" (Psa. 81:10).

II. Sin and trouble prevent us from speaking in behalf of God and from representing God credibly to our fellowmen. "Thou hast put away mine acquaintances far from me; thou hast made me an abomination unto them; I am shut up and cannot come forth" (Psa. 88:8). David was wrapped around by sin and shame, and Solomon has said, "A righteous man falling down before the wicked is as a troubled fountain and corrupt spring" (Prov. 25:26). "Hide thy face from my sins and blot out all mine iniquities"; "Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity and cleanse me from my sin"; "Then will I teach transgressors thy ways; and sinners shall be converted unto thee" (Psa. 51:9, 2, 13). He could not face his fellowmen in a declaration of God on account of this shutting of the mouth through sin.

In Matt. 9:2 we find the statement, "Thy sins be forgiven thee" in a very intimate connection with the sick man's malady. "Blessed (happy in the Heb.) is the man whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered. Blessed is the man unto whom the Lord imputeth not iniquity and in whose spirit there is no guile" (Psa. 32:2). It is impossible to smile if you are under the pall of sin and guilt. A right feeling towards God and man only makes for happiness. We are told to love the Lord with all our heart and our neighbor as ourself, but eloquence flees when we dishonor God as we find in Rom. 2:22, 23. Seeing then that the hindering power of avenues to God are broken we can praise him now. As even in Acts 2:37 those who were pricked in their hearts, after their sins were forgiven were continually praising God (vs. 47). The word "pricked" is used in the sense of a sensation of a javelin in the flesh. It was sin that pricked them and sin that followed with the train of evils.

It is not a phenomenal sacrifice we are to bring but homage of heart and words of the lips (Hosea 14:2; 1 Pet. 2:5). How we should be grateful; how we should praise God when we realize that by nature we are children of wrath and through the visitation of God's mercy alone we have been called from the tempestuousness of the world into the serenity of his own hands (Eph. 2:1). More praise is due from us for the forgiveness of sin than any one blessing of life. "He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things?" (Rom. 8:31). Paul saw in the forgiveness of sins the friendship of God. "Praise ye the Lord. Praise the Lord, O my soul. While I live will I praise the Lord; I will sing praises unto my God while I have my being" (Psa. 146:1, 2). Death and annihilation facing him David made this resolution to praise God while he had breath; and in showing forth God's praise what can we do more.

Larger Hope in the Crucible

Platitudes, Vagaries, and Absurdies of the "Broad Way" Exposed

UNDER THE title "Arguments Answered" the reader will find in this issue another attempt to defend the doctrine of Larger Hope. The effort is sweet-spirited, and essays to reply to some of our "rousing critisisms" of that dogma. To the extent that is profitable we herewith examine the arguments by which the author of "Arguments Answered" tries to establish eschatological salvation.

CHRIST LEFT OUT

THE FIRST remark that arrests our attention is, "The Editor is teaching another plan of salvation with Christ left out." On the contrary, we have claimed that ancient disciples believed on Christ, and therefore were Christians. Leaving out Christ is a vagary of Larger Hope and Russellism. Our correspondent, defending the doctrines which these errorists believe, naturally follows in their wake. Because he has no Christ in ancient times is why he has no Christians then. Hiding defeat and confusion under a pretence of bravery by asking "where is the record?" is absurd, since we have already cited Noah and Shem (Gen. 9:28, 26). Flippant remarks about "Mrs. Lot" do not change facts. What about Brother Lot, "that righteous man"? (2 Pet. 2:8). If Abraham believed there were none righteous in his day, like our present writer, how could he say, "wilt thou destroy the righteous with the wicked?" (Gen. 18:23). Why talk about "the righteous" if there were none? Angelic investigation revealed, contrary to Russellite claims, that there was a "righteous man" even in Sodom. That he was "the salt" which preserved Sodom is acknowleded by the angel of destruction: "Haste thee, escape thither; for I cannot do anything till thou be come thither" (Gen. 19:22). "I cannot do anything till thou be come thither"! Lot then, was "the salt" or preserving element in Sodom: and so soon as he was removed the city was totally obliterated in judgment a judgment without any "fair chance" in it. Alluding to Sodom's overthrow and Lot's escape Peter says, "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished" (2 Pet. 2:9). The Lord "delivered just Lot" (vs. 7).

Now if Lot was "just" he must have been justified; if he was "righteous" he must have been right; and if he was "godly" he must have been like God! Is this leaving out Christ, the one who is by way of eminence "the righteous"? (1 John 2:1). Indeed not; he is always and only "the righteous" while Lot is called a "righteous man" and Abel "righteous Abel" (Matt. 23:35). The transgressions of these men were forgiven through Christ (Heb. 9:15). Believers were chosen in Christ "before the foundation of the world" (Eph. 1:4); they were "foreordained before the foundation of the world" (1 Pet. 1:20); and Christ was "slain from the foundation of the world" (Rev. 13:8). Abraham rejoiced in a belief of Christ (John 8:56); Moses suffered "reproach for Christ" (Heb. 11:26, margin); and the Israelites in the wilderness drank the water which Christ alone can give (1 Cor. 10:4). Instead of leaving out Christ, with us he is all in all, the alpha and omega, the beginning and ending. Larger Hope leaves the world without Christ from Adam until the birth of Jesus, and hence abolishes Christianity and Christians for thousands of years. As usual, the guilty accuses the innocent of their own crimes.

THE LIFE PROMISED IN THE LAW

WITHOUT EITHER Christ or Christians our correspondent comes to the law and decides, consistently enough in his inconsistency, that the "long life" promised therein was temporal and not eternal life. For unto us was the gospel preached as well as unto them (Heb. 4:2) is a statement which puts the gospel back contemporary with the law. This fact places the writer in the unfortunate position of saying that the gospel only offered temporal life to the people who lived in the times of the law! To conceal his discomforture here he says we did not quote the whole verse. "The remainder reads, 'But the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it.' Oh, that is quite different." Suppose they did not profit by the gospel preached: the gospel was preached nevertheless. Some did "profit" to the extent of being saved, although our critic says that "not one" of them was saved. He seems to have forgotten Heb. 3:16: "For some, when they had heard, did provoke; howbeit not all that came out of Egypt by Moses." He confounds "some" with "all" a mistake no believer in universalism is supposed to make.

Did the people under the law have the gospel, Christ, and salvation? The question is not, Did the law save them, but did "the gospel" of the Abrahamic covenant save them through Christ? It did. As we are to heed "the law" as well as "the testimony" of the prophets (Isa. 8:20), we ask attention to what the law itself has to say about "the life" which it offered. "Honor thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the earth" (Exod. 20:12) is "the first commandment with promise" (Eph. 6:2). The reason is plain: obedience to parents is the first step towards obedience to the heavenly Father which entitles us to eternal life. It was not the good children only in Israel whose mortal life was prolonged, as the temporal life theory requires. Wicked Jeroboam lived on, while his son Abijah, in whom there "was found some good thing toward the Lord God of Israel," died before him (1 Kings 12:13). Add to the fifth commandment the words of Deut. 6:1, 2 and the evidence is complete: "These are the commandments, the statutes, and the judgments which the Lord your God commanded to teach you, ... that thou mightest fear the Lord thy God, to keep all his statutes and his commandments which I command thee; thou, and thy son, and thy son's son all the days of thy life; AND that thy days may be prolonged."

Now prolonging days as a reward for obedience has nothing to do with temporal life. Lengthening out of mortal life does not follow as a result of obedience. Just the reverse is sometimes the case:

often obedience means premature death. "Which of the prophets have they not persecuted? and they have slain them" (Acts 7:52). Unflinching fidelity to God and his truth often means the loss of the present life. Then what does the law mean by prolonging our days as a reward for obedience? Not natural life, for the law did not guarantee temporal life. It means future and eternal life. The expression, "that thy days may be prolonged," following "all the days of thy life," can only refer to eternal life after the resurrection from the dead. Reason consents to this interpretation. The prolonging of days is promised to the righteous; the opposite is threatened to the wicked. Of the wicked Eccl. 8:13 says, "He shall not prolong his days." Now the meaning of prolonging days is put beyond doubt in Isa. 53:8. Speaking of Christ the prophet says: "He was cut off out of the land of the living," but after he had made his soul an offering for sin, "he shall prolong his days." Our Lord's days were prolonged after he died by a resurrection from the dead. Prolongation of days, then, is post-resurrectional. "He asked life of thee, and thou gavest it him, length of days forever and ever" (Psa. 21:4). The promise to us means for us what it meant for Christ. The law did not end till Christ died on the cross; his death completed his obedience; therefore Christ himself obtained eternal life under the law. The words of Deut. 12:28 are literally true: "Observe and hear all these words which I command thee, that it may go well with thee, and thy children after thee, forever." Consider that it says "with thee forever" as well as "with thy children." Personal immortality cannot be excluded from this promise. The mere reading in Deut. 4:40 convicts one that the law did promise future life to the obedient: "That it may be well with thee, and with thy children after thee; AND that thou mayest prolong thy days upon the earth, which the Lord thy God giveth thee, forever."

COMMANDING ALL MEN TO BE SAVED

IN KEEPING with the fact that "from the foundation of the world" God has provided the gospel, Christ and salvation for man evinces that he is "not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance" (2 Pet. 3:9). God has not merely shown himself willing to save man: he has commanded him to be saved. We have shown that 1 Tim. 2:4 may be translated, "Who commandeth all men to be saved." To this suggestion translation our correspondent strongly objects, calling it "gratuitous, unauthorized," etc. But strong objections are not satisfactory refutations. The truth is Larger Hope is under criticism, and not being able to stand, its advocates are in desperation. Therefore when we showed that God has commanded all men to be saved, "the last straw" of hope for posthumous probation was blown away. The theory is expiring. Alarmed, its friends see that if God has commanded all men to learn the truth and be saved, those who do not learn it are disobedient; and disobedience is poor soil in which to raise a crop of Larger Hope. Laying the foundation for a "fair chance" in sin is not very promising business. In their amazement, bewilderment, and excitement they talk about how much "sense" they have, and how ignorant we are of the Greek. "It is freely admitted here," one writes in utter confusion, "that in the use of the English words 'will,' 'wish,' and 'desire,' they may in a given instance be equivalent to a command." Thank you. This admission is valuable. "I will" in English is equivalent to a command, according to this writer; but if you say "I will" in Greek ("thelo") you do not mean "I will" at all! Now we do not claim any scholarship, but we shall republish here a paragraph from an editorial in The Restitution of March 9, 1920, page 115, in which the logic of eschatological probation is broken into thousands of pieces. Until it is refuted Larger Hope is refuted. We leave it with the reader to decide if our correspondent has answered the arguments. The editorial referred to is in part as follows:

> 1 Tim. 2:4 translated according to the Greek reads: "Who commandeth all men to be saved, and to come to the knowledge of the truth." The question arises, Do we have the right to change thelo, "will have," to "commandeth"? Certainly, and for this self evident reason: The "will" of a sovereign declared, is the same as a command. "Thelo" often has this sense in the Bible. In this meaning the word is used in Luke 5:12, "Lord, if thou command thou canst cleanse me." "I command, be thou clean" (vs. 13). "If I command him to remain till I come" (John 21:22). "They command you to be circumcised" (Gal. 6:13). "He saith sacrifice and offering thou dost not command" (Heb. 10:5). Coming to a knowledge of the truth is on God's part a commandment; on man's part a duty. That so few men learn the truth only shows how derelict and disobedient to his commands they are. Only those who learn the truth obey the command of God. Those who do not "come to the knowledge of the truth" disobey this "command"; and surely their disobedience will not be rewarded with rich blessings in the age to come, as Larger Hope advocates slyly insinuate.

MEDLEY OF LARGER HOPE PLATITUDES

THE VAGARIES, platitudes, and absurdities of Larger Hope are endless. We close by remarking upon a few of these in "Arguments Answered." For instance, we are told that "the free gift which came upon all unto justification of life" means that the "free gift" is a "chance for life unto all men." That is, instead of the free gift of life being life, it is merely "a chance" for life! Is this statement not remarkable in view of the fact that Paul is talking about grace reigning, not to give us mortal life, or a "chance" at everlasting life, but of grace reigning "through righteousness unto life ETERNAL by Jesus Christ our Lord" (Rom. 5:21). The apostle positively says that "the gift of God is eternal life" (Rom. 6:23). Why do men become so infatuated with a sentimental theory that they dare to change the Bible in the vain effort to find support for it? Why? Another carricature of Scripture is made of Isa 26:9: "When thy judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness." The people then will all learn righteousness, according to the interpretation now under review: they will all attain to a knowledge of the gospel and a chance at life. All this sounds very well until the next verse is read: "Let favor be showed to the wicked, yet will he not learn righteousness; in the land of uprightness will deal unjustly, and will not behold the majesty of the Lord" (vs. 10). To prove that all men will learn righteousness and behold the majesty of the Lord a text is quoted which declares that some will "not learn righteousness"; instead of them dealing justly, they will deal "unjustly"; and instead of beholding the majesty of the Lord they shall not "behold" it! The proof just contradicts what it is quoted to prove. And to make the interpretation forever an absurdity the 14th verse says that some are dead without any hope of a resurrection: "They are dead, they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise: therefore hast thou visited and destroyed them, and made all their memory to perish."

Tasting death for every man (Heb. 2:9) is another threadbare platitude. "Tasting death" refers to the ancient custom of making criminals drink a cup of poison. Socrates was condemned to drink a cup of deadly hemlock by order of the Athenian magistrates. Hence Christ refers to his crucifixion as a "cup" (Matt. 26:39). But Larger Hope seeks to conceal itself behind the expression "every man." Its exposure is merciless in the 10th and 1th verses: "For it became him for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the Captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings. For both he that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all of one (Father): for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren." "For every man" of the "many sons" whom, as "Captain of their salvation," he conducts to glory; "every man" of the sanctified brethren whom he is not ashamed of.

MOTTO: SEARCH THE SCRIPTURES DAILY

SLOGAN: WE STAND FOR UNITY, TRUTH, AND RIGHTEOUSNESS

DEAR BEREANS:

THIS IS my first attempt at writing for the Berean Column but there has to be a beginning to all things. If we all wait for fear we make some mistake and for fear we may not write quite so interesting as some others, the Berean Column would be mostly blank; so let us do our best, and make this column more interesting as time passes.

Brother Adams organized our class last July, and we have kept up the lessons quite well for new beginners under the leadership of Brother Grimsley.

All of the class have made more or less progress. A knowledge of the Bible is one of the most important things in life. We should never neglect to meet with the class when it is possible. Such chances missed may never return; so let us embrace them while they are ours. I would we glad if I could know all the Bereans, but as that is impossible I hope to meet you all in the kingdom.

I would be very glad to receive a letter from any of the Bereans; I could learn to know you in that way. Let me urge you not to forget to sit down occasionally and write at least a short letter to The Restitution. If this letter finds it way in I may try again.

We are living in times when we need all the encourgeament we can get. Let us not forget our duties.

Your sister in the one faith,

LOIS THIMGAN.

GOLDEN TEXT—1 Tim. 6:17

OUR BIRTHDAY GREETINGS IN FLOWERS

By Dorothy Lyon

RECENTLY SISTER S. Roxana Wince celebrated her birthday anniversary. Among other tokens of love, respect, and esteem was "a box of lovely lillies set off with branches of evergreen from Brother and Sister Judd Lyon and their four dear children." Accompaning the box was the following poem, dedicated to Sister Wince, and which our good sister says is "too good to enjoy alone." She wishes you to read it.

It's only a fragrant lily
  From a field all bright and fair,
But it brings from friends who are far away
  A greeting of love and prayer.

It's only a small white lily
  With a golden heart so true,
But as true as the gold of the lily's heart
  Is our love, dear friend, for you.

It's only a sweet little lily,
  That grew in a sunshine land;
But it strengthens the tie that binds the heart
  When we cannot clasp the hand.

It's only a slender lily grown
  'Neath an oak tree strong and tall,
But the dear God, who doeth all things well,
  Has made, and loves them all.

All that is beautiful shall abide,
All that is base shall die.—Buchanan.

SIGNS

Summer Is Near!

HOW DO I know? Why, look down here where we are walking. Do you see those tiny green tips peeping out of the sod? Yes, that is grass. Hard to be seen now, but in another week or two our yard will be green and the first wee spring flowers will be unfolding their leaves to bask in the warm sunshine or catch the drops of refreshing rain.

Now turn around. Look back at the house. See those two little birds perched on the roof? Come, let us go nearer. See, one of them is a gay blue, while the other is clothed in modest gray, and they are twittering merrily together about the little nest they will soon start building. They are just wandering, this little pair of bluebirds, where they will build that little home, and have almost decided to use a knot hole in the side of the house. What an unfailing sign they are that summer is near!

Over there is a fruit tree. Cold and bare it looks from the distance, but when we come near and examine it closer, little buds can be seen forming on the bare limbs. What a short time it will be before those same buds will burst and bloom in all their glory!

Hark! from a far off field sound the clear bell-like calling of the meadow lark, while just off there at the edge of the woods we hear "bob white" calling to his mate. Did you ask how I know that summer is near? I could show you many more signs that are sure harbingers of summer, but—

The Lord is Near.

and I want to see if we can find the signs of his coming also. In the 24th chapter of Matthew, we learn that "the disciples came unto him privately saying, Tell us what shall be the sign of thy coming?" Jesus answered by giving them these signs: First: "Ye shall hear of wars and rumors of wars;" second, "Nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom;" third, "There shall be famines and pestilences and earthquakes in divers places."

Like the signs of approaching summer, the signs of our King's coming are numerous, more numerous than we have space to mention. So we will take those signs I have given above and see if they prove to us our Lord is nigh.

Let us take the first: need we go any farther? Was there ever a time in the history of the world when there was heard so many rumors of was? Have we not beeen plunged into the most terrible war conditions that this world has even known? Second, has not nation risen against nation, and kingdom against kingdom? What more do we need to warn us that the Lord is near? Third, we shall have famines, pestilences, earthquakes. Do you read the daily papers? Ah, then you have seen the reports of thousands of human beings in war-torn Europe that are starving, famishing for food, even in some places to the point of eating human flesh. You have seen the plea for food and clothing sent to the American nation, for those who are dying by the thousands for the want of necessary things. You see by the same papers that disease and pestilence are rapidly spreading over those countries that took part in the world war. Again, we read of volcanoes and earthquakes first in one place, then another; while we, who are looking for these very things, have been told by our Redeemer to "lift up our heads and rejoice," not because there is so much suffering and sorrow on the earth, but because "your redemption draweth nigh."

Jesus also said of these last days to "take heed that no man shall deceive you. For many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ, and shall deceive many." To guard us against being deceived our Lord said further, "If they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert, go not forth; behold he is in secret chamber, believe it not." Then he tells us how we may know, in truth, when he comes: "For as the lightening cometh out of the east and shineth into the west; so shall the coming of the Son of Man be." No one will need to say, "Lo, he is here; or lo, he is there:" all will know that our Lord is among us.

"Now learn a parable of the fig tree: when its branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh. So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that Christ is near, even at the door. Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled:" meaning that the generation that sees the beginning of these signs of our Lord's coming, will not pass until he comes.

To make this statement still more sure, our Lord said that "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my word shall not pass away." As God has told us that we shall "dwell on the earth forever," of course the earth will never pass away; so we can realize the strength and sureness of our Lord's words. Therefore let us watch the signs, that we may be ready.

AUNT BESS.

LET THE LITTLE CHILDEN COME UNTO ME

By a Little Child

WHEN JESUS was on the earth some little chiddren came unto him but the men said, "Take these children away from here." Very likely they thought that Jesus did not want them, that he only wanted to see the big people. But when Jesus heard what they said, he answered, "Let the little children come unto me, and forbid them not." He then called the little children to him; he held them in his arms and blessed them, and I think it likely he told them many things about God. From this we learn that none of us are too little to belong to Jesus, for it was Jesus who said, "For of such is the kingdom of heaven."

THE COUNTRY BOY'S CREED

I BELIEVE that the country which God made is more beautiful than the city which man made; that life out of doors and in touch with the earth is the natural life of man.

I believe that work is work wherever I find it; but that work with nature is more inspiring than work with the most intricate machinery.

I believe that the dignity of labor depends not on what you do but on how you do it; that opportunity comes to a boy in the city; that life is larger and freer and happier on the farm than in town; that my success depends not upon my location—not upon my dreams, but upon what I actually do, not upon luck but upon pluck.

I believe in working when you work and playing when you play, and in giving and demanding a square deal in every act of life.—Grover.

Regarding the above we thoroughly agree with Mr. Grover in the conclusions drawn, for we also think that the country, with its forests and fields, is much nearer to God than is the crowded, noisy, dirty city. Still, there is one thing we must never forget, and that is, while the city is man made, it was God who made the man; it was God who put the brain and the brawn in man; it was God who made man with power to think and strength to work. So no matter where we are, what we do, or how we do it, the glory is God's. We must pay homage to him. "Do all to the glory of God."

WAS IT YOU?

THERE WAS somebody who never did anything to make anybody happy. Was it you?

There was somebody who never lost an opportunity to say a sarcastic word that would wound the feelings of someone. Was it you?

There was somebody who always found fault with the actions, sayings, and things of everybody. Was it you?

There was somebody who always said harsh and cruel words about those whom they were led to believe were their friends. Was it you?

There are those who always have a kind word for everybody, and always do good acts, who always throw sunshine along life's pathway, and who are always beloved by everybody. Are you that person?

AN OLD PROVERB

THERE IS an old saying "That the man or woman who is well informed always is good company." This is true. But there are various kinds of information, and to my mind it behooves us "who are of the light" to be well versed in the things pertaining to God and his Christ: Then the information we will be able to impart will not be interesting for a day only, but may be the means of furnishing joy and happiness throughout eternity. "Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me."

JEALOUSY ALWAYS ABOUNDS

He who ascends to mountain tops shall find
  The loftiest peaks most wrapt in clouds and snow;
He who surpasses or subdues mankind
  Must look down on the hate of those below.—Byron.

A CONCEPT OF DUTY

THERE ARE at the present day but too many who imagine they have perfectly done their duty because they are kind toward their friends, affectionate in their families, inoffensive towards the rest of the world.—Mazzini.

WHAT ARE you doing to increase the circulation of The Restitution? Surely there is someone to whom you can hand a sample copy and ask them to subscribe. Suppose you start now and see what kind of a canvasser you will make. The Restitution, 48 copies, two dollars. Who is to be the first to send in a new name? Will it be you?

ANNOUNCEMENT

WE HAVE moved to our new home, and we find lots of extra work to do; in fact, so much that we have not had time to write. Sister Bessie Walker has come to our rescue and will conduct the Young People's Page for the four issues of May. We imagine you will find an improvement. Help her make it so. Simply because she is is willing is no reason why she should be overworked. Assistance will be appreciated. We thank you.

BEFORE IT IS TOO LATE

IF YOU have a tender message
  Or a loving word to say,
Do not wait till you forget it,
  But whisper it today;
The tender word unspoken,
  The letter never sent,
The long-forgotten messages,
  The wealth of love unspent—
For these some hearts are breaking,
  For these some loved ones wait;
So show them that you care for them
  Before it is too late.—F. H. SWEET.

The Restitution

A Paper Representing the Church of God, and Devoted to the Exposition and Defense of the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God and the Name of Jesus Christ. -- Acts 8:12.

VOLUME 72 CLEVELAND, O. May 4th, 1920. NUMBER 17

The Church of God

1 Tim.3:15

THE LORD'S church, the only one to which the name ecclesia body or church, is properly applicable, is so insignificant, unostentatious, and comparatively so poor in this world's riches, that it is not recognized nor recognizable from the worldly standpoint. It is neither man-made nor man-ruled; nor are its members enrolled on earth, but in heaven (Heb. 12:23). Its head and bishop is the Lord; its law is his word, it has but one Lord, one faith, one baptism; and it is built upon the testimony of the holy apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone (Eph. 2:20-22). Let us, as day after day rolls by, remember our threefold relationship to this temple:

(1) We are still in process of preparation as living stones.

(2) As members of the royal priesthood carrying the ark, we are marching from the tabernacle to the temple condition; some of our number have already entered in and some are still on the way.

(3) As the Lord's people the time has come for us to know, to sing with the spirit and understanding the new song of divine mercy, justice, love and truth. Let us be faithful in each of these respects, fulfilling our parts and ere long our course will be ended and the glory of the Lord will fill the temple.

The Bow in the Cloud as a Sign

The Perpetuity of the Earth Guaranteed in an Everlasting Covenant

IT IS held by a large part of the professed Christian world today that this beautiful earth on which we live will be destroyed by fire, be literally burned up and be no more. What then becomes of the covenant which God established between himself and all flesh that is upon the earth, which the bow in the cloud was the token? That covenant was that there should "no more be a flood to destroy the earth," that it should be for a perpetual generation "an everlasting covenant."

But some may say that the words "perpetual" and "everlasting" mean only "age lasting," and not something that will never come to an end. I agree that this may be so in reference to the word "perpetual," because the word "olam," from which it is translated, does sometimes signify indefinite time; but the same word "olam," when translated "everlasting," has the sense of endless duration, when applied to God, to his arms and to his attributes of strength, righteousness, mercy, and love. These are his attributes, not only for an age, but for all ages. "From everlasting to everlasting he is God." And the "olam" has the same sense when used in reference to the covenant made with our fathers, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, as to our future inheritance of the land of Canaan and of the world. The kingdom of God is not to be an evanescent thing, but one that will never be destroyed.

And so it is with the way in which David prayed to be led; to the foundations on which the [illegible] stand; to the remembrance in which they are held; to the joy of the ransomed of the Lord when they return and come to Zion; to the name that God will give the eunuchs who please him and take hold of his covenant. All these things are not only age lasting, but for the ages of the ages. And the covenant of the bow in the cloud is in the same category; for how could God give Noah and his seed a covenant that "he would no more destroy the earth by a flood" if a time was coming when the very earth would be burned up? So the rainbow has something to say as to the perpetuity of the earth, granting that it was the literal earth that was destroyed, and something to say as to its perpetuity if "all flesh" was "the earth" that was destroyed: for a covenant that is to have no end, must be with a people that is to have no end, dwelling in a habitation that is to have no end; and the covenant of the bow in the cloud was made to such people, dwelling in such a habitation a righteous people who would keep the truth and be the heirs of salvation.

And as the world that was destroyed by the flood was the world of people, and not the planet whereon we live; so is it the world of people that is to be destroyed by the fire of the last days. It was by the word of God that the heavens were of old, and the earth (with its continents) standing out of the water and (with all its islands) in the water. And by the same word the world (of men) that then was being overflowed with water, perished. The heavens or systems of government; kings, queens, governors, counsellors of the antediluvians and their "earth," or common people; all went down together. "But the heavens that are now," the proud and exalted Gentile systems of government, "and the earth" or subjects of these Gentile governments, "by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." It might be more than a thousand years from Peter's days until these "mountain and hill kingdoms" would be overthrown, and yet long as the time would be, we are not to account God slack concerning his promises. He is "long-suffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance." The pronoun "us" as used by Peter here, in writing to the scattered "strangers," of Asia Minor, "elect according to the foreknowledge of God," would seem to imply that they bore some tribal relationship to Peter; but whether they were of the house of Judah or of the house of Israel, we do not know. History tells us that the Lacademonians were of the latter house.

However this be, we know that God has always shown great solicitude as to the fate of his people Israel, and has "loved them with an everlasting love" that follows them wherever they go. It is certain that the whereabouts of the twelve tribes was known in those days, for the letter of James was addressed to them and their whereabouts was also known under the sixth seal, just after the earthquake overturning of Pagan Rome by Constantine the Great; for the sealing of the 144,000 "taken out of all the tribes of Israel," began under this seal.

But I am digressing and must return to the burning day of Peter. It was to "come as a thief in the night" (Rev. 16:15), to steal upon the nations unawares, just as the coming of the Lord will steal upon those who are not looking for him, if indeed that solemn "Behold I come," in Revelation has not the same meaning that the thief-like coming of the day of the Lord has in Peter, as I sometimes imagine it has, though such an idea militates nothing against the personal and imminent coming of the Lord to snatch away his waiting, ready bride.

He comes upon the nations in the same theif-like way but for a very different purpose: to the one class he comes to bless and save; to the other, that they may be judged and overthrown, their elements melt, and their works be burned up in the fervent heat of "the battle of the great day of God Almighty." We are already living under "the seventh trumpet or third woe," extending from 1795 for seven vials of 19 years each, or 133 years in all, to 1928 A. D. We were in the sixth vial up to 1909. The seventh brings us to 1928, for 1909 added to 19 equals 1928. In this vial everything in continental Europe collapses; Sodom, Egypt, "that great city." The cities of the nations (Gentiles) fall; "Great Babylon comes into remembrance before God to give her the cup of the wine of his wrath." All Gentile governments and empires dissolve and a great hail as if weighing a talent falls upon men from heaven man's last and most violent enemy. (Quoted from Professor Totten's letter to New Haven Register, March 24, 1907).

Totten said that the seventh and last vial of the seventh and last trumpet would undoubtedly be superlatively the worst period of the seven vials of nineteen years, that have divided up history with piled up and accumulating horrors since Napoleon poured out the first vial! Read Rev. 16:1, 21, in connection with secular and continental history, covering the seventh trumpet and its seven vials and you will surely be impressed with the terrible accuracy of the oracles of God, and also with the fact that it is in "the lake of fire burning with brimstone," or into "the battle of the great day of God Almighty" that the beast and the false prophet are cast "alive." We often speak of battles as "veritable lakes of fire," so Peter aptly described the dissolution of all Gentile rule, when he said "the heavens shall pass away with a great noise" Rev. 16:18 says: "And there were voices and thunders, and lightenings and a great earthquake" (symbolic of the overturning of earthly thrones), etc., and of the chaos of Bolshevism that would follow. 1916, 1917 was the 1335 days (or years) of the Crescent's ascendency, and the very day that it ran out, the Turks were defeated. I have not the account before me and may misstate, but the Mohammedan newspapers of Constantinople the very next day after the battle chronicled it as the 1335th year. Lunar time, count- from the Hegira. The covenant of the bow in the cloud, being an everlasting one proves, therefore, not only that "all flesh will not more be destroyed by a flood of water, but also that the dwelling place of "all flesh" will not "melt with fervent heat" nor "be burned up," this "melting" and "burning" referring not to the globe itself, but to its apostate people and their works on whom "awful and destructive judgments are to fall," are already falling, to prepare the way for the full establishment of the millennial reign of Christ and the world-wide recognition of his peaceful, righteous sway. God is a God of war, and he uses his chosen instruments to carry on war against his enemies. Even the peaceful Christ will in righteousness judge and make war, if so be that the rider of the white horse of Rev. 19:11 is the Christ, as seems certain from the many crowns he wears, and from his being called King of kings and Lord of lords. Read the chapter.

The earth abideth forever. The earth hath been given to the children of men, and he has confirmed the deed thereto by a solemn oath. Abraham and his seed are to have the same Canaan he walked on; restored Israel, the land and city of the promise. "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." Thank God for the bow in the cloud and for all the everlasting things now so near to realization! The earth will never be burned up, but a "new heaven and a new earth," or a new system of government will take the place of the 2520 years of insane, Nebuchadnezzan rule, wherein men have lived with, and fed on grass like the beasts, instead of feasting on the bread of life.

"The Lord hath made with me a covenant."

Destiny of the Ignorant

God hath made man upright; but he hath sought out many inventions (Eccl. 7:29).

WHAT WAS the first invention? Adam and Eve made aprons out of fig leaves (Gen. 3:7). Why did they make them aprons? Because they found they were naked. How did they know they were naked? Because of sin, in eating of the forbidden fruit (Gen. 3:6). Did God punish them? Yes. How? He cursed the ground, and said it should bring forth thorns and thistles, and they were dust and should return to dust again (Gen. 3:19). Did they return to dust? God said in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die (Gen. 2:17). Did Adam die? Yes, he lived 930 years and died. He could not return to dust before he died. The law given to Adam was not to eat of a certain fruit; he ate, died, and returned to dust, which was his destiny. It seems that God dealt direct with the people he had created until 991 years after Adam's death. Then he made a promise to Abraham to bless all nations through Abraham and his seed.

All that died prior to this time were aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world. They died ignorant of the plan of salvation, so their destiny was eternal death (Eph. 2:12). There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof is the way of death (Prov. 14:12; 16:25). Man that is in honor and understandeth not, is like the beast that perish (Psa. 49:12, 20). How is that? Man that is ignorant of God and his promises is in the same class with the beast; as one dieth so dieth the other (Eccl. 3:19). Man that wandereth out of the way of understanding shall remain in the congregation of the dead (Prov. 21:16).

Here is a class that did understand, but in wandering away their destiny is the same as the ignorant, eternal death. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusions, that they should believe a lie. Why? That they all might be damned who believe not the truth (2 Thess 2:10); If our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost (2 Cor. 4:3). Being alienated from the life of God, through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness (or ignorance) of their hearts (Eph. 4:18). To be carnally minded is death. The carnal mind is against God. The carnal mind cannot please God. It receives the wages of sin, death (Rom. 8:6-8; 6:23). The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him (1 Cor. 2:14). If they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them (Isa. 8:20). They are dead; they shall not live; they are deceased; they shall not rise; thou hast destroyed them, and made all their memory to perish (Isa. 26:14). They shall not rise; they are extinct (Isa. 43:17). They shall sleep a perpetual sleep and not wake (Jer. 51:39, 57). Even they shall fall and never rise up again (Amos 8:14). They shall be as though they had not been (Job 10:19; Obad. 16). The redemption of their souls is precious and it ceaseth forever. He shall go to the generation of his fathers; they shall never see light; never rise up again (Psa. 49:8, 19; 140:10). Broad is the way that leadeth unto destruction and all the ignorant are in that way (Matt. 7:13). For as many as have sinned without law, shall also perish without law (Rom. 2:12).

From the grand array of Scripture given we are led to the conclusion that no one can obtain eternal life through ignorance. There are many highly educated people in the world that are ignorant of God and his gospel. They will die the death of the ignorant, and remain in the congregation of the dead.

National Berean Society

Motto: Search the Scriptures Daily
Slogan: We Stand for Unity, Truth and Righteousness

DEAR BEREANS:

IT IS evident that nothing is accomplished without effort. Therefore the greater the effort the more will be accomplished. When we think of the efforts put forth by the officers, or we might say, when we measure the results of the Berean work, and take into account all that has been accomplished and the present status of the Berean work, we get some idea of the energy put into it by the promoters; and a great deal of praise is due our leading officers.

This should lend encouragement to every department of the work. When we look over the field and see what has been accomplished from so small a beginning, should we not all be encouraged and ready and willing to lend a helping hand in every way possible? There are many things we can learn by a mental survey of what has been accomplished.

Frist, we learn that somebody has made a great sacrifice of time and labor. Then if they have made such progress by this sacrifice, should we not be equally willing to sacrifice some time and labor that we may see the cause we love prosper. We know the work is to the glory of God. The promoters of this cause, we are ready to admit, have not been working for self-glory; for the sacrifices mentioned above are the positive proof. They have been trying to enlist the assistance of every Berean. Should we not be willing to give them all there is in us? In fact this much is our duty; and if we should do it, what a wonderful emphasis would be given to the work. Let us remember that every one that is brought into the truth, through the Berean Society, that each Berean has had at least a small part in bringing them to a knowledge of the truth, especially if he has done his duty and taken part in the work. It is so easy for us to think that somebody will do the work any way,whether we do anything or not. But we forget that somebody will get the reward, and we have nothing coming to us. God has never promised to reward us for doing nothing. It is said "we are laborers together with God." Again, Jesus says, "My Father worked hitherto and I work." If God and Christ have labored and we are told to labor, how can we expect any reward unless we do something? Are not these stubborn facts, and should we not take them to heart in the most serious manner?

In the second place, we learn that the promoters have had to do a great deal of mental work. They have been compelled to think out many details. Then are we not willing to sit down and do a little thinking for ourselves? Let us let them know that we appreciate their efforts. We perhaps fall into the habit of thinking we cannot do anything worth while; but how many among us could not think out a few lines to write to the Berean Column?

I fear we would be offended if others would speak of us as we often think of ourselves. For instance, if we should hear someone say, "Why he is not capable of thinking, or of doing anything," we would resent it at once. At least we would feel hurt, I am sure; and yet we say of ourselves, "I cannot think of anything to write." Should we not then be offended at ourselves for taking such a view of our lack of capabilities? We should always remember that it is combined effort, not the work of a single person, that accomplishes the most. I am very much interested in the Berean lessons, and I am aware of the fact that it caused someone considerable study and labor to prepare these lessons. Then after they are prepared are we unwilling to put forth a little effort and study them? These lessons are prepared without money and without price, and are put into our hands without any effort on our part for the nominal sum of fifteen cents! Then to think we should be unwilling to get together once a week to study them!

It seems to me that if we would think these things over, and in this light, there would be a great forward movement. The lessons and the study of the lessons are only one part of the work. The social and isolated committees are doing a wonderful work; more, perhaps, than they think. Their cheerful and wise exhortations keep many a lonely believer from becoming discouraged. These letters find them sometimes almost in despair, and they are stimulated and encouraged to press on. Whoever thought out this detail of the work did some good thinking.

In view of this fact it might be possible that some one else could think of something that if put into operation would be beneficial to the Society. My suggestion is for more to write short letters and more often than they have been. In this way the writer is benefited as well as the reader. I would also suggest that we take a more lively interest in each other and the work. Are we not all one family and more interested in each other than by any earthly tie? Let us heed the injunction, "Pray one for another."

Your sister,

RUTH THINGAM.

Springtime Optimism

DON'T GET in a hurry nor even a flurry,
For life does not last very long;
Do the best you can don't trust too much in man,
Keep your muscles supple and strong.

If you can't do all today, store some away,
There'll be another day tomorrow.
Take due heed, provide for future need,
But don't you hoard up sorrow.

The road may be rough, times rather tough;
Just smile, look on the bright side;
'Tis not winter all the year, not always drear,
Wait for the turn of the tide.

Even in the night the moon shines bright.
In the morn the sun may shine again;
Let the storm winds howl, the black clouds scowl,
Flowers bloom after the rain.

Sometimes it is best to take a rest,
Then if you can't whistle, just sing;
'Tis a bad time to shirk when there's lots of work,
Particularly in the spring.

Then do the best you can, be an honest man,
People have their rights as well as you;
So do not fret, nor get in a pet,
Help your neighbor the right thing to do.

If things go wrong just strike up a song,
Always keep yourself in tune;
Be an industrious man, do the work that you can,
Life's journey ends full soon.

If your neighbor Jones sits down and groans,
Don't take the disease from him;
Just go on your way, each day make hay,
And set an example for Jim.

If you feel extra blue, corns hurt your shoe,
Don't sit down and grumble or groan;
Buy a new pair of shoes, much larger than 2's
A good understanding is a fine thing to own.

Strange Bible Facts

THE LEARNED Prince of Granada, heir to the Spanish throne, imprisoned by order of the crown for fear he should aspire to the throne, was kept in solitary confinement in the old prison at the Place of Skulls, Madrid. After thirty-three years in the living tomb death came to his release, and the following remarkable reseacrches, taken from the Bible and marked with an old nail on the rough walls of his cell, told how the brains sought employment through the weary years:

In the Bible the word "Lord" is found 1,853 times.

The word "Jehovah" 6,855 times.

The word "reverend" but once, and that in the ninth verse of the 111th Psalm.

The eighth verse of the ninety-seventh Psalm is the middle verse of the Bible.

The ninth verse of the eighth chapter of Esther is the longest.

The thirty-fifth verse, eleventh chapter of St. John is the shortest

In the 107th Psalm four verses are alike – the eighth, fifteenth, twenty-first and thirty-first.

Each verse in the 136th Psalm ends alike.

No names or words with more than six syllables are found in the Bible.

The thirty-seventh chapter of Isaiah and nineteenth chapter of Second Kings are alike.

The word "girl" occurs but once in the Bible, and that in the third verse, third chapter of Joel.

There are found in both books of the Bible 3,538,483 letters; 773,693 words; 31,373 verses; 1,189 chapters, and sixty six books.

The twenty-sixth chapter of the Acts of the Apostles is the finest chapter to read.

The most beautiful chapter is the twenty-third Psalm.

The four most inspiring promises are John 14:2; 6:37; Matt. 11:28, and Psa. 37:4.

The first verse of the fiftieth chapter of Isaiah is one for the new convert.

All who flatter themselves with vain boastings should read the sixth chapter of Matthew.

All humanity should learn the sixth chapter of St. Luke, from the twentieth verse to its ending.—Selected by Brother Jesse Titman.

Gem Thoughts

"For in Jerusalem and in Mount Zion shall be deliverance as the Lord hath said and in the remnant whom the Lord shall call" (Joel 2:32). This deliverance began with the British occupation of the Holy City.

"Thy watchmen shall lift up the voice, with the voice together shall they sing: for they shall see eye to eye, when the Lord shall bring again Zion" (Isa. 52:8). How we long for this unity of faith and of heart! "First the natural afterwards the spiritual" is God's order; and after the deliverance of natural Israel and of natural Zion comes the deliverance of the ecclesia, the spiritual Israel and Zion. Soon we shall see eye to eye; praise the Lord!

Unity of spirit must come before unity of faith. The fellowship of the saints is not first in doctrinal unity but in the spirit of love as a fruit of the Holy Spirit.

Watch the world feredations and church feredations. These are all carnal alliances based on selfish interest, to save a world without Christ. They will develop the last phase of the beast and harlot of Rev. 13 and 17 and will intensify persecution and tribulation of the saints, but will bring only anguish and destruction on a benighted world.

Let us not preach about Christ so much as we preach "Christ within, the hope of glory;" for every saint will need the sustaining power of the comforter in this evil day.

Obituary

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.--Psa. 116:15.

Joseph Edward DeMont, son of George A. and Roxana DeMont, was born April 25th, 1855, near Plymouth, Indiana, and departed this life April 14th, 1920, at the age of 66 years, 11 months, and 19 days.

February 12th, 1880, he was united in marriage with Margaret Jane Shaw, and to them were born eleven children. The mother died October 29th, 1919, and three of the children have also preceded him in death, leaving eight living, namely: Abby, Will, Anna, Lulu, Maud, Earl, Edna, and Alice. There are also two grandchildren, two brothers and many other relatives and friends left.

All his life was spent in Marshall and Starke Counties. While yet a young man, he united with the Church of God. He led a true Christian life and was a devoted, loving father.

Written by the children.

Funeral services were held in a local church near the home on Saturday April 17th, conducted by the writer, and burial made in the adjacent cemetery. We spoke words of comfort and consolation from Job 14:14, the same text used at the funeral of Sister DeMont November 1st, last. This family is sadly broken up by the loss of both father and mother in so short a time. It was more of a shock to the family, as the father died very suddenly. Three of the children are left at home, the others having homes of their own. But they were all grealty attached to each other and to the parents, and the separation makes the sorrow most intense. But that both parents had obeyed the gospel call is reason for consolation in the hour of trial. May the heavenly Father and his blessings to them through the mediation of the great High Priest, Jesus Christ, enable them to emulate the virtues of the parents and be ready to meet them in the first and better resurrection morning.

Remember the Helping Fund

Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble—in the day of evil, margin (Psa. 41:1).

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Editorial

Each new day is just one more opportunity to be useful and happy.

Don't worry when you stumble, brother; a worm is the only thing which can't fall down.

Sister Fish and Sister Jessie Kauffman, both of Springfield, Ohio, were visitors April 18th.

With this issue all enquiries calling for "Editorial Comments" have been answered. This feature of The Restitution will be discontinued until other questions are received.

Sister Wince writes: "In the little verses, 'I Will Lift up Mine Eyes,' ninth line, for 'So deep that sin cannot smite me by day,' read. 'So deep that the sun cannot smite me by day.' The article appeared in The Restitution for April 8th."

The regular meeting of the Young People's Society was held Friday evening, April 16th, at the home of Brother and Sister Gazeley. In spite of the inclement weather twenty-one members and five visitors were present. One new member was added to the roll. The lesson was handled by Myrna Lang. The subject was "Moses a Type of Christ." The leader showed that as Moses at the head of his people, led them out of the wilderness, so Christ will lead his people out of the wilderness of peoples in time to come.

The Fellow Helpers' Society held their meeting Friday evening, April 9th, at the home of Brother and Sister Finlayson. Seventeen members were present. The subject for the evening was "The Emptiness of Morals," led by Brother Bert Meermans, who gave a very interesting talk on the lesson, which was enjoyed by all as some very interesting discussions were brought up, and all left the meeting appreciating the full value of the truth. Donations to the amount of $2.75 were collected. Bessie Nicholls, Secretary pro. tem.

Value of Plenary Inspiration

A reader complains that we make too much of our view of verbal inspiration both in the pulpit and the press. Our reply is, that "loose" views on the inspiration of the Bible have been a snare to many brethren who have been led from that "harmless" (?) theory into entire infidelity of the Scriptures. They began the career of their downfall by urging the human element in the Bible; this was followed by a list of "contradictions;" and then open infidelity followed. Convictions of uncertainty regarding the Scriptures should be resisted in their earliest and apparently innocent stages. If "he that doubteth is damned" in the mere eating of meat, much more he that eateth the word of God without faith is condemned. Our belief in inspiration is not represented by the shifting sands of either orthodox or heterodox Christendom. We say the only course of wisdom is to clear the deck entirely of every element of distrust, and set to our seal that God is true. We take our stand with the impregnable fortress of an omnipresent inspiration, as invulnerable to the shafts of a petty, superficial, and sacriligious criticism as the sky over our heads. The higher criticism of orthodoxy, or "the partial inspiration theory" of the Christadelphians, is just a mole-hill of human attempt on the part of the clay to analyze and pass judgment on the work of the potter. A veritable dunghill of ruinous pride, that thinks its infidelic tendencies and unsettling criticisms is a "learned" and praise-worthy thing, on the ground that it is gentlemanly, learnedly, and reverently done. With such mock reverence we have no part. We say with Paul, "Let God be true" even if it make all men liars.

Extremes in Dress Rebuked

SOME OF the members of our church dress well, and claim it is according to Scripture; but there are others who denounce finery of dress, and seek to prove by 1 Pet. 3:3 and other Scriptures that the Bible condemns such worldly conformity. They also claim that economy is on their side of the question. May we have a few words from you on the subject.

Editorial Comment

MACNIGHTS TRANSLATION of 1 Pet. 3:3 reads: "Of these let the adorning be, not what is outward only, of plaiting of hair, and of putting round golden chains (Syriac Version), or of putting on clothes." The 4th verse completes the apostle's precept: "But let the hidden man of the heart be adorned with the incorruptible ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great value."

The word "only" is correctly supplied in this translation, agreeably to the known phraseology of Scripture, and to the nature of the commandment. Peter does not forbid the sisters adorning themselves with apparel suitable to their ability. God has no objections to "finery." "Mark the lillies of the field. How do they grow ? They neither labor nor spin; yet I tell you, that not even Solomon in all his splendour, was arrayed like one of these. If, then, God so decorate the herb of the field (which flourishes today, and tomorrow will be cast into a furnace), how much more you, O you distrustful !" (Matt. 6:29, 30, Emphatic Diaglott). Since God has so lavishly decorated the grass and herbs that "Solomon in all his splendour" cannot be compared with them, he cannot be displeased to see us "dressed up." With this example of "finery" before him Peter could not forbid the sisters to decorate themselves. If they decorate the outward man "only," and let the "hidden man of the heart" go naked—that is what he forbids. On the same principle our Lord forbids his disciples to labor for the meat that perisheth (John 6:27). His meaning is, we are not to labor for the meat that perishes "only": but also for the meat enduring to everlasting life. Peter's precept, then, is obvious: the sisters are not to adorn their bodies "only," but chiefly their minds. A mind decorated "finely" with the different virtues becoming a sister, will attract esteem and lasting love; while the adorning of the body strikes the fancy of the superficial and foolish only. 1 Tim. 2:9, 10 conveys the correct idea about dress: "In like manner also, that the women adorn themselves in decent apparel, with modesty and sobriety, not with plaited hair only, or gold, or pearls, or costly raiment. But (which becometh women professing godliness) with good works." From Isaiah's description of the Jewish ladies in his time we learn how apt orientals were to indulge in extremes of dress (Isa. 3:16-24). Finery of dress that consumes much time, and that involves expenses greater than can be afforded, prevents adorning "the hidden man of the heart," gets one into debt, and is very injurious. But neither Peter nor Paul forbids either the richness or expensiveness of the dress of sisters in general. This is plain from the commendation given to the virtuous woman in Prov. 31:21, 22 who, through her industry, clothed all her household with scarlet, and herself with silk and purple. This sister was not "denounced" because she dressed well; on the contrary, God says of her, "Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all " (vs. 29).

Dress is largely an individual matter. Extremes are to be avoided. Some dress to excess, and need to be restrained; others are slovenly, and should be incited to "brush up." Some dress beyond their means and get into debt, while others are slovenly to the point of repulsiveness, piling up money in the bank to feed their covetousness. Economy is with those who buy good clothes, and spendthriftness and waste are with those who buy cheap and shoddy goods.

An Excrescence on the Face of Conditional Immortality

I HAVE believed in Conditional Immortality for forty years. That belief, however, does not conflict with Enoch and Elijah being preserved alive for 5000 years in their natural bodies. The Lord Jesus was "the first born from the dead." He has a spiritual body now, but Enoch and Elijah have not yet received the zoe life, and are yet in their corruptible bodies; and as I read the Scripture they are the "two witnesses" who are yet to die in Jerusalem (Rev. 11:3, 4).

I may be wrong in my exegesis, but when you ask, "How could Enoch and Elijah get life before the Life-Giver bestows it, and especially how could they obtain life before the Savior died to purchase it ?" the reply is, they have not got the zoe life, but are yet in their physical state. Surely you cannot maintain that God could not keep an elephant alive for 5000, years, much more a man ! With all respect I think you confuse zoe life with soulical life. The first is eternal life; the second is for a period only, unless God for his purpose preserves the subjects. This is why I believe that Enoch and Elijah are alive today. But they have yet to die and be raised. It is notable that Paul does not mention Elijah in his list of those who died in the faith (Heb. 11).

With Christian affection,

CONDITIONAL IMMORTALITY is a beautiful system of truth. As the apostasy is apocalyptically portrayed as a lewd woman clothed in gorgeous array, indulging in drunkenness and fornication (Rev. 17), so the true church is mystically called virgins and the bride of Christ, deporting herself blamelessly, attired in sobriety and truth (2 Cor. 11:2; 1 Pet. 3:1-6). Before we learned of life in Christ, we believed we had it in ourselves. When we acquired a knowledge of the gospel we thought we purged ourselves from the serpent's falsehood, "ye shall not surely die" (Gen. 3:4). We did erase the immortal soul from our creed, but a residuum of the venom seems to be still in our blood. This elegiac fact we confess with sorrow. The old leaven has not been completely purged in all of us. Infected more or less by the poison of tradition and prejudice, ugly eruptions of error often break and on the face of the Elect Lady (2 John 1). Unsightly blotches. Blushing in shame, the bride of Christ should take the elixir of truth to cleanse her system of serpentine impurities. What has disfigured her probably more than anything else is a wart that has grown on the end of her nose. Modestly she refers to this excrescence as "Enoch," but the fact is she means a wart, and it needs to be cauterized; and if necessary, a knife should be used to take it out root and branch.

GOING TO HEAVEN ACCEPTED

OUR WRITER, although he has believed in conditional immortality for forty years, has not ridded himself of traditional views concerning Enoch and Elijah. He cannot consistently quote Scripture against his friends who believe in going to heaven; for he believes, like an Adventist quoted a few weeks ago, that Enoch and Elijah are in heaven. Heaven-going believers will have a love-feast when they hear of this admission; and if they are wise they will promptly remind our correspondent that he has been deceiving them for forty years. Going to heaven turns out to be all right, after forty years' of protest. What was meant according to this revised statement is, that no one goes to heaven when he dies! Christ never thought of this modification when he said, "No man hath ascended to heaven" except Christ (John 3:13). After refuting the Methodist with the text for forty years, it is now nullified to save Enoch from dying. "Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see" (1 Tim. 6:16), must be revised and understood only of dead people! "No man" is a little too explicit and comprehensive, embracing both the living and the dead. Agreeing now with the heaven going sentiments of pan-Christendom, there is agreement on essentials, and good manners will not allow any quarrels over details.

PSUCHE LIFE FOR 5000 YEARS

ORTHODOX PEOPLE are consistent in their belief of going to heaven, a compliment that cannot be given to our correspondent. They admit the body is mortal and dies (Rom. 8:11); but they have an "immortal soul" which lives after the body is dead, and which traverses the airless expansion above without dying for want of breath, and which lives for ever after it gets to heaven. In all this there is consistency. But our correspondent has no immortal soul; and conditional immortality forbids him to change the mortal body until the seventh trumpet sounds (1 Cor. 15:52). He has nothing but mortality in his hands, and he does not dare to change that until Jesus comes. His perplexity is great. Under these circumstances, what is he to do? What can he do? "Enoch and Elijah have been preserved alive for 5000 years in natural bodies." What chapter and verse are given to prove this? Hear the proof: "Surely you cannot maintain that God could not keep an elephant alive 5000 years"! Certainly logic has gone mad here! With God all things are possible (Matt. 19:26). God could make a needle without a point, a mountain without an elevation, a valley without a depression, a round thing square, a frog to leap around the earth at one bound, and an elephant to live sixty-trillion years—therefore Enoch and Elijah are still living! Logic of a wondrous kind this! But the question is not what God can do, but what he has done. Man's days are declared to be "few" (Job 14:1). "His days are determined, the number of his months are with thee, thou hast appointed his bounds that he cannot pass" (vs. 5). The longest time allotted to man is called "his day" (1 Cor. 4:3, margin). At the longest this day is only a thousand years (2 Pet. 3:8). His days were "determined" and "bounds" set to his life in Gen. 2:17: "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." There is not on record a man who did not die within this "day." Enoch's son, Methuselah, lived 969 years (Gen. 5:21, 27); and when the question is put, "Who lived the longest?" we have taught the children to answer, Methusaleh. All wrong, again. Enoch has lived 5000 years in a corruptible body already, and the end is not yet!

ENOCH AND ELIJAH MUST DIE YET!

Conditional immortality cannot consistently be mixed with unconditional incorruptibility. Our correspondent demonstrates this fact in the communication now before us. When we ask him "How could Enoch and Elijah get life before the Life-Giver bestows it?" and "How could they obtain life before the Savior died to purchase it?" he answered without an alternative to choose from, "They have not yet got the zoe life, but are yet in the physical state"; they are "yet in their natural bodies, and as I read the Scriptures, they are the two witnesses who are yet to die in Jerusalem (Rev. 11:3, 4)"; "They have yet to die and be raised." We now turn from this flight of imagination to the following sober and sane declarations of the Bible concerning the living saints at Christ's second advent:

> We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we (the living) shall be changed (1 Cor. 15: 51, 52).
> Then we which are alive and remain shall be conveyed away together with them (the dead) in clouds to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord (1 Thess. 4:17).
> He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live (by resurrection): and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die (John 11:25, 26).

If Enoch and Elijah are among the living believers when Jesus comes (and this is what our friend believes) they are included in the words. "We shall not all sleep (die), but we shall all be changed." They would in that case be of those who "are alive and remain." Instead of being the two witnesses of Rev. 11 and getting killed in Jerusalem, they are among the "whosoever liveth and believeth in me SHALL NEVER DIE."

ELIJAH NOT IN HEB. 11

THE WRITER thinks it is "notable" that Elijah is not mentioned in the list of those who died in the faith in Heb. 11. From this he infers that Elijah never died. But were he to make the same inference about all others whose names do not appear in Heb. 11, he would have a mighty host of men and women who are five thousand years old still in "natural bodies." Pressed to its logical issue, our friend would be glad to slink away from such a conclusion. And we surmise that if Elijah's name did appear in Heb 11 that circumstance would not convince him that Elijah died. Enoch is specifically named along with Abel, Noah, and Abraham (vss. 4, 5, 7, 8), after which the statement is made, "These all died" (vs. 13). Since Enoch is included among "these all died," and yet our writer believes he did not die, were Elijah's name in the chapter, subject to the same declaration, we have no reason to think he would believe the latter statement any more than the former. But Elijah's name being absent from Heb. 11 is poor consolation to those who believe he was exempt from death. The chapter, the writer is careful to say, is synoptic and representative. "What shall I say more? for the time would fail me to tell of Gideon, and of Barak, and of Samson, and of Jephthae; of David also, and Samuel, and of the prophets" (vs. 32). When the apostle says "these all died" and "these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise" (vss. 13, 39), he speaks of all saints in their representatives. "Time" did not permit of individual mention. Therefore all his statements concerning those he does name are to be understood as applicable to those not named. The declarations of the apostle, "These all died," and "these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise," are as applicable to those not mentioned as to those specifically named.

Other Scriptures corrobate this interpretation. Other Scriptures unmistakably point to the decease of Elijah. He prayed under a juniper tree, "It is enough; now O Lord, take away my life: for I am not better than my fathers" (1 Kings 19:4). Before saying that God rejected Elijah's prayer to die and, contrary to his request, perpetuated his life 5000 years in a frail body of mortality, we had better consider that while "Elijah was a man of like passions as we are" (Jas. 5:17), yet his prayers were prevalent with God. To prove the power of prayer James cites Elijah in the words, "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much" (Jas. 5:18). Under the guidance of James may we not say that Elijah's prayer to die was "effectual" and "availed much" to that end? If this prayer was but the petulant outburst of a fanatic, shrinking from living 5000 years in a "natural body," and contrary to the wish of his heart and the expression of his lips, God has made him live all these thousands of years, what good has come to the prophet, glory to God, or efficacy to prayer in the whole matter?

ELIJAH'S DIRGE

OUR CONCLUDING thought is this: Elijah's dirge is written in 2 Kings 2:12 "My father, my father, the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof." An interpretation of this lamentation is given in 2 Kings 13:14: "Now Elisha was fallen sick of his sickness WHEREOF HE DIED. And Joash the king of Israel came down unto him, and wept over his face, and said, O my father, my father, the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof." All admit that Elisha died. In his case we certainly have a funeral. Now since when Elisha "died" this dirge was used by the king of Israel as he "wept over his face," "My father, my father, the chariot of Israel and the horsemen thereof," the very words quoted verbatim from 2 Kings 2:12, and applied to Elijah; we ask, Do not the same words, the same letters, and the same expressions convey the same idea? If a dirge in one place, are they not a dirge in the other? And remember, this conclusion has back of it both precedent and interpretation supplied by God himself.

They spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened.-Mal. 3:16.

DEAR BROTHER HUGGINS:

I WILL write you and all thanking you for the donation of The Restitution which I have received, read and rejoiced in. Many good things in it. I have been sick for two years and could not attend the meetings, and The Restitution has been a lot of comfort to me. I thank the Lord I have read and heard the many good things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. I will try to keep the faith by reading and understanding more about our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Dear Brother Huggins, your can publish this if you have space in your paper. Trusting the Lord will help you all in your good works,

Mrs. and Mr. A. G. HICKS.

DEAR BROTHER HUGGINS:

SOME YEARS ago believers were asked by The Restitution to give their name and the name of the brother who baptized them. Some of us thought perhaps a book was to be compiled with the names and, perhaps a little sketch of the pioneers who brought the light of the glorious gospel of the kingdom, so long covered and hidden, to the mass of mankind, by the rubbish of ages of error taught by the leaders of the various religious sects and superstition brought over from paganism. The book never materialized and we do not know to this day why the names of those who baptized in those early days were asked for.

I have thought how interesting it would be to all of us, and perhaps strengthening, especially to teachers of the present time to know something of the life and trials of those who labored when the conveniences and comforts which we now have were unknown. I submit a few facts which I have learned from my husband. I hope others will follow with short sketches of our early teachers.

LIFE OF BROTHER EDGAR W. KNAPP IN BRIEF

My father and mother were baptized into the faith in the early fifties. A church was organized in Leroy, Calhoun Co., Michigan. Preaching brethren were frequently at my father's house, and I often listened to Brethren Miller, Hoyt, Simonds, Chesebrough; and later to Brethren Reed, Stephenson, and Sober. At the age of twenty I was baptized by Brother E. Miller, Junior, where there "was much water," being the race from a mill. The water pouring over the dam made a great roar. I think there were a thousand people present. I was the only one baptized at that time. It took courage and faith to be immersed before such a crowd. My name was recorded in the book of the first church of "the one faith" organized in Michigan, and I have been told it was the first organization of our faith in the United States.

I remember when quite a lad father took Brothers Miller and Hoyt to Indiana with his team and held meeting for a week. Father had one dollar, the only money in the crowd, and he had to use some of that to pay toll on the road, and they received no pay. Such was the mode of preaching the gospel from 1854 to 1860. Our annual conference was held at different places. Several were held at my father's place. One I remember was held there when there were 63 present, and they all ate and slept at father's place. The conference was held in June, and we had put in part of our hay and most of the men slept in the barn. As they all came with their own conveyances it made about thirty horses to turn in the pasture. Brother Stephenson was at that meeting, and I went to sleep while Brothers Simonds and Stephenson were in an earnest talk on the blessing of the nations, which Brother Simonds called " a glorious theme." All were delighted with that meeting. There was no division in the church at that time. Brother Knapp remembers and has read the following papers: "Advent Harbinger," "Millennial Harbinger," "Prophetic Exposition," "Herald of the Kingdom," and our dear old Restitution.

GOLDEN TEXT, Psalms 23:

THE LORD is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul. He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and staff they comfort me. Thou preparest a table for me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil: my cup runneth over. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

I EXPECT my young people to read the memory verses at the beginning of the page, and then memorize them. You will always be glad you did.

EDITORIAL

HELLO, YOUNG people! Yes, it is I. Aunt Bess is in the Editor's chair. I fear I look rather funny and out of place here. At any rate I feel so. This chair is much too large for me. I feel lost in it. I hope our dear Brother Donaldson will come back soon. In the meantime we must all try the very best we can to keep "our page" going, and do it so well that we may win his smile of approval when he returns. The following letter will explain why I am trying to occupy his chair for a short time:

"DEAR SISTER WALKER:

"This is Thursday night. On Tuesday next, 6th inst, we expect to move to our new home at 37 South Twelfth Ave., Mount Vernon, New York. We expect to be very busy for a few weeks following, and I therefore take the liberty of asking you to send the copy to Cleveland direct for the four issues of May 4th, 11th, 18th, and 25th. Copy should be in Cleveland at least three weeks in advance of publishing date. I am taking for granted that you will do this, and have so announced in the copy for the April 27th issue, which I am mailing to The Restitution this evening. Make up the "page" according to your own ideas. Don't try to follow the present style unless you desire. For the month of May the "page" is yours to do with as you desire. If you are tired after the trial, I will take it back for June.

Alexander Donaldson."

WE ARE glad to see that Ethel Howard of Canada has entered her name as a "special contributor." Canada seems such a long distance from here; but do you know young people, that it is just what makes "our page" so helpful and interesting. No matter how far we are apart, we can all meet together here on this page, exchange ideas, and tell each other what we have learned from careful study of the word of God; or if we are very young, what our elders have taught us on each subject. Is it not wonderful? We may live thousands of miles apart and still have the privilege of knowing one another through "our page." Let us make the best of our opportunity, and perhaps by trying to know and love one another better, we may also learn to know and love our Father in heaven and his Son better.

HOW MANY of us have answered Brother Lyon's appeal? I have, and already have received a fine long letter in reply, which has more than repaid me for my trouble, not to speak of the nine other letters that I may receive soon. I hope all of our young people have written to him, or intend doing so very soon, as I know you will find it well worth your while.

IN A copy of The Restitution some time ago, there appeared a letter on "our page" written by Gladys Barber, of Oregon. That is but a short distance from Montana, the state I live in. When I read your dear little letter, Gladys, I turned the page back to take a second look at our "special contributors," thinking perhaps I had overlooked your name. I was quite disappointed. But I am still hoping you will send in your name soon.

DOES ANYONE CARE FOR FATHER?

Does anyone care for father?
Does anyone think of the one
Upon whose tired bent shoulders
The cares of the family come?
The father who strives for your comfort
And toils on from day to day,
Altho' his steps ever grow slower,
And his dark locks are turning gray?

Does anyone think of the due bills
He's called upon daily to pay?
Milliner bills, college bills, cook bills—
There are some kind of bills every day.
Like a patient horse in a treadmill,
He works on from morning to night;
Does anyone think he is tired?
Does anyone make his home bright?

Is it right, just because he looks troubled,
To say he is cross as a bear?
Kind words, little actions of kindness
Might banish his burden of care.
'Tis for you he's ever so anxious;
He will toil for you while he may live;
In return he only asks kindness,
And such pay is easy to give.

THE PRODIGAL SON

ONCE A man had two sons. The youngest son said, "Father, why not divide part of your riches with us." So the father divided part of his fortune among his two sons. The youngest one went away and spent his money foolishly. The oldest son stayed home and worked. Then one day the youngest son saw he had done wrong, and he came back to his father, and told him how wicked he had been; that he was not worthy of his father's love. The father forgave him and said, "Come on, and let us make merry." So they killed the fatted calf and made merry. When the other son heard this, he would not go in. He said, "Father, I have been here helping you all this time and you have not made a feast for me."

The father answered and said, "Yes, but your brother was dead, and now he is alive; he was lost and is found. So let us make merry."

FRIENDS NEW AND OLD

MAKE NEW friends, but keep the old;
Those are silver, these are gold;
New made friends like new made wine,
Age will mellow and refine;
Friendships that have stood the test,
Time and change, are surely best;
Brow may wrinkle, hair turn gray,
Friendship never owns decay;
For mid old friends kind and true,
We once more our youth renenw,
But, alas, old friends must die,
New friends must their place supply,
Then cherish friendship in your breast
New is good, but old is best.
Make new friends, but keep the old;
Those are silver, these are gold.

WHY?

IF GOOD people go to heaven when they die, why did Solomon say in Ecclesiastes 9:10, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave whither thou goest."

NUGGETS OF GOLD

"Books, like friends, should be well chosen."

* * *

"GREAT MEN have large brains, but it does not necessarily follow that they should have the big head."

* * *

"WE SELDOM find persons whom we acknowledge to have good sense, except those who agree with us."

* * *

THOSE WHO have resources within themselves, who can dare to live alone, want friends the least; but at the same time, best know how to prize them the most. But no company is far preferable to bad, because we are more apt to catch the vices of others than their virtues, as disease is far more contagious than health."

* * *

"BEHOLD THE child, by nature's kindly law
Pleased with a rattle, tickled with a straw;
Some livlier plaything gives his youth delight,
A little louder, but as empty, quite;
Scarfs, garters, gold amuse his riper stage;
And beads and prayer books are the toys of age;
Pleased with the bauble still, as those before;
Till tired, he sleeps, and life's poor play is o'er."

* * *

"ALAS! WHAT is man? and what is this life but a circulation of little mean actions? We lie down and rise again, dress and undress, feed and wax hungry, work or play, and are weary, and then we lie down again. And the circle returns; we spend the day in trifles, and when night comes we stretch ourselves upon a bed of folly, amongst dreams, and broken thoughts, and wild imaginations. Our reason lies asleep beside us, and we are for the time as arrant brutes as those that sleep in stalls or in the field. Are not the capacities of man higher than these? Ought not his ambition and expectations to be greater? Let us be adventurers for an age to come. It is at least a fair and noble chance; let us forget that we are animals and press forward to our heritage of eternal life in the ages to come."

* * *

Just as we go to press we hear from Sister Porter through Sister Wince that Brother G. M. Alexander, of Chicago, Ill., is seriously ill with pneumonia. Sister Wince says: "Please call on the household of faith everywhere to make united prayer for his recovery, for the cause of truth never had a better friend."

The Restitution

A Paper Representing the Church of God, and Devoted to the Exposition and Defense of the Things Concerning the Kingdom of God and the Name of Jesus Christ.—Acts 8:12.

VOLUME 72 CLEVELAND, O. MAY 11th, 1920. NUMBER 18

"He Will Not Forget"

DOES THE flower forget to greet the sun
When it lifts its pretty head?
Does the mother bird forget her brood
Hungry, waiting to be fed?
Do the twinkling stars forget to shine
When the shades of evening fall?
Does the shepherd forget to shelter his lambs
When he hears their plaintive call?
Ah, no! The one who clothes the lilies
And marks each sparrow's fall,
He will hasten to our rescue
When he hears our helpless call.

Let Us Pray

FATHER OF light and life! thou good supreme, O teach me what is good! teach me thyself! Save me from folly, vanity, and vice. From every low pursuit; and feed my soul with knowledge, conscious peace, and virtue pure; sacred, substantial, never fading bliss! Fountain of mercy! whose pervading eye can look within and read what passes there, accept my thoughts for thanks; I have no words. My soul o'er fraught with gratitude, rejects the aid of language. Lord! Behold my heart. Amen.

Responsibility of Enlightened Rejectors Vindicated

Responsibility, Forgiveness, Resurrection, and Judgment in Operation Among the Gentiles

A SWEET SPIRIT OF ENQUIRY

IN "THE RESTITUTION" of April 13th, I find a friendly criticism by Brother John Parker of my article on responsibility in a former number of "The Restitution." Referring to me he says, "I wish to ask him a few questions through The Restitution." The spirit in which Brother Parker has presented his views is commendable, and makes the answer to his objections and difficulties in reconciling my views with the Scriptures, a pleasure as well as an opportunity to still more advance what I sincerely believe to be the truth as taught in the Bible. In the revival of the truth in these "latter day," had it been accompanied with the above spirit of consideration for the feelings of one's neighbor, and, with the remembrance that the truth belongs to God and not to man; that creeds and sects are but the declaration of how certain men and women understand and interpret the Holy Scriptures, and the right for so doing from a legal and moral status no one can question in the absence at the present time of the pastors which God has promised, who shall say when one turns to the right or to the left, "This is the way, walk ye in it"; things and conditions existing among those who once "sat in darkness and saw great light" (Matt. 4:16), would be vastly different from what they are at present. In the absence of the Holy Spirit of interpretation and an infallible person upon earth, all are in the condition referred to by the prophet Jeremiah: "And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for all shall know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord." During the time in which God has hidden his face from the house of Israel, and there is no more any prophet among us (Psa. 74:9), each one has the right to say, "I know the Lord," and to teach his brother, but it is accompanied with great responsibility, because for what he has done, "whether good or bad," he shall be judged. We can wrest the Scriptures to our own destruction, as Peter shows, and he also says, "If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God." We have often felt that the Scriptures might have been so plainly written on disputed points of doctrine that misunderstanding would have been impossible; but then again, that stimulous for research and the study of the word of God would have been lacking; and so undoubtedly it is better as Solomon says, for God to have concealed the truth. "It is to the glory of God to conceal a thing: but the honor of kings to search out a matter."

THE VALUE OF HAVING A RECEPTIVE MIND

Brother Parker says: "I may say that my views on responsibility are in the formative stage, and I like to feel my way very carefully so that I may hold fast only to that which is true." A receptive mind is just the kind of mind that is more apt to find the truth than one that is dogmatic, and knows it all! Christ said to those Jews that believed on him, "If ye continue in my word, ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." However, there is such a thing as Paul calls "The full assurance of understanding"; and also "The full assurance of faith." The question of man's responsibility to his Creator stands at the threshhold of the door of entrance into Christ. That door opens to no one who has sin or whose sins have not been forgiven, who is not conscious of sin, sin in its primary and only correct way to speak of sin. The ordinance of baptism is God's appointed institution where sin is confessed and forgiven. The record reads, "And were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins" (Matt. 3:6). Also Rom. 10:10: "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." Christ said, "And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem." It is also recorded in Acts 11:18, "When they heard these things they held their peace, and glorified God, saying, Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life." As repentance means a change of mind, and in the last analysis, a thinking with God, we of course desire to know from what the mind is changed, and therefore we will go to Acts 26:18, where we read: "To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in me."

THE JEW TODAY
NOT IN A SPECIAL COVENANT

From these several passages we are fairly launched among the Gentiles. In reference to the Jew since the death of the mediator of the new covenant, he is not under "a special covenant relationship to God," as Brother Parker says that he is. Paul says in Rom. 3:9, "What then? are we better than they? No, in no wise: for we have proved both Jews and Gentiles that they are all under sin; as it is written, There is none righteous, no, not one . . . . they are all gone out of the way."

The Sinaitic or first covenant that the Jew was under was an imperfect institution in dealing with human nature, and was done away by the new covenant of which Christ was the Mediator. This is clearly proven by 2 Cor. 3rd and Gal. 3rd chapters, and Heb. 7, 8, and 10th chapters. The new covenant commenced to function after the resurrection of Christ with both Jew and Gentile. There is but one new covenant, and it was promised in the days of Jeremiah (chap. 31:31), and it commenced to be fulfilled with Israel and also with the Gentiles in the first century; but its work with restored Israel will far transcend that of the past when it functioned with the individual Jew in the days of the apostles. The new covenant relates specifically with putting God's laws into the mind, and writing them in the heart; and in God being merciful to iniquities, and sin being remembered no more (Heb. 8:10, 12).

THE NEW COVENANT

The new covenant of which Christ was the sacrificial victim, and since his ascension to heaven itself, the Mediator, is the only covenant in all the time during the reign of sin and death, that will ever save anyone. It typically commenced in the days of Adam, when "the lamb was slain from the foundation of the world"; and will continue memorially to the end of the millennium. This new covenant was concealed in the promise made to Abraham when God promised that in his seed, all the nations of the earth shall be blessed. The blessing is as Peter tells us in Acts 3:26, "in turning away every one from his iniquities." What is called the new covenant, is so only in relation to the Mosaic covenant which Paul speaks of as "old." Eternal life is predicated upon this new covenant in both the typical and memorial phases. In Heb. 10th chapter the apostle clearly states that the blood of animals can not take away sin, and that sanctification comes through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ; and in chapter 9 he says: "And without the shedding of blood there is no remission."

According to Daniel's prophecy Christ was to put an end to sin offerings, and so on the day of Pentecost under the preaching of Peter, the Jews were convicted that they had crucified Jesus, and so they "said unto Peter and the rest of the apostles, "What shall we do?" The old covenant had ceased to function, and so the poor Jew found himself in a deplorable condition without an animal to sacrifice for his sins. "What shall we do?" And Peter said unto them, "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit."

REPENTANCE AND FORGIVENESS OF GENTILES

Now Brother Parker, gather up in your mind the foregoing testimony in reference to repentance and remission and forgiveness of sins, and I think with due meditation you will have no difficulty in reference to the question of responsibility. The statement, "For the remission of your sins" (R. V.) certainly has a meaning. The Scriptures cited show that this statement applies alike to Jew and Gentile. Paul says, "there is no difference", he also says in Ephesians, that the middle wall of partition was broken down; and the promise made to Abraham that in his seed the Christ, all nations should be blessed, blessed by having their sins and iniquities forgiven and remembered no more, includes Israel as well as the Gentile nations; all can have their sins forgiven or the remission of their sins. But suppose "the obedience of faith," which is baptism, is not submitted to, what then? Do not their sins remain unforgiven? Certainly. What about the penalty then; does it not impend or hang over the disobedient one who refuses to be baptized? Certainly. What is the penalty? Brother Parker says: "The truth is that natural death is the penalty for sin, and has been enforced from the beginning to the present time, and will continue as long as sin is in the world." In another place he says: "Strictly speaking all death is natural death." From a physiological analysis there is much truth in this last statement. For instance, in no mode of death can death take place so long as the breath or the spirit of life is in the body and causes the blood to circulate. The breath of life must first depart. This is true in reference to all living things, and therefore it is natural. From a legal and scriptural use of the word death, natural death is not the penalty for transgression of law. The distinction made under the law of Moses in reference to clean and unclean animals, was only fictitious and done to teach a moral lesson, as we can plainly see from Acts 10:15, in the statement, "What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common." There had taken place no physical or bodily cleaning, still they were now regarded as clean.

NATURAL DEATH NOT THE PENALTY FOR SIN

Let us now see how Brother Parker's natural death as penalty works out. Webster defines penalty as, "The suffering in person or property which is annexed by law or judicial decision to the commission of a crime, offence or trespass, as a punishment." The meaning of penalty, simply stated, is punishment for crime committed. In both divine and human law there is such a thing as the remission or doing away of the penalty before it becomes operative or while it still impends. "If thou, Lord, shouldst mark iniquities, O Lord, who shall stand? But there is forgiveness with thee that thou mayest be feared" (Psa. 130:3 4). We have already seen that it is at baptism where the forgiveness or remission of sins, which simply means the doing away of punishment deserved, takes place. It needs no argument to show that responsibility is involved in the above procedure. Very well, then, responsibility involving punishment ceases at baptism for sins up to that time, or as stated by Paul in Rom. 3:25, "sins that are past."

Now comes the answer to the statement that natural death is the penalty for sin. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints" (Psa. 116:15). Would a just God make a farce of forgiveness, by doing away with the penalty due for sins that are past, and then allow his natural physical law of death to take place? Certainly not; natural death is not a provisional affair; it is written in the very nature of man as the Bible specially teaches regardless of the theories and statements of faith of sects. God said to Adam, "For dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return" (Gen. 3:19). "For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath; so that a man hath no pre-eminence above a beast: for all are vanity. All go into one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again" (Eccl. 3:19, 20). The physical nature of man functions irrespective and regardless of moral considerations, and so far as the posterity of Adam are concerned in their physical nature, they are not a whit above the lower animals; they die from the same natural causes and not from the standpoint of right or wrong. The saint dying after the penalty, or properly, punishment, for his past sins had been abrogated would suffer punishment if natural death was the penalty for moral sin or the transgression of God's over all law of righteousness. Even if the contention is true that the everlasting continuance in the natural death state is the full penalty, it cannot be denied that natural death up to the resurrection, would constitute part of the penalty. God's remissions are complete and not partial or in sections. Paul says, "There is therefore now no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus;" and I believe it. According to your own statement, Brother Parker, in reference to the death of Christ, you are forced to believe that Christ died under the penalty or punishment of God's law, for you say that all death is natural death, and that natural death is the penalty for sin. Not until you get away from the thought that natural death as differentiated in the Bible, is the penalty or punishment for sin, will you be able to see the beautiful harmony that pervades the Scriptures in reference to God's moral law of sin and death. There is no innate physical law of sin and death in man, only so far as the violation of the laws of health are concerned. The Bible does differentiate between death and death; and if according to your statements of faith or belief, natural death is the penalty for sin, then there is no hope for the human family because Paul says in Heb. 9:27, "And inasmuch as it is appointed unto men once to die." etc. All die, saints and sinners, and also infants who never have sinned; all according to your theory suffer punishment when they die. When God's penalty or punishment for sin once begins to operate it never ceases, it continues for all eternity. The object of the gospel is to prevent it, the penalty, from operating at all, and to save that which is worth saving, viz., the "mind of the spirit."

Your theory is as bad as that of our orthodox neighbors in reference to resurrection and judgment, for they claim that at death the righteous enter upon their reward in heaven, and that the wicked, upon their punishment in hell; and then in the general resurrection and judgment, all are brought before the judge and condemned or acquitted as the case may be. Now, your natural death penalty causes both saints and sinners at death to suffer penalty, and then at the second coming of Christ, to come forth and be judged as Paul says, "According to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad" (2 Cor. 5:10). In the law of nations, death violently executed is known as judicial death, and not as natural death. What in common speech is called natural death occurs from disease or senile decay, and not because the law of the land has been transgressed; and just so in the Bible a distinction is made in reference to death. "Death as the wages of sin" (Rom. 6:23) is death inflicted as punishment; but the death that the ancient worthies died who are spoken of in Heb. 11th chapter is quite another death in the eyes of God. Paul in Rom. 5:13, 14 clearly states the difference. "For until the law sin was in the world: but sin is not imputed where there is no law. Nevertheless death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression."

This reign of death is death which occurs in the natural way, which varies very much. Imputed sin is sin with the penalty of death remaining to be executed at God's own appointed time; and when executed, then death will be "the wages of sin." A careful reading of Ezek. 33rd chapter will show what imputed sin results in, and how the punishment for sin, which is death of a special kind, can be avoided. I suggest a reading of the following passages which prove that the death spoken of is not death in the natural course of nature, but death as penalty and under the displeasure of God: Rom 5:21; 6:16; 7:5, 10, 13; 8.16; 1:33; 2 Cor. 2:16; 7:10. Heb. 2:15; James 1:15; 5:20; Rev. 2:11; 20:6, 11. 1 John 5:15; Rom. 8:13; John 11:26,

Bible Lessons On First Principles

ROBERT G. HUGGINS

Lesson VI

The Thousand Years' Reign of Christ and the Saints

III. A "LITTLE SEASON" OF JUDGMENT AFTER THE THOUSAND YEARS

This proposition is a logical upshot from the previous thesis. The millennium ends, like all preceding dispensations have ended, in judgment. The theory which requires the righteous to "live on" to the end of that age, and which summarily executes the wicked during the same time, reaches the close of the thousand years with all the righteous alive and all the wicked dead. Such a consummation as this clashes with the divine record in many respects. It logically and practically nullifies all the following events, which John says transpire during a "little season" after the thousand years have ended (Rev. 20:7-15):

(a) Satan is loosed out of his prison;

(b) He deceives the nations;

(c) Under his leadership war is revived, an army is organized, and Jerusalem, "the beloved city," is surrounded by an army as numerous as "the sand of the sea";

(d) All the belligerents are "devoured" by a downpour of fire from heaven;

(e) The dead, both "small and great," the righteous and the wicked, are raised out of the sea, death, and hell (the grave);

(f) Both classes, the good and the bad, are judged "according to their works";

(g) Those "written in the book of life" are given "the life" which "the book" promises them, namely, immortal life. They are the harvest of which Christ and the saints are the first fruits. The after-fruits or harvest of "them that sleep" must correspond in kind and nature with the immortalized Christ and his brethren. This is just as certain as that law of nature which causes the after-fruits and the gatherings of any given crop or harvest to always be exactly of the same kind and nature as the first fruits; and

(h) "Whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire." The wicked perish forever in this lake of destruction. They are completely blotted out of Jehovah's creation. They suffer an oblivion from which there is no reclaim by resurrection. With these perish the devil, death, and hell (the grave, see the margin in verse 13). When the wicked are no more (Psa. 104:35) there cannot be found upon earth a stain of sin, a foot-print of the devil, or a trace of death and the grave. Mortality is now extinct, and death, "the last enemy," is destroyed.

IV. THE SUPREMACY OF CHRIST ENDS: GOD'S DIRECT SUPREMACY BEGINS

During the millennium there are three classes of beings on earth: first, the immortal Christ and his glorified church; second, the Jews restored; and third, the Gentiles, both still in mortality. The relation of these three classes may be compared to the threfold division of the tabernacle, which is declared to be typical in character (Heb. 9:8,9). Christ and his glorified bride represent the Holy of Holies, converted and restored Israel the Holy Place, and the Gentiles who are joined to Israel (Zech. 8:20-23), the Court of the Gentiles. In this comparison the reader must remember that the veil of the Holiest is now rent asunder (Matt. 27:51), so that as the Christocracy triumphantly unfolds itself all people and all lands are embraced in the light of God's favor. The symbol of the divine presence the cloud was at first confined within the ark in the wilderness; but when the temple of Solomon was dedicated it so filled the house that "the priests could not stand to minister by reason of the cloud" (2 Chron. 5:14), in its final out-stretch it will encompass the world with its glory, and then the whole earth will become a Holy of Holies (Psa. 72:19). Distinct steps are clearly marked in this march towards perfection. When Christ returns all the holy angels come with him (Matt. 25:31); to this "innumerable company of angels" the "church of the firstborn" are added in perpetual ties of love and fellowship (Heb. 12:22-24). After these angels and saints have resided on earth a thousand years (Rev. 20:9) "God himself" takes up his abode on the earth, which is now declared to be "the tabernacle of God" (Rev. 21:3). Pity the people who want to go to heaven! Instead of saints going to heaven, the Father and Son and the holy angels are all coming here! When Christ comes he "sets up" the kingdom: but a thousand years afterwards he "delivers it up" to God (1 Cor. 15:24). "Of his kingdom there shall be no end" (Luke 1:33); but there is a change in its administration at the close of the millennium. Christ and the saints shine like the sun and stars of the firmament (Matt. 13:43; Dan. 12:3): they are "the heavens" that rule during this transitional period (Dan. 4:26; Isa. 1:2,10). As the Lamb and Bride they are called "the great city Jerusalem," a heavenly polity upon earth; but as the millennium passes into history they are seen "descending out of heaven from God" (Rev. 21:10). As "the holy city, new Jerusalem," they "come down from God out of heaven" (vs. 2) because at that time they vacate the thrones on which they have reigned as kings, priests, and judges on the earth (Rev. 20).

"Then shall the Son also himself become subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all and in all" (1 Cor. 15:28). This change in the headship of the kingdom from Christ to God may be understood and appreciated in the light of Paul's statement. "The head of Christ is God" (1 Cor 3:23; 11:3)* Both Christ and his subordinate kings, the saints, now "descend" and "come down": they abdicate their thrones of absolute and direct sovereignty to make room for the more direct and visible headship of God, who is now "all and in all." Sin is now eradicated from the earth, and "God himself" appears without mediation "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death" (1 Cor. 15:26). All that are sinful, and therefore all that are deathful (Rom. 5:12), are destroyed. Death and hell (the grave) are literally destroyed with them, because there will then be none upon whom either can prey. The earth will pass through many convulsions before she reaches redemption; but sweet will be her final deliverance, and grand the day of her consummate glory. The millennium, which is the bud of eternity, will then bloom in its glory never to fade, and celestial peace and repose will settle upon the new earth never to be disturbed. In the last words of God's revelation we are permitted to gaze unveiled upon the earth when all the wicked are rooted out of it. We are shown the righteous, its sole possessors, immortal, enjoying forever the celestial blessings to which they had been called by "the glad tidings of the kingdom" (Luke 8:1), even "his kingdom and glory" (1 Thess. 2:12) both of which they shall enjoy forever in blessed partnership with the redeemed and the Redeemer, the holy angels, and "God himself," as the following Scriptures graphically describe:

> "Let the sinners be consumed out of the earth, and let the wicked be no more" (Psa. 104:35).
> "As the whirlwind passeth, so is the wicked no more, but the righteous is an everlasting foundation . . . . . The righteous shall never be removed, but the wicked shall not inhabit the earth" (Prov. 10:25,30).
> "The upright shall dwell in the land, and the perfect man shall remain in it; but the wicked shall be cut off from the earth and the transgressors shall be rooted out of it" (Prov. 2:21,22).
> "As truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord" (Num. 14:21; Isa. 11:9; Hab. 2:14).
> . . . . God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God will wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away" (Rev. 21:3).
> "And there shall be no more curse: but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him: and they shall see his face; for his name shall be in their foreheads" (Rev. 22:3,4).

* In both the Old and New Testaments the word "head" is often used, as here, to denote master, ruler, chief (Numbers 17:3; 25:15; Deut. 28:13; Judges 10:18; 1 Sam. 15:17; Eph. 1:22; 4:15; 5:23; Col. 2:10).

Trying to Join the Church

EDWARD M. FLESH of the United States Food Commission, was talking in St. Louis about snobbishness.

"Snobbishness penetrates everywhere," he said. "It even penetrates our churches."

"I know an old darkey who got religion last month and decided to join the richest and handsomest church in town, the church with the finest music and best preaching. Then he called on the pastor and stated his design.

"But the pastor hemmed and hawed. He felt that his fashionable flock would not welcome such an addition as the old darkey. He didn't want to hurt the old fellow's feelings, however, and finally he said:

"Go home, Uncle Rooster. Go home and pray over it. This is an important matter and should be made a subject of prayer.'

"Uncle Rooster went home, and in a few days he was back again.

"'Well,' said the divine. 'Well, what's the verdict now?'

"'Ah, prayed an' ah prayed,' said Uncle Rooster; 'an' de good Lawd he say to me: Rooster, mah son, Ah wouldn't bother mah haid about that mattah no mo'. Ah've been a-tryin' to git into dat chu'ch mahself for de last twenty-nine yeahs an' ah ain't had no luck nuther.'" Selected by Geo. Tabor, Jun.

Zionists Call Conclave

NEW YORK, April 27. A call for an extraordinary convention in this city May 9 and 10, to mobilize resources for the actual work of preparing the Jewish homeland in Palestine was issued today by the Zionist organization of America, following the action of the allied premiers at San Remo in granting recognition to the Jewish people.

The full quota of delegates to this convention is 1,700 on the basis of one delegate for every hundred registered Zionists.

Calling of the extraordinary convention necessitates postponement of the regular annual convention scheduled for Atlantic City May 30 News Clip.

BUSINESS is a science; the accumulation of money a disease.

OFTEN WE come across people who complain that they have few friends. They will point to other people who have many, and wonder why such a distinction is made. The matter is easy enough to explain, for as some one has well said — the only way to have friends is to be one. For friendship cannot possibly be a one sided matter. Just as it takes two to make a bargain or quarrel, so does it take the same number to make a friendship.

May 2nd we enjoyed the fellowship of Sister Gertrude Miller, of Adrian, Michigan.

The Ogle County Republican, Oregon, Ill., April 22nd, announces the death of two of our dear friends: Mr. Asher M. Castle, and Sister Martha J. Knodle. We regret the loss of these friends, and assure the bereaved of our deepest sympthy in the loss which they have suffered.

We regret to learn that Brother D. C. Robison continues in poor health. See a letter from him this week under "Communications." We pray that his life may be lengthened out till the King comes that he may, without the interruption of his work, lay down his task at the feet of the Master.

Dating April 28th, Sister Mae Westfail, of Troy, Ohio, writes that she has been "unusually blessed in a speedy recovery" from her recent illness which terminated in an operation. As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is this good news from a sister whom we always mention in our prayers.

The upbuilding of the brethren and the enlightenment of the stranger are easily interfered with: little jarring things are sufficient to render the work ineffectual. Factious spirits have no permanent place in the house of the Lord; seething disaffection is a smoke in the eye, while to be "puffed up for one against another" is a smouldering fire. Nothing can prosper where petty ambitions and animosities reign; even where they do not assert themselves, but merely live in the sullen silence of a heartless service, they are like so many dead "abominable branches" dangling on the ecclesial tree.

Past experience leads us to expect a big shrinkage in MSS. during the summer. It seems that people do not like to write in hot weather. Therefore we request several articles from each of our contributors, and at least one from each of our readers now, so that when the heat of summer comes upon us we may be able to go to our file of MSS. and with a smile find an abundance of material for The Restitution. When we have plenty of copy we are able to make an assortment of subject matter for the paper. Will those who read this editorial please attend to this matter immediately ? Yes · thank you.

The dispersion of brethren and sisters all over the church in detached twos and threes interferes with the objects proposed in the breaking of bread. It suggests coldness, a lack of one-hearted interest; while on the other hand, where brethren pack together and form a solid square as close up to the Lord's table as they can plant themselves, the spectacle is cheering, animating and suggests warmth and earnestness, giving body and solid energy to the songs of praise. What is required all round is order, efficiency, every one in his place when the moment arrives to begin, no waiting, but freshness, promptness, energw, wisdom, fervor, and trenchant loving zeal for the Father's house, such as Christ himself displayed.

—o—

Scientific Accuracy of the Bible

Does not the modern discovery, by means of the microscope, of the respiratory organs, and of the secretionary vessels in the leaves of plants, by which the whole unseen vapor in the air is appropriated for their nourishment, afford another instance of the scientific accuracy with which the word of God is written, and which appears to be alluded to in the language of Job: "Though the root thereof wax old in the earth, and the stock thereof die in the ground, yet through the scent of water it will bud and bring forth boughs like a plant" (Job 14:8, 9).

—o—

Sorrow and happiness, peace and strife,
Fear and rejoicing its moments know;
Yet from the discords of such a life,
The clearest music of heaven may flow.

The Bible IS

The Bible IS we plainly see;
Then it must have a pedigree.
It either is a book divine,
Or men to make it must combine.
Suppose the latter, then they must Either be wicked men or just.
Take either side and you will see
A proof of its divinity.
If wicked men composed this book,
Surely their temple they forsook;
For they the righteous man defend,
And curse the bad from end to end.
If righteous, then they change their name,
For they the authorship disclaim.
They often say, "Thus saith the Lord,"
And testify it is his word;
If it be not, they tell a lie,
And all their righteousness destroy.
Could Moses and could Malachi
Unite together in a lie ?
Could Job and Daniel, with the rest
Spread o'er the world from east to west,
Unite together and confer
When oceans rolled between them, sir ?
Not only seas, but ages too,
Hundreds of years and not a few.

EDITOR RESTITUTION:

MY SUBSCRIPTION has expired, so will renew, so I will not miss a single paper, as I could not do without it. I think it is growing better. I give mine away to those who will read them, and send tracts to those who do not know the truth. Thus I try to do all the good I can. My husband is very poorly and I am trying to do the best I can to get along. I think I will try and get a few subscribers to our dear paper if I can. I would like to help you all I can to send the glad news to those who do not know it, as we believe the end is not far off. Thanking you for sending my paper so promptly, I remain,

BROTHER HUGGINS:

I ENCLOSE an article which I wish to have placed in The Restitution. You will note I have had a recent attack of the flu. I realize that I must soon lay aside my pen and leave the work to others. I have been a contributor to The Restitution since 1873, nearly fifty years. As to the helpfulness of my articles our heavenly Father only knows. With him I am willing to trust their merit. With Christian love to self and family, I am, as ever,

Your brother in the Anointed,

Another View of Moses and Elijah

DEAR SISTER HOWARD:

I FEAR you have given me a puzzle that I cannot solve, though I frankly own that I do not agree with Mr. J. C. Bird when he asserts that Enoch and Elijah died. Has not God other worlds aside from "the heaven of heavens" where he resides to which he could translate these men some place much nearer our earth and belonging to our planetary system ?

The dwelling place of God must be the centre of the universe; the spot, the world, around which all runs with their systems of worlds revolve. This spot, this world is heaven in the true acceptance of the term, and no man ever has gone there, and doubtless never will, either at death as a soul or spirit, or as a literal translated personality. It is impossible for them to ascend to any place at death, because whatever constitutes the man, whether soul, spirit or body, is dead.

"God named the stars," and Professor Maedler some years ago made the startling proposition that the Pleiadic group was undoubtedly at the centre of the universe, the word Pleiades in Hebrew being Cymas, i. e. the axle, though Maedler does not seem to have known that the word Aleyong the name of the brightest star in the Pleiades is very ancient Arabic and means the centre! But though I may be wrong as to this group of stars being "the heaven of the heavens" where God resides and it be only the grand centre of our own universe, and there be still other and still grander centres around which the universe of universes revolve, in the loftiest of which is God's throne, yet wherever that place may be, no man has ascended there.

Our Adventist friend forgets that "By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death" (Heb. 11:5). So translated men do not die and do not go to heaven, wherever else they may go. And you, Sister Howard, forget that even in the visions real literal men are seen. Ananias saw Peter in a vision, and Peter saw Ananias in the same way. Angels have also appeared in visions.

And why should Michael have disputed with the devil about the body of Moses, if in that dispute his resurrection was not involved ? And to represent the coming kingdom, there would have to be the king transfigured as he would be when invested with immortal life; a man who had been translated without seeing death, to represent the living saints who will be caught away without dying, when Jesus comes, and also literally resurrected saints, with Peter, James and John to stand for those who, in the mortal state, will pass over into the millennium age. There must be samples of all them.

The three beloved disciples needed the comfort of seeing real, literal samples of what the coming kingdom would be like. They needed to hear Moses and Elijah talk of the now but few days' off death of Jesus, and to see with their own eyes the glory that would be his beyond his decease. The sight of that glory fortified them. Not else could they have stood at the cross and been witnesses of his death. They would not have been strong enough otherwise. And even then they faltered, until they knew for a certainty that he had been raised from the dead

S. ROXANA WINCE.

The Dividing Line

DIVIDING INDICATES separation or difference; line has various meanings, but in this connection we mean a straight or parallel direction; the line that divides the narrow way that leads to life eternal, from the broad way that leads to destruction.

Now we believe the two classes are so fully described in God's word that we may be able to discern on which side of the line one is walking. In order to enter the narrow way, one must find the strait gate. "For strait is the gate, and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life; and few there be that find it" (Matt. 7:14). As there are few that find it, one surely ought to search until he finds the right gate: and then enter in according to the plan of the life giver. How do we enter in? Through Christ by baptism. Christ has walked the narrow way, received the reward, and now stands as the door through which one must enter to start on the way that leads to eternal life. He is inviting all to come to him that they may live, and says: "Ye will not come to me, that ye might have life" (John 5:40). This cannot be gotten outside the narrow way. Christ says, "I am the door. By me if any man man enter in, he shall be saved" (John 10:1-11). Those that claim to be in the narrow way, and have not entered through the door are thieves and robbers (8th verse).

There are those who strive to walk the narrow way, and do walk close to it. They have heard the gospel, and believe it, but neglect to go through the door, which is baptism in Christ (John 10:9). Now if they will go through the door, they can cheerfully walk the narrow way, and know it is the right way to life eternal. To gain the prize they must keep on the narrow side of the line all the way: they must not cross the line to mingle with those who are walking near the line on the side of the broad way. Why do they walk so near the dividing line, and still not step over in the narrow way? Because they are following leaders that tell them it is not necessary to enter through the way Christ preached. But they shout to the multitude Christ's way is too "narrow"; we will show you a more liberal way; a way where you can love father or mother, or son, or daughter more than Christ. All such the Bible says are not worthy of Christ (Matt. 10:37, 38; Luke 14:26).

Another leader tells you if you do not find the door in this life, you will have another chance sometime. Many follow this leader and do not search the Scriptures to see if these things are so (John 5:39; Acts 17:11). It is not necessary to name other leaders. "By their fruits ye shall know them" (Matt. 7:15-20). The followers of the meek and lowly Jesus are commanded not to be carried about with divers and strange doctrines (Heb. 13:9); to avoid foolinsh questions and contentions and strivings about the law (Titus 3:9); to turn away from those having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof (2 Tim. 3:5); to withdraw from every brother that walketh disorderly, and not after the traditions of Paul (2 Thess. 3:6, 14). By Paul's command we are reminded that all who walk the narrow way speak the same thing, and have no divisions among them (1 Cor. 1.10; Rom. 16:17). The dividing line is between truth and error, God's word and man's word. No one can find the real door to the narrow way but by believing the gospel that Paul preached, and by being baptized into Christ, "the door."

Obituary

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.--Psa. 116:15.

Catherine W. Brisco

Catherine Wycoff was born in South Bend, Ind., Oct. 26, 1835, and died April 11th, 1920, aged 85 years 5 months and 17 days. She spent her girlhood days at this place. She was married to Robert M. Brisco on Sept. 25, 1850. They came to Polk County, Iowa, in 1865, and resided in Polk Co. and Des Moines, Iowa, ever since excepting a short time in Parsons, Kansas.

At the time of Mr. Brisco's death eleven months ago, this couple had spent sixty-seven busy and happy years together. And to their union twelve children were born, nine of whom are still living. Seven girls, Miss Mabel Brisco, Mrs. W. G. Lowe, and Mrs. M. E. Ridgeway, of Des Moines; Mrs. T. A. Robertson, of Minneapolis, Minn.; Mrs. G. M. Barrett, of South Bend, Ind.; Mrs. S. A. Trowbridge, of Los Angeles, Cal.; and Mrs. E. F. Jones, of Berkley, Cal. And two sons, S. B. Brisco, of Weiser, Idaho; and C. H. Brisco, of Parsons, Kansas.

Mrs. Brisco united with the church when a young woman, and kept the faith all through her long life, which made her a blessing and an inspiration to her family and all who knew her. She was a good wife and mother. Her family and home always meant so much to her, and were ever her greatest pleasures. Her home was the scene of many happy gatherings of children and grandchildren. She made it such a pleasant place to be.

Looking back it seems that her whole life has been spent in being useful to others. And even up to the very last week of her life she kept busy, and has left many lovely and useful handmade remembrances.

Remarks

AT THE earnest solicitation of Brother John R. Fiske, it was finally decided and arranged that I should hold a meeting at Caldwell, Kans.; so I arrived March 12th and began the meeting, and must say in all my long evangelistic career, I have never met with just such weather conditions before. Thirteen days of the month the wind blew forty miles per hour, one day reaching sixty; then came two days of rain. In the three weeks we have lost six meetings, and when we could go it made the attendance irregular.

Notwithstanding all these drawbacks, quite an interest was aroused, and a later meeting is now being planned, when I can see under favorable conditions quite a good work may be accomplished. The place of meeting is south of Caldwell, across the line in Oklahoma. The Dunkards built quite a commodious building, and as their congregation went down, it is used by all, with our people in the majority. Brother Oliver preached here for years, and baptized a goodly number who remain sound in the faith. Brethren Leeman, Crowe, Cleveland, and Heckman and others have labored here, so our views are pretty well known. By telling the old story in a little different way and in a manner not to offend, we were able to break down a good deal of prejudice and I am fully persuaded that some are now really in love with the truth.

The second Sunday of the meeting three car loads drove over from Arkansas City, a distance of forty miles, and it was a pleasure to meet these brethren of the one faith. Brother Reed came over early in the week and stayed several days, then his wife and daughter, Mrs. Lydia Chaplin, came. It is always a help to the speaker to see those of the faith in the congregation. I have corresponded for a number of years with Brother John R Fiske, and have tried before to arrange for a meeting, but could never make it connect before. Brother Fiske is a young man of ability, as a teacher, well versed in the Bible, and we hope the opportunity may come that he can use his ability in the further spread of the gospel. His wife, formerly Miss Mabel Chaplin, is above the average in zeal and ability, liked by the church and world alike, and in this way preaches some very good sermons. She took a relapse of the flu, and how me missed her playing and singing! We are very thankful that she is on the road to recovery. We made our home part of the time with Brother Wojoman. Sister Wojoman is a sister of Brother Fiske. Brother Wojoman is another man of ability, a living epistle read and known of all men. The only thing they can say against him is that he has a very peculiar belief. We spent some pleasant hours with Brother Elliot, and James Fiske. How motherly Sister Devarge is! She makes you feel just like you were at home. How much harder it would be to go out in the world and preach the gospel to an unappreciative people if it were not for those kindred spirits. The preacher, as a rule, is expected to be proof against the blues, no matter how much he loves his home and how long he is away from his loved ones. No difference how he is buffetted by a frowning world, he must always smile and drive away the blues from every one else. It would never do to swap stories of great sorrows, for he is not supposed to have any; but bless you, he has them more than any; for his range of accumulation is so much greater. Jesus was a man of sorrows, acquainted with grief, so he is a true sympathizer with us. Just so the minister; he needs your sympathy and encouragement just as much as you need his.

When the poor tired minister comes along, and he is made to feel at home, and things are made pleasant for him, you little know how he is encouraged, and the burden lightened and his heart cheered. Poor old Brother Paul knew what it meant when he wrote to the church to be given to hospitality: and I am proud of the fact that hospitality exists to a greater degree among our people, than any others in the world. I have nothing to complain of along this line, and I think it is to the honor of the household of God. I am truly glad I have had the pleasure of meeting the church here. I believe the meeting has been well worth the effort. My prayer is, they may press on. Bro. Oliver has labored here so long, but he is now compelled to lay down the work on account of advanced years: but he lays it down with a "well done," and still holds his place in the hearts of the brethren. So Brother Oliver, when you see the fruition of your labors in God's kingdom, you will be well paid for your sacrifice. May God help us all in like manner to be faithful.

EDITORIAL

BE SURE to commence the continued story by Helen Thomas, that begins with this issue.

THREE OF our young people, Marie, Jennie, and Helen Thomas, are studying to make themeslves ready for baptism—a most important step in their young lives They are earnestly looking for the soon coming of the Lord, and wish to be among those who will go forth to meet him.

WE WOULD appreciate it very much if Elnora and Nevada Walda, of Blackwell, Oklahoma, will contribute something of interest to this page. If possible as a "special contributor"; if not, we would be glad to hear from them once in a while.

ONE SUNDAY evening, a short time ago, we were having our weekly Bible class. Father Thomas was asking the children questions. At last he came to the word "repent." "Now children what does repent mean?" There was a long silence, then little Helen spoke up and said, "Why, I think repent means to 'right about face.'" The answer seemed to us to be so good, coming from a child just as she interpreted the meaning of the word, that we thought it was worthy of space on the page.

AND WHO could murmur or misdoubt
When God's great sunshine finds them out?

DON'T FEEL BLUE

OH I like to hear a feller who will whistle at his work,
I like to hear a worker who will hum a little tune;
If a feller's got some music, why he ain't so apt to shirk,
He can turn a bleak December into mild and merry June.

WHAT'S THE USE O' FEELIN' BLUE?

THERE IS sunshine here for you
Life is mostly what you make it,
Make it meller-like and true;
Care will often run away
If he finds you're feelin' gay.
Open up your music, brother, an' let it gaily play.
There's enough of glum and sorrow.
Of the kind that has to be.
Lots of it's imaginary; you kin whistle it away;
When you see ole trouble skulkin' in the lots behind a tree
Let him see you merry hearted,
Put your record on and play.

What's the use o' feelin' blue?
Nature's happy like an' true.
Help the world to be more cheerful,
An' 'twill do the same for you;
Blue is all right in the sky, all right in a maiden's eye.
But don't get it in your system;
It will kill you by an' by.

I WONDER

I WONDER if the Lord came tonight, where we would be; what doing. Would we be watching for him, or would we be merry-making and drunken with expensive wines? Would our hearts go forth to meet him in prayer, or would we be learning a new dance in the public dance halls? Would he find us reading the precious word of God, or deeply absorbed in the latest sensational novel? I wonder!

THE BOYHOOD OF JESUS

By Helen C. Thomas

THERE WAS once a time when there was no Christmas at all. One day God sent a messenger to his people that some day he would send his Son who should be their king, and teach them how to do right. There was a man named Joseph.One day Joseph and Mary, his wife, got ready to take a long journey to a town called Bethlehem. It was a long hard trip, and when they got there they were very tired. The streets were crowded and all of the inns. They looked everywhere for some place to rest in and eat. After they had looked for a long time, a man told them there was a cave on the hill, which was used for a barn. They were so tired that they went there. It was a clean barn with nice sweet hay, and so they sat down to eat. After they had eaten, they fixed a place to sleep. In the night a little baby boy was born.

(To be continued)

IF

IF BAPTISM might be performed merely by sprinkling some water on the head, as nearly all Orthodox and Catholic churches preach, then why, as we are told in Acts 8:38, did Philip take the eunuch down into the water, if a little water sprinkled on him would have done just as well?

MAN SAYS:

THAT THE wicked shall be thrown into a terrible place called hell, and a horrible being called the devil will keep a hot fire going for the purpose of torturing his victims through the ages of eternity. Horrible thought!

God Says:

For the wages of sin is death (Rom. 6:23); the soul that sinneth it shall die (Ezek. 18:4). the Lord preserveth all them that love him; but all the wicked will he destroy (Psa. 145:20). Which shall we believe, God or man?

A STORY

HOW CLOSE can we come to perfection? A little story comes to my mind that I once heard Father Thomas tell, to illustrate a lesson he was teaching us. The lesson was on perfection. None are perfect but God and his Son. It is impossible for a mortal being to be perfect. But some are nearer perfection than others; and no doubt we all wish we could be perfect. Hence the story.

On a beautiful moonlight night, Mr. Smith was sitting out on the porch enjoying the cool of the evening after a very warm day. Presently his attention was fixed on his small son. He was throwing stones up in the air, apparently at nothing. Still, he worked so steady and hard at it, and kept it up so long, that the father's curiosity was at last aroused.

"Why, Bobby," said he, "what are you doing?"

"I'm throwing stones at the moon," replied the boy.

"Well," laughed his dad, "you don't ever expect to hit it do you?"

"No," panted Bobby, as he slung another stone with all his might, "but I shall see how close I can get to it."

So it is with poor sinful mortals. Perfection is as hard for us to reach as the moon was for Bobby. Knowing this, can we, like Bobby, keep on trying until we see "just how close" we can come to it?

Slowly, steadily to and fro,
Swinging on life in its weary way,
Now at its ebb and now at its flow,
And the evening and morning makes up the day.

THOUGHTS FOR THE DAY

JUST TO be tender, just to be true,
Just to be glad the whole day through,
Just to be merciful, just to be mild,
Just to be trustful as a child,
Just to be good and kind and sweet,
Just to be helpful with willing feet;
Just to be cheerly when things go wrong,
Just to drive sadness away with a song.

NUGGETS OF GOLD

WITHOUT TRUTH there can be no other virtue.

A MAN who never makes mistakes, never makes anything.

GOD'S WILL, nothing more, nothing less, nothing else.

IT IS well to think well.
It is divine to act well.

"A SOFT answer turneth away wrath, but harsh words stirreth up anger."—Solomon.

IT IS a great thing to be trusted, but it is a far higher thing to be worthy of trust.

HAPPY IS the man that getteth wisdom, and the man that findeth understanding." Solomon.

"SUFFER THE little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."—Jesus.

THREE THINGS to love: courage, gentleness, and affection.

Three things to hate: cruelty, arrogance, and ingratitude.

"AFTER ALL, there are only three things
That are really worth while:
To be good, to do good,
And always to smile."

"THE SPACIOUS firmament on high,
With all the blue ethereal sky,
And spangled heavens, a shining frame,
Their Original proclaim:
The unwearied sun from day to day,
Doth his Creator's power display,
And publishes to every land
The work of an Almighty hand."

"OUT OF the hurt may be born a smile,
Out of the blow a kiss;
Somewhere the sun shines all the while,
Could we but rememebr this.
Out of my tears may a rainbow shine,
Out of my struggle, rest,
Somewhere God's hand reached down to mine,
Giving me what is best."

What Sort of a Brother Are You?

WHY CENSURE, condemn, or e'en criticize
The faults you may see in another?
Just take out the beam found in your own eye,
Then the mote will leave that of your brother.
You talk of his weaknesses, follies and sins;
He has them — that is doubtless too true—
But here is a question I'd like to propound,
What sort of a brother are YOU?

Do you hug to yourself the delusion absurd
That in you perfection is found?
Do you think yourself faultless? You know you are not;
Then why pull the other man down?
It will keep you quite busy safeguarding your thoughts,
Without troubling what others may do.
You'll agree that it will, knowing others will ask,
What sort of a brother are YOU?

Oh, the sins and the follies we find in ourselves!
Then why should we censure our brothers?
Though they have their weaknesses, many of them,
In ourselves we find there are others.
Look not for the man that posseses no faults,
For we all have them, many or few;
When condemning another don't forget 'twill be asked,
What sort of a brother are YOU?—Selected by Sister J. E. HOGARTH.

LOVE THAT is true must hush itself
And pain by its uselss cry;
For the young don't care and the old must bear,
And time goes by — goes by.

O LORD, how happy is the time
When from my weariness I climb
Close to thy tender breast;
For there abide a peace of thine
Man did not make and cannot mar.
Perfect I call thy plan,
I trust that thou shalt do.

DON'T HUNT after trouble, but look for success,
You'll find what you look for; don't look for distress.
If you see but your shadow, remember, I pray,
That the sun is still shining, but you're in the way.
Don't grumble, don't bluster, don't dream and don't shirk,
Don't think of your worries, but think of your work.
The worries will vanish, the work will be done,
No man sees his shadow who faces the sun.

MOST PEOPLE make their own God, and when finished to their liking, he is usually very indulgent, rather weak, near at hand when they want anything, but far away and out of sight, when they want to do wrong; such a god is as easy to serve as an idol made from stone.

Christ's Right to David's Throne

The Literal Nature of Prophecy Demonstrated and Applied

IS IT scriptural for us to say Christ has the right to the literal throne of David? We answer, yes. So saying, it is our duty to prove the assertion. We read in Luke 1:30-33: "And the angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary; for thou hast found favor with God. And behold thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shall call his name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

Let us see how far we can travel with the so-called religious people of the world. We ask first, Was the angel that appeared to Mary a literal angel? I hear everyone say, Yes. Then are we all agreed on that point. Next was Mary a literal woman? You say, Yes. Agreed again. Was the son she bore a literal son? Yes. All agreed again. Was he literally great? Yes. Was he literally the Son of God? Yes. Well then we have all agreed thus far. How nice it is to be in agreement; it makes us all friends. But sad as it is friends must sometimes part.

The angel said, ' 'And the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David." Was this literal also ? I hear one say, "Well no, not the literal throne of David. It is a spiritual throne." But let me ask if all the above is literal, and no one would dare take any other position, what right have you to say the balance is spiritual? Where is the authority for so sudden a departure from the literal interpretation ? The fact is, there is no authority for it. There is not a Scripture in the whole Bible that will lend a semblance of proof to such a statement We know that for 400 years Israel had no visible king. God was their king and ruled them by Judges. But the time came when they wanted a king like other nations. They made the request to Samuel. He grieved and went to the Lord with the matter. God told him not to grieve; they had not rejected him but God. "They have rejected me from being their king." So God himself says he was their king. Then God had a kingdom on earth once. He told Samuel to anoint Saul as the first king, and he did.

Now here we have a real king established on a literal throne. After Saul was removed David took the throne. Now let your mind and vision run back to those days and view David sitting on his throne. Keep your eyes there and then lend your ears to the words of God to David while sitting on this visible throne:

"And as since the time I commanded judges to be over my people Israel, and have caused them to rest from all thine enemies, also the Lord telleth thee that he will make thee an house. And when thy days be fulfilled and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom. He shall build an house for my name, and I will establish the throne of his kingdom for ever. I will be his Father and he shall be my Son. If he commit iniquity I will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men. But my mercy shall not depart away from him as I took it from Saul whom I put away before thee. And thine house and thy kingdom shall be established forever before thee, thy throne shall be established forever."

Do we for a moment think David misunderstood this language ? He knew God was talking with him about the throne and kingdom he was then occupying. As proof he went away and prayed, and said, "Thou hast spoken of thy servant's house for a great while to come." This covenant then was made with David concerning his literal throne. He so understood it, and was never corrected for so believing.

In Psa. 89:1-4 this covenant is referred to in this language: "I will sing of the mercies of the Lord forever: with my mouth will I make known thy faithfulness to all generations. For I have said, mercy shall be built up forever: thy faithfulness shalt thou establish in the very heavens. I have made a covenant with my chosen. I have sworn unto David my servant, thy seed will I establish forever, and build up thy throne to all generations." Verses 34-37 say:

"My covenant will I not break nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips. Once have I sworn by my holiness that I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure forever, and his throne as the sun before me. It shall be established forever as the moon and as a faithful witness in heaven."

God calls the moon his faithful witness to the covenant he made with David; and until the moon ceases to rotate in its orbit we may be assured God has not forgotten this covenant. He pointedly tells us he will not lie unto David. More than that: he will not alter it. Yet people have altered it and, of course, are destined to meet with trouble, trouble from which they will hardly be able to extricate themselves.

This same covenant is again referred to in Psa. 132:11-14: "The Lord hath sworn in truth unto David: he will not turn from it: of the fruit of thy body will I sit upon thy throne. If thy children will keep my covenant and my testimony that I shall teach them, their children shall also sit upon thy throne for evermore. For the Lord hath chosen Zion; he hath desired it for his habitation. This is my rest for ever; here will I dwell; for I have desired it."

This Scripture locates the dwelling place of our king in Mount Zion. It is important to notice here that after David left the throne, Solomon took it, and after him Jereboam, Rehoboam, and a succession of kings, down to the days of Zedekiah, who last reigned as king of Israel. This line of kings became iniquitous one after another, until God finally determined to overthrow the kingdom. Now let us hear what God said to this last king. Note the difference in the language to him and David.

"Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Because ye have made your iniquity to be remembered in that your transgressions are discovered, so that in all your doings your sins do appear; because I say that ye are come to remembrance ye shall be taken with the hand. And thou profane wicked prince of Israel, whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end. Thus saith the Lord God, Remove the diadem, and takeoff the crown: This shall not be the same; exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it, and it shall be no more until he comes whose right it is, and I will give it him" (Ezek. 21:24-27).

We note in the above Scripture that the kingdom was overturned because of sin and iniquity. The covenant made to David promises a perpetual kingdom if they obeyed Gód and kept his statutes and judgments. This they did not do. But does this thwart God's purpose ? Certainly not. But if modern interpretation is correct the perpetuity of the kingdom has been defeated. But a careful reading of the above Scripture reveals the fact that because of this sin in forsaking God's statutes the kingdom was suspended for a time only. God has told us in plain words that none can mistake, no difference how much they would like to, that it was overturned "until he comes whose right it is, and I will give it him."

Let us not try to get around this Scripture but try to find who it is that has a right to the throne and then we shall know in his own good time God will give it to him as he has said.

The person that cannot see that fact, his mentality and his honesty are doubtful. We know the whole mission of Jesus was to prove to the Jews his right to David's throne. He employed every means to prove that to his people. Go back to the head of this article and read the Scripture there, and see if the angel did not tell Mary her son was the one who had the right to the throne of David.

Let us now turn to Isa. 9:6 7: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulders: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, The Eeverasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom, to order it and establish it with judgment and justice from ehnceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this." This establishes beyond question the right of Christ to David's throne. As David never had a throne in heaven, Jesus must surely come again and rebuild that throne and kingdom. See Amos 9:11: "In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the breeches thereof, and I will raise up his ruins, and I will build it as in the days of old." This has never as yet been done. Therefor it remains to be fulfilled.

The first conference was held at Jerusalem At that conference the subject of the gospel being preached to the Gentiles was discussed. I can see James sitting there taking in all that was said and waiting till they were all through; then he had his say. Just listen to his language. He remembered the prophecy of Amos quoted above and said: "Men and brethren, heaken to me." Now let us all listen.

"Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name. And to this agree the words of the prophet, as it is written, After this will I return and build again the tabernacle of David that is fallen down: and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up" (Acts 15:14-16). We learn here that God is now visiting the Gentiles as a nation to take out a people for his name, and after that Jesus, who has the right to David's throne, will return and build it, and a new order of things will be ushered in of which we cannot speak now. Our only object is to establish the fact of Christ's right to David's throne.

When will Christ take his throne ? In Luke 19: 11, 12 Jesus teaches us that he was to go away and come again to occupy his throne and kingdom. In Matt. 25:31 the Master says, "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit on the throne of his glory." He has never yet come in that way, but everything now points to the fact that at no distant time he will return and occupy the throne of David and bring peace to this earth. This event alone can accomplish this much desired event. Oh how the voices of God's children should be going up in solemn petition, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is heaven." Are we ready to receive our king ? This a more solemn question than I fear we realize. No peace till then. If the league of nations can accomplish it object then Jesus does not need to come. Oh brethren, look away from all such futile attempts to bring peace and justice to the nations. This belong to Jesus. Then hail the King!

ALMUS ADAMS.

Responsibility of Enlightened Rejectors

THE SECOND DEATH

By the following quotation from Brother Parker's article, he affords me an opportunity to vindicate the truth taught in the New Testament in reference to the second death. Brother Parker says: "This same truth is taught in baptism. All who would be in Christ must voluntarily submit to death (in symbol). It is not the second death that is so symbolized. This is shown by the fact that they are raised from the dead (in symbol) to walk in newness of life. By one man sin entered into the world, and the penalty followed, natural death. By one man the atonement was made not by abrogating God's law, but by suffering the penalty, natural death."

Death administered or inflicted because of judicial order is not regarded in common law nor in the Bible as natural death. Death by judicial order in the Bible is the result of God's displeasure because of the disobedience of the one suffering death. From the teaching throughout the Bible concerning death for the transgression of God's law, we ask the question, What kind of death did Christ die ? What was the mode or form of his death ? Christ died the death of a malefactor because of the judicial decision of Pilate; and Paul says in Gal. 3:13, that he became a curse for us: and that form of his death was the result of what is stated in verse ten, viz., "Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them." The prophet says, "He was cut off from the land of the living; for the transgressions of my people was he stricken." And again, "He bare the sin of many, and made intercession for the transgressors." It was for sinners that Christ suffered as Paul clearly states in Rom. 5:8: "But God commendeth his love towards us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." The Bible no where teaches that Christ died for himself; it is always for sinners. In the purpose of God Christ did not die under penalty for himself, for had he, then his resurrection would have been impossible; but being a representative death for the sins which he figuratively bare and which belonged to others, death could not hold him.

We have now found out the mode or form of Christ's death, which was that of a sin-offering and that he was not such an offering for himself, but that it was a representative affair entirely for others in relation to sin. It is into this death of Christ as a melafactor, as a curse under law, although a perfectly innocent victim, that a repentant sinner is baptized (Rom. 6:3). Truly, as Brother Parker says, "in symbol." The symbol represents the kind of death deserved by the one who is baptized. The mode of death determines whether death is for punishment or because of natural mortality. The death of an innocent infant is a natural death. God uses baptism as a proper symbol to secure from the repentant sinner confession of sin and the just deserts due because of sin, so that the punishment due to such a sin-nor can be set aside or remitted nor inflicted. The penalty is not paid nor inflicted. What is set aside, done away with, but a judicial death that was due to the person because of sin: and what is the second death but death for unforgiven sin? Brother Parker says that it is not the second death that is symbolized, and the reason given is that there is a symbolic resurrection, which could not take place if the penalty of the second death was inflicted. The symbol does not teach the satisfaction of the penalty, but it does teach that the penalty of a judicial death is deserved, which is the second death, for no one will suffer death as the wages of sin this side of the judgment seat of Christ.

THE FORGIVENESS OF SIN

The reason why baptism nor the death of Christ as a malefactor did not pay the penalty, is because sin, the penalty belonging to sin, is forgiven, the punishment not inflicted. God's method of salvation is by forgiving the transgressor because of acquired righteousness. Symbolic resurrection takes place because the symbolic death did not satisfy the penalty, but confesses it as due. Death as penalty has no claim upon the forgiven sinners, for such are saints. Baptism puts the emphasis upon the remission of deserved penalty, not upon the execution of deserved penalty. The execution of deserved penalty cuts off all salvation, be that penalty natural death or the second death. Paul says in Rom. 4:25, "That Christ was delivered for our trespasses and was raised for our justification." This statement covers baptism. Justification is the great thing, and it can come only to a sinner by forgiveness; there is no other way, because death in order to be penalty must be a continuous thing. Simply dying is not penalty. "The wages of sin is death," says Paul. It is a state of everlasting unconsciousness and non-existence. "Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power" (2 Thess. 1:9). Resurrection unto eternal life is justification: and it says that death as penalty had no claim to hold the forgiven one. This arrangement of God in reference to death, satisfies justice and good common sense. Saints can die without fear because the death they die is not penalty nor punishment. Their justification by resurrection is an assured thing; and so when they are raised and changed, they will be able to say as Paul represents them as saying, "O death, where is thy victory? O death, where is thy sting?" (R. V.).

THE BROTHER'S "GREAT PRINCIPLE" ANSWERED

Now let us look at Brother Parker's "Great Principle." He says: "In Rom 6:7, Paul announces a great principle that governs all law, human and divine: 'He that is dead is free from sin.' In other words, he that has suffered the penalty of law is free from the law." The Revised Version reads, "For he that hath died is justified from sin." Undoubtedly Paul here refers to Christ risen from the dead, and not Christ in the tomb. It was Christ risen again that was the justified one. Christ's redemption from death was his justification, was the proof that death had no claim upon him; it was the proof that he as the resurrected, personally, had never sinned, that he was innocent of sin when he died, he was justified from sin and therefore the penalty for sin, death, was annulled.

The resurrection of Christ's brethren unto eternal life also justifies them from death as penalty, and therefore from sin that is the cause of the penalty. It is the proof that when they died they were free from sin, that the death they died was not a punishment. I think that in this reply to Brother Parker, it has been established that death not enforced by judicial sentence of God or his Son Jesus Christ in reference to the posterity of Adam, is not a penalty for sin; that it is simply a natural occurrence, allowed to be so because of man's moral condition at the present time.

Only one more section of the friendly criticism is necessary to consider, which is the following: "Brother Strickler tells us that in the case of those who are ignorant the penalty for sin will never be enforced. This shows us how far wrong premises will carry us. In his view natural death is not the penalty for sin; and as the ignorant do not suffer any other sort of death, they go free. In this he seems to stultify God's law of sin and death. God is represented as enacting a law which he will never enforce against the great mass of humanity who die in ignorance." In my answer to this all that concerns me is, what have the oracles of God to say on the subject. The prophet says, "To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them" (Isa. 8:20). We have proven in our articles that have appeared in The Restitution that all mankind because of their sins, that they have incurred the penalty of God's moral law of sin and death, which Paul abbreviates to the statement, "The wages of sin is death"; that when this death penalty is inflicted it will be at the judgment seat of Christ, except in those cases in the history of mankind, where God has already brought judicial punishment upon the objects of his displeasure. We must now prove that the part of the race of Adam that is ignorant of God's law, that although it has incurred the penalty due because of "wicked works," which is death to be inflicted after judgment, that the incurred penalty will never be inflicted natural death sufficiently taking care of their case and preventing them from doing any further harm in God's universe. There is one very important law of God declared in the Scriptures that must not be overlooked, for by it God governs his dealings with his moral creatures. This law is stated in James 2:13: "For judgment is without mercy to him that hath showed no mercy: mercy glorieth against judgment."

David said, "The earth, O Lord, is full of thy mercy." "He retaineth not his anger for ever because he delighteth in mercy" (Micah 7:18). Christ refers to the mercy of God when he says, "For he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust." On God's dealings with Israel he carried out this law of mercy which acts as a check upon judgment or the strict enforcement of law. "But he being full of compassion forgave their iniquity, and destroyed them not: yea, many a time turned he his anger away, and did not stir up all his wrath." After making this statement, the reason is given for not enforcing the penalty of his broken law: "For he remembered that they were but flesh; a wind that passeth away, and cometh not again" (Psa. 78:38, 39).

GOD'S LAWS NOT LIKE THE MEDES'

God's laws are not such as those of the Medes and Persians; in the enforcement of them he controls himself by circumstances, and his wisdom is so great that he knows when to make exceptions to the rule and introduce other law. When Christ ascended up into heaven, the natural law of gravitation was overcome by a law that prevented the working of gravitation in that particular case. There is no contradiction in any of the laws of God; all function harmoniously, but not the same way all the time. These statements are illustrated in Jeremiah 18th chapter: "At what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, to pluck up, and to pull down, and to destroy it; if that nation, against whom I have pronounced turn from their evil, I will repent of the evil that I thought to do unto them. And at what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, to build and to plant it: if it do evil in my sight, that it obey not my voice, then I will repent me of the good, wherewith I said I would benefit them."

In human law where the case is clear that it has been broken, as in the case of murder, the penalty is enforced, even if there is true repentance. God's automatic natural laws function relentlessly and ceaselessly regardless of moral conditions. In both divine and natural law the fact remains uncontradicted that when it is broken designedly or in total ignorance, the penalty is incurred: it hangs over the transgressor; the Bible clearly shows that there are two reasons why God will not inflict the incurred penalty; and to the evidence every one ought to bow, for the evidence is logical, reasonable, consistent and scriptural, and there is no way to avoid it.

THE EVIDENCE OF REASON AND SCRIPTURE

Paul says in Rom. 4:15, "But where there is no law neither is there transgression." This is a reasonable and righteous order. Transgression as defined in the Bible is sin. It follows therefore that where there is sin, there is law; the knowledge of there being a law, does not enter into the facts in the case. In Rom. 3:9, Paul says, "We have before proved both Jew and Gentile, that they are all under sin"; and from what he further says, we know that he means by the use of theword "sin," transgressions. All have sinned from Adam down to the present time; but all have not sinned under the knowledge of God's law. Such laws as the Mosaic and the law of Christ, were enacted to teach what sin is and to turn men from sin unto righteousness. They both were laws specially promulgated and commanded, and of course where there was no knowledge of them, there would be no knowledge that they were transgressed. Every thing depends upon the knowledge of right and wrong from God's stand point.

So in the working out of the moral law of sin and death, the statement that "where there is no law, there is no transgression," in the application means that where there is no knowledge of the law: although technically not so. The apostle says "For by the law is the knowledge of sin"; and in Gal. 3:19 he says, "It was added because of transgressions"; or as he further says, it was a schoolmaster; it taught what sin was. Now with these explanations we will submit the following evidence:

Acts 14:16: "Who in times past suffered all nations to walk in their own ways.'

Acts 17:30: "The times of ignorance therefore God overlooked."

James 4:17: "Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin."

Rom. 5:12: "Sin is not imputed where there is no law."

John 9:41: "If ye were blind, ye should have no sin; but now ye say, We see: your sin remaineth."

Prov. 21:16: "The man that wandereth out of the way of understanding shall remain in the congregation of the dead."

Psa. 49:20: "Man that is in honor, and understandeth not, is like the beasts that perish."

Lev. 5:4; "Or if a soul swear, rashly with his lips to do evil, or to do good, whatsoever that he shall pronounce with an oath, and it be hid from him; when he kneweth it, then he shall be guilty in one of these."

With the knowledge of his guilt he is commanded to offer up a sacrifice to make atonement for his guilt; but just so long as he was ignorant that he was guilty, there was nothing to do, and should death come before the knowledge, he would not be held accountable for the transgression. "Mercy," as James says, "rejoiceth against judgment."

But why argue further or try to explain, in the face of this testimony that has already been presented, although the evidence has been by no means exhausted. To hold a person responsible for sin, when there is no consciousness of it, would not be just nor merciful, when natural death can step in and take care of such wicked ones and prevent them from doing any harm in the universe. The mass of humanity know nothing about the truth and the law of God, and are as David says in Psa. 88:5 "Cast off among the dead, like the slain that lie in the grave, whom thou remembrest no more, and they are cut off from thy hand."

Respectfully submitted for prayful consideration.

ALLEN D. STRICKLER.

(Concluded)

A MAN once met a small lad staggering along the road under the heavy burden of carrying a smaller boy, who was unable to walk. The man said to him, "Is he not too heavy for you to carry?" "Oh, no," said the lad; "he's not heavy, you see he is my brother."

IF THOU art conscious that thine act was a noble one, do not cheapen it by going abroad in search of praise; one word of appreciation unsolicited, is worth more than a volume written by request. Let another man praise thee, and not thine own mouth.

A living soul is a "natural body" (1 Cor. 15:44, 45). Soma psuchikon.

—o—

The Hebrew word translated death in the Old Testament is "meth," and signifies to fail, to faint. Consequently death must mean a failure or cessation of life: the cessation of our present life.

—o—

The word "mortality" comes from the Latin root "mors," death, and signifies deathfulness. Mortality is an earthy body in living action—life manifested through an earthy body, and therefore, from the construction of the body, terminable life.

Physical Configuration of the Jordan Valley

I HAVE just read a scientific work in which the author claims to have made a geological examination of Palestine and neighborhood. In a way which I am not competent to answer he claims to demolish the Bible story of the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah in the time of Abraham. He says the depression of the Jordan valley and Dead Sea was formed ages ago in the epoch when the ancient sea-beds were volcanically upheaved, forming the chains of Lebanon and the backbone of the Holy Land. When these chains were elevated, the great crack which now forms the Jordan Valley was the result of the shearing of the strata, which left the wall of Moab standing up, while the slopes on the west of the valley slid down below the sea level. How do you explain this discrepancy in view of your dogmatic claim of verbal inspiration?

Editorial Comment

OUR INTERROGATOR must learn to read scientific works with great caution. Their speculations and inductions are usually dubious. Nothing becomes sooner obsolete: nothing in modern study is so much like a chamelion. The latest discoveries are continually discrediting foregoing theories: it is hard work to keep in the fashion scientifically. It is wonderful how ready people are to gulp down scientific foolishness as "gospel," and better.

Our correspondent's anxieties may be eased when we admit that if the geological theory of which he speaks is true, it does not conflict in the least with the Bible account of the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah. That account does not say that the valley of the Dead Sea was formed by the destruction of those cities. The contrary is the fact. The Bible reveals the existence of that valley before that event. It tells, in Gen. 14:1-3, of a military alliance between the king of Sodom and the king of Gomorrah and other kings to resist the encroachments of Amraphel and his allies. It says that all these were "joined together in the vale of Siddim, which is the Salt Sea." At the time of this writing, which was before the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, the Salt Sea existed. Here, then, is "the vale" long before Sodom's overthrow. Even earlier than this we read of "the plains of the Jordan." This must mean the river Jordan, and necessitates the depression or bed of the river, without which the river could not have existed. Shortly after Abraham arrived in the land the separation with Lot took place, and on that occasion we read: "And Lot lifted up his eyes and beheld all the plains of the Jordan, that it was well watered everywhere, before the Lord destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, even as the garden of the Lord . . .; Then Lot choose him all the plain of the Jordan" (Gen. 13:8-11). Then if geology has discovered that the valley of the Jordan and of the Dead Sea existed before the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, that is just what the Bible says! There is no conflict here between the Bible and geology. Probably the physical configuration of the Holy Land was prepared before the Adamic era; but it is also true that Sodom and Gomorrah were destroyed in the days of Abraham. Christ sanctions the story, and he knew.

Matt. 27:5 and Acts 1:18 Compared and Harmonized

I HAVE a friend who claims that the account given by Matthew and Luke in Acts about the death of Judas is a contradiction. I wish you would indicate the way in which you harmonize the two accounts.

MATTHEW SAYS Judas hanged himself: Luke says in Acts that he burst asunder. There is not any necessary contradiction between the two accounts. The statement of Matthew that he hanged himself is confirmed in Acts by Luke saying that his bowels gushed out. Only a fall from a considerable height could possibly result in such a catastrophe, and the requisite height in the case is furnished in the fact that he hanged himself, and especially so if he suspended himself over a precipice, as seems likely from the fact that "the field of blood" is still shown on the steep south face of the ravine of Hinnom (Faussett), and which is still used as a potters' field, and which, being "overhung with one precipice and looking down another into the glen below" (Whitney), supplied the necessary distance required to burst a body asunder in the fall. The two passages are mutually explanatory, for when put together, they furnish all the details in the case. A glance at the two accounts will show their harmony.

The hanging is in perfect agreement with the remorse with which Judas was seized indicated by the words, "I have sinned in that I have betrayed innocent blood . . . . and he cast down the pieces of silver in the temple, and departed, and went and hanged himself." This is true to nature, whereas there is no moral connection between Judas' self-accusing state of mind and his "falling headlong," because "falling" suggests accident, not purpose. By placing the two accounts together in chronological order, we have first, purpose, indicated so clearly in Matthew, "he went and hanged himself." Next, we have the accident which followed, fulfilling the account in Acts about his "falling headlong." Finally, in Luke 4:29, where the writer says the infuriated mob led Jesus to the brow of the hill, whereon their city was built that they might "cast him down headlong." Here we have "purpose" expressed by "cast," and the word "headlong," which only Luke uses, which suggests that these were both cases of going over the brow of the hill, one on purpose, if it had succeeded, and the other by accident. To endeavor to harmonize all parts of the Bible is divine, but to try and make one part clash with another is human and devilish; for as a divided kingdom cannot stand, no more can a divided and contradictory book.

Why Christ Suffered

Pemmican Notes of the Editor's Sermon

SURELY HE hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem his stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed (Isa. 53:4, 5).

FROM A Messianic standpoint this is a most remarkable chapter. The eunuch's baptism recorded in Acts 8 was the outcome of a perusal of these words of Isaiah. In answer to the question, "Of whom speaketh the prophet this?" Philip began at the same Scripture and "preached unto him Jesus." The two divisions of our subject are:

1. The apprehended cause of Christ sufferings; and
2. The real cause of all his affliction.

That heavy afflictions indicate God's displeasure for enormous sins we will find to be a Jewish fable and a heathen superstition. "And Jesus answering said unto them, Suppose ye that these Galilaens, were sinners above all the Galileans, because they suffered such things? Or those eighteen, upon whom the power of Siloam fell and slew them, think ye that they were sinners above all men that dwelt in Jerusalem?" (Luke 13:2-4). How prevalent the reply, "Except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish," when his hearers supposed that those afflictions had been sent because the sufferers were monuments of iniquity. Read John 9:2 about the man blind from his birth, and Acts 28:1-6 about the change of mind in a superstitious and heathen pepole with regard to Paul, and see how they considered that great calamities followed on the heels of enormous sins. This interpretation was naturally applied by the populace to Christ when he suffered, but Isaiah says he was judicially smitten by Jehovah. In the face of all his adversaries Christ challenges those who say, "God has forsaken him," by asking, "Which of you convinceth me of sin?" (John 8:46; Psa. 41:7; 71:10, 11).

Thus Christ divorced calamity from sin, and Pilate vindicated him when he said, "I find no fault in this man." Read Luke 23:4, 14, 22. These are the the reasons men evolved from Christ's sufferings. In this way did they think that because of his great afflictions he was in the disfavor of God. So into smoke goes Jewish fables, heathen superstitions, and Christian Science postulates; for the real cause of his sufferings originated in our sins, our iniquities, our infirmities, our miseries (Matt. 8:16, 17; 1 Pet. 2:24). Christ gave an expiation for our guilt. He could not partake of our sin, our sufferings, and not partake or participate in the same result (Rom. 8:20; 5:12; 2 Cor. 5:21). By bearing our sin, our infirmities, our guilt, our estrangement, he suffered for the effecting of our peace, and having made peace (Col. 1:20), he renovated the nature that sinned. Having our nature he could transact redemption in the fallen state and purify the polluted sinful nature that we might live by his righteousness. Look not at the apprehended causes of Christ's sufferings, but at the real causes which put us as penitents under everlasting obligation to love our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ who has suffered so much and done so much for us. "Who his own self bare our sins in his body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes ye were healed" (1 Pet. 2:24).

RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO.—GENTLEMEN:

A FRIEND handed me several copies of The Restitution. I was certainly delighted with them and wished for hundreds more.

I want to teach for Jesus. I want to go to the bottom and learn all I can possibly learn from his precious word. The Lord wants me to work for him. I have been a school teacher for about twenty years. If Jesus will spare my life two years more I will devote my time to the study of his word and prepare myself for the work. I have been a church member for about twenty-five years, but only a church member. I never was satisfied with my baptism. I united with the Presbyterian Church, but believe in immersion. I would unite with your church, but there is none here. You are all right and the truth is made plain. I wish I could talk with you a few minutes.

I ask you to send me The Restitution and all the literature on the Bible you can spare me. May God add his blessing.

J. A. BUCKMASTER.

DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:

MY TIME expired in March for The Restitution, and I have intended to write and renew my subscription for some time but it seems the cares of this life are getting worse and worse. One can hardly have time for any thing but just work to keep the body alive. I do not feel as though I can do without The Restitution. If I did not get anything else from it but Brother Almus Adams' monthly report, it would pay me for the whole year's subscription. It will be one year in June since the children and I drove 225 miles in our car to attend the Felido Conference conducted by Brother Darby. We went for the purpose of having the three oldest children baptized. On Sunday I saw them baptized into the all-saving name of Christ. There is no other name given under heaven among men whereby we must be saved. We had a lovely time while there, also enjoyed the trip very much. We saw some very beautiful country on our way. I would like to tell all about it, but it would take too long. We still live at Sunnyside, Wash. If any of the faith wish to write to us we will be glad to hear from them.

Your sister looking for the soon coming king.

LUCY J. LAPP.

DEAR ONES OF THE FAITH:

I MUST tell you of the meeting Brother Adams has been holding here near Randolph, Mo., explaining the gospel and warning the people of the time to come. The only result so far is he has set the people to thinking and reading, which we hope will in the near future lead some to Christ.

How can any one hear the gospel explained as plainly as Brother Adams explains it and not understand or look to see if it is right. Sister Lawrence, of Raymore, was with us a few days. Words could not express the gratitude we have for the influence she had over our household and neighborhood as well. Sister Calkins, of Kansas City, Kans., was with us over Sunday. She is very dear to us, as she was the one who gave us the light of the true gospel. My parents, Brother and Sister Carpenter, attended nearly every night, although they had two miles to come. During this feast of good meetings here came a sweet letter of ten pages from Auntie Winee, full of gospel news and words of encouragement.

I feel I should not call myself isolated any more after these good blessings. Let us write to each other more often; it binds us closer and gives us strength to withstand the evils of the world.

Your sister in Christ,

MRS. LETTA MORGAN.

THESE SIX things doth the Lord hate: yea, seven are an abomination unto him: a proud look, a lying tongue, and hands that shed innocent blood, an heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, feet that be swift running to mischief, a false witness that speaketh lies, and he that soweth discord among brethren.

A VERY bright, very sharp butcher knife lies enticingly near the edge of the table. Two bright eyes spy it lying there, and two busy hands reach up, up, until the pretty prize is almost within their grasp. Then comes mother, just in time, to remove the danger from the reach of those tiny fingers. Two bright eyes fill with tears. The wee mind no doubt wonders why such pretty things must always be denied, or removed from reach. Mother knows why!

A few years later, our babe has grown in age, size, and intelligence. He knows now why sharp knives or other dangerous articles should be kept from a boy's reach But he comes to father some day in early winter, asking to be allowed to try the ice on the pond. Father fears the ice is not safe, and refuses the request. Anger and rebellion appear in the boyish face and he thinks to himself, "I can't see why he won't let me. Jimmy Jones is skating on it. I wish I was big. I'd do as I pleased." But father knows why. So did our boy, the next day, for alas, poor Jimmy Jones fell through the ice, and before help could reach him he was drowned.

So all of us have passed through those stages of life, and now we have reached manhood and womanhood; and still we ask each day for our Father in heaven for many things. As long as our prayers are answered, all seems well; but just as soon as we pray for something and do not receive it, just as soon do we become rebellious. We question God's wisdom, and ask why? or when? Is not God all wisdom? Does he not know when we, in our weak, ignorant mortal nature, do ask for those things which are not for our good? Oh, why can we not see that as the parent must refuse the plea of his child for those things which he knows are harmful, so must our Father in heaven refuse our petition when we ask for things that are not for our good. So young people, let us put our faith in him who can see what is best for us, and instead of asking, "Why?" let us rather say, "God knows why."

ELSIE GRUBBS, why not join us on this page? You say "you cannot write as others do." I may differ with you there, my dear, for I thought you wrote a very nice letter. If, as you say "you believe the truth, and understand the Bible fairly well," I feel sure you would do credit to our page as a special contributor. You also say that "you are trying to teach others, but they will not listen to you." If you will visit us, here on the "Young People's Page," we will all listen with pleasure to anything you may say. Try it, and see.

THE BOYHOOD OF JESUS

Part 2

AT THE time the baby Jesus was born, there was a wicked king named Herod. He heard about Jesus. So Herod tried to find Jesus and kill him. His mother and father found out about it and they took the little child to another city where Herod could not find him.

When Jesus was quite a big boy they took him to the temple. When they got ready to go home they thought he was with some friends, but after they had gone a long way his mother began to look for him. When she could not find him she told Joseph, and he and Mary, the mother, went back to the city to look for their boy. They found Jesus in the temple talking with the wise men and teachers. But when he saw his mother he left the wise men and went home with her.

THE BIBLE TREE OF OUR FAITH

WE belive in one
God, the Almighty, everlasting Creator of the universe. The all-wise
Father, who is able, and will fulfil the great and precious promises made to humanity in the gospel message. We believe the Lord Jesus Christ is the Savior promised to the world and the only begotten Son of God. That he is heir to David's throne, and in due time will reign as King over the world; that those of us who are worthy will reign with him as kings and priests over the nations. We believe that Jesus died on the cross as love's greatest sacrifice for sin. That all who seek for forgiveness through belief in the gospel, repentance, and baptism, may have their past sins forgiven and become heirs to eternal life in the kingdom of God.
We believe that Christ was buried and rose again
the third day: that he came forth from the grave the first fruits of the resurrection possessing immortal life; that he still lives and is at the right hand of the Father as our high priest and mediator through whom we can approach the Father in our troubles, and through confession and prayer obtain forgiveness of our sins. We believe that in time, Jesus is coming again to this earth
to take poses-
sion of the throne of David; to raise his brethren and give them immortal life.
that he will then set up his kingdom on earth with
Jerusalem as its capital. We believe that the Bible is the inspired word of God, and that there is wisdom, knowledge, holiness, and
LOVE IN EVERY CHAPTER OF THE COMPLETE WORD OF GOD

I WONDER

WHEN THE sun shines, when we have good health, and no great sorrow or trouble in our lives; when we have an abundance of the good things of this life, besides many friends, do we stop to think of the One to whom we are responsible for these things and thank him for his great goodness to us? I wonder!

JUST FOR TODAY

Lord, for tomorrow and its needs
I do not pray;
Keep me, my God, from stain of sin,
Just for today.

Let me both diligently work
And duly play;
Let me be kind in word and deed
Just for today.

Let me be slow to do my will,
Prompt to obey;
Help me to sacrifice myself
Just for today.

Let me no wrong nor idle word
Unthinking say;
Set thou a seal upon my lips,
Just for today.

Let me in season, Lord, be grave,
In season gay;
Let me be faithful to thy grace,
Just for today.

Lord, for tomorrow and its needs
I do not pray;
But keep me, guide me, love me, Lord,
Just for today.

MAN SAYS:

That the righteous will be rewarded at their death with a quick trip to heaven, there to play on golden harps before the throne of God through all the ages of eternity.

God Says:

Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom (Luke 12:32). The saints or righteous shall judge the world (1 Cor. 6.2). Who shall we believe, God or man?

NUGGETS OF GOLD

A GENEROUS heart will scorn a pleasure which gives pain.

BUT VERY few who form the habit of deserting the truth in small matters, can be trusted in matters of importance.

Soul: Creation or Traduction

IT IS claimed by almost universal consent, particularly by those called orthodox Bible expositors, that man is a dual being, consisting of body and soul, two separate and distinct entities—some say triune, body soul, and spirit--yet united while the body lives in one being. That the body is mortal, subject to death and decay, and in the death state knows and feels nothing. When the once corporal being is consumed by corruption it becomes as though it never had been an organized and energized living being; and unless reformed and made to live again by resurrection, remains forever in oblivion.

That the soul entity of this dual man is immortal, indestructible, and is the thinking intelligent, responsible, guiding and ruling part; controlling the actions of said dual being. When the flesh and blood organization ceases its vital functions, the soul is released, quits the body and wings its flight to realms other than the earth. "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was; and the spirit (Hebrew, Ruach, wind or breath) shall return to God who gave it" (Eccl. 12:7).

If this teaching is scientific and scriptural, we by research should be able to demonstrate when the said dual being came into existence. Science is silent. Then let us go to the Scripture for the information we seek. The first living soul of the Adamic race was of dust formation, and energized by the breath of life from the Creator (Gen. 2:7), capable of continued life, or subject to death according to the will of the Creator. Deity must be honored in and by his handiwork, and required of man obedience to his behests; gave the man a simple law the infraction of which would result in death. As the tribe of Levi paid tithes to Melchisedec, being in the loins of Abraham when Melchisedec met him (Heb. 7:9, 10), in like manner the whole human race was in the loins of Adam when he transgressed and brought on himself and each of his posterity the penalty of death.

All the days of Adam, the dust formed, and breath or spirit animated living soul, was 930 years, and he died. Not that only a part of him died, but all that had been created and made to live 930 years, died. Adam's children inherit his nature, and each in due time also ceases to live. A Scripture statement is souls come out of the loins of the father (Gen. 46:26; Exod. 1:5). If soul is a distinct entity from the body, and is immortal, it is in order to ask when said immortal soul came into existence. Was it an immortal soul before conception by the mother? If not, at what period did the immortal soul begin to exist? Is there an immortal soul to continue in existence if the child is born dead? If souls are immortal in the loins of the male, what is the status of the multiplied billions of souls engendered in the loins of the sons of Adam which never had a body provided by or through motherhood? Scripture testimony makes it clear that "spirit and soul and body" (1 Thess. 5:23) is one complete organized, living being, energized by animation from the Creator. When the organization is dissolved, all is resolved back to its original condition and ceases to be an entity. A future life for the once living soul is dependent on having name written in God's book of remembrance, and will be given to the approved in the day when he makes up his jewels (Mal. 3:16, 17).

To Help Homeless Jews

PALESTINE IS TO BE RESTORED
FOR THE MILLIONS IN EUROPE

RESTORATION OF Palestine for the millions of homeless Jews of Europe is the primary aim of the Zionist movement of America, according to H. Fromenson of New York City, who addressed a group of men workers of the local Zionist district in the Hotel Muehlebach last night.

"The Jews of Russia, Poland, Rumania, Galicia, and other sections of Europe must get out, and they are looking to Palestine as a place of refuge," declared Mr. Fromenson. "Thousands of these Jews have sold their property and are now ready to move. Mediterranean and Black Sea ports are congested with thousands of these families and what possessions they can carry. Some of them have been so eager to go that they have started in small fishing boats and many have been drowned."

But these Jews of Europe cannot go to Palestine in large numbers now, for the country is not ready to receive them, and for a mass of them to go would mean disaster, said Mr. Fromenson. Palestine is still under the military occupation of the British, he said, but it is believed that the political status of the country will be settled in the Turkish treaty, which probably will be completed by April 1.

It is confidently expected that a provision of this treaty will establish Palestine as a home for the Jews of Europe, said Mr. Fromenson, and to this provision the United States, through President Wilson; England, France, Greece, Italy, Japan and several neutral countries have given their approval, he said.

The plan of the Zionist movement is to have the Jews of Europe migrate to Palestine at the rate of one hundred thousand a year for about ten years, and then perhaps in larger numbers. The country will be prepared for the new comers by the purchase of large tracts of land from the present owners.--News clip sent by Sister L. Morgan.

Miscellanea

"We all do fade as a leaf" (Isa. 64:6).

Leaves of Autumn, tell the story,
How our lives must also pass,
And that this world's pomp and glory
Fadeth like the sumemr grass.

"My times are in thy hand" (Psa. 31:15).

Father, I know that all my life
Is portioned out for me;
And the changes that are sure to come
I do not fear to see;
But I ask thee for a present mind
Intent on pleasing thee.

"Casting all your care upon him" (1 Pet. 5:7).

No profit canst thou gain
By self-consuming care;
To him commend thy cause: his ear
Attends the softest prayer.

"Thou, Lord, only makest me dwell in safety" (Psa. 4:5).

Weak though we are, he still is near,
To lead, console, defend:
In all our sorrow, sin and fear,
Our all sufficient friend.

"Love your enemies" (Matt. 5:44).

Should friends misjudge, or foes defame,
Or brethren faithless prove,
Then like thine own be all our aim,
To conquer them by love.

"Walk worthy of God who hath called you into his kingdom and glory" 1 Thess. 11:12).

Ye servants of the Lord,
Each in his office wait:
Observant of his heavenly word,
And watchful at his gate.

"For none of us liveth to himself" (Rom. 14:7).

I ask thee for a thoughtful love,
Through constant watching wise,
To meet the glad with joyful smiles,
And wipe the weeping eyes;
A heart at leisure from itself,
To soothe and sympathize.

"The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places" (Psa. 16:6).

Since none can doubt his equal love,
Unmeasurably kind;
To his unerring, gracious will
Be every wish inclined.

Accounted Worthy of Age to Come

Sundry Reflections on the Lost, the Saved, and The Church of God

WHO ARE the accounted worthy, and what is the test in making the selection? The Scriptures teach they are those who believe. Is it unreasonable, then, to infer that those who fail to be be called will not believe? In Luke's gospel (20:35-37) we find these words by Jesus: "But they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage: neither can they die any more: for they are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection. Now that the dead are raised, even Moses showed at the bush, when he called the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. For he is not a God of the dead, but of the living: for all live unto him."

Can we draw any other conclusion from the words than that those who attain the world to come by the resurrection cannot die any more; and that God is a God of the dead that die unto him which he looks upon as being alive in that they have promise and hope of life? It may be asked here, "What of the unfaithful who are awakened to give an account according to the deeds done in the body?" But these do not attain the world to come, but go away into everlasting destruction when the dead are raised at Christ's coming, and their verdict rendered by the judge and the court having jurisdiction over them.

THE INTIMACY OF GOD'S KNOWLEDGE OF EVERY INDIVIDUAL

Now the whole question resolves itself into this query: Has God at any time permitted any responsible person, or any person which, if their life had been prolonged, would have believed, to be cut off in death without providing that person a knowledge of the gospel? All can agree that death ends any opportunity to accept or reject so far as this life is concerned, unless we accept the purgatory theory. In other words, death is a manifestation of God's judgment. We must bear in mind that no person so far as the good they can do is worthy of salvation. But they can be and are accounted worthy because of belief or faith. Did not God pick out Abraham because he knew that he would believe him, or did God take the chance of trying him out to see whether or not he would be faithful? (The Bible answers this question in Gen. 18:17-19.—Editor). The latter would indeed be a hazardous and uncertain plan, and out of harmony with the truth that God foreknows every individual. The gospel is so plain and simple, is it not strange that so few accept it when it is preached in any community by those who can be prevailed upon to come out and hear it? Now where are we going to place the blame? Can we say that it is because their hearts are not right with God, and they could not get them right with him until the next age if they wanted to, because that is a part of God's plan; or does God earnestly desire and stand with open arms to receive them under his protecting wings, but they will not? God does not refuse opportunity to any who will believe, but he does reserve the right to prove their faith by their works. It is just as possible to have faith without works as it is to have works without faith; but faith without works is dead, and works which are not the result of faith are not reckoned as righteousness. God does not allow trials to come to determine whether or not we are worthy. That is a portion of the knowledge of an all-wise God; but fiery trials bring discipline and strength where faith holds, and confusion and self-condemnation where faith does not hold.

THE SAD PREDICAMENT OF MANY OF THE UNSAVED

To preach the gospel to the world, as we are commanded to do, and then when they reject it to adroitly affirm that they are not supposed to accept now, is certainly an optimistic viewpoint, if not logical. In Luke 9:5 and Acts 13:51 we find instructions given the apostles to shake off the very dust from their feet for a testimony against whosoever would not recive them when they departed from any city to which they had preached the gospel. If the majority of those to whom the apostles preached constituted the world, and not supposed to be saved in this life, why this drastic action against these helpless unbelievers? Someone suggests that these heard it preached and should be condemned. But do all that come in contact with the gospel understand it, and did all that the apostles preach to understand? The Bible is full of the gospel, and in our day it is printed in every known language from one end of the earth to the other; yet the world staggers on into deeper apostasy, heedless of the near approach of the great day of the wrath of God. The truth is that God counts many unworthy of eternal life because they will not believe. In God's sight it seems to make no difference whether a man hears the gospel or not, if he will not believe it.

SALVATION SIGNIFIES DELIVERANCE FROM CONDITION OF DEATH

The term 'salvation" signifies a deliverance from a condition which inevitably results in destruction. If death is a manifestation of God's judgment, and it overtakes man whom the Psalmist compares to the grass of the field, he dies not as does faithful believers, but as those who have no hope. When believers die they die unto God as did Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and all the faithful, or they sleep in Christ, as Paul declared by the word of the Lord. Unfaithful believers are likewise among those who have no hope, but they must render an account, since they have placed themselves under the law of Christ. Neither of these classes attain salvation. You may define their end as death, eternal death, destruction or any other term, but the result is annihilation. The life we are admonished to lay hold upon is eternal life, the opposite of eternal death. Through salvation we attain the first and, as a natural consequence, escape the latter. The Bible seems to be silent on a half-way condition after death. A man can almost be persuaded to be a Christian while he is living; but it is too late after he is dead. When we accept the law of Christ and agree to be governed by it, we submit ourselves to the highest divine law given to man. It is a law applicable to believers alone and transcends all other laws, divine or man-made, which are given to control by force the natural man, and which are only shadows of the higher law of God which Christ came to fulfill. The holy law of God which David delighted and gloried in was not the law given to Israel at Sinai; but a law to which the natural man is not subject, and indeed cannot be.

THE LOVE OF GOD WHICH PASSETH UNDERSTANDING

Accounted worth! How expressive of mercy and love are these words! Not one in God's eyes are worthy; there are none righteous, no, not one. But if the qualities of humbleness, penitence and a desire to know the truth and embrace it at all cost are manifest, can you believe that a single one of these is overlooked. What would be the fate of the entire human race if no provision had been made for the remission of sins and redemption from the grave? No matter how willing we might be to believe God in what he tells us concerning his kingdom, when death comes our friends would have to lay us away with the same sorrow as do those of the world who, according to Paul's viewpoint, have "no hope." There is much food for thought in this attribute of Jehovah in view of his exhalted position as King over the universe. He forgives sins, blots them out and remembers them no more when repentance is made from the heart. Christ came to call sinners, not the (self) righteous to repentance. All those who on someone's else account are accepted as righteous are sinners; but when called through the gospel, become transferred to the list of accounted worthy or righteous. And God was willing to give his only begotten Son, and Christ being actuated by the same love, when the time came for the great Lamb offering, to which all others had pointed in type, were willing to give his life to make the transfer possible for as many as will believe on him. It must be remembered that no provision is made for repeated transfers, for this would be crucifying the Son of God afresh. If we cling to the hope of the gospel and earnestly and steadfastly endeavor to add all the Christian graces, although we stumble as a child learning to walk, but exercise every ounce of strength to rise and conquer weakness, as an anxious parent stands willing to assist with outstretched arms, how much greater is the anxiety of a heavenly Father! For such Christ is a faithful advocate.

THE HOPE OF THE RESURRECTION AND THE LIFE IN CHRIST

"Jesus said unto Martha, I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth on me shall never die. Believest thou this?" (John 11:25, 26). This is a wonderful promise to both the dead and the living in Christ. When we attempt to stretch this promise to include more than the quick and the dead, as stimulated in such Scripture as this, we may please our own fancy, but apparently we do so without good reason. Every living creature from man, the highest type, to the worm, which wriggles away from danger, wants to live as long as they can; but the grave has no terrors for the faithful believer. Death is the common enemy of man, but its hold is only temporary with the faithful, accounted worthy. If Christ had not proved faithful and an unblemished sacrifice he would not have conquered death; the stone would never have been rolled away from his grave; there would not have been a resurrection for him or for others; for if Christ be not raised, your preaching is vain, ye are yet in your sins; the dead in Christ are also perished. Accounted worthy! Blessed hope! Do we who have taken his name comprehend the significance of the atonement of Christ? Do we remember that he was cut off in the prime of life, wounded for the transgressions of his people, and willing to lay down his life for his friends? Is it possible for any man by faith or works to show a deeper love than this for his dearest friend? My beloved brethren, are we taking heed to his suggestion, his command, to keep in memory these things till he comes again?

THE CHURCH OF THE LIVING GOD AND THE FALSE RELIGIOUS SYSTEMS OF THE GENTILES

The religious systems of the Gentiles are based upon deductions and speculations of such men as Plato and Socrates, the masters of heathen philosophy, and whose doctrines give no place for the gospel as it has been preached in all ages. For if the soul constitutes an immortal principle in man independent and capable of separate conscious existence, and makes its exit from the body at what is slyly called "death," but in reality would be the experience of new and greater life around God's throne, then why be concerned about the promises made to Abraham and the blessing of the nations through Christ, the seed which is to crush the serpent's head? Any disposition on the part of the church of God to compromise or encourage what is known to be false can only result in estrangement and alienation from God. Not long ago a brother who, a number of years ago accepted the gospel and honored it by asking baptism, but who evidently is losing the ardency of his first love, made this remark: "Mr. did not have a knowledge of the truth; but he was certainly a fine Christian gentleman." I quote this here merely to show how easy it is to sidetrack the reason and logic made use of in matters outside of religion, when religion itself is considered. It would be just as reasonable to say that Mr. never had any knowledge of Thomas Jefferson or Andrew Jackson, and had never learned what the principles are upon which the democratic party is founded; but he was certainly a fine democrat! A fine one he certainly would be, and a fine Christian also that person is who, although amiable and self-righteous, yet is ignorant of the first principles and doctrines of Christ! Jesus has said it is possible for us to be either cold or hot, just simply lukewarm (Rev. 3:16); but in this condition we cannot be acceptable to him. The popular religions of the Gentiles today are farther away from Christ than Judaism was when Christ was born or as it is today. "Religious" people today sneer and scoff at the idea of lasting peace among the nations centering around the nation of Israel when gathered by the heir to David's throne. In these last days, when people turn their ears to fables and away from the truth, often making our efforts to teach almost fruitless, we must keep in mind the sacred obligation of keeping the hope of the gospel before our children (Deut. 6:7) as they approach the age of accountability. How beautiful it is to hear a child sing of Jesus and the promises while its range of words is yet very limited. We find that Moses, second only to Christ as a prophet and deliverer of his people, through the influence of an Ethiopian wife neglected to have his children circumcised according to divine instructions, and as a result God set out to kill him; but when Moses repented of his negligence and performed this duty, God let him go (Exod. 4:21-26). Our public schools openly teach the immortality of the soul, going to heaven at death, and kindred false notions; and these are so universally accepted that to offer any objection would be useless. But we can counteract this through private instruction. Development of mind and body through a general education better equips a child to appreciate God and his works, but a knowledge of the Bible and its principles is the crowning glory of all knowledge.

J. E. HAMMOND.

WE ARE ruined not by what we really want, but by what we think we want; therefore never go abroad in search of your wants. If they be real wants, they will come in search of you. He that buys what he does not want, will soon want what he cannot buy.

Exposition of Micah 5:2

And art thou, Bethlehem Ephrata, little to be (esteemed)
Among the thousands of Judah ?
From thee shall issue (the leader)
Who shall rule my people, the Israel (of God),
From days of eternity, (Dr. Hale's translation of Mic. 5:2).

SHALL WE understand this prophesy in harmony with Paul's declaration, "It is evident that our Lord sprang out of Judah ?" or in accordance with the pre-existence theory, which makes of no account the divinely generated son of Mary—the holy child Jesus. It is clear from the prophecy, that he who was to originate out of Bethlehem, is a being, distinct from what is called "his issuing." And as the personal issuings of a being who originated at a particular place and time, as did our Lord, cannot be from eternity, it can only refer to the eternal word of God as emanating from him—as the authorized power by which he is to rule Israel. "The Hebrew verb here used is applied to the rising of the sun (Psa. 19:6), the flowing of a fountain, to the springing of plants, and a variety of other objects" (Cott Bible).

Dr. Pocock observes that "the going forth is used in Deut. 8:3, for a word which proceeds out of the mouth" (Henry's Expositor). This being so, we have only to find what issued from him, which was "from of old," in order to find what is meant by "his issuings."

Said the Revelator, "Out of his mouth goeth (issueth) a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations." What is it that he is to smite the nations with ? "He shall smite the nations with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked" (Isa. 11:4). The breath of the lips, denotes that which is spoken with the lips. And Christ has declared that the word which he has spoken shall judge those who reject him; and this word is "the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." And as it issues out of his mouth, we may say that "his issuings are from of old, from days of eternity;" that word which issues from him, being the ever-living word of God, and eternal in its nature. "kai exodoi autou ap arches ex hemeron aionos." And the exodes of him (are) from the beginning "from" days everlasting.

That this view is correct is apparent from the fact that Micah prophesied of a future being who was to be ruler in Israel—one who was to originate out of Bethlehem; and hence, "his issuings" must also have been in the future, although "from everlasting" as emanations from the Eternal One. The apostles not only speak of the word of God as being manifested in him, but also of the Son of God, as being manifested, as such, to the world. Said the apostle John, "He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself: he that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son. And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life and this life is in his Son" (1 John 5:10, 11) Now, if this life is "in his Son," as John declares speaking of this life being "manifested," we are to understand that the "word of life" was manifested in him; the same life which he will communicate to those who believe in him. So we might as well confound the life, and those who receive it, as the same identity, as to confound the Son of God and the word of life as the same eternal life being a divine principle, inherent in the Father alone, and communicated by him to Christ, and through him to us. Hence, John speaks of this life, as manifested in him as follows: "That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled of the word of life; for the life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and show unto you that eternal life which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us" (1 John 2:10, 11).

Now as John declares this life is in his Son, to be communicated to those who believe, we have his authority for not confounding together "the word of life" and the Son of God, as the same identity. And therefore, from the evidence presented, we may justly conclude that God spake truly, when he said to Jesus the Christ, "Thou are my Son; this day have I begotten thee." Amen. Ever so let it be. Stand up for the Jesus of Nazareth, the only begotten Son of God. Wm. HOBBS.

The Body of Moses

MICHAEL THE archangel, when contending with the devil, he disputed about the body of Moses, durst not bring a railing accusation, but said, The Lord rebuke thee (Jude 9).

AN UNDERSTANDING of what here constitutes "the body of Moses" will radiate light on several passages of the Scriptures, and prevent error. If we consider Moses as a type of Christ, it may shed light on the question of what constitutes "the body of Moses."

Moses, like Christ, was sent of God to deliver Israel out of the midst of the fire, it was Moses that drew near as Mediator between God and the children of Israel.

Again, Moses in his death was a type of Christ, being permitted to view the promised land from Pisgah's top, but not to enter the land. Moses says: "The Lord was angry with me for your sakes, and sware that I should not go over Jordan, and that I should not go in unto that good land, which the Lord thy God giveth thee for an inheritnace." I must die in this land; I must not go over Jordan (Deut. 4:21, 22). "So Moses the servant of the Lord died there in the land of Moab . . . . his eye was not dim, nor his natural force abated" (Deut. 34:5-7). In all these things we see Moses a type of Christ; therefore the necessity of his dying on the other side of Jordan, and in the prime of life.

Again, we find the parallel between Christ and Moses: "Moses verily was faithful in all his house, as a servant, for the testimony of those things which were to be spoken after; but Christ as a son over his own house; whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end." "Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular" (1 Cor. 12: 27).

As the church under the gospel dispensation is the mystic body of Christ; so those under the law from Sinai were the mystic body of Moses. And the dispute about the body of Moses, (Jude 9) was not about the literal body, but the mystic body.

When Cyrus gave Nehemiah the decree to restore Jerusalem, the work was hindeded by Sanballat, a Moabite (Neh. 6). Now Jude compares the mild speech of Michael the aarchangel, with those "filthy dreamers who defile the flesh, despise dominion, and speak evil of dignities."

"And he showed me Joshua the high priest standing before the angel of the Lord, and satan standing at his right hand. And the Lord said unto satan, The Lord rebuke thee, O satan: even the Lord that hath chosen Jerusalem rebuke thee: is not this a brand plucked out of the fire" ? (Zech. 3: 1, 2). "Is not this a brand plucked out of the fire?" This is Israel being restored out of slavery, not Moses who is sleeping until Christ comes, who has the pre-eminence in eternal life, raises him from his unknown grave. There is light on this life and death question in the Editor's book, "The Bible: Its Principles and Texts," pp. 78-83.

GEO. FRANCIS.

Return

TO COME back to the same place or state. Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of hosts (Mal. 3:7). Turn ye unto me, and I will turn unto you, saith the Lord of hosts (Zech. 1:3). Draw night to God, and he will draw night to you (James 4:8). The parable of the prodigal son is a glorious scriptural lesson for one who has wandered away from God, and joined himself to some other family, and is ordered by them to do something that is not to his liking. Then he comes to himself, and says I will return to God, and acknowledge my sin in departing from the true gospel, and he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness (1 John 1:9).

We believe that God is willing to forgive all those who have wandered away from him, if they return to him again. If mankind was as willing to forgive one who has turned away from the truth for a season and then returns again, "as God is," it would relieve many a sorrowful heartache. We are strictly commanded to restore such a one. Read Gal. 6:1; Rom. 14:1; Matt. 18:15. He that, after knowing the truth and turns away from it, is a sinner different from the common people; he has known God, and his power, and has placed himself under condemnation and will in due time suffer the second death. Now the prospect before him is worse than if he had never heard the gospel; he must suffer for the deeds done in the body of Christ, and having left the body is punished with the second death "in the great day of judgment when the books are opened," unless he returns again. Whereas, if he had never heard or known the truth, when he died it would end all his relation to life. O brethren, why cannot we, who profess to be servants of Christ, put forth some effort to aid one to return to the Shepherd and Bishop of our souls (1 Pet. 2:25). "He which converteth the sinner from the error of his way, shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins" (James 5:20). The prodigals that return should be the first to receive our love and fellowship, for this our brother was dead and is alive again, he was lost and is found. Do not be like the elder brother in the lesson, become angry because we have restored the lost (Luke 15:17.28).

E. W. KNAPP.

John 17:5 and Pre-Existence

HAVING BEEN requested by Sister Upton to explain John 17:5, I readily comply. To begin with: If John 17:5 proves Christ was actually glorified "before the world was," then Rev. 13:8 proves he was actually slain then, too. If he was merely "slain" in God's plan and purpose "from the foundation of the world," then he was "glorified," too, in the same sense and at the same time. Titus 1:2 says God "promised" Paul "eternal life." When ? "Before the world began." Did Paul pre-exist ? Jer. 1:5 says "before" Jeremiah was "formed" God "knew" him and "sanctified" and 'ordained him a prophet." Shall we conclude Jeremiah pre-existed? "Glorify me with the glory I had with thee before the world was." Shall we conclude this must teach the pre-human existence of Jesus ? How did God "sanctify" Jeremiah "before he was formed" ? How did he "promise" Paul "eternal life" "before the world began" ? How was Christ "slain" and "glorified" "before the world was" ? The one answer to these questions is this: Not any of them pre-existed. God had a plan. In it Jeremiah was to be a "prophet"; Paul was promised "eternal life"; and Christ was "slain" and "glorified." In this plan as revealed in Rom. 8:29, 30; Eph. 1:4, 5; 2:9 each saint was "chosen." When ? "Before the foundation of the world." In selecting the ones of this plan Jesus was chosen first; then the saints, such as Abraham, Paul, etc. Hence Jer. 1:5; John 17:5; Titus 1:2 do not teach the pre-existence of these men, but that each had a place in the divine plan.

"I have made thee (Abraham) a father of many nations" (Rom. 4:17). This was said to Abraham when he did not have single child! How could this be true except in the divine plan it was decreed that he was to be a "father of many nations." Paul explains it: "He calleth things that be not as though they were." So with John 17:5. How could Christ be said to be "slain" and "glorified" "before the world was" in view of the fact he "was not yet glorified" (John 7:39) while living here ? How could this be true except in the divine plan it was decreed he was to be "slain" and "glorified" ? Paul explains it: "He calleth those things that be not as though they were."

Editorial

We have lost Sister Vira McIlrath who has returned East to continue her profession.

He who objects to creed, objects to belief (Rom. 4:3); and he who objects to belief, objects to faith (vs. 9).

Some one has wisely said that the first degree in the school of folly is to think ourselves wise; the second, to tell others so; the third, to despise all good counsel.

Orthodox arithmetic is amusing. Study these lines from Harrison's Psalter:

To the eternal three (3),
  The undivided one (1),
Let saints and angels both agree
  To give the praise alone;
In earth, in heaven, by all adored,
  The holy, holy, holy, Lord.

The common saying that the word "God" does not occur in the book of Esther, is hardly correct. The name of God occurs in fact in the king's name, in whose reign the captivity is said to have taken place (Esther 2:6), namely, Jeconiah. In Hebrew this is Jeconyah, another name for Jehoiachin (Hebrew Yehoiachin). Then consider the name Abihail (Abiha-il) in the 15th verse.

Sunday morning, May the 16th, the following were inducted into the Father's name by baptism into Christ: Masie and Thomas Thomson, the daughter and son of Brother and Sister Thomson; Arthur Nicholls, son of Brother and Sister Wm. Nicholls; Howard Ross, son of Brother and Sister Wm. Ross; and George F. Hoffner, formerly Mennonite. "The time is short," and our prayer is that our new brothers and sister may redeem what time remains, and be found blameless in the presence of Christ at his coming.

May 12th, Vice-President Marshall spoke at the annual Southern Baptist Convention, and gave the ministers some good advice. In the press he is reported to have said:

"I hope the clergy and laymen of this country will understand that their divine mission is to go out and preach the gospel and not beat the brass drum in a political parade." The Vice-president said: "There is enough for the church to do without trying to reform congress. I am a part of congress and I know."

Love of approbation is one of our God-given faculties, and the truth recognizes both its existence and proper function. The organ, however, is abused when it leads to undue self-exaltation, or a greater love for the praise of men than the praise of God. In any case where it exists in this form, it is a hurtful ingredient in a man's character, hurtful in its effects on the mind of others, and hurtful to the work of the truth in general; while it acts as an obscuring film upon the man himself, hiding from his vision the true self-sacrificing service as the foundation of future reward. "Before honor is humility."

The Young People's Society held its regular meeting at the home of Brother and Sister Fankbonner on Tuesday evening, May 7th. Twenty-seven members were present and six visitors. One new name was added to the roll, making a total enrollment of thirty. The subject, which was handled by Sister Frances Russell, was "Scriptural Requirements in Dress." The leader pointed out that the downfall of many of the old biblical characters was brought about by a too lavish display of wealth and finery, which caused them to forget their Maker, and that we as children of God should give heed to those things which help to beautify and adorn the mind; for it is with such adornments that God is well pleased.—Lawrence Gibbs, Secretary.

DO YOU ever notice that the wisest people about the things of this world, know the least about the things of the world to come?

SYMBOLIC SEAS

SEA IN symbolic speech is the symbol of nations. Illustrations follow:

Speaking Sea (Isa. 23:4)
Shaking Sea (Hag. 2:6)
Babylonian Sea (Jer. 51:42, 36)
Hurt Sea (Rev. 7:2)
Bloody Sea (Rev. 8:8)
Sea of Dead Souls ((Rev. 16:3)
Fiery Sea—the Nations Judged (Rev. 15:2)
Glassy Sea—the Nations Purified (Rev. 15:2)
No More Sea—of Nations (Rev. 21:1)

Biblical Proverbs

FRET NOT THYSELF BECAUSE OF HIM WHO PROSPERETH IN HIS WAY. The wealth of the sinner is laid up for the just (Prov. 13:22).

OLD AGE. The hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness (Prov. 16:31).

THE TRUE BASIS OF SUPERIORITY. Better is the poor that walketh in his uprightness, than he that is perverse in his ways though he be rich (Prov. 28:6).

CORRECTION NECESSARY TO LIFE. Correction is grievous to him who forsaketh the way; but he who hateth reproof shall die (Prov. 15:10).

HASTY TEMPERS. Seest thou a man who is hasty in his words? There is more hope of a fool than of him (Prov. 29:20).

HOW TO GET RID OF STRIFE. Cast out the scorner and contention shall go out; yea strife and reproach shall cease (Prov. 22:10).

THE BEST THING FOR A FOOL. A whip for the horse, a bridle for the ass, and a rod for the fool's back (Prov. 26:3).

AN INCURABLE. Though thou shouldst bray a fool in a mortar, with a pestle, yet will not his foolishness depart from him (Prov. 27:22).

SHADOWS OF COMING EVENTS. Before destruction the heart of man is haughty, and before honor is humility (Prov. 28:12).

THE OFFERING OF THE WICKED UNACCEPTABLE TO GOD. The sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination to the Lord; but the prayer of the upright is his delight (Prov. 15:8).

AS TRUE AS GOSPEL. A wicked doer giveth heed to false lips; and a liar giveth ear to a naughty tongue (Prov. 17:4).

LET MISCHIEF MAKERS LOOK OUT. He who diligently seeketh good procureth favor, but he who seeketh mischief, it shall come unto him (Prov. 11:27).

ADULT FOOLISHNESS. The lips of the wise disperse knowledge; but the heart of the foolish doeth not so (Prov. 15:7).

FOOLISHNESS IS ONLY REFRESHING TO A FOOL. The heart of him who hath understanding seeketh knowledge, but the mouth of fools feedeth on foolishness (Prov. 15:14).

ONE MAN BETTER THAN ANOTHER. The desire of a man is his kindness; and a poor man is better than a liar (Prov. 19:22).

Do the Scriptures Justify Suicide?

Does Prov. 23:2 [illegible] suicide?

Editorial Comment

PROV. 23:2 does not teach men to kill themselves. To tell a man of voracious appetite to put a knife to his throat is merely a proverbial way of telling him to restrain his desire for food, for so it says in the words that follow, "Be not desirous of his dainties." This precept no more means that a man should cut his throat than that a man was to literally cut off his hand or pluck out his eye in obeying the command, "If thy eye offend thee, pluck it out, . . . If thy right hand offend thee, cut it off and cast it from thee." Proverbial expressions make use of literal actions for symbols of moral results. Illustrating: To heap coals of fire on a man's head is to do an act of kindness to an enemy (Prov. 25:21, 22); to break bones [illegible] the effect of a forbearing and persuasive tongue (Prov. 25:15); to let out water is the proverbial way of describing the commencement of strife; and to say that a man roasts not that which he took in hunting is only another way of saying that he is a slothful man (Prov. 12:27). Gentile proverbs are of the same import. "Don't stir the fire with a sword" means, don't irritate an angry man; and to "kill a man with kindness" does not mean that he was murdered, but that, as a result of generous benevolence, all his enmity was slain, and all his natural animosities were overcome as completely as if he had been literally killed.

Translation and Paraphrase of Romans 5:15-19

KINDLY EXPLAIN Rom. 5:18. Please give us a paraphrase of this verse. This is a verse frequently used by Larger Hope believers and Universalists to prove universal restoration. You are doing a splendid work in exposing Larger Hope and other heresies that have crept into the church of God.

Your loving brother,

MACKNIGHT'S TRANSLATION OF ROM. 5:15-19

HOWEVER, NOT as the fall, so also is the gracious gift. For if by the fall of the one man, the many died: much more the grace of God, and the gift by grace, which is of the one man Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many (vs 15).

16. Also, not as the sentence through the one who sinned, is the free gift: for verily the sentence was for one offence to condemnation; but the gracious gift is of many offences to righteousness.

17. Besides, if by the fall of the one man, death hath reigned through that one man; much more they who receive the overflowing of grace, and of the gift of righteousness shall reign in life through one man Jesus Christ.

18. Well, then, as through one offence sentence (from verse 16) came upon all men to condemnation; even so through one righteousness, sentence came upon all men to justification of life.

19. And as through the disobedience of one man, the many were constituted sinners; even so, through the obedience of one man, the many shall be constituted righteous.

PARAPHRASE OF ROM. 5:15-19

15. However, the resemblance is not exact; for, not as the fall by Adam, so also is the gratuitous gift by Christ. They differ in their power, the one to kill, and the other to make alive: for if by the fall of Adam all mankind sinned and died, much more the goodness of God, and the gift of life by that goodness, which is bestowed on account of the one man Jesus Christ, hath abounded to all who receive him, giving them "newness of life" in the New Covenant now, and resurrection life at the last day.

16. Again, not like the sentence passed through the one who sinned, is the gift of forgiveness bestowed through the one who obeyed. They differ in their causes and consequences: for truly the sentence was for one offence only, and resulted in condemnation to death: but the gratuitous gift of the pardon of sins results in bestowment of eternal life.

17. Once more: if consistently with justice (as already shown, verse 12) by the fall of Adam, death hath reigned over all mankind, through that man; much more is it consistent with justice and goodness, that they who receive the overflowing grace of God in Christ (John 1:16) should receive the gift of righteousness and reign in eternal life by a resurrection of the dead, "through the one man Jesus Christ."

18. Since, then, it has pleased God, through one offence committed by Adam, to pass sentence upon all men in him, condemning them to death: even so, it pleased God, through one act of righteousness performed by Christ, to pass sentence of justification upon all men who are in him.

19. Finally, you see, we are constituted sinners in Adam, because of his offence; and we are constituted righteous in Christ on account of his righteousness. "Verily, verily, I say unto you, (1) He that heareth my word, and (2) believeth on him that sent me,(3) hath everlasting life, and (4) shall not come into condemnation; (5) but is passed out from death (Adam) unto life"—Christ (John 5:24). Death in Adam; life in Christ (1 Cor. 15:22).

God forbid that we should, with glum aspect and sad demeanor, so misrepresent Christ that others, misled, will seek joys elsewhere! And again we say God forbid! God help us to serve him in the spirit of sons and not of slaves.

Biblical Confessions of Faith

CREEDS ARE definite outlines of faith. Even when they are wrong they rest the mind in something definite. Opposition to creeds is opposition to analytical thought, to definition of the positive either in morals or in faith. The churches opposed to creeds are like Hoover and other political candidates who are trying to run for President without a platform: their belief is so dubious, vague, and conglomerate that it cannot be reduced to precise definition. They have no faith to define is why they object to defining it. "We have no creed but the Bible" is the deceptive way they have of talking—a confession of faith that would land them, were they consistent, into the bosom of the Campbellite church. This evasive dodge of committal to definite gospel truth is as incongruous as if the republican party were to adopt the Constitution of the United States as their platform at the approaching convention at Chicago! Let the reader consider biblical confessions of faith and he will see they embrace, not the Bible generally, but specific and dogmatic items of essential truth. In the instances of confession subjoined note what was confessed as well as the persons who made the confession. They do not say they believe the Bible; they confess specific and dogmatic teachings of the Bible.

PETER.—"Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God" (Matt. 16:16; John 6:69).

NATHANIEL.—"Thou art the Son of God: thou art the King of Israel" (John 1:49).

MARTHA.—"I believe that thou art the Christ, the Son of God" (John 11:27).

THE EUNUCH.—"I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God" (Acts 8:37).

THE MULTITUDE.—"This is Jesus, the prophet of Nazareth of Galilee" (Matt. 21:11).

JESUS.—"Thou sayest that I am a king; to this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the thuth" (John 18:37; 1 Tim. 6:13).

PAUL. "This I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets: and have hope towards God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust" (Acts 24: 14 15).

ABRAHAM, ISAAC, AND JACOB.—"These all died in the faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were pilgrims and strangers on the the earth" (Heb. 11:13).

JOB.—"I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God" (Job 19: 25, 26).

"EVERY TONGUE shall confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father" (Phil. 2:11).

"WHOSOEVER shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him and he in God" (1 John 1:15).

"IF THOU shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved; for with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation" (Rom. 10:9, 10).

"LET US hold fast the confession of our faith without wavering; (for he is faithful that promised)" (Heb. 10:23).

Communication

They spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened.—Mal. 3:16.

DEAR EDITOR RESTITUTION:

OFTEN HAVE I tried to write my hearfelt thanks to God for you, brethren (2 Thess. 1:2, 3). The Restitution is so full of sound doctrine and encouraging epistles, in the midst of much opposition. But seemingly you have the grace and courage to turn criticism into ambition for your own warfare, thus fulfilling the teaching of Christ, as the apostles were accused in Jerusalem (Acts 5:28). Infirmities of the flesh seem to hinder us so (2 Cor. 12:7-10). Often have I asked to be released from them, but the answer seems to be, "My grace is sufficient for thee." "Is it Nothing to You?" and "Stick to Your Job," in issue of Feb. 10th, strikes me graciously. This dear one, as Mary of old, and our dear Lord, too, rises very early in the morning (John 20:1-4) to find and feed the lambs and sheep of the little flock (Luke 10:12, 32), thus causing her brothers to run, like she had done, with joy to make known the Master. Like Moses, she knows the need of encouragement (Deut. 1:38).

Yours in hope of life when Jesus comes.

MOTTO: SEARCH THE SCRIPTURES DAILY

SLOGAN: WE STAND FOR UNITY, TRUTH, AND RIGHTEOUSNESS

REPORT OF THE EXECUTIVE MEETING OF THE NATIONAL BEREANS IN CHICAGO, APRIL 24th, 1920.

MEETING WAS called to order by the President. Devotional services conducted by Leota B. Hanson followed by repeating the Lord's prayer. The Recording Secretary was absent and the minutes from the last meeting were not read. L. B. Hanson was appointed Secretary, Pro. Tem.

The report of the Treasurer, Cor. Secretary, Tract, Social Correspondence, Literary and Isolated were read and approved. All the departments showed much progress and were very encouraging.

After the usual business, the program for the National Berean Conference which will be held near Plymouth, Ind., at the North Salem Church, July 16th, 1920, was arranged. Motion made and seconded to adjourn.

The next Berean Conference will be held at the North Salem Church near Salem Church, near Plymouth, Ind., July 16th 1920. The Bible School begins July 6-15 inclusive. Bros. S. J. Lindsay and D. VanVactor will be teachers. Plan to attend the Bible School and stay for the National Berean Conference and the Indiana State Conference which follows.

Extracts from letters received by the Social Correspondence Department.

"You do not know how glad I was to receive your interesting magazine."

"It makes our hearts glad to receive such interesting communications from those who, although united with us in Christ, we have never known before."

"Your fine letter of welcome into the household has made us very happy. We do love to hear from you or anyone of like faith."

"We greatly apreciate your interest in us."

One correspondent says: "Several lonely ones of Christ's household have thanked me with gratitude for having written to them for they were so lonely and surely a warm feeling of love sprang up in my own heart for them."

"Do you know everything about the Bereans is nice but the letters are wonderful. I think that is the best idea anyone ever thought of when they originated the plan of writing letters to others of like faith; it takes most of the hardship from isolation, does it not?"

John 14:1-5

LET NOT you your hearts be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also. And whither I go ye know, and the way ye know. Thomas saith unto him, Lord, we know not whither thou goest; and how can we know the way? Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh to the Father but by me.

EDITORIAL.

WE LOOK for the Editor, A. D. Donaldson, back on the job next week.

ONCE MORE I greet my young people from the Editor's chair before turning it over to the rightful owner. I have tried hard to fill "our page" with interest for the benefit of my young readers, and in spite of the extra work it has naturally caused me, I have really derived much pleasure out of it. How? Well, in two ways.

First, Because it is a labor of love in the service of my King, the first real chance I have had to serve him.

Secondly, Because I have enjoyed finding little things or thinking of something that might be of interest to you, my young people, and I hope I have succeeded. Now as a last effort from the Editor's chair I will give two prizes for the two best Bible stories for this page. The story must be written from memory, not copied, and it must end in the moral contained in said story. I will give a sample of what I mean, later. I appoint Brother Donaldson the judge. For the best story sent in by children up to twelve years old, I will give, if a girl be the winner, a bead necklace made by myself; if a boy, a bead watch fob, also made by myself. For the best story sent in by young people between the ages of twelve and eighteen I will give a fruit cake, baked by myself. Now boys, you let the girls get away ahead of you on the special contributor's list, but I know you will not let them walk off with this fruit cake. All stories must be sent in early, so as to be printed before October 1st, on which date the contest will end. All stories sent in will be printed whether a prize winner or not. Your full name, address, and age must accompany your story. As soon as the judge makes his decision, the prizes will be sent to the winners. Now for the "sample story" I promised.

THE TRIAL OF LOVE

ONCE THERE was a man named Abraham, and his wife Sarah. They had one son, whom they called Isaac. All three of them loved God. They also loved each other very much. Abraham was a very rich man. He had cows, horses, sheep, and goats, tents and servants, silver and gold. But he had one thing he loved more than these. That was his dear son Isaac. Yet there was one being whom Abraham loved even better still: that was God. At last God thought he would try Abraham to see whether he loved him more than anything in the world--more even than he loved his son Isaac. In those days people burned lambs upon an altar and called it offering sacrifice to God. Now God said to Abraham: "Take your son Iseac, and offer him up on an altar in a place I will show to you." This was a very hard thing for Abraham to do. But he wished to do all God told him, because he loved God so much. So Abraham cut some wood to build a fire. He told Isaac to go with him. He left Sarah in the tent at home. They walked* for three days; at last they came to a high hill. Abraham knew that this was the place where he was to offer his only son; so he said to his servants, "Stay here while Isaac and I go on the mountain to worship God." He took wood and bound it around Isaac with a rope. Then he took some fire, a knife, and Abraham and Isaac walked up the hill together. Isaac knew not that his father was going to offer him as a sacrifice.

He said, "Father, here is fire and wood, but where is the lamb?" Abraham answered,, "My son God will provide a lamb."

But Abraham did not tell Isaac that he was to be the lamb, and the boy expected to find one on the mountain. At last they came to the top of the mountain. Then Abraham built an altar. He took the wood from Isaac and laid it on the altar. Now the time had come when Isaac must know who was to be the lamb. Abraham took a rope and bound the feet and hands of his son, and laid him on the wood like a lamb. Then he took the knife, and lifted up his hand to kill Isaac when he heard a voice calling, "Abraham, Abraham!" It was an angel speaking from heaven.

The angel said: "Don't kill your son, for now God knows that you love him, because you have given him your only son."

How glad Abraham was to untie the rope that bound Isaac, and know that he need not kill him after all.

Then Abraham saw a lamb caught in the bushes; and he took it and offered it up as a sacrifice instead of Isaac. Abraham then thanked God for having given back his son to him.

Then the angel spake again, and said, "God is much pleased with you for having given up your son; and God will bless you and all your children, and grand-chidren, and their children, and one of your children's children shall make all people happy."

When the angel had done speaking Abraham and Isaac returned to their home and to Sarah. What a happy reunion it must have been!

MORAL

That we should always have faith and obedince; faith in God and obedience to all his commands. Also love. Our love for God should be greater than our love for any earthly thing; even unto the giving up of all, at his command, if necessary.

*Through inadvertence Sister Walker says "walked," but she means to say they rode three days and then walked the rest of the journey (Gen. 22:1-5). Editor of The Restitution.

OUR PAGE this week is very interesting as all our special contributors are represented.

DEAR YOUNG PEOPLE OF THE RESTITUTION:

THERE IS a good deal said in the Bible about patience, and many examples, both of patience and impatience shown us. For instance, we have Moses. As a rule Moses was patient with the children of Israel; but once he became angry or impatient at their murmurings, and because he did something he should not have done, God would not let him enter the promised land. We have examples of patience in Job, as well as others. James 5:10 says: "Take, my brethren, the prophets who have spoken in the name of the Lord, for an example of suffering, affliction and of patience."

Then we have an example in Christ the greatest of all. He was patient to all—to the people, the rulers, and even his murderers! He taught his disciples to be patient; for in his parable of the sower he said, "But that (the seed) on the good ground, are they which are an honest and good heart, having heard the word, keep it, and bring forth fruit with patience" (Luke 8:15). "In your patience possess ye your souls" (Luke 21:19).

Patience is one of the most essential qualities in the character of a Christian. It is bound up in many other things. Rom. 5:3 says: "And not only so, but we glory in tribulation also, knowing that tribulation worketh patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope." If we have patience, we have faith, love, hope and many other things. We can keep our tempers, and when we are reproved for our faults, we can bear it meekly. Speaking of Jesus, we read in Isa. 53:7, "He was oppressed and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth: he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as sheep before his shearers is dumb, so opened he not his mouth." What a beautiful and touching description of our dear Savior! Who would not wish to be like him?

I am going to give you some verses to look up, and I know you all will. "For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope" (Rom. 15:4). Read Luke 21:1; Rom. 12:12; 2 Cor. 6:4; Col. 1:11; 1 Thess. 1:3; 5:14; 2 Thess. 1:4; Tit. 2:2; Heb. 10:36; 12:1; James 1:3, 4; 5:7, 11; Rev. 2:2; 3:10; Eccl. 7:8; also Prov. 14:9.

"Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts, for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh" (James 5:8).

ETHEL MAY HOWARD.

Thank you Ethel; your contribution is well worth reading, and filled with truth and wisdom. Aunt Bess.

HE'S JUST THE SAME

A LONG time ago a good man named Daniel was thrown into a lion's den. He was in there among those fierce beasts all night, but in the morning Daniel was still alive and unhurt. We read in the Bible that God closed the lions' mouths so they could not harm him; and the God that lived in Daniel's time, is just the same today.

HOW CAN people think there is no God. Some people think there is no God. How can they say that when they stop to think of all the wondeful things there are? I wonder who they think made all these beautiful things? I have often thought how wonderful it is, with so many people in the world every person different from any other. They none look exactly alike. There is some difference in their voice, manners, and looks. I wonder how the infidel accounts for those things, when he says there is no God?

MARIE K. THOMAS.

THE BOYHOOD OF JESUS

ON THE way home, Jesus told Joseph and Mary that he knew that God was his Father. After they returned home, Jesus helped Joseph in his carpenter work, and he grew up to be a very good man. The Bible does not tell much more about the boyhood of Jesus, but I imagine that he was very good and always helpful. I do not think he would kill birds or be cruel to animals, do you? But I know he never sinned, and yet the people nailed him to a cross until he died. Then he was buried and in three days he rose from the dead. He is in heaven now, watching over all his people and little children. We all hope to see him soon, which I think we will; if we are all baptized, and try to do right, we will be the ones to live with him for ever when he comes. Won't that be nice?

DROP A word of cheer and kindness—
Just a flash and it is gone;
But there's half a hundred ripples
Circling on and on and on,
Bearing hope and joy and comfort
On each splashing, dashing wave,
Till you wouldn't guess the volume
Of the one kind word you gave.

A Plea for the Sheep

WE OFT hear the plea of trying to keep
The lambs of the flock in the fold,
And well we may, but what of the sheep?
Shall they be left out in the cold?

'Twas a sheep, not a lamb, that went astray
In the parable Jesus told,
A grown-up sheep that had wandered away,
From the ninety and nine in the fold.

Out in the wilderness, out in the cold,
'Twas a sheep the Good Shepherd sought,
And back to the flock, safe in the fold,
'Twas a sheep the Good Shepherd brought.

And why for the sheep do we earnestly long,
And earnestly watch and pray?
Because there is danger if they go wrong:
They will lead the lambs astray.

For the lambs will follow the sheep, you know,
Wherever the sheep will stray;
If the sheep go wrong, it will not be long,
Till the lambs are as wrong as they.

And so for the sheep we earnestly plead,
For the sake of the lambs today;
If the lambs are lost, what a terrible cost
Some sheep will have to pay.—Selected by Brother R. A. Humphreys.

The Danger Line

THE RIVER gleams bright in the moonlight
When the merry skaters wheel;
While the woodland echoes the merry shout
And the music of ringing steel.
Just out where the smooth ice tempts the feet
You may see a warning sign,
That calls to all who may stop to hear:
"Keep away from the danger line!"

And just so it is in life, dear heart;
No matter how smooth and fair
The surface may be, you will find it true
That the danger point is there.
There's the first wrong thought
And the first wrong deed.
There are card rooms, cigars, and wine,
To lure the feet, but remember, dear,
"Keep away from the danger line!"

Don't try how near you may venture, lad,
Or circle with daring feet;
Just right about face nor look behind
For honor oft lies in retreat.
Don't stop to parley the question, dear,
Or scoff at the friendly sign,
For wise are they who read and heed—
"Keep away from the danger line."—Selected by Sister Bessie Walker.

The Death of Christ Explained

Condemnation in the First Adam; Forgiveness in The Second

MANY THEORIES have been given regarding the necessity of Christ's death. It is the purpose of God that he will fill the earth with a righteous people, so it became a necessity in the covenant made with the two seeds as recorded in Gen. 3:15. The seed of the woman accepted the conditions of the covenant, and the recipient of the blessing and honor render a voluntary and willing obedience. When Jesus became cognizant of the conditions of this covenant he knew that he would be the lamb set apart for slaughter. He knew the real significance of his death when he reprimanded Peter who opposed it (Matt. 16:23). The stumbling block to Jesus was that their Messiah would be subject to such a humility. They announced that their Messiah "abided forever" (John 11:34). It was fully understoood by Jesus that his death was a covenant condition. "He shall bruise his heel."

In a recent article a writer claimed that "being dead in Adam and alive in Christ constitutes our (the Christian's) second chance." To me this is unscriptural and illogical. This infers that Adam possessed grace enough to assure a resurrection of all his children. Because Adam was constituted the federal head of his family gives him no power that will benefit them. There is no Scripture promising "a second chance." It is illogical and unscriptural. Please note that all the grace due the first Adam expired when the judgment of the law was passed upon him. "Dust thou art and to dust shalt thou return" (Gen. 3:19). The federal head being dust, his offering could claim no higher nature. Leaving the race under this sentence, all would have died as the brute creation, as all have the same nature all go to the same place (Eccl. 3:18-20). In death all are alike. A man hath no pre-eminence above a beast.

In this crisis Jehovah introduces a covenant (Gen. 3:15). In this covenant Jesus received grace and power to raise those who through his grace have been obedient to the "law of the spirit of life," which is the gospel (John 5:26, 27). The resurrection was not intended to benefit any class except the righteous. The second class under the provision of the resurrection brings them up to be judged unworthy of eternal life. Their coming from the dust is an emergence from the grave. I want to be understood in regard to the subject of the resurrection. It was no part of Jehovah's purpose that was to be accomplised through Adam as the ruler. His disobedience necessitated another covenant through which the recipients would become the body of which Jesus is the head. For scriptural proof please read 1 Cor. 15:35-58. Adam and his family were to receive eternal life through the tree of life; the new creation through Christ will receive this great honor and blessing as did their federal head, the second Adam. This causes us to affirm that the promise of a resurrection is a detail introduced by the Eternal One to accomplish his original purpose to fill the earth with righteousness (2 Pet. 3:13). It was not designed to be applied to any but those who were counted righteous and become overcomers. When we see this clearly we can see how unscriptural and illogical the doctrine of "universal resurrection" is.

I wish to call attention to one more argument made by this class of writers; that is, "there was no law from Adam that would condemn any of Adam's race, therefore their favor came through Adam because he was a figure of Christ." Paul states plainly that. "Death reigned from Adam to Moses." If death reigned it certainly was the result of a law. That law condemned Adam and left his offspring without hope. In order that any part of them might have a hope the covenant was introduced (Gen. 3:15). All were placed under sin. Paul states in Rom. 8:2 that the law of the spirit of life hath made us free from the law of sin and death. If we can determine when this law was enacted, and for what purpose, we certainly have gained a victory over the no law to condemn theory In Rom. 3:9 Paul states positively that all Jews and Gentiles were placed under sin. In Rom. 11:32 he states again that God hath concluded all in unbelief (margin, shut them up together) that he might have mercy upon all. Unbelief is sin. In Gal. 3:22 we learn that the Scripture hath concluded all under sin. All are judicially dead and have no claim on the benefits of the resurrection. They were so concluded that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them who believed. All were shut up under the law as we find the covenant made with the two seeds (Gen. 3:15). The woman's seed was to crush the head of the serpent. This Scripture places all under the same condemnation, and all who believe have a promise of eternal life. This removes the necessity of believing and claiming that the whole race was judged when the judgment was pronounced against Adam. Universal resurrection claims that such a judgment would be contrary to mercy and love. Instead, it shows supreme love as all had the same chance, and but one.

The subject of "universal resurrection" is so objectionable to the writer that it requires some restraint on his part from using some very harsh words. However we have learned that hard arguments with soft words are preferable. How unjust it is to claim that God has not furnished witnesses to these of all ages. In Acts 14:16, 17 we learn that God in times past suffered all nations to walk in their own way; nevertheless he left not himself without witnesses, in that he did good, and gave us rain from heaven, and fruitful seasons, filling our hearts with food and gladness. Besides, he sent his angels from heaven, and the prophets, also his Son Jesus the Christ, and his apostles; to us he has specially sent his word and spirit. Note the great number of witnesses spoken of in Heb. 11. The race has never seen a time or age when God did not witness to the race his purpose. Eternal life through Christ or extinction through Adam is Bible truth.

The Things Concerning The Kingdom of God

WHEN CHRIST was on earth he went everywhere preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God and healing the sick, proving that he was the Messiah. When John the Baptist sent to enquire of Jesus if he was the Messiah, he said tell John the blind receive their sight, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf hear, the dead are raised, and the poor have the gospel preached to them (Matt. 11:5), showing that he was the Messiah which was to come (Isa. 35:6). Christ sent out his twelve apostles to preach the gospel of the kingdom and say the kingdom of heaven is at hand. Just before he went away his disciples asked him, "Wilt thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel ?" Christ says in his sermon on the Mount, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you" (Matt. 6:33).

If the kingdom is so all important for us to know about as is here shown, let us try to understand what is meant by the kingdom of God according to the question of the apostles. They expected a restoration of the kingdom to Israel, and Paul says, "For the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain;" showing that the hope of Israel was the hope of the apostles. David and Solomon as well as other kings sat on the throne of the Lord, after they had rejected God from being their king (1 Sam. 8:7; 12:12). When Samuel was judge they wanted a king like the nations around them, and God gave them Saul to be their king, which was a great offence to God and a sorrow to his people. At this time God's chosen people occupied the land covenanted to Abraham (Gen. 12:1-7; 13:14, 15, 17; 15:5). Solomon was a great king, and God gave him wisdom, wealth and honor above all other kings; but he departed from the living and true God and worshipped idols, being led away by outlandish women; for which God told him he would overturn the kingdom, but not in his day.

In Ezek 21:25 we have these words: "And thou profane, wicked prince of Israel, whose day is come when iniquity shall have an end. Thus saith the Lord God Remove the diadem, take off the crown: this shall not be the same; exalt him that is low, abase him that is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it; and it shall be no more, until he comes whose right it is, and I will give it him." Who is to come ? Gen. 49:10: "The scepter shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come, and unto him shall the gathering the people be." Deut. 18:18: "I will raise them up a prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth; and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him." 19th verse: "And it shall come to pass that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him."*

ISAIAH 7:14, A SIGN

"Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign: Behold, a virgin shall conceive and bare a son, and shall call his name Immanuel." Isa. 9:6: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulders: and his name shal be called wonderful Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perfom this."

Luke 1:31-33 says: "And behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a Son, and shall call his name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Heb. 1:1, 2 "God who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in times past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things." God calleth things that be not as though there were (Rom. 1:17), for they are sure to be in due time. Heb. 2:8: "But now we see not yet all things put under him. But we see Jesus who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor." Acts 3:20, 21: "And he shall send Jesus Christ which before was preached unto you, whom he heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Isaiah 1:26: "I will restore thy judges as at the first, and thy counsellors as at the beginning." Jesus answered Peter's question, "What shall we have for leaving all and following thee ?: "Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed me, in the regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of his glory ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel" (Matt. 19:28, 29).

Again, in Rev. 5:9, 10: "And they sang a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kinderd, and tongue, and people, and nation: and has made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth."

Reader, the above is but a brief outline of the kingdom in the past. It was overturned, but will be restored when Jesus comes to restore all things. The news of this kingdom of God is the good news or gospel which is being preached unto you: and it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth (Rom. 1:16). You must believe the gospel and be baptized into Christ to be saved. Peter in Acts 4:12 says, "Neither is there salvation in any other name; for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." John 5:39: "Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me." Isa. 8:20: "To the law and the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." May God help you to believe the gospel of the kingdom before it is too late (Mark 1:14, 15).

GEO. MITCHELL.

Seven Steps in Peter's Downfall

1. DOUBTING. In Matt. 14:28 we have the instance of Peter trying to walk on the water, and we note that as long as Peter's faith held out he got along all right, but the moment he doubted he began to sink.

Our object is to draw a practical lesson from this. To doubt is to sink morally and spiritually. "He that doubteth is damned."

Men "dabble" in so-called "higher criticism," and begin doubting the inspiration of the word, then they doubt God himself, then they doubt their fellowmen, and in the end go down in unbelief to destruction.

2. BOASTING. We find in Mark 14 that Peter is very boastful and says, "Though all be offended, yet will not I. . . . I will not deny thee." And in Luke 22:37, "I am ready to go with thee to prison and to death," and yet he denied his Lord three times in only a few hours.

There was too much of the big "I" in Peter's statement. Too much self—too much readiness to assert what "I" will or will not do.

When we let the spirit of the living God come into our lives and lose sight of ourselves God can use us not before. Beware of the big "I." It will spoil your usefulness.

---

*John 12:49, 50: "For I have not spoken of myself, but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak. And I know that his commandment is life everlasting, whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father saith unto me, so I speak."

3. SLEEPING. Mark 14:37. "Simon, sleepeth thou? Couldest not thou watch one hour?"

The entire church fabric is threatened with more or less ruin from moral sleep.

We are commanded to watch.

How can we watch if we are asleep?

Peter went to sleep while on watch at a critical time.

Jesus was undergoing all the agonies of Gethsemane. His arrest and crucifixion were to follow. In this time, when so much is to be done—and so few to do it—shall we go to sleep (morally and spiritually) and let our Lord's cause go down in disgrace? God forbid!

4. FIGHTING. John 18:10, Peter in this instance "loses his head" and smites the servant of the high priest, cutting off his ear.

There has been too much bloodshed in the world under the guise of religion. This has been true from a national or international standpoint; it has been true from a denominational stanpoint —and has been disgracefully true from an individual standpoint.

When brethren bring their arguments to blows, they are disgracing themselves and the Lord that bought them. We should carry on a spiritual warfare with a two-edged sword (the Bible) and whip the devil. the flesh

5. FOLLOWING AFAR OFF. Luke 22:54. It was the good woman who pressed her way through the crowd and got into direct touch with the Savior who got the blessing.

If you are too far from the magnet, you get out of touch with its power.

When you stay at home Sunday morning you don't get much good out of the sermon.

When you stay away from the prayer meeting you are out of touch with the great source of power.

When you don't go to Sunday School you fail to get beneficial instruction.

Oh, yes, you belong to the church!

But you are following too far off (just as Peter did) to get the blessing.

6. SITTING WITH THE UNGODLY. Luke 22:55: "Peter sat down with them and warmed himself."

David wrote in Psalm 1, "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly," but Peter as a result of "following the Lord afar off," finds himself keeping bad company.

Keep out of bad company if you ever expect to run the Christian race with success. Association and environment mean everything to growth and progress in Christian life.

It is better to be a hermit than to mix with some grades of society.

If you have to "be lonesome to be good," why "be lonesome." But you don't have to be.

7. DENYING THE LORD. Luke 22:57+62. When Peter is accused of being a follower of Jesus, he said, "I don't know him."

How sad! Oonly a few hours before he was ready to go to jail and to death with Christ.

Now he denies his Lord and curses and swears when approached about the matter.

What Peter needed, and what we need, is the Spirit of the living God in our hearts. He got it. Will we?—Present Truth Messenger.

Report of Baptism

A SUGGESTION TO BRETHREN IN KANSAS, OKLAHOMA AND TEXAS

EDITOR AND READERS OF THE RESTITUTION:

I WAS requested by Sister Randolph, widow of the lamented Brother E. F. Randolph, to go to Herring, in the western part of this state, and baptize Mr. W. W. Smith, whom we now introduce to the household of faith as Brother W. W. Smith. Brother Smith is a brother in the flesh to sister Randolph and Sister Robison of Salem, Ohio, and has long known the truth; but for various reasons has neglected obedience till this date. A reason that has for some time kept him back has been lack of someone to perform the duty. I also met Sister Smith, Sister Gates and Sister Randolph. How pleasant it is to meet and converse with those soldiers of the cross! All are sticklers for the one faith, it would be hard to find four others as sound people in doctrine. Both Sister Randolph and Sister Gates came quite a distance to be at this service, and the meeting of them, with Brother and Sister Smith will always seem as an oasis in the desert of my life. On account of the heavy rains that had fallen we could only hold three services, the first being only attended by the afore mentioned sisters and the Smith family. But the weather fairing and the mud beginning to dry up, word was sent to the nearest neighbors, and quite a number came Sunday afternoon and evening, and paid the strictest attention to what was said, and insisted that we come back and hold them a series of meetings at the earliest convenient date. I believe a good work can be done there, and shall try to go there again. By the way, Sisters Gates and Randolph are anxious that we of Western Kansas, Western and Eastern Oklahoma with Texas organize as one body with officers to solicit and raise funds for evangelistic work in these great fields. It seems that we might all get together and do at least something for the furtherance of the gospel in these fields. So we will ask those interested to write Sister E. F. Randolph, 704 North B St., Arkansas City, Kan.; Sister Ella R. Gates, Quintan, Okla., Box 177; or myself, at Komalty, Okla., with suggestions and plans as to how to work, and where work is needed. We can all do something, and should be up and doing.

The signs now point to near redemption, and if some are left out, may we not be to blame?

J. J. HECKMAN.

TO PURCHASE life has gold the power?
Can gold remove the mortal hour?
In life can love be bought with gold?
Are friendships treasures to be sold?
No—all that's worth a wish—a thought,
Fair virtue gives unbribed, unbought;
Cease then on trash thy hopes to bind,
Let nobler views engage thy mind.

Making Bread in Jerusalem

THE BRITISH soldiers are making and baking bread in the city of Jerusalem out of the same materials and in the same manner as the people of Palestine did when the Holy City was founded, or when the Lord walked its streets. The grain out of which the best quality was made was wheat; barley was only used by the poor or in time of famine, and rye was not raised to any extent in the East. The earliest methods of preparing the grain was to soften it with water, subject it to pressure, then grind it between two stones or in a mortar, and bake in thin cakes in the sun, or in a primitive oven. Then a kneading trough or a wooden bowl was used and the bread worked usually by the hands of the women. Leaven being discovered, it was used to raise the dough, and make it lighter. The cakes were cooked in primitive times on heated stones, and turned while baking. Then the average domestic oven was used as in the time of Christ. It was a stone or metal jar about three feet high which was heated inwardly or outwardly with wood, dried grass, stalks or vegetables, etc. Some of the ovens were holes dug in the ground, with sides plastered with clay and the floor made of gravel. In imitation of these ovens in the earth are the ones now being used by the British soldiers in Jerusalem. They are a row of semi-circular stone ovens covered with earth. These ovens are heated, then the fire is drawn, and the bread baked in them. The bread was, however, raised and prepared for baking by the heat of the sun. From an early time there were public ovens, and professional bakers furnished the community with bread. This baking business became so extensive in Jerusalem that there was one whole street called "Bakers' Street." There is this reference to it: "Then Zedekiah the king commanded that they should commit Jeremiah into the court of the prison, and that they should give him daily a piece of bread out of the baker' street, until all the bread in the city were spent. Thus Jeremiah remained in the court of the prison" (Jer. 37:21).—Selected by Sister Letta Morgan.

IT WOULD be a profitable proceeding to read Christ's discourses over once or twice with the simple purpose of noting to what extent he uses objects of the great outdoors to teach and illustrate spiritual truths. What more fitting figure of the union and communion between himself and his followers could be given than the vine and the branches, what more tenderly expresses his loving care than that of the shepherd and his flock? Good and bad soil, tares and wheat, sunshine and rain, darkness and light, fowls of the air and beasts of the field, grapes and figs, thorns and thistles, salt, oil, water, sand, flowers, grass, trees, fish, pearls, all come in for a share of his attention as a means of conveying needful lessons to his hearers—and, let us not forget that the lessons are for us as well as for those who literally saw his face and heard the words that fell from his lips.

SILENCE THAT IS GOLDEN

IT IS easy for one to poison a person's mind concerning another. There is measureless ruin wrought in the world by the thoughtless speaker. Characters are blackened, friendships are destroyed, jealousies are aroused, homes are ruined, hearts are broken. Let us never take up an evil report and give it wing on breath of ours. Let us never whisper an evil thing of another. We know not where it may end, to what it may grow, what ruin it may work. Words once spoken can never be gotten back again. We had better learn to keep the door of our lips locked and say no evil of any one. This is a silence that is golden.—Selected by H. H. Hawkins.

Remember the Helping Fund

Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble—in the day of evil, margin (Psa. 41:1).

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

FINALLY, BRETHREN, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honorable, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatso ever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things.—Phil. 4:8.

ONE REASON at least, why men pass through this world chafing, fretful and dissatisfied with their lot in life is just this—they have formed an overweening estimate of self and they find that neither God nor man treats them as they think they deserve.—Frederick W. Robertson.

THERE ARE blessings from God all around us,
We must thank him for gifts large and small,
But the gift of a dear little baby,
Needs the very best "thank you" of all.

The right reading of Hab. 2:2—a text almost universally misquoted— may be illustrated by the following story:

Smith keeps a savage dog on his premises, and near its kennel a board is displayed with this warning in large letters, "Beware of the dog."

"I suppose," said Jones, pointing to the warning, "you have printed that sign in large letters so that he who runs may read, as saith Hab. 2:2."

"No," said Smith, "but that he who reads may run, for so saith Hab. 2:2."

"Son of Man"

THE OLD Testament foundation for this New Testament designation of Christ is laid first in Psa 8:4, where the phrase occurs as prophetic of Christ personal, to whom it is afterwards applied in Heb. 2:6; and secondly, it is employed in Dan. 7:13 as descriptive of Christ corporate. The first points to Christ's genealogical connection with Adam, agreeable to Luke 3:23, 38; and the other to inherited mortality (Heb. 2:14). The terms in the Hebrew are Ben-Adam—son of Adam.

Bar-Enoch—son of mortality

The Bible

BIBLE IS but the anglicized form of the Greek word "Biblos"—another form of which is "Biblion," both of which are rendered "book" in all places in the New Testament, except where the 'little book" occurs, where the compound word is "Biblaridion" (Little Bible). With the word anglicized instead of translated, we read in the New Testament of

The Bible of the generation of Jesus Christ (Matt. 1:1).
The Bible of Moses (Mark 12:26).
The Bible of the prophet Isaiah (Luke 4:27).
The Bible of Psalms (Luke 24:42; Acts 1:20).
The Bible of the prophets (Acts 7:42).
The Bible of life (Phil. 4:3; Rev. 3:5; 13:8; 20:15; 22:19).
The Lamb's Bible of life (Rev. 21:27).
The Bible (Luke 4:20; Heb. 9:19; Rev. 17:8; 5:2-5, 7-9).
The Volume of the Bible (Heb. 10:27).
The Bibles (John 21:25; Rev. 20:12).
This Bible (Rev. 22:7, 9, 16, 19).
Little Bible (Rev. 10:2, 8, 9, 10).

Arithmetical Discrepancies Solved

DEAR BROTHER:

I WANT you to consider the Scriptures following, and favor me with "Editorial Comments" thereon:

And Joab gave up the sum of the number of the people unto the king: and there were in Israel eight hundred thousand valiant men that drew the sword; and the men of Judah were five hundred thousand men (2 Sam. 21:9).

And Joab gave the sum of the number of the people unto David. And all they of Israel were a thousand thousand and an hundred thousand men that drew the sword: and Judah was four hundred threescore and ten thousand men that drew the sword (1 Chron. 21:5).

Probably Joab counts the standing army. Such an important factor from a military standpoint would not likely be omitted. If they were counted, then Samuel is wrong: if they were not included, then Chronicles is wrong. One says the valiant men numbered 800,000; the other 1,100,000. Why this discrepancy in numbers? If one writer copied from the other, how comes the difference? How can you claim "verbal inspiration" in the face of this discrepancy? If you say Samuel's account is right, then the account in Chronicles is an exaggeration.

Editorial Comment

BOTH ACCOUNTS are correct and are perfectly free from anomalies. While they both refer to the same matter, they report it in two ways. Both are absolutely true. Samuel gives Joab's report of the census; Chronicles records the same thing, but does not give Joab's report, but states the number of Judah and Israel as they actually were. This is evidenced by the use of the word "all" in Chronicles which does not occur in Samuel. This fact suggests the reason why there are two accounts, and at the same time points to why there are, as our correspondent says, "discrepancies" in the two records. Let us look at a few of the reasons which are given in Chronicles, and the fog of infidelity will be driven away by the sunshine of truth.

First, we read that Joab "began to number but finished not, because there fell wrath for it against Israel" (1 Chron. 27;24). He used nine months and twenty days in working on the census (1 Sam. 24:8); then the work was interrupted by a preliminary intimation of God's displeasure.

Secondly, the record says that "Levi and Benjamin counted he not among them: for the king's work was abominable to Joab" (1 Chron. 21:6). This fact, of itself, is sufficient to account for the "discrepancy" between Joab's actual report, and the figures given in the first book of the Chronicles, which is distinguished from the other historical books in being devoted to precise and detailed statistics, while the others are principally given to historical occurrences.

Finally, it is possible the standing army, of which Joab was the head, was not included in Joab's report, because it was "the number of the people" that the king asked for (2 Sam. 24.2); that is, the people capable of military service, but not in the army; and secondly, because Joab, as the general of the army, had no need to number them, and would not be inclined to do it, even allowing there was need, for he disapproved the measure; and thirdly, because, if he intended to include it, he left it to the last, and was prevented from doing it by a prelude of judgment, "He finished not because wrath fell." If the army was not included, Samuel is right, without Chronicles being wrong. The difference between the two sets of figures appears to be the number of the standing army. The "discrepancy" is only apparent, having so many subsidiary elements as to leave room for actual harmony. We receive both accounts "in full assurance of faith" (Heb. 10:22).

Larger Hope a Mormon Doctrine

YOU HAVE said, in your editorials on Larger Hope, that the doctrine was taught by the Mormons. In saying this you have thrown the doctrine into bad company, I admit: but before accepting your assertion I ask you to give the proof that Larger Hope is a tenet of Mormonism.

WITH PLEASURE we respond to our correspondent's request. "Mormon Doctrine," written by President Chas. W. Penrose, was first published in 1877, and may be obtained today from the Zion Printing and Publishing Co., Independence, Mo. From this standard Mormon work we shall now give extracts which show the Mormon way of presenting Larger Hope. Either those who have advocated this theory among us have stolen the thunder from the Mormons, or the Mormons have thieved it from them—we do not know which. Anyway, the same reason is used, the same texts are quoted, and the same result is reached—salvation privileges after death. In some respects the Mormon theory is to be preferred, inasmuch as it requires the living to participate at least to some extent in the redemption of the dead. With the Catholics the living have to pay for the dead; with the Mormons, the living have to be baptized in the basement of the temple in their name; but with those among us who plead for the theory, no requirement is exacted of either the living or the dead! Larger Hope in its most dangerous form finds place among us. It can do them no harm to consider the Mormon arguments in behalf of posthumous salvation. They may learn a few things worth knowing. Following are extracts setting forth Larger Hope from Penrose's "Mormon Doctrine":

"One of the greatest difficulties in the way of inquiring minds, desirous of understanding gospel truth, is the apparent doom of the great bulk of the human family to perdition. The declaration is plainly and positively made in the Scriptures that there is no other name given under heaven whereby man can be saved, than the name of Jesus Christ. It is also proclaimed that "except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."

"Many millions of the earth's inhabitants have passed away without hearing the name of Jesus, or having any opportunity of the privilege of the second birth. And the query arises, must all these souls be lost in consequence? And if so can the God of the Bible be just? Further, the question comes up. If the world had been in error so long, and the church of Latter-day Saints is the only true church of Christ, what has become of the generations of professing Christians, who lived and died in the centuries between the loss of the gospel and the Priesthood and their restoration in the present age?

"The difficulty arises through lack of a correct understanding of the plan of salvation, and through the erroneous doctrins of unauthorized teachers. Orthodox "Christianity" affirms that the future state of man is fixed at death; that the departing spirit goes either to an eternal heaven or an everlasting hell; and that there is no possibility of change, but, to use a familiar saying, "as the tree falls, so it lies." The light of modern revelation rolls back the darkness of ages and unfolds the glorious plan of human redemption in its fulness, and the illuminated soul perceives the triumph of justice in union with mercy, through the extension of gospel privileges beyond the narrow sphere of this mortal life.

"Why should the opportunity to learn and the power to obey the truths of the gospel be confined to dwellers in the flesh? Is it to be supposed that when the immortal spirit leaves its domicile of clay, its powers of perception, of reason, of reception or rejection of truth or error, of submission or rebellion to the decrees of heaven, are buried with the decaying body? The idea is contrary to all the hopes of the life to come kindled in the heart by the promises of the gospel. It is also antiscriptural. There is nothing in holy writ which establishes any such absurdity. Paul declares that all men shall be judged by the gospel which he preached. If this is true and God is just, must not all men hear that gospel and have the opportunity of receiving or rejecting it? And if this privilege has not been granted to them while in the body, must it not be afforded them when out of the body? ("This privilege" of rejecting the gospel they must have! Wonderful privilege. Editor.)

"Peter states the Lord shall 'judge the quick and the dead,' and explains that 'For this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit.' He mentions this in connection with his history of the mission and works of Jesus, who, he tells us, was 'put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the spirit: by which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison.'

"That these spirits had been in the flesh, Peter makes clear by stating that they were 'disobedient . . . in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing.' The gospel was thus preached also to the dead, that they might have the same opportunities and be judged by the same gospel as the living."--pp. 29, 30.

"The living may be baptized for the dead. Other essential ordinances may be attended to vicariously. This glorious truth, hid from human knowledge for centuries, has been made known in this greatest of all divine dispensations. It is indeed light in the midst of darkness. It shines in the depths of the shrouded past, illuminates the mystic future, and reveals the infinite love of God and his tender mercy over all his works. It explains the meaning of Scripture texts long considered difficult and obscure. It links by loving ties the living with the dead. It shows why the fathers 'without us cannot be made perfect.' It opens the way of redemption for the hosts of departed heathens. It brings together in one all who are in Christ, even though parted by the veil that is drawn between the physical and spiritual spheres. It gives men and women the power to become 'Saviors on Mount Zion.' Jesus being the great Captain in the army of redeemers.

"In God's house all things are done in order. There is a right way and a proper place for the administration of ordinances for the dead. The living relatives of those who have departed without an opportunity of obeying the earthly requirements of the plan of salvation, if they have been born of the water and of the spirit, may stand in the name and place of the departed and receive the ordinances to be placed to the credit of the dead. Each sex represents its own. Men are not baptized for women, nor women for men. The first-born son in each family has rights of priority connected with this vicarious work if he has proven himslef worthy. The ordinances must be administered by those having authority, being set apart for the work, and must be duly witnessed and properly recorded. The books on earth must tally with the records in heaven.

"The place for these administrations is in a temple built to the Most High God, after the pattern revealed. The baptismal font, like the brazen sea in the temple of Solomon, is placed in the basement, under the place where the living are wont to assemble, typifying the place for the dead, all things spiritual having their correspondence with things natural. That which is done on earth, according to the divine instructions, is acknowledged in heaven, and is of force and effect in the world to come. Herein is manifested the power of the Holy Priesthood, loosing or binding on earth, and it is loosed or bound in heaven, all according to the commandments and revelation of the Most High through Jesus the anointed.

"This principle of proxy runs like a thread of gold throughout the entire robe of salvation. The Spotless One died in the place of the impure. He is the offering for the deadly sin of Adam. He is the propitiation for the evil deed of the world. The lamb on the smoking altar, the scapegoat turning into the wilderness, the sprinkling of atonement, all the sacrifices of the old covenant, as well as the infinite one of the new, are based on the doctrine of vicarious action and the divine acceptance of authorized substitutes. The manifestation of this truth in the last dispensation came from the prophet Elijah in the temple built to the Almighty by the Latter-day Saints in Kirkland, Ohio. On the 3rd of April 1836, he who was caught up to heaven without death, appeared to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery, and committed the keys of the power to 'turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers,' that the earth might be saved from a curse. The living are thus authorized, under prescribed conditions, to act for the dead, and the fathers in the spirit world look to the children in the flesh to perform for them the works which they were unable to attend to while in the body.

"Here is the peculiar blessing upon the heads of the Saints in the grand, culminating and completing dispensation of the fulness of times. To labor for the redemption of their progenitors until every lost link in the line of their ancestry, back to the Abrahamic stock from which they originally sprang, shall be taken up and welded into the perfect family chain. Herein is seen one of the blessings attending the perpetuation of a man's name in the earth; to die having no seed being considered in olden times, among the people of God, one of the greatest of calamities. Indeed the glory and dominion, and joy and rapture of the future state will be found to have intimate relation to the family condition, and the promise to Abraham of a numerous posterity was not merely of earthly portent but reached into the exaltation and beatitudes of eternal existence.

"This divine plan of vicarious action, is one of the broadest, brightest and lovliest leaves in the blessed tree of life. It bears a healing balm, for millions of earth's sons and daughters who have passed away without hearing the only name whereby men can be saved,' or who having heard, were never taught the way of salvation as ordained through Jesus Christ. It is redolent of the love and mercy of the Eternal Father, and bears the sweet perfume of charity and gratitude of the children reaching out after the fathers, of the fathers blessed in the work of the children, and of kinderd affection enlarged, cemented and perpetuated for ever and ever. It parts the veil between the physical and the spiritual, it softens the heart, and brings the living and the dead nearer to God, and it sanctifies the soul to obedience, worship and devotion, filling it with reverence and adoration of him who has devised this broad and universal plan for the redemption of the human race." --pp. 33, 34, 35.

DEAR RESTITUTION:

Find check for renewal for Thos. F. Rich, of Gates, Ore. He wishes to say he has been a reader since the early eighties--I do not just remember the date. He is 83 years of age, and has followed this belief since the seventies. He first took the "Bible Banner" and "Crisis"; then in 1881 he met and became acquainted with the now deceased Elder Pickett, and has been a close follower of this doctrine ever since.

Yours in Christ. THOS. F. RICH, per J. P. M.

THE RESTITUTION PUBLISHING CO. DEAR BROTHERS IN CHRIST:

PLEASE FIND enclosed one dollar to apply on subscription for The Restitution. I am still trusting lovingly and with all faith and hope in the promises of God through Christ, striving to walk according to the mind of Christ as it is in the word. Wife and I have been miserable this winter, and begin to feel age pushing on toward the end of this life; but be it so. Nevertheless we are looking for the soon coming of Christ in all quickening power for his body, the church; and I hope I may meet all the dear brothers and sisters in Christ in the first resurrection. Love and prayers for all.

S. E. BAIRD.

DEAR BROTHER:

WE HOPE this is not intruding. It seems that your patience has been tried (2 Thess. 1:4). A few days ago we mailed you a small contribution for The Restitution, and received, as it were, in return The Restitution for May 4th brimful of good things. Have read it prayerfully and with delight, and have been edified thereby. We desire earnestly to give our heartfelt thanks to God for you, brethren, with pen and ink (3 John 13, 14).

"The Church of God" is ably set forth as a light shining in a dark piece (1 Pet. 1:19, 20); next attention is called to the beautiful "Bow in the Cloud," so touchingly reminding us of God's everlasting covenant with his people and with mother earth (Eccl. 1:4). "When the wicked is cut off, thou shalt see it." Is my name written there? (Luke 4:17). We must keep it there (Rev. 3:1-5).

We are glad to see the discretion that is manifested in the editorial department of our dearest paper, The Restitution, and in the midst, too, of much gainsaying (Jude 11). Many seem to be going in the way of Cain (Gen. 4:5), as foretold (2 Cor. 11:13), speaking evil of the things they understand not (John 3:1-12). "Value of Plenary Inspiration" is ably discussed on page 198. "Loose Views" on the inspiration of the Bible should find no place among us. On same page we have "Extremes in Dress Rebuked." The explanation is beautiful. We teach by both example and precept: what we think and say is of more importance than what we eat and wear (Mark 7:15-20). Our conversation is an index to the heart (Luke 6:45). The wise and the rich do not feel their need of a Savior as the poor do (Jas. 2:4). So many men of the world have their portion in this life (Psa. 17:14).

Yours in hope,

R. A. HUMPHREYS.

DEAR RESTITUTION:

ON MAY 9th my wife and I drove about 100 miles (round trip) to hear Brother Lindsay and meet some of the brethren near Bosworth, Mo., crossing Missouri River at Waverly on ferry and having such a fine day for it. Met a goodly number of our faith and much pleased to meet them.

Had a fine basket dinner with plenty to spare. Soon made to feel at home. Heard an excellent sermon in morning and a timely exhortation in the evening on "spiritualism," which we should all heed as it is such a growing menace, full of deceit and false hoods.

The "Friendly Criticism" by Brother Parker on Brother Strickler's articles is indeed very commendable. We have greatly enjoyed Brother Strickler's articles and been much benefitted by them and must disagree in some things with Brother Parker. The friendly spirit in which he wrote is indeed pleasing to us all when necessary to disagree. If all stay in that spirit I think it would be well, and especially when one is trying to arrive at the truth. I cannot add a word to what has been said by Brother Strickler to throw any light on the subject, but would like to say a word or two anyhow. Brother Parker agrees. I believe, that people coming to a knowledge of truth must be raised from the dead whether faithful or not, and those not faithful receive death for their sins. He says "Adam was an enlightened sinner." Then he must be brought up, as I see it. Was Adam mortal? He must have been. Then surely he would have died at some future time if God had not put the death sentence on him: then when he died a natural death it was not in punishment for sin. He must be punished yet. Christ missed the second death by obeying and all it seems to me, must be punished with death who do not obey. It seems as though The Restitution gets better all the time. We have indeed some able writers. With brotherly love to all of like faith,

M. E. BRAY.

THE FLOWERS AND THE BIRDS

I READ Ethel Howard's first article in The Restitution. I was very interested in it because we are studying about birds at school now. My papa put up a bird house with six rooms in it, for the little birds to make nests in. I also think it is a very good subject because there is only one that can make flowers, birds and all pretty leaves and trees. Take a walk into the woods or field and notice all the queer leaves and pretty flowers they are growing. There is never a bird that falls to earth but our Father in heaven sees it. It says in the Bible that God sees every little sparrow, so how can he fall to see us? So when we see birds, queer leaves and flowers, we should think of God who made them.

JENNIE THOMAS.

JESUS LOVES CHILDREN

THE MASTER has come over Jordan,
  Said Hannah the mother one day,
He is healing the people who throng him
  With a touch of his finger they say;
Now I shall carry the children
  Little Rachel, and Samuel, and John,
I shall carry the baby Esther
  For the Lord to look upon.

The father looked at her kindly,
  But he shook his head and smiled,
Now who but a doting mother
  Would think of a thing so wild?
If the children were tortured with demons,
  Or burning with fever, 'twere well,
Or had they the taint of the leper,
  As do many in Israel.

Nay, do not hinder me, Nathan,
  I feel such a burden of care
If I carry it to the Savior
  Perhaps I can leave it there.
If he lays his hands on the children,
  My heart will feel lighter, I know,
And a blessing for ever and ever
  Will follow them wherever they go.

So over the hills of Judah,
  Along by the vinerows green,
With Esther asleep on her bosom,
  And Rachel, their brother, between,
Mid the throng that hung on his teaching
  Or waited his touch, or his word,
Mid the rows of proud pharisees bending,
  She pressed to the side of her Lord.

Now why should'st thou trouble the Master,
  Said Peter, with children like these?
See'st not how from morning till evening
  He teachest, and healeth disease?
Then Jesus said, "Forbid not the children,
  Permit them to come unto me,"
And he took in his arms little Esther,
  And Rachel he sat on his knee.

And he laid his hands on the brother,
  And blessed him with tenderest love,
And the weary heart of the mother
  Was lifted, all earth cares above,
And he said of the babes in his bosom,
  "Of such is the kingdom of heaven,"
And strength for each duty and trial
  That hour to her spirit was given.—Selected by

THE GIFT of a child, like life, may be yours and mine if we humble ourselves and become as little children.

COMPANION TEXTS

BY AUNTIE WINCE

It is some time since, perhaps fifteen months, that Sister Wince sent us the following for publication. At the time we could not use it. It was put away and has just come to light again. In the face of present things we feel it to be very appropriate and pass it on to you. We trust you will read it with understanding and profit.

"THINE HAND shall find out all thine enemies; thy right hand shall find out those that hate thee. Thou shalt make them as a fiery oven in the time of thine anger; the Lord shall swallow them up in his wrath and the fire shall devour them. Their fruit shalt thou destroy from the earth and their seed from among the children of men. For they intended evil against thee: they imagined a mischievous device which they are not able to perform" (Psa. 21:8-12).

"Upon the wicked he shall rain snares, fire, and brimstone and an horrible tempest: this shall be the portion of their cup" (Psa. 11:6).

"Thus saith the Lord God: It shall also come to pass, that at the same time shall things come into thy mind and thou shalt think an evil thought. And thou shalt come against my people of Israel as a cloud to cover the land; it shall be in the latter days; and I will bring thee against my land, that the heathen may know me when I shall be sanctified in thee, O Gog, by their eyes. Thus saith the Lord God; Art thou he of whom I have spoken in old time by my servants the prophets of Israel, which prophesied in those days many years that I would bring thee against them? . . . And I will plead against him with pestilence and with blood; and I will rain upon him and upon his bands, and upon the many people that are with him, an overflowing rain and great hailstones, fire and brimstone. Thus will I magnify myself; and I will be known in the eyes of many nations and they shall know that I am the Lord" (Ezek. 38:10, 16, 17, 22, 23).

I want you, dear young people, to read the passages that I have quoted for you from the Psalms of David and compare them with those I have quoted from the 38th of Ezekiel and see if you do not think as I do, that they apply to the same people, that their punishment coming as it does in "the latter days," is not to come in the very days in which we are living, or in the not far distant future at a time when there are still heathen on the earth and nations existent upon it before the Lord's name can be magnified, and that if this people, called Gog by Ezekiel, be Russia, we have only to wait for the fulfilment of the prophecy, until God's people Israel have re-settled the Holy Land and have become prosperous.

Already the means from whence "the overflowing rain and the great hailstones" are to come, are at hand, in the fast multiplying air ships of the present time. The Jews have suffered terribly from Russia, and God has not forgotten. It may seem strange that she will shift sides, and that some who are now her foes will become her allies, but this is just what will happen. Keep your eyes open for you will doubtless live to see Armageddon fought to a finish and Abraham's children put in possession of the land that is theirs already by an irrevocable deed.

GLEANINGS

SUCCESS is a failure when it has lowered your standards and made you a traitor to all of your highest and noblest impulses.

REFUSE TO be discouraged if the standard you have reached does not satisfy you. Keep on trying.

BE TRUE to the best of yourself; stand boldly by the truth.

TO TAKE the drudgery out of your occupation, put your heart into it; take pleasure in it, do it cheerfully and make it a stepping stone to something higher.

BE MASTER of yourself. Anyone can give way to fits of anger, but it takes a true man to be master of himself. Self-discipline strengthens the inner man, strengthens the will.

LOOK NOT mournfully into the past; it comes not back again. Wisely improve the present; it is ours.

IT IS usually the one who overcomes most that accomplishes most.

SOME OF the greatest gains made in life are made in dealing with petty annoyances.

A CHINESE proverb says: "To practice humility, look into the sky and remember what thou knowest not."

TODAY IS your day and mine—the only day in which to play our part. Let us then do our level best.

EVERY ATTEMPT to make others happy, every trouble left behind, every temptation trampled under foot, every step forward in the cause of what is good, plants our feet on higher ground.

LIFE'S BATTLES don't always go
To the stronger or faster man;
But soon or late, the man who wins
Is the one who thinks he can.—Sel. by F. A. Knapp.

GOOD READING

Read much; the mind, which never can be still,
If not intent on good, is prone to ill,
And when bright thoughts, or reasonings just you find,
Repose them careful in your inmost mind.—Benjamin Franklin.

And remember this, that no book you ever will be able to select for that active mind will be as well suited to your particular case as the Bible, for in it all things are good, there is no ill. Each thought is bright and every reasoning just, and if we will but repose them in our inmost mind they will serve us well.

YOU MAY own this plot of ground, and I that, but the horizon belong to him who can interpret it.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Whatever is, is Best

I know as my life grows older
  And mine eyes have a clearer sight
That under each rank wrong, somewhere,
  There lies the root of right,
That each sorrow has its purpose
  By the sorrowing unguessed,
And as sure as the sun brings morning
  Whatever is, is best.

I know that each sinful action
  As sure as the night brings shade,
Is somewhere, sometime, punished,
  Though the hour be long delayed.
I know that my life is aided
  Sometimes by the heart's unrest
And to grow means often to suffer,
  But whatever is, is best.

I know there are no errors
  In the great eternal plan,
That all things work together
  For the final good of man.
And I know as my life speeds onward
  On its grand eternal quest,
I shall say as I look towards the kingdom
  Whatever is, is best.—Sel. by MILDRED TUBBS.

Is Man an Immortal Being?

A Discussion of Man, Soul, Spirit, Death, Hell, and the Resurrection

THIS IS the question of the ages. In a modified form an old writer plaintively asks "If a man die shall he live again?" With him, there was no manner of doubt that man did die but, was it credible that he would live again? There is nothing of greater importance to us than a right knowledge and belief on this point. On the one hand the majority of churches deny that man ever dies—what seems death is only transition. With them the proper man is what is known as the "soul" with which they interchange the word "spirit." This soul, according to them, is immortal and therefore not subject to death. Death is only a shaking off the body—the mortal clod, the shell—setting the soul at liberty.

A steadily advancing minority, on the other hand deny this definition of death. They affirm that man really does die as Scripture states, but he may be made alive again by a resurrection. Indeed, this apparently is also the reply the author of Job gives to the above query, as anyone may verify by referring to the 14th chapter of his book.

These series of articles are principally to point out the conflict upon this subject (which is being eagerly discussed at present) of current theology of the majority, with the theology of the Bible and the position taken by the minority. They will be written in dependence and with profound reverence of the word and with a sincere conviction of the equality and brotherhood of man. They may provoke controversy—but let all be done in a courteous Christian spirit.

Vast and important issues hang on the right consideration and view of man's psychology. A truthful reply to the question, what is man? will at the outset clear away much of the accumulated rubbish of ages and help to the reply of the question heading these articles, "Is Man Immortal?"

WHAT IS MAN?

The God who made us is the best authority to consult and the psychology of Moses is, in consequence preferred to that of Plato and and Bishop Butler, to Pythagoras and John Wesley. We turn to Gen. 2:7: "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." Now did the Lord form man of the dust of the ground or a shell or body to put him into? Moses says it was "man." It is of the utmost importance that we settle in our minds what constituted man in the Mosaic record. If man was not made of the dust of the ground then the account is not correct, for Moses declares that "Jehovah God formed the man from dust of the ground and blew into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living animal" (Kitto's translation). This implies certainly that he was made out of something, that he did not exist from eternity, and it is positively declared that the accountable, intelligent being called man (Adam) was made of dust on the sixth day of creation That Moses made no mistake is evident from the 19th verse of the 3rd chapter when he reiterates the statement, "For out of the ground wast thou taken, for dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." Did he exist before that day? If so, the record is not true, and we are left to guess at its origin. Abraham corroborates Moses when he reverently addresses God "I am but dust and ashes" (Gen. 18:27). In perfect accord also is the apostle to the Gentiles, writing some 1500 hundred years after Moses: "The first man is of the earth, earthy" (1 Cor. 15:47). There is nothing in the Bible to override these direct statements.

If, then, the organization thus formed of dust whom Moses calls man is not man, who or what is man? It is often argued that it was the "breath of life" which was breathed into his nostrils. Let us examine this position. It will be observed that nothing wos added to man after his creation but the breath of life, hence this breath must be the man, if the material organization is not. Which is the accountable being that God dealt with and threatened? Is it the one formed of the dust, or the breath of life received into his nostrils? Let us suppose that this breath of life is the real man and that the body is only a shell and prison house to hold him during his stay upon earth This being true, whenever we find "breath of life" in the Hebrew or English, we shall find a man, whether in human or other organism.

THE BREATH OF LIFE NOT MAN

The word rendered "breath of life" in Hebrew is "n'shamah" and occurs twenty-four times in the Old Testament, so in Isa. 2:22, "Cease ye from man whose n'shamah is in his nostrils." Which is the man here? Can anyone suppose it is his breath? It would locate the man in his own nostrils! Again Gen. 7:22, "All in whose nostrils was n'shamah, of all that was in the dry land died.". "All" includes all flesh, "both of fowl and cattle, and beast and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth and man." See following verses. Moses, it will be seen, gives to man the very same breath of life, or spirit of life, which he gives to all creation. This is important to know, for the modern idea that man possesses a superior spirit is not supported anywhere in the Bible. Solomon is in perfect accord with Moses here: "Yea, they have have all one breath" or spirit. It follows in consequence, that if this breath of life is the real man, he exists not only in his own nostrils but in all the animal creation. Without pursuing this absurd position, it will be clear to everybody that the breath of life breathed into man's nostrils is not the man.

MAN IS DUST

Then what is man? Is the being formed of the dust properly called man, before he received the breath of life? Jehovah so called him, and he knows. If he was correctly denominated man before he received the breath of life, is it not equally correct to call him man after the breath of life leaves him? Man is dust, thus saith the servants of God. Man's body is dust, interpolate the churches, and with them sing in unison the poets, Knight, and Pope, and Longfellow. Here in this nutshell, then, of only four words, "man's body is dust," lays hidden the vast issues of this mighty controversy.

ONLY THE BREATH LEAVES MAN AT DEATH

The Bible nowhere teaches that anything leaves man at death but the breath (or spirit) of life. This breath causes the man to live, and we should naturally suppose that the withdrawal of this breath (or spirit) would produce death. Says David, "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth in that very day his thoughts perish." Again, "Thou hidest thy face, they are troubled, thou takest away their breath (or spirit) they die and return to their dust" Psa. 104; 146). David's son, rather discounted by our city preachers, agrees with his father and also with Moses: he writes in Eccl. 12, "Then (i e at death) shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return to God who gave it." The word rendered "spirit" is the same Hebrew word rendered "breath" in the above quotations. Now if the spirit in this verse is the real man, then as "returning" implies a former or prior presence, the conclusion is inevitable that the real man was a being with God before he was manifested as a babe at birth! This conclusion would flatly contradict Moses, but lands us beautifully into Madame Blavatzky's net. Here is just where clever Mrs. Bessant was basely entangled, and in the modern cult known as Theosophy, we have the revival of the old Pythagorean system of metempsychosis or the transmigration of souls. If it does not logically land us there, it insinuates itself into our belief and practice of Spiritualism, a a modern revival of the old necromancy condemned in the Bible.

But if the spirit is the breath of life, which is the direct cause of life and animation to man and beast, it returns to God, the original source of all life, to the spirit of all flesh. Make of this spirit anything you like, an entity or power or what not; it is not the man, and we are really concerned on that point only. And thus it is written, the spirits of good and bad men alike, yea, of all cattle and creeping things, of fish and fowl, all—all at death return to God, the source, the giver.

THE TESTIMONY OF THE NEW TESTAMENT

We have a telling example of this truth in the New Testament. Stephen is being cruelly stoned, and while expiring, he cries out, "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit" (Acts 7:59). And when he had said this he fell asleep! Was the spirit (breath, Greek, pneuma) the individual Stephen? If it was then he fell asleep. But it is evident that Stephen's spirit was not the individual Stephen, for the next verse adds, "And devout men carried Stephen to his burial and made great lamentation over him." "This is only his body," teach our modern doctors of Divinity. We prefer Dr. Luke's teaching who calls the mangled, bleeding corpse, the man, Stephen; and with him agree all the prophets.

Remarks

WHEN I made my last report I was just beginning a meeting at Rene, Col. I went to Arkansas City from Caldwell, and spent Sunday and Monday. The brethren had secured the Gem Theatre for Sunday, and advertized three meetings. But upon Sunday morning we were greeted with a blizzard of the worst kind. Finding it impractical to go to the theatre we went to Brother Jacob Reed's, and had a fair turn out of the brethren, and one Presbyterian preacher and undertaker combined. He seemed quite interested, but we are uncertain as to whether he was there to learn the truth, or looking for business. It cleared up in the afternoon, and we tried it at the theatre, but the storm had spoiled the day so far as any hope of outside attendance was concerned. However, our minister was out again. Could it be possible that he would allow himself to be interested enough to endanger his social position? That is a sad question. It does not look as though it could be in place to propound such a question, yet people will tamper with their future. We are told not to judge, but experience teaches us many things, and fits us to pass directly upon many questions without misjudging. This man was a minister and an undertaker. As a minister he wanted to be nice to the brethren, hoping no doubt they would return the compliment and attend his church some time; as undertaker no doubt he thought among soul sleepers was a good place to look for business, knowing their doctrine was closely allied to his business. But he heard something he was not expecting, and became lost in the subject, and came out in the afternoon, thoroughly interested. But now the crisis: will he push on to perfection and hope? Many a flower has been robbed of unfolding beauty, by some unseen insect cutting off the supply of nourishment; and when we have sown the seed for the flowers of the kingdom, many have been blasted in the budding. I feel my heart palpitate and tears start when I think of so many flowers having some human insect eating out the tap root, and the very vitals of truth with the result they simply fade and die.

On account of a wreck I had some trouble in getting from Arkansas City to Rene, Colo., my next point, but finally arrived. Brother Grimsley met me, and took me to his home, where I remained for several days, and enjoyed the stay very much.

Sister Grimsley used to be Eva Mehrens, of Blair, Neb., and it seemed like getting home to visit her and talk over old times; and the best of it is that her faith has not waned any with the passing years. She and Brother Grimsley are well versed in Scripture, and are a valuable help to the class at Rene. I baptized nine at this place last July, and set them in order, and had not met them since. We had bad weather here, as at Caldwell, and Arkansas City. We planned an all-day meeting on Sunday, but when Sunday came the worst blizzard that country ever knew was on. For several days we had to go to meeting with teams as cars could not run. The next Sunday we again planned for an all-day meeting, but lo! when Sunday came another blizzard was on; more snow fell this time, but the wind not quite as hard. Hundreds of cattle and sheep were driven into the lake and irrigation ditches, and drowned. I was at Brother Thimgan's during this storm.

I received a good many letters telling me how they had worried, and thought I might have been caught on the road, and was suffering, but the Lord provided, and I was surely in good hands each time; and I thank God for the good brethren. I am praying that our heavenly Father will richly bless them all. I had never met any of the people of Arkansas City before, except Sisted Long. I met her in 1898 in Omaha at a conference, but I was so thankful to find her standing firm for every true principle of Christian faith and duty. My visit at Brother and Sister Chaplin's, Reed's, Randolph's Coulsom's, Long's and Harlick's will long be remembered. The meeting at Rene was so hindered by bad weather it seemed we could not overcome it. The time came to bid them good bye and hurry away to where others were anxiously waiting their turn.

On Friday morning, the 21st, we arrived in Kansas City and crossed the river near Randolph where Sister Morgan had arranged for the next meeting. She is so earnest and longed to have the gospel preached to her neighbors, and while she is loved and respected, her belief is of course, unpopular; and when she saw the indifference manifested, her heart sank in despair. When the meeting closed, she still stood alone; the look of sorrow in her face and tears in her eyes were pitiful to see. I told her we had sown the seed, and must leave the result with God. She took courage and thanked him for strength, after a spell of sickness to attend the meeting, and the good it had done her. Over 20 years ago I preached in that community when Brother and Sister Calkins lived there. Brother Calkins now sleeps, but Sister Calkins came over on Sunday and after the lapse of years and many changes, was on the spot when years before, surrounded by her children and her husband by her side, she had hallowed the place by having the truth preached. Dear old Brother and Sister Carpenter were still there, and we were all at Sister Morgan's for Sunday dinner after the service. Letta, as is familiarly known, is a daughter of Brother and Sister Carpenter, and it was a joyful meeting to them. Once more on the old ground where Sister Calkins had brought the truth to them, and they accepted the message, and I, the messenger who had been the humble instrument in the hands of God to bring them to Christ —you can perhaps imagine how those few hours were enjoyed.

In this age all good times and things must end, so the time came to say good bye, and hasten on where others were anxiously waiting our coming. You will remember in a former report I told of Sister Lawrence and Sister Leasly coming to Kansas City to be baptized. You would only have to know them to realize it would be but a short time before they would be calling for help in behalf of those whom they love, and so now I am at Sister Lawrence's home writing this report and trying to interest the people in the truth, and persuade them to save themselves from this untoward generation. The result I will, the Lord willing, tell you all about in my next report. Nebraska points have consented to wait while I met these appeals, and their kindness in so doing is appreciated.

Oh the great indifference that has come upon the people. They do not seem to realize it. Every thing is looked after and attended first, then if any time is left it is given to the church. And this indifference is growing with leaps and bounds. It looks like the time was not far off when our efforts would become wholly futile; but what about the body of Christ? Jesus said because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold. When we see so much indifference in the world and so little love, we naturally turn to the brethren, and if we find in them the lack of that principle which underlies, and upon which the whole structure is founded, it is sad indeed. The more iniquity we see, the more we are tried and persecuted, the more we should be drawn together and feel nearer by each added trial. As these trials increase with each passing day, our love should deepen in proportion. If not, how are we going to be fortified for the last great conflict? When we feel that deep seated, and pure love of the brethren whom we have seen, then we can realize our love for God whom we have not seen.

Let us watch, for these times are different from any we have had before. We need courage and strength to overcome and be victorious. May the Lord keep us from the evil of this wicked generation, is my earnest prayer.

ALMUS ADAMS.

Whence the Interchurch Movemeut?

WHENCE THE Interchurch World Movement? Is it of God, or of man? We fear it is of man, for these reasons:

I. MONEY IS THE FIRST ESSENTIAL.

OUR LORD did not say, "Tarry ye in Jerusalem until ye be supplied with money," but, "until ye be endued with power from on high." Of course this charge will be stoutly denied, and we believe there are noble exceptions; yet in the literature which has come to hand the word "budget" and corresponding words occur so many times than the name "Holy Spirit" that we are constrained to look upon the movement as the beginning of a great church trusts on a commercial basis. Such an institution looks just like the Laodicean church of the Apocalypse: "I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked."

II. IT HAS NO DISTINCTIVE DOCTRINAL MESSAGE.

Every great movement of the Christian church, ordained of God, has been based on a definite doctrinal message and a call for separation from the world. But no such burning message accompanies this movement. In fact, one can believe most anything as long as he falls in with the movement. There is a call for union of effort without union of faith; a fusion of endeavor with a confusion of doctrine. This is not God's way of doing things, and will lead to defeat rather than to victory.

Furthermore, by catering to the world, in recent times, in all forms of amusement; by a criticism of God's Word which has produced unbelief in pulpit and pew; by a relation to civil powers that looks like spiritual adultery, the church has gotten filled up with unregererated members that have not "tasted the good Word of God and the powers of the world to come." Yet the Interchurch Movement, in its zeal for the realizatin of its dreams, seems to ignore all this and is determined to cross over into Canaan without first being cleansed of the iniquity of Baal-peor. Will the ark of God move forward until Israel have sanctified themselves? Never! and we are warned not to move until the ark moves (Josh. 3:4, 5).

III. IT IGNORES THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST.

The doctrine of our Lord's return to earth is so prominent in the New Testament that to eliminate it would make the Book unintelligible. It was preached definitely and emphatically by Jesus and his apostles at the beginning of the Christian movement, and has been announced by holy men until now. Yet now, at the close of the age, amid the crash of nations and other last-day prophetic conditions, a great movement is started which apparently knows nothing about Christ's return! Is this of God? Has he changed his mind and purpose? Judge ye.

IV. IT HAS AN UNSCRIPTURAL OBJECTIVE.

The conversion of the world is the objective of the Interchurch Movement. Where did they get this? Not of God, for he says that the tares and the wheat must "grow together until the time of the harvest," and the "harvest is the end of the world." Then it must be of man. Moreover, the Great Prophet, in his Mount Olive discourse, said that the Christian dispensation would have just such evils as had always been, and that instead of witnessing the world's conversion at its close there would be alarming wickedness on every hand; the days of Noah and Lot would be repeated, and an unready world would wail at the "sign of the Son of Man in heaven." Whence then this Interchurch Movement? Does God inspire visions contrary to his writen Word? I trow not.—Milton C. Burtt.

Obituary

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.—Psa. 116:15.

Mrs. Mary Cordray passed away at her home, 1131 S. Lafayette St., South Bend, Ind., May 17, 1920, after an illness of a few hours. She was born May 3, 1851, in South Bend, and lived in this vicinity all her life. She was married to Samuel Cordray in 1872 and became the mother of two sons, Edward and Charles.

She united with the Advent Church more than fifty years ago, and was a member of the South Bend Church of God at the time of her death.

She leaves her husband, Samuel Cordray, two sons, Edward Cordray, of 1599 South Michigan St., South Bend, and Charles Cordray, of 4702 Park Ave., Chicago. Also four brothers, Leonard, Henry, and Georpe Peiffer, of Napanee, Ind., and John Peiffer, of Bremen, Ind., and one sister, Miss Lizzie Peiffer, living with her.

Funeral services were held from the residence on Wednesday, May 19, conducted by the writer. We spoke from 1 Cor. 15 on the subject of the resurrection. The home was filled with the friends and neighbors of Sister Cordray who came to pay a tribute of respect and love to her memory.

Remember the Helping Fund

Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble—in the day of evil, margin (Psa. 41:1).

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

Little sins have a fearful power of eating out the believer's heart. The ants of a tropical climate will surround their prey, and after destroying it, eat it out so thoroughly, and yet delicately, that at a distance it may appear still alive. But when the storm comes it crumbles. So falls the professor whose inner life has been destroyed by little sin.

In the vegetable world there can be no growth, and eventually therefore no life, without heat, light, and moisture. Neither can we grow nor live in the spiritual world without God's love to warm our hearts and kindle our zeal, and the revelation of his word to give us light, and the well of water springing up into everlasting life—that permanent life of God enjoyed by the sons and daughters of the Lord.

Biblical Proverbs

THE SENSES EXERCISED BY REASON OF USE. It is the glory of God to conceal a thing; but the honor of kings is to search out a matter (Prov. 25:2).

LAMENTABLE SCARCITY OF FAITHFULNESS. Most men will proclaim every one his own goodness, but a faithful man who can find (Prov. 20:6).

PRAISING THE WICKED, AN ABOMINATION. They who forsake the law praise the wicked, but such as keep the law contend with them (Prov. 28:4).

GIVING TO THE RICH A GREAT SHAME. He who oppresseth the poor to increase his riches, and he who giveth to the rich shall surely come to want (Prov. 21:16).

EVERY DAY TRICKS OF TRADE. It is nought, it is nought, saith the buyer; but when he is gone his way, then he boasteth (Prov. 20:14).

FEMALE INDISCRETION. As a jewel of gold in a swine's snout, so is a fair woman who is without discretion (Prov. 11:22).

MUTUALLY ABOMINATED. An unjust man is an abomination to the just, and he who is upright in the way is abomination to the wicked (Prov. 29:27).

LIKE A BRUTE. Whoso loveth instruction loveth knowledge, but he who hateth reproof is brutish (Prov. 12:1).

THE TRUE BASIS OF COMMEDATION. A man shall be commended according to his wisdom, but he who is of a perverse heart shall be despised (Prov. 12:8).

A GIFT BLINDETH THE EYES. A man's gift maketh room for him, and bringeth him before great men (Prov. 18:16).

THE ONLY PRAISEWORTH WOMAN. Favor is deceitful and beauty is vain; but a woman who feareth the Lord, she shall be praised (Prov. 31:30).

HOW TO TELL A FRIEND. A friend loveth at all times (Prov. 17:17).

THE WORLD'S FRIENDSHIP. The poor is hated even of his own neighbor; but the rich hath many friends (Prov. 14:20).

DISPOSITION WILL OUT. Even a child is known by his doings, whether his work be pure, and whether it be right (Prov. 20:11).

A GOOD JOB. There shall be no reward to the evil man; the candle of the wicked shall be put out (Prov. 24:20).

Brother McLauchlan's Testimony

OUR READER have heard, of course, of Brother Robert McLauchlan. He was rich, and had a wide reputation for good works. He died several years before we came to Cleveland, consequently we had not the pleasure of his personal acquaintance. The love in which he is held by those who knew him, however, proves that he was a brother beloved. Of his soundness in the faith he has left evidence in a volume of 503 pages called "Addresses and Miscellaneous Papers on Bible Themes." Since his death many of our brotherhood have been led to think that Brother McLaughlan believed in Larger Hope and countenanced open communion. To such the following quotation from page 152 of his book will be both interesting and enlightening reading:

"To this parent error (the immortality of the soul) may be traced on the one hand the revolting doctrine of eternal torment, and on the other the equally baseless subterfuge of universal restoration; both human inventions. The one destroying and maligning the character of God as a relentless tyrant, unmindful of the sufferings of his creatures, who will eternally writhe in hopeless misery, which is wholly vindictive, never having been intended for any reformatory purpose, and the other holding out to the sinner a false hope, that however wicked and base he may become, and fall so hopelessly that there is nothing more for him in this life, till he is transferred to an 'undiscovered country,' and a 'fairer clime,' and have another chance, where he will be 'forced' forward by the invitable law of progrss (Chautauquan, March, 1891). Who can tell how the world has been corrupted through such false theories as these, and how simple the human mind to be deceived with such sophistry. The question arises where those knowing ones get their information about the conditions to prevail in 'an undiscovered country,' and how they knew it will be a 'fairer clime' and all about the 'forcing process' under 'the inevitable law of progress.' In this life men are left to the freedom of their own will, although directed what to shun, and what to pursue. If they follow the teaching of divine inspiration, resist evil and persevere in the path of duty, they form character, and place themselves on the side of righteousness, but in the 'fairer clime of that 'undiscovered country' if they are to be 'forced forward' by the inevitable law of progress there can be no character formed. The creatures of such 'forcing process,' under inevitable law, can only be machines that is all, and nothing else.

"A beautiful outcome this, as the production of the Elysian fields invented by vain dreamers of whom we are well warned in the word of God.

"In opposition to all such human theories and vain delusions the teaching of Scripture rises like an impregnable bulwark, an unmoveabl tower, an impenetrable armor. That word declares, 'The soul that sinneth it shall die.' 'The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord' (Rom. 6:23)."

The Real Issue Plainly Stated

UNDER THE title "A Critique," in this issue, a correspondent complains that Brother Knapp has misrepresented the doctrine of Larger Hope in calling it a "second chance." That this view misrepresents the writer's view of the doctrine is probable; but we presume Brother Knapp was speaking of systems and not individuals. Larger Hope is perhaps the most universally believed dogma in the world. The term comprehends Universalism, Mormonism, Brahminism, Hinduism, etc. "The faith of millions of people in India," says Sister Elizabeth A. Reed, "for nearly two thousand years, has been built largely upon the dogma that each being must pass through 8,400,000 lives, which is the natural lot of all souls. These forms through which all must pass are supposed to consist of 2,300,000 quadrupeds, 900,000 aquatic animals, 1,000,000 feathered animals, 1,000,000 creeping animals, 1,700,000 immoveable forms such as trees and stones, 1,400,000 human beings, and although there is no gradual rise in position it is only in this last form that final emancipation may be gained" ("Hinduism in Europe and America," page 22). Larger Hope is cosmopolitan, and is very accomodative to the whims of the individual, if only he will tolerate it, ranging from one chance to 1,400,000. With Universalists, Theosophists, and other cults, there are as many hells of probation as there are kinds of sins, so that man's chances to be saved are literally infinite. Brother Knapp was certainly conservative in giving only two probations when as a matter of fact Larger Hope, in some of its most numerous and powerful systems, gives multiplied millions.

But the purpose of this editorial is to call attention to the real issue under discussion. The thing to be proved is the thing assumed. Thus: "If it can be positively proved that all have had a chance, then it is all settled." "If it can be positively proved that all have had a chance"—the very thing that nobody believes! Again, the issue is befogged when we say: "How can God be just and deal equally with all people and let some of them die ignorant of any plan of salvation, and remain dead to all eternity, and yet at a subsequent date give their descendants a right to salvation." The matter is made worse by asking us to read Psa. 17:2; Ezek. 18:25; 33:17. In the first reference we are told that David prayed, "Let thine eyes behold the things that are equal"—away back in David's day! In the last two references, written 549 B. C., God say, "Is not my way equal?"– a challenge for the times! Is God just? Can he hide the gospel from one man and reveal it to another, and yet be just? Can he let some of our forefathers die ignorant of the truth then subsequently reveal the gospel to some of their children—can he do this and yet do right? These and a hundred other vicious questions lurk in the heart of every men who harbors the doctrine of salvation for unbelievers after death. "Who hath directed the Spirit of the Lord, or being his cousellor has taught him?" (Isa. 40:13). The Lord's cousellors are very numerous; those who presume to teach him are legion; but such presumption can only lead to destruction. Those who advocate posthumous probation have not the knowledge, it seems, of giving it to us in a systematic way. They charge God with folly either positively or constructively, quote a few texts off hand, and then reason on a premise assumed. Not a man comes forth and demonstrates the doctrine scripturally and logically. As a suggestion we submit a plan by which they can build up the theory and give it some appearance of logical lucidity. To convince the intellect and satisfy the heart let them show that—

I. For thousands of years God has unjustly withheld from the masses of men an opportunity to be saved.

II. In the future this unjust God will become just, and give to the very ones from whom he has withheld a chance, the chance which he has denied them, and which they deserved.

III. The resurrection is to be universal.

IV. It must be shown exactly when this universal resurrection takes place. The chronology of the resurrection is of vital moment. The resurrection must be shown to be at the right time; if not at the right time the whole theory breaks down.

V. Finally, it must be shown that the same people who have died without a chance will be given a chance to be saved AFTER they are raised from the dead. An exegetical article written after this manner would be a serious attempt to establish the doctrine on Bible authority, and would be welcomed by The Restitution.

Conflicting Genealogies Explained

IN EZRA 2:12 the children of Azgad are 1,222, but in Neh. 7:17 they are 2,322. Which is right? To say the greater number includes the lesser is no answer to the difficulty. If I prefer to take Ezra's account, his number does not include Nehemiah's. Then it is said the whole congregation was 42,360, while the number of the families mentiontd add up in Ezra to 29,818 only, and in Nehemiah, to 31,089. Why are these and similar contradictions in the Bible?

Editorial Comment

OBSCURITIES ARE not contradictions. The contradictions, so-called, are merely apparent difficulties. But why are there even "apparent contradictions" in the Bible? Frankly, to some degree they are inevitable. They belong to the variations inseparable from the artless presentation of truth. Doubtless God could have prevented them all. Their existence in the record "which God hath given of his Son" (1 John 5:10) may be the result of his design to stimulate the intellect, try the faith, and beneficially develop the faculties of his children. At the same time it may have been a part of his purpose to put up barriers and stumbling blocks in the way of the skeptical and the profane. This dual principle is discernable in his constitution of nature. The surface of the earth is not perfectly flat: the conditions of life are not fenced off from peril. There are precipices and deep waters and thousands of dangers—all of which are to be avoided by the exercise of reasonable faculty. The necessity of this exercise stimulates development. Those who fail to exercise themselves in wisdom's ways destroy themselves in foolishness. The Bible is easily recognized by intelligence as the word of the all wise God: the difficulties it contains only serve to sharpen the wits and whet the appreciations of the reader who has a loving and honest heart.

Now as to the discrepancies in the numbers given by our correspondent: the general facts in the case are sufficient to suggest a satisfying explanation. Nehemiah's "reckoning of the people by their genealogies" (Neh. 7:5) was several years after Ezra, therefore we naturally look for emendations of the list to be given. If you ask for the reason for emending the list, we answer that while the original list was correct when made, it would not stay right for long. Those who actually start-with Ezra from Babylon are correctly enumerated, but there would be dribblings afterwards of different persons of the same families left behind in Babylon; they would change their minds and go after their kindred to Jerusalem. A case of this kind, just before starting, is actually given in Ezra 8:15-20. Such, although a part of the returning band of captives, would not be included in the first list, but might be added in an emended list which Nehemiah found; and, of course, the list found by Nehemiah would be the final one. Ezra would give the one first made: Nehemiah, the one as finally emended. Positively both would be right when made. Any one who has had experience with a city directory or telephone book only a year old is aware how liable such lists are to alterations without involving the conclusion that these books are "full of contradictions." either before or after alteration. Add to the fluctuating nature of genealogical lists the fact that there is nothing to show that the numbers in detail, as given by our correspondent, give the whole of those forming the sum total, and all is clear. On the contrary, there are families whose members are not given, as "the children of Habaiah, the children of Koz, the children of Barzillai (vs. 63; Neh. 7); and yet they are included in "the whole congregation." Having given the numbers of certain families, it is evident the account then tells the number of "the whole congregation" together, as a piece of separate information. Study the families and places and it will appear to you that only men belonging to Judah, Benjamin, and Levi were particularly enumerated: members of other tribes being lumped in the sum total.

"The Church of God" in India

THE FOLLOWING appeal recently appeared in what purports to be a church of God paper. Will you please advise us if the report is true, and if it merits our support.

THE Bible Faith Mission of the Church of God in India is doing a great work.

The plan upon which the work is carried forward is to use converted native Indian workers. At present the Mission employs ninety workers, twenty of which have entered the field in two years. Of the thirty four schools now taught, twenty-six have been recognized by the government, having 1000 pupils in Bible Faith Instruction. There are 36 churches with about 3300 members, and 56 preachers. The whole work is half self-supporting. The mission field is Madras, Tinnevelly and Travancore in South India; this will give the reader an idea of the nature, progress, and location of the work.

Charles R. Vedantchari is General Supt. of the whole work. He has no head quarters or central home from which to direct the work no place where to keep necessary books and records, or to which he may retire to rest; or to counsel with his workers, arrange dates and receive personal reports from them. The printing office needs to be centrally and permanently located: and a central head-quarters has become a necessity to facilitate the work.

Brother Vedantchari is a native of India—a college graduate, capable, humble, careful, zealous, a Bible scholar, and thoroughly devoted to the cause of Christ.

The Church of God in Iowa, and members of the State Conference, and any others interested, are asked to join other states in helping to secure a central building to be used as head-quarters for the "Bible Faith Mission Workers of the Church of God in India." Every member of the body of Christ should regard it as a privilege to contribute something toward this pressing need of our Lord's work for the people of "dark India." Will you help? If so, do it now. The reward is sure. Send all contributions to A. J. Eychaner, Supt., Cedar Falls, Iowa.

FROM INDIA God banished the gospel over eighteen hundred years ago (Acts 16:16). We have not heard from authentic sources that he has returned his favor to that benighted land since. In our opinion the Church of God in India, of which above report speaks, is merely a name. Our objection to helping the so-called Church of God in India follow:

I. We are personally acquainted with Mrs. Taylor, the chief official, we believe, of the Bible Faith Mission in India. We have had an interview with her about this mission matter, and the result was not satisfactory. She seemed proud of the fact that her mission was being supported by different sects of modern Babylon. We know that the sects have never been willing to support the truth; and the very fact that they help maintain this mission in India argues to us that the mission does not represent the truth.

II. If it be a fact, as the report says, that they have ninety workers, thirty-four schools, one thousand pupils, three thousand three hundred members, and fifty-six preachers—if all this be true, flourishing India should have pity on poor America. Instead of America evangelizing India, India should evangelize America. They should at least send us a few preachers, as they have about fifty more than we have in both Canada and the United States combined.

III. Lastly, we are personally acquainted with A. J. Eychaner, the "superintendent" of the affair in this country. He is known from coast to coast as a confirmed Josephite, Sabbath keeper, and vilifier of God's word. We have heard him with our own ears teach these gospel nullifying traditions of men. That a paper professing to be "a church of God paper" should give publicity to an attempt to re-establish the gospel in a land from which it has been banished by divine decree, fathered by the most noted heretic in America, shows in what "perilous times" (1 Tim. 4:1) our lot is cast. Let the few, weak, and struggling people of God in this country banish from their minds visions of success in distant lands, and attend to the "Father's business" at home (Luke 2:49).

DEAD BROTHER:

OUR COPY of The Restitution of the 11th inst. was late. Had written you concerning it ere it came. We were so glad to get it. However, it brough sadness to our heart—the news about our esteemed Brother D. C. Robison having to lay aside his pen. May his sickness be for the glory of God (John 11:4). His work for our paper, The Restitution, began five years before our conversion to the truth as it is in Jesus (John 17:17; Acts 8:12-39). Since then our poor soul has been filled with joy unspeakable (1 Cor. 9:26, 27). Brother D. C. Robison has helped us in our trials very much. "Another View of Moses and Elijah" seems to need help. Let the Holy Scriptures give us light as it is. As Paul advises to "help those sisters who had helped him" (Phil. 4:3), with God's help and your leave, we will try and let our Savior speak first. "Hear ye him:" "Tell the vision to no man until the Son of Man be risen" (Matt. 17:1-9). He calls it a vision. It was a vision like Peter's on the house top (Acts 10:19). The men see each other in vision before they meet personally. Anyway Peter, when telling it later, says nothing about Moses and Elijah (2 Pet. 1:16-19. "Not die any more" (Luke 20:36). This would put Moses first, whereas Christ is the first born from the dead. See what Moses said in Acts 3:22, 23; also Dan. 12:2; and Paul in 1 Cor. 15:20; Heb. 11:40. Jesus was the first to be raised to eternal life. Moses was seen in the vision to show God's power and to represent the dead in Christ; Elijah the living.

R. A. HUMPHREYS.

DEAR BROTHER HUGGINS:

I AM again asking a favor of you. We want to again ask you to put a small notice in The Restitution so the brothers and sisters who are scattered over Texas may see it.

AUGUST MEETING IN TEXAS

WE HOPE to begin a meeting at Gonzales, Texas, July 30th, and continue over the 2nd Sunday in August. Members of the Church of God from a distance are cordially invited to come. Those desiring to come please notify Mrs. E. L. Johnston, Gongales, Texas. We thank you kindly, dear brother, for helping us this much. We are small in number, but we are doing some good by having our meetings.

Your sister in hope,

MRS. E. L. JOHNSON.

Let those who talk about the "Church of God in India" (see an editorial in this issue) have mercy at home by helping our weak and scattered brethren and sisters in Texas. Why help others so far away from home when we are in such destitution ourselves? Does not charity begin at home?—Editor.

A Critique

EDITOR RESTITUTION:

IN ISSUE of May 11th Brother Knapp says "Another leader tells you if you do not find the door in this life you will have another chance sometime." In the interest of fairness to all, and for no other reason than to promote truth, I ask him who believes anyone has another chance? I have investigation a good deal and believe in stating everything so it fairly represents all; and I have failed to find anyone who believes in a second chance. I have held twenty-six of twenty-seven debates, and have never misrepresented an opponent. I went to a Catholic priest once and told him I often in my sermons referred to the Catholics as a people, and said, "I want to be fair with you, and tell you before hand I am opposed to your doctrines; and now if under these circumstances you can let me have a book that teaches your doctrine, I would be glad to get it. Then when I refer to you I will have it from headquarters." He gave me a book entitled "The Foundation Doctrines of the Catholic Church." This enabled me to clinch any reference to what they believed, and there was no come back. That forced them to do the explaining, so when I refer to the Russellites or any one else as believing in a second chance, and they deny it, it forces me to do the explaining, and say all have had a chance. The come back is, prove that. Here is where the whole matter rests. If it can be positively proved that all have had a chance, then it is all settled. So let us confine ourselves to the real issue and settle the question

In May 4th issue the same Brother says: "All that died prior to this time were aliens from the commnowealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world. They died ignorant of any plan of salvation, so their destiny was eternal death." I am after truth and will gladly accept anything that is truth. So Brother please enlighten me so I may stand without doubt as to whether this or that is true. Paul tells us those people your refer us to in Eph. 2:12 were the Gentiles before they were given a chance, or had a right to the gospel. Finally, to the surprise of the apostles, God visited the Gentiles and gave them a right to salvation hitherto denied them, as you say. Now dear Brother, here is what I want made clear: How can God be just and deal equally with all people and let some die ignorant of any plan of salvation, and remain dead to all eternity, and yet at a subsequent date give their descendants a right to salvation, or in other words, enlighten them and bring them into everlasting life, while their forefathers were left in ignorance and eternal death. Is the inequality here yours or God's? Please turn and read Psa. 17:2; Ezek. 18:25; Ezek. 33:17.

STRENGTH THROUGH UNITY

SOME PEOPLE seem to think that this is a children's page, and so it is; but it is more: It is just as its name implies, a "Young People's Page." At times we have so arranged it that it only would be of interest to the very young, and at other times the articles have been such that those of more tender years could not be interested through lack of understanding.

Our main object is to so serve the Master that God will be honored and glorified, and we feel that the best way to do this is to back up; aid and assist the parents in their labor of love in keeping their young men and maidens from the contamination of the world .Father and mother have taught you the way of truth and righteousness. Mother has taught you how to pray; father has opened up to you the mystery of God in teaching you that "Christ in you is the hope of glory." But a time comes when you are called into the business world and the personal influence is missing. Mother and father can not follow you into the factory, shop, store or office, and—if your experience is the same as mine was and is you will find a decidedly strong worldly influence all about you. The average man, even though he be a church member, knows not God nor the things concerning his Christ: and should a youth show any interest in things religious he is looked upon as a soft head, a ninny, a sissy. Such things are all right for women and girls, but for a man never!

We want this page to counteract this influence for worldliness. We want to work hand in hand with father and mother in keeping you in that strait and narrow path that leads to life everlasting. We want you to know, feel, and understand that there are others of like age and situation who are able and willing to assist you, that you are not alone in your struggle; and that you can help them as they are able to help you; and it is with genuine pleasure that I state the Young People's Society, an auxiliary of the Church of God at Cleveland, Ohio, have promsied to send for publication on this page a short and pointed article of strength and encouragement every third week. The Young People's Society also requests that its name be placed at the head of this page as a special contributor, which request we are glad to comply with.

And now, young man and young woman, you have been "instructed in the way of the Lord more perfectly." Should you be tempted to forsake the gold and precious stones of "faith, hope and love" introduced to you by mother and father, and take up with the dirt and mire of worldly sin and pleasures, take encouragement from the thought that there are others who, though situated the same, have strengthened their power of resistance through faith in the Redeemer, by prayer to God, and by being knit together in love with others of like precious faith.

Should we go through the world in ease and comfort we might get salvation, but our glory would be slight. It is he who suffers trials, temptations, and tribulations and overcomes who is promised the exceeding great reward. We wish to aid you; we wish to encourage you; we wish to help you in every way so that you can and will overcome. We want you in your life, walk, and conversation to be a living praise to Christ, a living glory to God. Do not shirk from any useful or kindly act, however hard or repellant it may be. The worth of acts is measured by the spirit in which they are performed.

PRECIOUS MOMENTS

THIS YEAR is made up of twelve, months, or 52 and two seventh weeks, or 366 days or 8784 hours, or 527,040 minutes, or 31,622,400 moments. We wonder how many of these precious moments we will use to profit, and how many will be wasted. How much of this time will we use in the service of the Master, and how much in the furthering of the things of the world. It is only the substantial things that endure; the trifling things pass with the day.

In 1 Cor. we read, "The time is short"; in Ephesians we are admonished to "walk circumspectly . . . redeeming the time"; and in Revelation we are told "the time is at hand," and that there is 'time no longer." So it behooves us now, when we control our time to so use it in building on the firm foundation of Jesus our Lord, that the structure we erect shall endure throughout eternity. Today's business is to glorify God; and if we attend to our business in a business manner then will God, in the ages to come, glorify us. So in the face of this let me again ask the question, "How many of these precious moments will we use to profit, and how many will be wasted?" Answer for yourselves, but answer in a full assurance of faith to good deeds.

PLAY THE GAME

Written by Aunty Wince for Young People's Page

PLAY THE game of being glad,
Doleful faces make us sad.
Folks don't want you coming round
Snarling like a wounded hound:
And when e'er you come to stay
Wish that they could run away.
A much better thing you'ld do
If you laugh while eating rue.
'Twill not sweeten rue a bit
Crying, scolding, over it.
A happy face than doctor's pills
Is better much for curing ills.
Put your troubles on a shelf
Known to no one but youself.
But if you must grief disclose,
There is One already knows
And when eyes with weary dim,
O I beg you, go to Him.

GRAMMAR MADE EASY

Three little words words you often see
Are Articles, A, An, and The
A noun's the name of any thing—
As School, or Garden, Hoop, or Swing.
Adjectives tell the kind of noun,
As Great, Small, Pretty, White or Brown.
Instead of nouns the Pronouns stand—
His head, Her face, Your arm, My hand.
Verbs tell something to be done—
to Read, Count, Laugh, Sing, Jump and Run.
How things are done the Adverbs tell—
As Slowly, Quickly, Ill or Well.
Conjunctions join the words together—
As men And women, wind And weather.
The Preposition stands before
The noun, as In or Through the door.
The Interjection shows surprise—
As, Oh! how pretty, Ah! how wise.
The whole are called nine parts of speech,
Which reading, writing, speaking teach.

Consolation

THERE IS hope in the end of the righteous,
There is balm for the wounds of the heart;
The love of their Savior is precious,
In his kingdom he will give them a part.

Though trials and death may await them,
And friends all forsake and despise;
There is hope for those he has chosen,
In the first resurrection they'll rise.

There is naught in the world that can harm us,
If we trust in the crucified one;
His word is a balm and a solace,
To keep us in peace while he's gone.

Soon he is coming to claim all his own,
Then his face we shall ever behold;
We shall then know the joy of his presence,
As his sheep, the flock of his fold.

A Peculiar People

A PECULIAR people; not peculiar in dress, nor in manners, nor in language, nor in foolish, senseless forms and idiosyncracies; but peculiar in that it is separate from the world and the spirit of the world. It has the Spirit of Christ; a spirit of full consecration to the Lord, and separateness from the world and its selfish aims. It is peculiar in its adherence to the word of the Lord as its only law. It is peculiar in that it rejects worldly wisdom when it conflicts with divine revelation. It is peculiar in that it is in the world, but not of the world. It is peculiar in that it has a decided faith and acts in harmony with its faith, and with zeal. It is peculiar in that it is self-sacrificing, and knows no will but the will of its King. It is peculiar in that it knows the truth and is able to give a reason for the hope within, while others merely speculate and wonder and doubt. Selected by A. B. Luther.

August Meeting in Texas

WE HOPE to begin a meeting at Gonzales, Texas, July 30th, and continue over the 2nd Sunday in August. Members of the Church of God from a distance are cordially invited to come. Those desiring to come please notify Mrs. E. L. Johnston, Gonzales, Texas. We thank you kindly, dear brother, for helping us this much. We are small in number, but we are doing some good by having our meetings.

Your sister in hope,

Prophetic Signs of the Times

BUDDING FIG TREE, TURKEY'S DISMEMBERMENT, PEACE AND SAFETY CRY--WAR!

INTRODUCTION

WE ARE approaching the most momentous times in the history of mankind. Present-day events, when considered in the light of sacred prophecy, portray the rapid approach of the greatest world-wide upheaval in human affairs that the world has ever known. The approach of such times is felt by statesmen of all countries, while at the same time the greatest ignorance of the divine plan and predictions concerning the same prevails among them.

Though "Peace" has now been concluded, many of the world's most conservative and foremost statesmen have given expression to the prevailing opinion that the existing "Peace" can only be of short duration. They point out that the peace terms contain many germs of character that will be certain to develop into another world conflict. Such prospects, coupled with the existing world-wide chaos, cause us to hear from all quarters the question, "What is the world coming to?"

Back of the clouds that darken the political sky the servants of God see the dawn of the rising "Sun of Righteousness," who will come with "healing in his wings," that alone can be the cure of all the human ills of this sorrowing world.

It is always of interest to the student of prophecy to consider the signs of the times, especially in these eventful days and speak clearly of the end of the present existing order of things. These events, which we believe are in themselves prophetic signs, being fulfilment of prophecy, are as follows:

CURRENT SIGNS OF NOTE

"The Universal Unrest," "The New Jewish Nationalism," "Turkey's Loss of Mesopotamia and Palestine," "The Peace and Safety Movement," and "The World's Preparedness for War." A reference or two in connection with each of these items will suffice to show the relation of the present-day course of world events to prophecy.

As to the universal unrest and the Jewish nationalism, in Luke 21:22-26, we read of the Lord's prediction in regard to the dispersion of the Jews; also that the down-treading of Jerusalem by the Gentiles were fulfilled: "For there shall be great distress in the land, and wrath upon this people. And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: for the powers of heaven shall be shaken."

Surely it will be admitted that the powers of the political heavens, or governments, have been shaken since the Balkan War of 1912. Are not the waves of the seas of people in every country roaring?

THIS IN THE TIME SPOKEN OF

It will be readily seen that the present universal unrest is but a fulfilment of Christ's prediction. It is quite true it may be contended that the world has experienced periods of great unrest before; yes, and at many different times during its history, it can be added; but never under the present conditions. Previous times of unrest did not meet the requirements of this prophecy, as we shall see by reading from the 29th verse of this same chapter, where it is recorded, "He spake to them a parable: Behold the fig tree, and all the trees."

We learn from Daniel's 4th chapter that trees in some cases are designated to represent peoples and nations. What people or nation then is here represented by the "fig tree"? After reading a few more verses from the chapter under consideation we will turn to Joel for our answer.

"When they now shoot forth, ye see and know of your own selves that summer is now nigh at hand. So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand. Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass till all be fulfilled" (Luke 21:30-32).

The generation spoken of, we believe, is the generation in which the tree-nations are in the state of unrest here predicted, while at the same time the "fig tree" nation is beginning to bud forth into new national life.

Now, in Joel 1:6, 7, we read: "For a nation is come up upon my land, strong and without number, whose teeth are the teeth of a lion, and he he hath the cheek teeth of a great lion. He hath laid my vine waste, and barked my fig tree; he hath made it clean bare, and cast it away."

The Assyrians, who laid the vine of ten branches waste when they dispersed the ten tribes of Israel at the fall of Samaria, B. C. 720, are here represented as a "lion" (see Jer. 1:7). After this event the remaining tribe of Judah has been designated at times by the "fig tree."

THE BUDDING SIGN OF A LATE DEVELOPMENT

There has not been a time during the long dark ages since the fall of Jerusalem in A. D. 70 that the united "fig tree" nation has shown signs of natural life either during a time of world unrest or otherwise until now.

"Behold the fig tree and all the trees," said the greatest prophet that ever lived. The fig tree is shooting forth its political buds in the present day developments of the Zionist movement, while all the other political trees are in a state of turmoil, unrest and trouble. According to his words: "The powers of heaven shall be shaken" and "the sea and the waves roaring."

THE MORE SURE WORD OF PROPHECY

Now just one passage to show conclusively that the restroation of the Jewish nation has been predicted. In Jer. 33:14-16, we read, "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will perform that good thing which I have promised unto the house of Israel and to the house of Judah. In those days and at that time will I cause the Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David; and he shall execute judgment and righteousness in the land. In those days shall Judah be saved, and Jerusalem shall dwell safely; and this is the name wherewith she shall be called, The Lord our righteousness." Also, the 25th and 26th verses: "Thus saith the Lord, If my covenant be not with day and night, and if I have not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth; then will I cast away the seed of Jacob and David my servant, so that I will not take any of his seed to be rulers over the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; for I will cause their captivity to return, and have mercy on them." Read also Psa. 89:34-37.

THE RELATION OF TURKEY'S DISMEMBERMENT TO PROPHECY

In connection with Turkey's loss of Mesopotamia and Palestine we read in Rev. 16:12: "And the sixth angel poured out his vial upon the great River Euphrates; and the water thereof was dried up, that the way of the kings of the East might be prepared." Here we see that the power represented by the River Euphrates (which can be none other than the one through whose territory the river flowed) in these latter days must be dried up preparatory for the coming of "the kings of the East" or a "Sun's rising."

Jesus is the "King of kings," and it is testified in the last days his feet shall stand upon the Mount of Olives, in Palestine, and that he will set up his throne in Jerusalem. Clearly indicated in connection with the prophecy, we read that the Euphratean power of Turkey was to be rooted out of the land; and now, behold, we see it an accomplished fact. Its loss of Mesopotamia, which includes the Euphratean valley, fulfills this prediction of Rev. 16:12, with resecpect to the drying up of the Euphratean power, in the territory to be prepared for the setting up of Christ's kingdom on earth. The Turks have now lost the name of the "Euphrates river," having lost the Euphratean valley.

PEACE, PEACE WHEN THERE IS NO PEACE

In connection with the "Peace Movement" and "The world's preparedness for war" we read in 1 Thess. 5:1-3, "But of the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you. For your yourselves know perfectly that that day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say, Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them."

It is true that there has been plenty of peace talk in the past, but never concerted peace cry among the nations while the "fig tree" nation was budding forth into new national life. It is in the generation that shall not pass away until all be fulfilled that is, the one in which the national hope of Israel is revived and really budding into new life that the "Peace and safety" cry is to be made which will fulfill the conditions of this prediction of Holy Writ.

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS A SURE SIGN

The "League of Nations" is one of the greatest signs of the times in which we live. It is probably the last one of such great significance to the household of the "One faith" before their gathering before the Judge of all the earth. It is the unmistakable sign in the political heavens of the Lord's early return.

Turning to Matt. 24:29, 30, we find here a parallel passage to that quoted from Luke 21, but with the added reference to a sign in the heavens of the coming of the Son of Man. "Immediately after the tribulations of those days (that is, after the Gentile times, as we have seen according to the words recorded in Luke)—shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken: and then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in heaven, and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." Note that a world-wide mourning follows this sign, according to the 30th verse.

A WORLD-WIDE MOURNING TO FOLLOW

Now, if the sign to the household is to be in the political heavens and is not the cleaving of the Mount of Olives (Zech. 14:4; Acts 1:11), then we believe the sign to be the proposed League of Nations, which will be followed by a "destruction," causing the "mourning," and will eventually lead up to the "Battle of Armageddon." The close relationship of these two texts will be readily seen.

It is true, should the Jewish people become an independent nation and thus constitute a factor in the political heavens of the world, and as such have a voice in them as other nations, that they would be a component part of the heavens and thereby a sign in them. But we do not look for such a radical development in Jewish affairs prior to the appearance of the Messiah. Again the word of prophecy—"When they shall say Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them"—seems to allow no time for such extensive development.

The Peace movement is now a prevalent fact, while "the sea and the waves" are surely "roaring" as never before, and "men's hearts are failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming upon the earth, . . . and when these things begin to come to pass, then look up and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh."

The Jewish Messiah and King, who is none other than the Lord Jesus Christ, will have the honor, we believe, of giving Israel indenendence as a nation, and a voice in world affairs. It will be the voice and only voice, for all Gentile authority shall vanish away, and eventually all dominions shall serve and obey him, "The King of the Jews."

WAR PREPARATION

Now let us turn our attention to Joel the 3rd chapter in regard to the prediction of an extensive Preparation for War, regardless of which some well-meaning people are prophesying, "Peace, peace," without urging righteousness; these are the latter-day prophets deceiving and being deceived. Verses 9-14 read: "Proclaim ye among the Gentiles; prepare war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near; let them come up; beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruning hooks into spears; let the weak say, I am strong . . . . Let the Gentiles be wakened." Have they not been wakened in these days? "Let the Gentiles be wakened, and come up to the valley of Jehoshaphat: for there will I sit to judge all the Gentiles round about. Put ye in the sickle, for the harvest is ripe: come, get you down; for the press is full, the fats overflow; for their wickedness is great. Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision; for the day of the Lord is near in the valley of decision." Also read Rev. 16:18, 19.

There has never been a time in the world's history that has seen the nations better prepared for war than they are at the present moment; the weak have plenty of confidence in their little strength, while a few of the mighty are weakened temporily, affording the peace advocates an opportunity to predict no more wars.

ANOTHER WORLD WAR SOON

Nevertheless, there is to be another great war, referred to in Scripture as "Armageddon" as we have seen from Rev. 16:16, and here in Joel also, we have a prophecy concerning this same coming war that will be decided in the place called "the valley of Jehoshaphat" the valley of decision.

To make this prediction of another war a little clearer let us turn to Zech. 14:1-4: "Behold the day of the Lord cometh, and thy spoil shall be divided in the midst of thee. For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle; and the city shall be taken, and the houses rifled, and the women ravished; and half of the city shall go forth into captivity, and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city. Then shall the Lord go forth, and fight against these nations as when he fought in the day of battle. And his feet shall stand in that day (the time of the end) upon the Mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east, and the Mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley; and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south."

As the cleaving of the Mount of Olives in the midst has not yet taken place, it is evident that this gathering of all nations to Jerusalem to battle is still future. Consequently, the League of Nations and its mainstay, the Triple Alliance, is doomed to utterly fail as an instrument which has for its object the bringing about and maintaining a permanent peace.

WALTER L. CURTIS.

Why was it Necessary ?

THE CAUSE for so much discussion among Bible students as to what is truth, is not that the Scriptures are in any way ambiguous, but the real cause is, that men are so inclined to intrude their ways into God's ways and substitute words to express their own ideas that are foreign to the Scriptures. The Bible is intricate but wonderfully precise and leaves nothing for the reader to take for granted. When we read. "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin," we are not to presime that death is a penalty, or speak of it as "natural death." This text tells precisely that sin is a foreign element in human nature, and that death is the result of sin—not a natural result—but the result of the law that sin works, death. But just as in Adam's case, we read, "So death passupon all men, for that all have sinned." We know that Eve was the first transgressor, but it does not say that sin passed to all men by her offence, but it says that sin and death came by Adam's offence, that death reigned over all men from Adam to Moses, nevertheless that sin was not imputed unto them; for where there is no law sin is not imputed. Nothing could be made clearer than this point, that death is not a penalty for sin, but it is the result or wages of sin. Thus Christians are under no penalty and under no condemnation; they all die like men, they all die because their flesh life comes through Adam, and therefore sin in the flesh brings forth death.

Under the old covenant God had promised that the man who would observe all things written in the law to do them, should live by the law; his life should be sustained through the righteousness of the law. "For Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law, that the man which doeth those things shall live by them" (Rom. 10:5). But no man ever lived under the law more than his natural life. Why did he die ? The answer is, he died by sin working in his body to bring forth death; but if he had kept the law perfectly, he might have lived as long as he continued to keep it. Why could he not live by the law ? We are not left in any doubt as to the correct answer. Sin is a moral corruption; for while Israel had said "all that the Lord hath commanded will we do," they found another law working in their members, bringing them into bondage unto sin. Sin in the flesh had so corrupted them morally, that the things they had consented with their mind were just and holy and good, they were unable to carry out by actual performance.

Now that was a very serious predicament; for this law that was ordained unto life became only a ministration of death ultimately. But the law had a death penalty and also a penalty of death, without mercy—a curse of the law. The death penalty was death by stoning and for those who despised the law, they were stoned to death and their body was hanged upon a tree.

What then was the difference between death by the law and death as the result of sin ? Only this: the one who died by the law simply died before his time according to nature; the one who threw the last stone that killed him may have died the next day by disease.

The time came when God regarded all to be dead by the law. The law slew every one under it So the apostle says;"We thus judge, if one died for all, then all died." Again, "I through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God."

Christ seeing this beforehand said: "I am come that ye might have life." Again he said, "My life I will give for the life of the world." Why for the world when God was dealing only with the Jews ? That is the point we must consider carefully. Israel was merely a handful out of all the world, but what was true of the Jew under God's dealings with him, was also true of the whole world. Both Jew and Gentile had been proven by the law to be unworthy of life; for we know that what things soever the law saith, it saith to them that are under the law; that every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may become guilty before God (Rom. 3:19).

With these conditions clearly before us we will be prepared to consider why the death of Christ was necessary to effect the salvation of fallen mankind. The answer to this must be found in the Scriptures; for we cannot presume to formulate a plan of salvation which only God could devise.

In Gal. 3:21 we read: "If there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law." Now that is quite clear; if men could attain unto perfect righteousness by the law, then men would have life by the law.

In perfect harmony with this we read: "For if righteousness came by the law, then Christ is dead in vain." The Diaglott reads here, "then Christ died unnecessarily."

The apostle says nothing here about paying our penalty, and we begin to wonder why he did not say something about a penalty, for nearly every body tells us that Jesus paid it all; that he suffered the penalty for our sins that we might be delivered from the penalty and raised into life. But we remember that Christ brought in a better hope of life through the righteaousness of faith, and we begin to think, that as we could not keep the righteousness of the law, perhaps Christ did die to establish this faith-righteousness.

But read on: "What the law could not do in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin (to remove sin), condemned sin in the flesh, that the righteousness (requirements) of the law might be fulfilled in us who walk not after the flesh (as men) but after the Spirit" (as new creatures).

Now it begins to look clear that if Christ established this righteousness of God which is by faith for us, and not for angels, then it was necessary for him to be a man made like unto his brethren in all things with the exception that he was born holy and undefiled by sin and separate and distinct from sinners.

Then we are told that it was our own righteousness through which it was impossible for us to keep the law, that commended the establishing of God's righteousness which is of faith. Also that this righteousness by faith is revealed in the gospel of Christ, revealed unto those of the faith; as it is written, "The just shall live by faith" (Rom. 1:17; 3:19).

If it was necessary in Christ to establish this righteousness by faith that we should be made just like his brethren; then it was just as necessary for opening this new way to life through death of the flesh, that he should die unto sin; that he should die unto that condition of life in which he found himself when made in the likeness of sinful flesh, that we who follow in his steps may die unto sin, that being dead to the flesh we might live unto God and righteousness.

Christ did not enter into endless life through the righteousness of the law, because the law had nothing against him. We read that he entered into heaven itself through the Eternal Spirit, through faith and love to God. This is the way he opened up and consecrated for us through the vail of flesh. He went into heaven there to appear as our great high priest for us and for all who should come to God by his sacrifice, for all who should come to God in true repentance and contrition of heart confessing their sins, that they might be forgiven. Not confessing those sins which we committed during our unconverted life; these are the sins we must die unto that being dead to the flesh and buried with Christ, we may be justified from sin. There is quite a difference in being forgiven sins and being justified from sins -legally and by process of the law justified from all sins; for he that has died has ceased from sin—the law has no more against him. Being dead with Christ we as new creatures have been made free from the law of sin and death, having died to the flesh. But now being under the law of the spirit of life in Christ, there is therefore now no condemnation.

ALEX ALLAN.

Running Side Shows

MANY A man has been ruined by leaving his legitimate business, and engaging in some sort of "side show," which has consumed his time, absorbed his money, brought him no profit, and ruined the legitimate business to which he should have devoted his energies.

The same difficulty bestes the church. There are too many who seem to be interested in the side-shows. The church of Christ has a legitimate business in the world; it has a work to do which no other body can or will do, and the neglect of which must prove ruinous, not only to the interests of the church, but of the world. There are, no doubt, other things which the church as an association can do, just as there are many kinds of business which a business man can do, that is, he could do them if he were not otherwise engaged and occupied. The church might go into business, and manufacture, or buy and sell, and get gain; but these are one the objects for which the church of Christ was established on earth, and no good comes from diverting the church from its proper and legitimate work, to engage in these outside interests.

Each man succeeds best in his own special line of work. The church may enter into the business of furnishing theatrical amusements, but church going amateurs cannot compete with the professionals of the playhouse, and in the end the church is worsted in the competition. The church may go into sepeculations, but there are other speculators, shrewder, and wiser, and more thoroughly devoted to financial matters, and hence the church will be at a disadvantage. If men want theatricals they will go to the playhouse; if they want merchandise, they will go to the market; if they want music they will find it in the concert halls; if they want education, they will go to the schools and colleges; if they wish feasts, they will patronize the caterers; but if they wish to hear the gospel of Christ, they do not expect to find this in the playhouse, the market, the concert hall, or the school; they expect to find it in the church of Christ, and if they do not find it there, they are disappointed.

The chruch was not sent into this world to run entertainments and social festivities; it was planted here for a higher purpose, to bear witness to the truth, to testify to the grace of God, and to send the glad tidings of salvation into all the world. Let the church of God keep to the main issue; let it ignore the petty fooleries which attract the attention of the world; let it eschew the cheap novelties and empty excitements which are whim of the passing hour, and let it address itself to the work of bearing testimony for God and shedding light amid the darkness of this world, and warning, inviting, and saving those who are out of Christ. Let the church leave the side-shows, and keep to the main issue, and do its legitimate work for God and for eternity and the day that cometh will declare that their labor "is not in vain in the Lord." Editorial

The trouble with many of us is that our "knowledge bump" is bigger than the seat of our affections. We feel elated because we understand the Bible while it is a sealed book to others. But konwledge should place us under everlesting gratitude to God instead of filling us with spiritual pride.

Bald-headed with knowledge, have we worn our knees thread-bare striving for the grace of God which brings salvation? Knowledge is a misfit without grace to adorn and beautify it. Get in tune with the infinite; then the Lord can use us.

Sister Wince writes that she is now eighty-two years old. She also writes that by a recent fall her right shoulder was somewhat injured, and that her sight is failing. Yet with all these handicaps she sends three articles and her periodical letter of encouragement! The thought that age will incapacitate Sister Wince for active service in the truth before the Lord comes, is like a night-mare to us. Her services to the brotherhood exceed estimation; personally they are even more. She has always stood at our right hand in defence of the gospel, and stands there today a loyal daughter of the God of Israel. God forbid that we should lose her invaluable co-operation in the gospel of the kingdom of God before that kingdom comes.

An Impartial Testimony

IN THE fourth volume of Lange's Commentary the exegetical notes are written by Dr. Lechler, Professor of Theology, and Superintendent of Leopsic. This is what this pedobaptist scholar says in reference to the fifth verse of the first chapter of Acts.

"Baptized with the Holy Ghost.' The gift of the Spirit is here called baptism, and is thus characterized as one of most abundant fulness, and as a submersion in a purifying and life-giving element. The term and the image are both derived from the water baptism of John."

Fun at Home

DON'T BE afraid of a little fun at home, good people. Don't shut up your homes lest the sun should fade your carpets, and your heart, lest a hearty laugh shake down some of the musty old cobwebs there. If you want to ruin your sons, let them think that all mirth and social enjoyment must be left on the threshold without, when they come home at night. When once a home is regarded as only a place to eat and drink, and sleep in, the work begins that ends in gambling houses and reckless dissipation. Young people must have fun and relaxation somewhere; if they do not find it at their own hearthstones, it will be sought at other and perhaps less profitable places. Therefore let the fire burn brightly at night, and make the homestead delightful with those little arts that parents perfectly understand. Don't repress the buoyant spirits of your children; half an hour of merriment round the lamp and firelight of a home, blots out the remembranee of many a care and annoyance during the day, and the best safeguard they can take with them into the world is the unseen influence of a bright little domestic circle.

Varieties of Bad Temper

BAD TEMPER is oftener the result of unhappy circumstances than of an unhappy organization; it frequently, however, has a physical cause, and a peevish child often needs dieting more than correcting. Some children are more prone to show temper than others, and sometimes on account of qualities which are valuable in themselves. For instance, a child of active temperament, sensitive feeling, and eager purpose, is more likely to meet with constant jars and rubs than a dull, passive child; and, if he is of an open nature, his inward irritation is immediately shown in bursts of passion. If you repress their ebullitions by scolding and punishment, your only increase the evil by changing passion into sulkiness. A cheerful good-tempered tone of your own, a sympathy with his trouble whenever the trouble has arisen from no ill conduct on his part, are the best antidotes; but it would be better still to prevent, beforehand, all sources of annoyance. Never fear spoiling children by making them too happy. Happiness is the atmosphere in which all good affections grow—the wholesome warmth necessary to make the heart-blood circulate healthily and freely: unhappiness—the chilling pressure which produces here an inflammation, there an excrescence, and, worse than all, "the mind's green and yellow sickness"—ill-temper.

Scriptural Times and Seasons

To everything there is a season and a time for every purpose under the sun (Eccl. 3:1).

TIME TO BE BORN. When Zion is in travail (Isa. 66:8).

TIME TO DIE. When the Lord taketh away (Job 1:21).

TIME TO PLANT. When the Lord shall re-sow the house of Israel (Jer. 31:27, 28).

TIME TO PLUCK UP. When the stump of the Babylonian Tree dominion shall be uprooted by Jesus Christ in the establishment of his kingdom (Dan. 4:23; Rev. 18:8).

TIME TO KILL. When judgment is given to the saints (Rev. 20:4; Psa. 149:9).

TIME TO HEAL. When the Lord bindeth up the breach of his people (Isa. 30:26).

TIME TO BREAK DOWN. When Messiah wields his sceptre of iron (Psa. 2:9; 110:5; Dan. 2:44; Rev. 2:27; Deut. 7:5, to be repeated upon the images and altars of Christendom).

TIME TO BUILD UP. When the Lord shall appear in his glory (Psa. 102:16).

TIME TO WEEP. When Babylon's clerical soul merchants find that no man buyeth their merchandise any more (Rev. 18:11).

TIME TO LAUGH. When the Lord (enthroned on Mount Zion) has his enemies in derision (Psa. 2:4; 37:13; 52:6; 59:8; Prov. 1:26; Luke 6:21).

TIME TO MOURN. While the bridegroom is away (Matt. 5:4; 9:15).

TIME TO DANCE. When ransomed Israel shall return to Zion (Jer. 31:4, 11, 13).

TIME TO CAST AWAY STONES. When the heathen shall perish out of the Lord's land (Psa. 10:16; Isa. 5:2).

TIME TO GATHER STONES TOGETHER. Now; while the Lord is taking out from the Gentiles, a people for his name (Matt. 3:9; Acts 3:14).

TIME TO EMBRACE. When the promises are seen (Heb. 11:13).

TIME TO REFRAIN FROM EMBRACING. When it is the bosom of a stranger (Prov. 5:20). The virgin faithful are not defiled with the ecclesiastical harlots of Christendom (Rev. 14:4; 17:5).

TIME TO GET. Now; happy is the man who getteth understanding (Prov. 3:13).

TIME TO LOSE. Now, during probationary service for Christ (Mtat. 10:39).

TIME TO KEEP. When a man has bought the the truth. (Prov. 23:23; Rev. 1:3; 14:12).

TIME TO CAST AWAY. When the bad fish is separated from the good (Matt. 13:48).

TIME TO REND. When God wrests the kingdoms of this world from the powers that be, and transfers them to "that man whom he hath appointed" (Acts 17:31; Isa. 44:1; Rev. 11:15).

TIME TO SEW. Now; "amend your ways and your doings," ye religious Gentiles who trust in lying words (Jer. 7:1-11).

TIME TO KEEP SILENCE. When Yahweh is in his holy place (Zech. 2:13).

TIME TO SPEAK. In season and out of season—the word of the kingdom (2 Tim. 4:2).

Communications

They spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened, and heard it--Mal. 3:16.

DEAR BRETHREN:

I AM writing to let you know I am receiving my paper and enjoying the many good sermons. Please accept my thanks for your kindness towards me. We have a little Berean Class here. There are only six in number. All the preaching we have is what we get through our paper, but are looking forward to the time when Brother Adams can visit us again. As he has been here and gotten acquainted he knows just how to begin with the people.

I am yours in the hope of the resurrection.

DEAR BESSIE, BROTHER DONALDSON, AND SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS FOR THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S PAGE:

I WANT to tell you how much I enjoy this page of The Restitution. It especially interests me because I am deeply interested in the salvation of the young people. If they are not saved what will become of the church of God in the years to come, that may possibly intervene between the present time and the coming of our Lord? I thank God for your faithful service, Brother Donaldson. May God bless you abundantly therefore. As Brother R. A. Humphreys says, we like Moses, know the need of encouragement. I am glad that God laid it upon you to feed the lambs.

And Bessie dear, don't lay aside your pen when you leave the editorial chair; keep on in service for Jesus, and in so doing grow strong and helpful. I told you you could write if you only would. How many times I have gone over your "Let us Pray" in May 11th number of The Restitution, and prayed with Brother Donaldson in his words. I love the prayers.

And Ethel, God surely guided your pen when you wrote that article on "Patience." It sounds as if you had been sitting at the feet of Jesus and learning of him. If you had not you could not have written so helpful an article. Keep on, and the good, the joy your work may bring to yourself and others, eternity alone can tell. And Marie, Jennie and Helen, you are surely remembering your Creator in the days of your youth. You will be just as happy as Sister Lawrence tells me she is when you came to belong to Jesus. I read every word that you write to Omar and to myeslf. I like your Bible stories, and thank Brother Huggins for giving you a place in the paper. Do you love him and pray for him every day? I do. He can do better work if he knows we love him and want to help him.

AUNTIE WINCE.

Obituary

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.--Psa. 116:15.

Lydia Jenkins, daughter of William and Barbara Jenkins, was born in Michigantownship, Clinton County, Indiana, October 23, 1849. Her entire life has been spent in this towrship where she was known by everyone as "Aunt Lydia." She fell asleep in Jesus May 29, 1920, at 11:25 P. M., aged 70 years, 7 months and 6 days.

On October 10, 1867 she was united in marriage to Ephraim Barnett, and to them were born three sons: Harrison, born 1869; Arthur born 1873; and Eugene born 1878. The father died July 5, 1915. Her three sons survive her, and five grand-children, namely Mrs. Fern Osler, Mrs. Elnora Woods, Mrs. Ruth Miller, and Orval Barnet; also three little great grand-children, Lydia Opal Ostler, Beatrice Alice Woods, and Elizabeth Ellen Miller. She also leaves one sister, Mrs. Ella Layman, two brothers, William and Harrison Jenkins. She leaves many other relatives and friends. She had lived at the old home 38 years, and will be greatly missed by those who knew her.

She suffered an attack of paralysis in 1915 from which she never fully recovered, and her death was not unexpected.

She had been baptized by J. S. Hatch some 35 years ago, and was a member of the Hillisburg church. She has lived a faithful life and came down to the end full of faith and hope.

Funeral services were held from the Hillisburg Church, May 31st., at 2 o'clock P. M., conducted by the writer. We spoke words of comfort and hope from Job 14:14 to an appreciative audience. Burial was made in the Michigantown Cemetery where we laid "Aunt Lydia" to rest to await the coming of Jesus.

GOLDEN TEXT: Hebrews 1:1, 2

THE WORD OF GOD

GOD, IN the gospel of his Son,
Makes his eternal counsel known:
'Tis here his richest mercy shines,
And truth is drawn in fairest lines.

Wisdom, its dictates here imparts,
To form our minds, to cheer our hearts;
Its influence makes the sinner live,
It bids the drooping saint revive.

Our raging passions it controls,
And comfort yields to contrite souls;
It brings a better world in view,
And guides us all our journey through.

May the blest Volume lie
Close to my heart, and near my eye;
Till life's last hour my soul engage,
And be my chosen heritage.

THE BIBLE

WHO COMPOSED the following description of the Bible we may never know. It was found in Westminster Abbey, nameless and dateless; nevertheless it is invaluable for its wise and wholesome counsel to the erring race of Adam.

A nation would be truly happy if it were goverred by no other laws than those of this blessed Book.

It contains everything needful to be known and done. It gives instruction and counsel to a senate, authority and direction to a magistrate.

It contains a witness, requires an impartial verdict of a jury, and furnishes the judge with his sentence.

It sets the husband as the lord of the household, and wife as the mistress of the table. Tells him how to rule and her as well how to manage.

It entails honor to parents and enjoins obedience on children.

It prescribes and limits the sway of the sovereign, the rule of the ruler and the authority of the master, commanding the subjects to honor and the servants to obey; and promises a blessing and protection of the Almighty to all that walk by its rules.

It gives directions for weddings and burials.

It promises food and raiment and limits the use of both.

It points out a faithful and eternal guardian to a departing husband and father; tells him with whom to leave his fatherless children, and whom his widow is to trust, and promises a father to the former and a husband to the latter.

It teaches a man how to get his house in order and how to make his will. It appoints a dowry for his wife and entails the rights of the first born and shows how the younger branches shall be left.

It defends the rights of all and reveals vengeance to every defaulter, overreacher, and oppressor.

It is the first book, the best book, the last book.

It contains the choicest matter, gives the best instruction and affords the greatest degree of pleasure and satisfaction that we have ever enjoyed.

It contains the best laws and most profound mysteries that ever were penned, and it brings the very best of comfort to the enquiring and disconsolate.

It tells us that "God is love," and that through his love he has provided a way whereby man may escape the consequences of his sin.

It tells us that this "way" is through faith in Jesus as "the Christ the Son of the living God" and obedience to God's will.

It comforts us by stating that if we practice this faith and obedience then is Jesus unto us "wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption."

It further comforts us by stating that this same Jesus is again coming to this earth to renew its old time beauty, to restore peace and happiness and grant eternal life to all those who love and serve God.

It exhibits life and immortality from time everlasting and shows the way to eternal glory.

It settles all matters of debate, resolves all doubts and eases the mind and conscience of all their scruples.

It reveals the only living and true God, and shows the way to him; and sets aside all other gods and describes the vanity of them and all that trust such. In short, it is a book of laws to show right and wrong, a book of wisdom that condemns all folly and makes the foolish wise; a book of truth that detects all lies and confronts all errors; and it is a book of life that shows the way from everlasting death.

It contains the most ancient antiquities and strange events wonderful occurrences, heroic deeds and unparallleled wars.

It describes the celestial and terrestial.

It will instruct the most accomplished mechanic and most profound artist.

It teaches the best rhetoric and exercises the best powers of the most skilful arithmetician, puzzles the wise anatomist and exercises the wisest critic.

It is the best covenant that ever was agreed on; the best deed that was ever sealed; the best evidence that ever was produced; and the best will that ever was signed.

To understand it is to be wise, indeed to be ignorant of it is to be destitue of wisdom.

It is the king's best copy, the magistrate's best rule, the housekeeper's best guide, the servant's best directory, and the young man's best companion. It is the school boy's spelling book and the great and learned man's masterpiece.

It contains a choice grammar for a novice and profound mystery for a sage.

It is the ignorant man's dictionary and wise man's directory.

It affords knowledge of witty inventions for the humorous, and dark sayings for the grave, and is also its own interpreter.

It encourages the wise, the weary and swift it overcomes. It promises an eternal reward to the excellent, to the conqueror the winner and the prevalent; and that which crowns all is that its author is without partiality and without hypocrisy, with whom there is no variableness, neither shadow of turning.—Sel. by Robert Douglas Campbell.

THE GREATEST

WE READ "that without faith it is impossible to please God." We also read that "faith without works is dead." This brings us to the fact that we must possess faith in God, "that he is, and that he is the rewarder of all those who diligently seek him." We must also have faith in Christ, that is, that Jesus is "the Christ, the Son of the living God." Having gone this far we have made great progress along the line God would have us follow. But do we stop here? If faith can not stand alone, have we made the structure complete when we have placed works along with it? Faith is the foundation, the strength of which we test by rearing the structure of works upon it. Another familar passage comes to mind which reads, "Faith, hope and love, these three; but the greatest of these is love." Now we see that faith and works—which is the outgrowth of faith—as well as hope, is nothing without love. Love is the crowning point of all our efforts. It is the one thing that makes all else operative. It is the link that fastens God to us and we to God. Jesus is the love of God made flesh; he is the embodiment of God's love. Without love as our ruling motive, no matter how much faith and hope and works we may have, and we may have much—we simply are hypocrites on the road to everlasting ruin. Do not neglect faith. Cultivate it with all your power of understanding, and if you have real faith, hope and works are sure to follow as light and heat from the sun. But love, love in abundance is the attribute that makes the others acceptable to God. Without love we can not do anything. Without love we are nothing. Love does not take the place of either faith or works, but it does mix in with each, and it crowns all. Therefore, of all things love is the greatest (1 Cor. 13; John 4).

PSALM 89:47

"Remember How Short My Life Is"

WE HAVE a bed, we have a child,
My wife!
And work have we, both you and I,
And sun and rain and a wind-swept sky.
Only a little thing lack we,
To make us free as the birds are free,
Time, only time!

When through the Sabbath fields we go,
My child!
And over the ripe sheaves far and nigh
The swift, blue swallow-folk flash by,
What matter we lack a fine array,
To make us gay as the birds are gay?
Time, only time.

Time only! We scent the coming storm,
We folk!
Only a slight eternity:
My wife, my child, now aught lack we
But that which through us thrives to gold.
To make us bold as the birds are bold.
Time, only time.

LUCK

HARD LUCK is almost a synonym for laziness.

Good luck is the twin brother of hard work.

Luck walks while work rides in a carriage.

Luck pictures a dollar while work earns it.

Luck dreams of a house, but work builds one.

To trust to luck is like fishing with a hookless line.

Luck is a disease for which hard work is the only remedy.

Luck longs for a dinner while labor goes out and earns one.

Luck goes barefooted while work never lacks for a pair of shoes.

Luck is a weather vane with the distinguishing points broken off.

The man who relies on luck is lucky if he keeps out of the poor house.

Luck takes a nap while brains and hard work are winning the prizes.

The only time luck influences our lives is when we place a "P" in front of it—making it pluck.

Work with pluck will overcome any obstacle and bring to us sucess and honor. Try it.

* * *

If Christ be not risen then is our faith in vain.

WHEN THE CLOCK STRIKES

WE ARE never disappointed in the clock.

It puts us to bed at night, gets us up in the morning, and starts us upon our duties for the day.

The reason we rely so much upon the clock is because it is regular in its work and keeps going without a stop.

It teaches us some important lessons, one of which is to stick steadily to whatever task may be our lot to do.

It strikes at stated intervals, but the ticking is the thing we do not notice.

We seemingly forget that the one will never come without the other. So it is with our lives. They are made up of the passing moments; the little things that make for the larger.

KNOW THYSELF

WHAT WORTH while thing have you done for God and his Christ today? Have you in the name of your Redeemer aided or assisted some poor man who is down but, as the Salvation Army says, "never out"?

Have you told anyone of the love of God, or of the obedience and sacrifice of Jesus?

Have you said one word regarding the expected soon return of our Lord, and what will be accomplished through his return?

What sustaining word of cheer or hope will be placed to your credit for this day that you have lived?

On your ledger of life have you a balance in your favor for having lived today?

Pray God to help you so live that your life will be pleasing in his sight.

GROW IN GRACE

WHEN WE believe in ourselves and others, not a selfish nor self satisfactory belief, but the confidence born of a true, firm faith in God and an unyielding hope in his promises; when we teach and practice the golden rule—when we smile in defeat and never repeat the things that harm others—when we do the right thing at the right time and keep on doing the right thing, we grow; and when we grow we are true Christians. No one can stand still; we either must go ahead or go back. This applies to business, but it applies to the Christian life even more. Then let us live in harmony with the Christ life, practicing all the Christian graces, emphasizing love, self-sacrifice, and patience.

HAPPINESS

THE TIME when I am really happy, when my mind seems to grasp some higher ideal, is after some struggle against odds, after some disappointment, perhaps some sorrow. It is after the clouds have rolled by that I can measure the meaning of a perfect day.

GETTING THERE

It isn't the job we intend to do,
  Nor the labor we've just begun,
That puts us right on the ledger side,
  It's the work we've already done.

Our credit is built upon things we do,
  Our debt on things we shirk,
The man who totals the biggest plus
  Is the man who completes his work.

Good intentions do not pay bills,
  It's easy enough to plan;
To wish is the play of an office boy,
  To do is the work of a man.

HUMBLENESS

LIKE THE arbutus, the loveliest lives are growing closest to the earth. In humble circumstances the highest qualities seem to thrive best. Tomorrow's Sauls are but farmers boys today.

"God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble. Submit yourselves therefore to God" (James 4:6, 7).

RARELY HAS so golden a chain of verities been linked together in one short paragraph as the following by President Quincy: "The great comprehensive truths written in letters of living light on every page of our history, are these: Human happiness has no perfect security but freedom; freedom none but virtue; virtue none but knowledge; and neither freedom nor virtue has any vigor or immortal hope except in the principles of the Christian faith and in the sanctions of the Christian religion."

Selective Companions

CHOOSE THE wise for your constant companions,
And the good your home-life to share;
They may guide you in the paths of wisdom,
And shield you from trials and care.

Shun the vile, the low and the vicious,
Their path leads them down deep in sin;
They despise the boon of religion,
And the prize they never will win.

Two paths lie open before you,
One leads up to the realms of delight;
Where our Savior shall reign forever,
And banish all sorrow and night;

The other leads down to destruction
Where oblivion and death ever reign;
No hope for the lost, 'tis eternal,
Lost life they can never regain.

J. E. HOGARTH.

Scandal

A WOMAN to the holy father went;
Confession of her sin was her intent,
And so her misdemeanors great and small,
She faithfully rehearsed them, one and all:
And chiefest in her catalogue of sin,
She owned that she a talebearer had been,
And bore a bit of scandal up and down,
To all the long-tongued gossips in the town.
The holy father, for her other sin,
Granted the absolution asked of him;
But while for all the rest he pardon gave,
He told her this offence was very grave,
And that to do fit penance she must go
Out by the wayside where the thistles grow,
And gathering the largest ripest one,
Scatter its seeds, and that when this was done,
She must come back again another day
To tell him his command she did obey.
The woman thinking this was penance light,
Hastened to do his will that very night;
Feeling right glad she had escaped so well,
Next day but one she went the priest to tell;
The priest sat still and heard her story through,
Then said, "There's something still for you to do:
Those little thistle seeds which you have sown,
I bid you go regather every one."
The woman said, "But father, 'Twould be vain
To try to gather up those seeds again:
The winds have scattered them both far and wide,
Over the meadowed vale and mountain side."
The father answered, "Now I hope from this
The lesson I have taught you will not miss;
You cannot gather back the scattered seeds,
Which far and wide will grow to noxious weeds.
Nor can the mischief once by scandal sown
By any penance be again undone." Selected by Sister MYRTLE LAWRENCE.

Is Man an Immortal Being?

A Discussion of Man, Soul, Spirit, Death, Hell, and the Resurrection

JOB'S TESTIMONY

THE HARMONY here of Job, the old Bible philosopher, is complete. He wails in his bitterness, "Man that is born of woman is of few days and full of trouble . . . he dieth and wasteth away, yes, man giveth up the ghost and where is he?" Does the Bible afford us any answer to this question? It does and most directly. Turn to John 5:28, and hear the Lord of Life thunder out in tones of strong consolation and hope: "Marvel not at this, for the hour cometh, in which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice and shall come forth: they that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of judgment." Reader, believest thou this?

What, then, is man? We answer: A living man is an organized being made of the dust of the ground, having the spirit of breath of life; a dead man is the same being without the spirit or breath of life.

An argument for immortality, however, is drawn from the fact that, because God had directly breathed this breath of life, that therefore this act denoted the impartation of a superior spirit to what animals possess. We will look into this.

DOES MAN HAVE A "SUPERIOR SPIRIT"?

If our proofs hold good, we conclusively showed from numerous Scriptures that animals and man had all the one and the same spirit. The Hebrew word being "neshamah," it was shown to be the common possession of both man and beast. The very utmost therefore that may be urged from this direct impartation is that Jehovah God showed a very high appreciation by this last act of his when he created the man. We submit that it is not so much of how he imparted, as what he imparted to man. His Majesty King George may with his own hands pin a Victoral cross to the breast of a brave soldier with all the attendant state and grandeur of his brilliant court, in another instance, the iron cross may be pinned on by one of his officers at an ordinary parade: did both these soldiers get a very precise and similar decoration? Of course they did. Does it argue the least bit that, because his Majesty performed the act personally, that therefore the first cross was immeasurably superior to that which the second soldier received? This fairly illustrates the point. God gave to both man and beast the one and precise breath of life--so the Word states over and over again. In the case of man, by direct impartation; in the case of animals he said and it was done. The objection gains further ground from the consideration of another fact, that when the woman was "builded," Moses makes no record of a similar direct impartation of the breath of life to her. Would any man in his senses therefore urge that Eve was an inferior being? To assume that God must have so acted, is to believe and to assert "above that which is written," and therefore to beg the very point in dispute. Further, to maintain that as Eve was made out of Adam that, therefore, she partook of his immortal nature, is to give to the "rib" a quality of marvellous potency. Moses sometimes troubled himself with recording minute details and he surely would have recorded this detail if there was anything in it.

Another popular argument for immortality and believed to be well nigh conclusive is, that because God made man in his image and in his likeness, that therefore, man must be immortal. We confess that at first sight the argument looks formidable. It was often used by ourselves in days gone by, with telling effect. We will examine it.

MAN IN GOD'S IMAGE

Immortality is only one of the superlative attributes of God. If the being "made in his image" argues for immortality, then for the same reason it argues also for omniscience, omnipresence, omnipotency and the other attributes of God. Clearly this proves too much. The word "image" surely means a likeness, a picture, a representation; but to accept what is urged is to read, "And God made man his equal." Here is just where a confusion of terms leads to. We have for example in Gen. 5:3, "And Adam lived 130 years and begat a son in his own likeness after his image, and called his name Seth." Could any one for a moment suppose that baby Seth possessed all the powers physical, mental, moral, and spiritual which his father possessed at that time? What ever the being made in his image may mean, it surely therefore, cannot mean in immortality. We however humbly submit that the teaching and relevant facts of that expression are apparent to any one not pledged to maintain the Platonic fiction. These are:

First, God is immortal, and Adam at creation was made a candidate for immortality and positively by the inherent vigor of his created manhood, even after his sad fall, he and his immediate descendants actually lived nearly a thousand years. We say "nearly," because in God's day "which is as a thousand years" the record states "Adam died."

Second, God is omniscient, and so Adam knew a very great deal and his sons now, know a great deal more.

Third, God is omnipresent, and so man by an intelligent use of the developed forces of nature, may make and does make his presence felt at many widely separated points.

Fourth, God is omnipotent. Is it necessary to demonstrate the vast latent powers man possesses in this direction? Do not recent instances of hypnotism in our city sufficiently confirm them?

Thus then this argument also which is probably the strongest argument that can be adduced for man's immortality, breaks down and leaves the question at the head of these articles still unanswered. We have covered much beaten ground where schools of divinity imagine they find immortality for man, but hitherto we have found that ground nothing but Dust. Let us now cover a little unexplored ground.

THE WORD "IMMORTAL"

The word immortal is found but once in the whole Bible. It is applied to God, 1 Tim. 1:17, "Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God be honor and glory." The Bible is made up of a total of 66 books written over a range of 1500 years by 36 authors respectively; and yet not once in the Bible is man called a "spirit," an "immortal soul," a "deathless being," a "never dying soul," an "imperishable spark of Divinity," etc. These are Sunday pulpit terms and quite commonly used by ecclesiastical writers of the highest repute; but the prophets knew them not. This is a significant fact, and thinking Christians should note it. Is it conceivable, if man was an immortal creature, that one or more of these authors would not have mentioned it? Not once, not even by implication, is even the shadow of such an idea entertained by them for a moment. On the contrary, man is called twice in Scripture "mortal man" (2 Chron. 14:11; Job 14:17), and if our translation was correctly rendered, we should have had the Hebrew word "Enosh," translated "mortal man," repeated over 300 times in our English Bibles. "Oh, this refers only to his body," is the complacent addenda. "That is the man," repeat the 36 authors.

One would naturally suppose on the other hand, that for these authors to have recorded that God the Almighty had immortality, would be to record a superflous piece of information; and yet over and over again these very authors volunteer analogous statements that God only hath immortality!

We will now briefly examine the words "soul," "living soul," reserving closer study for them in the next article.

A STUDY OF THE WORD "SOUL"

"Living soul" is a term applied to all living creatures. Long before man was created Moses uses the term. This is not generally known. Gen. 1:20-30: "And to every beast of the earth and fowl and creeping thing wherein there is living soul" (margin). No man with ordinary pretensions of having read his Bible may dispute this fact, nevertheless at the risk of being tiresome, we quote from a few acknowledged scholars. Parkhurst says, "As a noun 'nephesh' (Greek, psuche. English, soul, life etc) hath been supposed to signify the spiritual part of man or what we commonly call his soul. I must for myself confess that I can find no passage where it hath undoubtedly this meaning."

R. B. Young says: "Nephesh does not denote the immortal part of man but his animal life." Dr. Kitto in his note on Gen. 2:7, says: "We should be acting unfaithfully if we were to affirm that an immaterial and immortal spirit is contained or implied in this passage." He translates the word "nephesh" as "living animal."

H. B. Heard says: "Nephesh instead of suggesting any idea of immateriality much less immortality is a general expression used for all animal life. It is used of both man and beast." Now for a last quotation from that grand old Methodist commentator, Adam Clark: "Nephesh is a general term to express all creatures endued with animal life in any of its varied gradations." To those possessing the commentaries of this remarkable man, we would respectfully advise reference to his remarks on the Greek 'psuche' and 'pneuma' in 1 Thess. 5:23. And they are worth remembering, too.

To further establish this fact, that all living animals are "living souls" we can but refer the reader to the following texts briefly: Gen. 1:20, 24, 30; 6:17; 7:15:22, 23; Rev. 16:3. There is much darkness on this point even in people who should know better. We have heard it stated from pulpits, "Man is called in the Bible a living soul which means an immortal soul, but animals have no soul, they have only life." Is it not time the pews had some truth on this subject? It has again been stated, "And God breathed into man an immortal soul," than which nothing could be more untrue. Man is the soul himself. By the breath of life Adam became a living soul, not an ever living soul, still less an immortal soul; and when the breath or spirit of life is withdrawn then man becomes a "dead soul," but the ordinary reader does not see this simple truth in his English Bible, except in Numb. 19:11 (margin), "He that toucheth the dead soul of man shall be unclean seven days." The following texts will afford some surprise and also much light on this term to the searcher with an ordinary Hebrew-English concordance. They are worth looking up if only to clear away some of the dense fog: Numb. 6:6; Lev. 21:11; 24:17, 18; Deut. 19:6; Josh. 10:28, 30, 39.

So recent a writer against "Conditional Immortality" as Dr. McLaren, of Knox, College, in the Manitoba College Journal for June, 1897, after carrying his readers through a most fallacious line of argument, based on the confusion of the terms ruach-spirit, with nephesh-soul, pens at page 202 this extraordinary sentence: "Bring together all the elements of man's nature which are drawn from the ground and arrange them in the exact order in which they are found in living men, and let the spirit be awanting and man is not 'nephesh hayah,' a living soul or animal; he is a carcase or corpse." Quite true Dr. McLaren; one step more, and with Moses call him a "dead soul." But notice the contradiction the learned Doctor here gets into. The spirit according to this quotation is clearly not the man, which was nevertheless what the Doctor had all along in that laborious article been endeavoring to maintain--but the "carcass" the "corpse," that is the "he," the man! Thank you very much Dr. McLaren; that is exactly what we have been imperfectly trying to establish, and you have done it handsomely!

OFFICIAL REPORTS show that there are three times as many millionaires in the United States in 1917 that there were before the war, or an increase from 2348 in 1914 to 6664 in 1917. Nevada is the only state without a millionaire and New York City has 2388. The largest income reported was that of Rockefeller, which was given as $34,936,604. Everyone must sacrifice in war times except the war profiteers, but their day of reckoning is at hand. See Ezek. 7; James 5; Isa, 2.

The annual debt on which the people of the United States pay interest is now placed 120 billion dollars. The interest at five percent would be six billion dollars annually. This interest would keep 30 million people in idleness while 70 millions others labored to live and pay this interest which by [illegible] can be made to perpetually increase. Usury and profiteering based on selfishness will prove the doom of this old world order (Zeph. 1). In recent articles, Tom McNeal has been showing up some of the dangers that threaten the world governments, among which he mentions the apathy or apparent inability of the governments to protect the people from extortion, robbery and oppression, He says that since the main purposes of government is to protect the weak against the strong, and to administer justice to rich and poor alike, that it was no wonder if the people lost both loyalty and confidence in governments that did little for the people only to tax them, and draft their best manhood for war.

He showed how the trusts and big corporations shifted all their share of the taxes on the shoulder of the consumer by adding it, together with an excessive profit, to the necessities of life; also how, in the same way, the laborer is forced to pay the extra wages he demands by adding it to everything he buys; how every income tax and every rise in wages only makes matters worse for the wage earner, because the cost of what he must buy is always raised higher than the increase in wages.

He then shows how senseless this selfish profiteering and money grabbing is, and how blindly it is generally followed until a tornado of wrath from a long suffering people burst upon their heads, and they perish amid the idols of their creation.

So it is not students of the prophets alone who know that we are living in "the last days," and in "the time of the end;" and likewise at "the end of the world;" but all students of world conditions see it, and know more than they generally publish about the failure of human governments, the farce of so called law, order, and patriotism, and of so-called "courts of justice," and the great need of "a superman" at the head of the world order. That "superman" will soon be manifested in the person of Christ.

The main reason "The Menace" gives for not endorsing the league of nations, is that the pope and all official Rome and her higher clergy throughout the world are for it. The articles published in The Metropolitan, by Raymond Robbins, head of the red cross work in Russia during the war, were full of food for thought to the student of the signs of the times. He says: "The revolutionary symbol of the plow, sword and hammer, represent the triple union of peasant, artizan and soldier.The parting of the ways is lighted now by the fire and blood of Russia, and by the world challenge which says more plainly than words can say: "Either the spirit of Jesus Christ regenerating present social, political and industrial order, or the spirit of Karl Marx creating a new order. Either a capitalism turned from exploiting, profiteering and robbery, to service and sacrifice, or socialism introduced by class war, revolution and coercion.' "

Instead of "Christ is risen," which for centuries had been on the headlines of newspapers and banners on every Easter celebration in Russia, on Easter of 1918 the Red papers and banners of parading Bolshiviki crowds bore these significant words: "One hundred years ago today Karl Marx was born!" The challenge sent out from Russia to the world today is between the Catholic and Protestant religion of Russia and of Europe and the principles of Karl Marx to regenerate the world.

This challenge from Russia confirms the saying that while the Christian reads his Bible the world reads the Christian. No preaching or doctrine will ever influence the world like the living example and practice of professors of religion; and the infidelity now rampant in Russia is the direct fruits of the Russian Catholic system which oppressed and pauperized the people of Russia. "Statistics show that crime in the United States has increased 500 per cent in thirty years;" "Crime made easy and crime unpunished leads to lawlessness, rioting, mob rule and lynch law."

Babson, the business prophet, predicts a war between the United States and Mexico within two years. The great aviator Ricenbacker predicts that in the next war the rays of the sun will be concentrated and focalized from airships, which will set fire to munitions, powder plants, buildings and arsenals, and that gases and electricity will almost entirely supercede guns for destruction in war.

Wasting Time

SOME ONE says so; is it true? Do we shorten life when we go to "the movies?" when we read the tale that is all a lie? when we play dominoes, checkers, cards and other like games? or even games with which no fault can be found? We certainly are unless the games are absolutely essential to our physical health. Time is short, and only that part of our life counts that is used for God: whatever part of it is wasted, is lost. Be careful, dear Christian soldiers; use your time as if it were nuggets of gold. If we seek pleasure, we soon learn to love it more than we do God; if we read the trashy story, and the illustrated Sunday paper we not only lose part of our lives, but are affected much as the drunkard is by tarrying long over his cups: we are actually made drunk, so drunk that our vision of ourselves, of our surroundings and friends is made all awry.

We imagine ourselves abused and unloved. We do not love our homes; we do not have what we ought to have; solid reading has no longer any charm; the Bible, the church has no attractions; we would spend money for the novel sooner than for The Restitution!!! and would steal away to read the novel even if a dear friend were dying in the next room (an actual fact).

How often a novel has kept a young person from deciding for Christ; indeed whoever knew of a thoroughly confirmed and drunken novel reader who became a Christian? And whoever heard of whist and card playing Christians who were devout, prayerful servants of the Master?

O wasted time! into what precious fabrics it might be woven; what lovely buildings it might reared; what wondrous stores of knowledge it might lay up; how many ignorant ones it might teach of Jesus; how many children it might rescue; how many missions it might establish; how many young men and women equip for service in neglected fields!

I would that I could gather up all my wasted moments and crowd into them the precious needful knowledge so necessary to all who are called to work in the vineyard of our Lord. I cannot get it now. My 82 years of life are gone, and failing eyesight precludes close study. Redeem your time, dear ones, while you have it. "Take hold of his forelock, for behind his scalp is naked." Don't shorten your lives by wasting time.

Unity of Believers

IN PSALM 133 you can find a standard by which I shall try to be governed in my remarks to the people of God. David speaks of the benefit of the communion of saints. He begins by saying, "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!" Do you ask why? If so, look at verses 2 and 3. Here David says it is like the precious ointment upon the head, that ran down upon the beard; even Aaron's beard; that went down to the skirts of his garments. As the dew of Hermon and the mountains of Zion; for there the Lord commanded the blessing, even life for ever more.

Is not this worthy of our service? Go with me to Gen. 13:8. Abram said unto Lot, "Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, and between my herdsmen and thy herdsmen; for we be brethren." I would be glad if all brethren lived after the example of Abram, but I am sorry to say they do not. Paul says in 1 Cor. 6:7, 8: "Now therefore, there is utterly a fault among you, because ye go to law one with another. Why do ye not rather take wrong? Why do ye not rather suffer yourselves to be defrauded? Nay, ye do wrong and defraud and that your brethren." Again Paul says in 1 Cor. 10:23: "All things are lawful for me, but all things are not expedient; all things are lawful for me, but all things edify not." Jesus says, "I and my Father are one" (John 10:30).

Let us ask and see if our Savior will tell us how he and his Father are one. In John 5:30 Christ says: "I can of mine own self do nothing: as I hear I judge, and my judgment is just, because I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father who hath sent me." Hear how he prayed for the unity of believers; then tell me how you can turn away from his testimonies. Go now to John 17:11. He prayed for his disciples. But first ask yourself, Am I his disciple? Then hear him: "And now I am no more in the world, but these are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one as we are." Can you not see the unity? Forasmuch than as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind; for he that hath suffered for us in the flesh hath ceased from sin, that he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lust of man, but to the will of God (1 Pet. 4:1, 2) "Well," says one, "you have gone from the subject and taken up consecration." Well then will you please tell me the difference between having a unity in our faith and being consecrated, set apart for the service of God? Can you divide these two meanings? Let us now go back again to John 17:20, 21: "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word, that all may be one, as thou Father art in me and I in thee that they also may be one in us, that the world may believe that thou hast sent me." In the 17th verse Christ says, "Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth." "Now I beseech you, brethren, by the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, that there be no divisions among you, but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment" (1 Cor. 10:17). "For we being many are one bread and one body, for we are all partakers of that one bread" (1 Cor. 12:12, 13). "For the body is one and hath many members, and all members of that one body being many are one body, so also is Christ; for by one spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free, and have been made to drink in one spirit. For the body is not one member but many."

Then how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity, as stated in the 133rd Psalm. How careful we should be when we handle the words of eternal truth! Only let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ, that whether I come and see you or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs, that ye stand fast in one spirit with one mind, striving together for the faith of the gospel (Phil. 1:27). Oh, how I would love to be present with you brothers and sisters, in the body where there is unity both of mind and spirit, and where the spirit of the living God and of his Christ beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God indeed and in truth. Let us be led by the spirit, for God hath said my spirit shall not always strive with man (Gen. 6:3). If I am never permitted to see your faces in the flesh, I hope to be able to stand in the last day and to meet with you all in the kingdom of God.

Remember the Helping Fund

Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble—in the day of evil, margin (Psa. 41:1).

We whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of the paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper, and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

The Young People's Society met Friday evening, May 23, at the home of Florence Linsenmeir. There were 25 members present and 17 visitors. During a brief business meeting five new members were taken into the Society. The lesson was given by Sister Susan Keith who talked on the life of Paul, Barnabas and Peter after their disagreement. She pointed out how their lives were righteous and abounding with good works even during the quarrel, and how they were finally reconciled. The main thought of the lesson seemed to be that while all good things are not pleasant, and all pleasant things are not good, it is both good and pleasant for brethren to dwell together in unity.

Christian Character a Growth

IT MATTERS not if you do not "feel" any different after you have been baptized. If you sow a handful of wheat in the garden, you cannot tell, however hard you try, the exact moment when it germinated. But when you see the waving grain in the autumn you know it did germinate, and that is all you care for. The young believer should not expect too much light at once. It will grow brighter and brighter unto the perfect day. The Christian life may be compared to a mountain path: the higher one climbs the clearer the atmosphere, and the sooner he will see the morning sun. To the adventurous traveller who has ascended to the summit of Mount Blanc, the sun rises earlier and sets later, and the night is consequently shorter, than to the man who lives down in the valley at its base. So it is in the truth. Clearness of vision, firmness of foot, and beauty of prospect come only to those who have struggled up to the heights—to "heavenly places in Christ Jesus." Conversion may be wrought in a little while, but a saint is not made in an hour. Christian character is not an act, but a process; not a sudden creation, but a development. It grows and bears fruit like a tree "planted by the rivers of water," and like a tree it requires patient care and unwearied cultivation.

Alas! Dear Friend

ABOUT FOUR years ago Brother Adam Keith introduced the truth to Harry Macdonald, a friend of his. About three years passed, during which time we heard nothing of this friend. However about a year ago we heard of him again, and when we called upon him we learned that he was afflicted with consumption. The truth was brought to his attention again and he seemed more receptive and began pre-baptismal study at once. As he was not able to work, he applied himself diligently to study, and soon accumulated a good knowledge of the fundamentals of the gospel. Last January he completed his lessons, and knowing his physical condition, we were careful to tell him that we were at his service any time he might decide to obey the truth. He expressed his intention to obey and went his way. Brother Finlayson and others kindly recurred to the subject during the last three months, and he always cordially and appreciately spoke of the gospel, telling us upon one occasion of loving entreaty, "Don't think I shall not obey the truth I know the gospel and my duty. I'll obey."

All the while, however, he grew steadily worse, getting weaker and weaker. He often spoke of the truth, for he loved it and frequently expressed his desire to obey it. "Almost persuaded," he procrastinated three months; finally he sent word he wanted to be baptized in his home. Upon hearing of his desire Brother Tabor immediately gathered up the Elders and took them to his home in his automobile on a Sunday afternoon. Mr. Macdonald was very low, and it was decided that the following Monday evening, under the superintendence of Sister Darrah, who is a nurse, he would be baptized. But, alas! dear friend. He died early Monday morning!

Now what lesson are we to learn from this event of deep sorrow? This: The New Testament means it when it says, that when people believed the gospel they arose "immediately," "straightway," even the "same hour of the night" and were baptized. The longest delay in being baptized that we read of in the New Testament was three days, and for this brief procrastination Ananias rebuked Paul: "And now why tarriest thou? Arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." We relate this tragic affair for the purpose of warning any reader who may be neglecting gospel requirements, that delays are dangerous; that life is the time and only time we have for serving the Lord; and that we must make our calling and election "sure" by spontaneous and hearty obedience if we are to be found among Christ's owned and crowned ones in the day of his glory.

Scriptural Times and Seasons

To everything there is a season and a time for every purpose under the sun (Eccl. 3:1).

TIME TO LOVE. When thy neighbor needs thy service (Luke 10:27-37).

TIME TO HATE. When anything would defraud Christ of our service (Luke 14:26).

TIME OF WAR. The hour of judgment when Messiah returns in the capacity of a "man of war," and shall contest the dominion of the world with all the kings of the earth (Rev. 19:11; 15:19; Exod. 15:3; Psa. 110:5, 6).

TIME OF PEACE. When Messiah reigns over a conquered world (Psa. 72).

TIME OF IGNORANCE. Pre and post apostolic (Acts 17:30; Isa. 60:2).

TIME OF REFORMATION. The "fulness of time" when the seed came to whom the Abrahamic promise was made (Heb. 9:10; Matt. 3:2; A. D. 29).

TIME OF VISITATION. When Israel and the Gentiles were visited by Jesus and the apostles to take out of them a people for his name by the preaching of the gospel (Luke 19:44; Acts 15:14).

TIMES OF THE GENTILES. The "seven times" 360 or 2520 years of Babylon's desolating prosperity (Dan. 16:32; Luke 21:24).

TIME OF THE END. The transition period or hour of judgment in which the Spirit incorporate in Jesus and his brethren, "the name" "avenges the holy" and causes to pass away all power and dominion from the "spirituals of the wickedness"; who now rule in the ecclesiastical and secular high places of the nations; and establishes the kingdom of the Deity. A period of 45 years between the expiry of the 2400 evening mornings of Jewish down treading (Dan. 12:4).

TIME TO FAVOR ZION. The expiry of the 2400 prophetic days when the Holy Sanctuary shall be cleansed and the down treading of Jerusalem consummated sychronous with the times of the Gentiles fulfilled (Psa. 102:13; Dan. 8:13, 14, 26; Luke 21:24).

TIME OF THE DEAD. The resurrection of the dead.

TIMES OF RESTITUTION. When the kingdom of Israel shall be reconstituted (under Christ) in Palestine; the Jews resurrected, the throne of David re-erected, the temple rebuilt, the sacrifices reinstituted, the land redistributed, the "Judges restored as at the beginning." Paradise regained, and primitive longevity recovered (Acts 3:21; 15:16; Isa. 1:26; 51:3; 65:20-22; Mic. 4:1-8; Ezek. 37; 38).

TIMES OF REFRESHING. When the second Pentecostal immersion of (resurrected) first fruits takes place at the coming of Christ (Acts 3:19).

HIS (MESSIAH'S) TIMES. The Millenium or 1000 years of the next age, during which he will be "King over the whole earth." These times will date from his second advent (1 Tim. 6:15; Rev. 20:4; Zech. 14:9).

TIME THAT THE SAINTS POSSESSED THE KINGDOM. When the "Ancient of Days" comes to confer upon them "power over the nations" (Dan. 7:9-27; Rev. 2:26, 27).

TIME OF EVENING LIGHT. Ending the forty years judgment upon the nations when the saints shall shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father (Zech. 14:7; Matt. 13:43).

FULNESS OF TIMES. When "the fulness of the Gentiles is come in" the kingdoms of this world become the kingdom of Yahweh and his anointed (Eph. 1:10; Rev. 11:15).

THE ACCEPTED TIME. Now; extending to the second advent. Today if ye will hear his voice (2 Cor. 6:2; Heb. 5:15).

Brother Anderson on the Wing

DEAR BROTHER HUGGINS:

ON WEDNESDAY May 26, we left home for Gallimore, N. C., for a meeting over the 5th Sunday. We began meetings Thursday evening and closed Sunday 11 A. M. The attendance was the best we ever had at this place. We had several families from Liberty with us. Brother W. W. Moore, James Pack, B. Z. Chandler, W. H. Stone and T. W. Picklesimer, members of the Church of God, Guthrie Grove, S. C., came 65 miles to be with us in the services. On Sunday morning Brothers J. H. Stamey, Luther Stamey and J. W. Garrett, of Traveller's Rest, S. C. came up to take us to that place for service that night and up to Wednesday night, should the interest demand. On Sunday we preached to a crowded house on the "Time of the End." Sunday afternoon the brethren from Guthrie Grove went with us to Brother Stamey's near Traveller's Rest, where Brother Stamey had made an appointment for us to preach. When we lived in South Carolina we had baptized quite a number and had organized a church at this place. So as this was our first visit since moving away we were very much pleased to find a house full and many who could not get in. There were quite a number who had come up from Greenville, a distance of 17 miles. After services we received an invitation to go down to Greenville for a few services during the week, and Brother Stamey thought it best to accept as the farmers were so busy with their work that he did not think we could get out more than a dozen to hear us at any one service during the week. We decided however, to give an appointment on Monday evening, and then if the people did not turn out we would go to Greenville. Well, on Monday night not more than one half of those present could get into the house, so we decided to continue the meetings at this place, which we did. As our time was limited the meetings came to a close Wednesday evening, and on Thursday we left for home, which place we reached on Friday and found all well. Two young ladies at Traveller's Rest requested baptism which we hope to administer in August.

J. H. ANDERSON.

Notice to Subscribers

WE WISH to call your attention to the date on the label of your Restitution. We have lately been sending out bills for subscriptions overdue, and hope you will please comply with our request to keep your subscription paid in advance.

It is the custom with most subscription papers and magazines to remove names from the mailing list if they are not kept up to date; but we have not followed this policy very rigidly. We however require the money which is due to us to carry on the work; and we may here state that owing to the advance in the price of paper, also its scarcity, and the rise in labor we could not have kept The Restitution going if we had not secured our own plant, and even with that facility we have to do job work for the trade to keep things going. Paper alone is costing 100 per cent more than it did 18 months ago. Our policy is to keep the paper at the same price so that all who will, can afford it. So we ask you to do your share of the work by keeping your subscription paid in advance to date. In this way you are helping the Lord's work by giving us the opportunity of sending the paper where it may strengthen and build up those of our isolated ones who hear no preaching, and also of giving light to others who are in darknes.

May the Lord prosper our endeavors to the glory of his name, is my prayer.

A. E. GRIFFITHS, Mgr. & Treas.

GOLDEN TEXT: Revelation 21:4

CAN ANY GOOD THING COME OUT OF NAZARETH?

BIDE WHERE thou art
If thou be great of soul,
The green seas roll
Their languorous waves round many an island fair;
But though such subtle opiates Nature's care
Doth treasure, 'tis to soothe the soul's despair,
Bide thou at home.

Bide where thou art,
Common is not unclean,
Cloud not thy days serene
For gold and gems, raiment and wine and meat
Such as the eyes of Orient kings do greet,
These are but things—toys for earth's children meet,
Bide thou at home.

Bide where thou art
Nazareth was but small
And of ill-repute withal;
In the parched land a byword and a sneer,
Yet now among earth's names it hath no peer,
Yea, earth from heaven itself that name did hear,
Bide thou at home.

Bide where thou art,
The shouting multitude
Clamor for vulgar food,
And for their souls' need do not care at all,
Pay thou the daily debt of duties small,
If thou art needed, time will bring thy call,
Bide thou at home.

For each true deed is worship; it is prayer,
And carries its own answer unaware.—E. Markham.

CHILDREN

AND THEY brought unto him children, and his disciples rebuked them: but Jesus said, Let little children come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of God. What did Jesus mean by saying "of such is the kingdom of God"? He meant that whosoever will not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter in (Matt. 19;14; Luke 18:16 17). Meaning we must have the trust and the disposition of a child. When one has promised a child something that will please him, he has faith, and when he receives it, how pleased and happy he is. So must one be to enter into God's kingdom.

How can a mature person become in such a state? By being converted; to change from one opinion to another: to become convinced that to escape the wrath of God he must draw near to God, and accept of him as the giver of eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord . Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. Whosoever shall humble himself as a little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven (Matt. 18:3, 4). And when the seventy returned with joy, Jesus rejoiced in spirit and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes (Luke 10:17, 21).

Jesus in addressing his disciples called them "little children" (John 13:33). Paul said to the Ephesians, "Be ye therefore followers of God, as dear children. Let no man deceive you with vain words, for because of these things cometh the wrath of God, upon the children of disobedience. Ye were sometimes in darkness, but now walk as children of light" (Eph. 5:1, 6, 8). Brethren, be not children in understanding, but in malice be ye children.

How strange it is that an innocent child can become a terror to good government and a vile law breaker. It is said of a noted painter that he painted a babe and called it innocence. Then when he became old he wanted a companion picture for guilt. He hunted through many prisons until he found a horrid, sensual man and he got the privilege of painting him and of giving his history . Judge of his surprise when he found he was painting the same being he had painted as a babe for innocence. Now children please learn this lesson, if you obey your parents, school teachers and the teaching of the Bible, even the world cannot call you bad, for you will serve God instead of man. It is good for a man that he bear the yoke in his youth (1 Sam. 3:27). Remember the Creator in the days of thy youth (Eccl. 12:1). Children obey your parents in all things, for this is well pleasing unto the Lord (Col. 3:20; Eph. 6:1). Depart from evil and do good: seek peace and pursue it (Psa. 34:14). Abhor that which is evil, cleave to that which is good (Rom. 12:9). Evil communications corrupt good manners (1 Cor. 15:33).

Vice is a monster of such frightful mien,
That to be hated, needs but to be seen;
But seen too oft, familiar with its face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace.

E. W. KNAPP.

SUFFER LITTLE CHILDREN TO COME

TO MY mind, no one ever has appreciated more clearly the potential value of a child than our Lord Jesus Christ. He was thoroughly indignant when his disciples reproved fond parents who were bringing their little ones to him for his blessing. I am sure their only purpose was to save Jesus the annoyance, as they conceived it, as giving any attention to such insignificant things as children. I do not imagine that the apostles had anything in their hears against children: the real trouble was that they did not appreciate what I am pleased to style the "potential value" of a child. Our Lord was too busy to give attention to children. The disciples must have been startled by the tones in which the Master rebuked them.

Every once in a while we receive a letter embodying the query "Do you consider it wise to spend so much time and energy in conducting your department, when apparently so few of the younger people appreciate it?" Our answer always is about the same, somewhat after this order: "We must admit that were we to judge by the number of letters received from the younger element, very few of them ever read the page; but then many mothers have written stating their young people do read it and to profit." One good soul recently wrote, "Don't give up your work, for your department is the heart of the whole paper."

"Many men, many minds," many interests. We feel the department has done some good, perhaps not as much as we desire. As long as the management will allow us the space and we are convinced that it is doing any good we will continue our work. Noah worked longer also harder than we, and you all know what success he had. We read that "one may plant, and another water, but the result lies in still another hand," stronger and mightier than either. Our attitude is "Be not weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap if we faint not."

We believe in young people. We believe that in our church paper they should have a department especially devoted to their cause. If the young people live, in due course of events they will become old people. It is due them that now in their youth they be encouraged in the things pertaining to God and his Christ so when they become mature they will take upon themselves the burden, laboring in the vineyard of God, and when the Master comes, they with us will hear those welcome words, "Well done . . . . enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

SUPERSTITION

ONE OFTEN sees a horseshoe nailed to a barn door, also other evidence of the dark ages, when luck good or bad was supposed to follow certain people.

An observant writer once counted seventeen horseshoes nailed over the thresholds in one street of a good sized country town.

Superstition is not confined to the poor and ignorant. It is said that Nelson, at one time Admiral of the British Navy, had a superstitions tinge in his nature, and had great faith in an old iron horseshoe nailed to the mast of the ship "Victory."

Strange as it may seem, almost every one would, a few years ago, get out of a vehicle to pick up and carry home a horse shoe left on the road.

Now that the automobile has supplanted the faithful old horse, we do not see as many horseshoes as we once did; and with the passing of the horseshoe the superstition attached to it seems to be also passing. It would be a good idea if the disappearing horseshoe would take all superstition with it, including this one so well advertized by Conon Doyle and Oliver Lodge.

This page—this paper—has no superstitious ideas. We preach and teach Christ and him crucified. We are not interested in "bogies." Where Christ dwells superstition cannot find lodgment. There is no heart large enough to hold both.

There is only one thing to do, study the Bible; ask God to give you a heart to love, a mind to understand and a will to obey. If you do this you never need fear: you are in the keeping of God, and all will be well.

A REMINDER

DEAR YOUNG PEOPLE:

SOME TIME ago my father asked you to write to him and promised you eight or ten letters from those of your own age for every one you wrote. Most of you did not accept this offer.

I want to tell you, brothers and sisters, you don't know how much you are missing by neglecting to write that letter. You know my brother and sister and I have only been members of the household of faith for a little over four months, and we live way down in Alabama where there is not another person of our faith that we know of, and yet in those four months we have become acquainted with some of the finest boys and girls in the world.

We want you to have some of the good times we are having. Are you interested enough to ask for your part of them? Of course you are, and all you need to do is to write to us, giving your name, address, and age, and we will all join hands and share with you the fun and the benefits of our plan.

God knows how much we want to know each and every one of you. Come on: you won't be disappointed with yourselves and us again, will you? Write now, and I promise you will never once regret it. I am trusting God to send me lots and lots of replies.

Let us not let the Master find us sleeping, but watching, working, and comforting one another when he comes.

Your sister in hope,

DOROTHY LYON,
Citronelle, Ala.

Let me add my persuasions to Sister Dorothy's. I was one of the first to answer Brother Lyon's appeal, and I want to say I was never more enjoyably surprised in my life. Take my advise and write at once, before it is too late. You will never regret it.—Aunt Bess.

GET BUSY

WHAT A wonderful blessing it is to have something to do every day and to be of use to yourself or some other person.

To live through the days in aimlessness, which is one of the commonest things in some circles in every city, tending to nerveousness, indigestion, ill-temper, waste of time and great unhappiness. Not knowing what to do, almost always ends in nothing done or something done that was not worth the effort.

Get busy. Not in selfish work, but in doing for others. Self-sacrifice is the support of all permanent happiness. Don't you know what to do? Then let someone help you master your perplexities and rescue you from the perils of mental idleness and help you to turn to account your unappropriated time.

Get Busy.

TRUST IN THE LORD

HOW EASY to trust in the Lord! so we think joyously as we go about our duties for the day. The sun is shining; it is a lovely day in June. Flowers are blooming and filling the air with their sweet perfume. Many friends and loved ones are gathered around us, speaking words of love and cheer.

As a wee babe in the mother's arms, so are we borne along on life's ocean. Our boat floats gaily over the waves dipping and dancing in the sunlight. Joy fills our hearts to over flowing, and it is so easy to trust in the Lord.

But suppose our sunshine should vanish, bringing black heavy clouds in its stead. As dark night approaches, the dreadful lightening flashes and peals of thunder bring the storm nearer and nearer, until we are engulfed in its fury: can we kneel in prayer and thanksgiving? Can we still trust in our Lord?

What if those friends and loved ones whom we cherish, should turn form us in anger and scorn; speaking words of such malignant cruelty that they cut through our heart like a sword. Oh, I wonder if in our pain and sorrow, could we still put our trust in the Lord?

Could we trust, when out on life's ocean, our boat is caught on the waves, and dashes mountains high in their fury, with nothing but possible wreck in sight. No companions on board to comfort us, or give us a word of cheer, 'mid the wreck of our bark on life's ocean, can we still put our trust in the Lord?

AUNT BESS.

VOLUME 72 CLEVELAND, O. July 6th, 1920 NUMBER 25

The Works of the Flesh

GALATIANS 5

Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these, viz:

Adultery
Fornication
Uncleanliness
Lasciviousness
Idolatry
Witchcraft
Hatred
Variance
Emulation
Wrath
Strife
Sedition
Heresies
Envyings
Murders
Drunkenness
Revellings and Such Like.

They who do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God.

He who soweth to the flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption.

The wages of sin is death (Rom. 6:23).

The Fruit of the Spirit

GALATIANS 5

The fruit of the spirit is

Love
Joy
Peace
Long Suffering
Gentleness
Goodness
Faith
Meekness
Temperance.

Against such there is no law.

He who soweth to the Spirit, shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting.

The gift of God is eternal life (Rom. 6:23).

"As the whirlwind passeth, so is the wicked no more, but the righteous is an everlasting foundation . . . . . The righteous shall never be removed, but the wicked shall not inhabit the earth" (Prov. 10:25,30).

Prophetic Signs of the Times

Time Periods, Dates, "Times of the Gentiles," and the Final Consummation

IT WOULD reasonably be expected that the spirit of prophecies should not only be a forecast of future events, but that the prophecies would also indicate the time of the predicted occurence of those events when necessary.

SOME TIME PERIODS SEALED UNTIL THIS TIME

It it true that there is a temporary sealing of some of the time-periods, which were to remain "sealed" until the "time of the end," as we see by reading Acts 1:7, but there is unmistakable evidence in current events in connection with the testimony already considered, to show conclusively that we are living in the "latter days." Consequently the once "sealed" periods may now be understood; and we will also endeavor to show to the satisfaction of the reader, by means of those defined periods themselves, that we are living in the time of the end.

"TIME" EYES OF HISTORY

Has it not been rightly stated that "Time is but the eyes of history"? Time is certainly an indispensable element in the arrangement of past events. Time and events are inseparable; they go hand in hand. Seeing that this is a fact we would naturally expect that prophecy would include not only the ability to predict an event, but also the ability to predict the time of its occurence. It will be our object to show that this is the case with some of the important events that have taken place in these history-making days.

First, there is a number of time periods given in the Scriptures, and the phraseology in which they are given varies. It is on this account that some mystery has surrounded their meaning. Also they have been sealed for a limited time, just as stated it would be in Dan. 12:9; Daniel was told to go his way (when he enquired as to the meaning of the vision), but was informed that the vision would be sealed until the "time of the end," or "the last days" of the Gentile times.

It is because of this sealing of some of the time-periods that all deductions made previous to the "time of the end" (that were intended to solve the vision of the "times") have failed in their purpose, as the Word must stand sure and unbroken. However, because of such failures a study of the "times" has been neglected, and in some instances discouraged and ridiculed as being of no profit. However, we can rest assured that the time-periods would not have been outlined in the Scriptures if they were not intended for consideration in their proper time—that is, in the "time of the end."

It was not for the Apostles and many following to know the "times," as they did not live in the "last days," or the "time of the end." Therefore, past failures on this particular phase of our subject should not stand in the way of a due consideration of it, especially when it has become so interesting a topic because of current events that are unfolding prophecy so clearly to our vision.

In considering the different forms in which the time-periods were given, we will now show that the same arch of time is expressed in the three following different forms: "1260 days," "forty and two months" and "time, times and a half." We will show that the "1260 days" and the "forty and two months" are each equal to the "time, times, and a half," and, therefore are equal to each other.

It will be necessary, in order to show the relation of these time-periods, to refer in more detail to the event of the Lord's return to Zion. In Rom. 11:26, this event is clearly referred to: "And so all Israel shall be saved: as it is written, There shall come out of Zion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob." This event takes place in the battle of Armageddon as is outlined in Zech. 14:2-4, which has already been referred to, where it shows that when the Mount of Olives cleaves in the midst the time has arrived to deliver Zion and the Jews out of the land of their enemies. These verses show that when Jerusalem is taken by Christ during the next World War, the event will end God's wrath and indignation against the Jews, brought on them because of their rejection of and crucifying his Son, the Lord Jesus Christ. God's wrath will then be diverted to the Jews' enemies, the most prominent of whom are the nations and people represented by the system of Catholicism in either its Latin or Greek branches. Consequently, this system, alluded to by Paul as the "son of perdition" sitting in the temple of God, as God, is only to prosper and practice until Christ's return, as may be gathered from Rev. 13:5; Dan. 11:36; and Dan. 12:7. While reading these passages, please note also the time-periods given:

SUMMARY OF TIME PERIODS

Rev. 13:5: "And there was given unto him a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies; and power given unto him to continue forty and two months."

Dan. 11:36: "And the king shall do according to his will; and he shall exalt himself, and magnify himself above every god, and shall speak marvellous things against the God of gods, and shall prosper till the indignation be accomplished: for that that is determined shall be done."

Dan. 12:7: "And I heard the man clothed in linen which was upon the waters of the river, when he held up his right hand and his left hand unto heaven, and sware by him that liveth forever that it shall be for a time, times, and a half; and when he shall have accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people, all these things shall be finished."

It is evident that the events of these verses are one and the same; therefore the two different forms in which the time-period is expressed, "time, times, and a half" and the forty and two months are equal.

Now then, to show that the "1260 days" are also equal to the "time, times, and a half," we will read Rev. 12:6 and 14: "And the woman fled into the wilderness, where she had a place prepared of God, that they should feed her there, a thousand two hundred and threescore days. . . . And to the woman were given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness, into her place, where she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time."

As it will be readily seen that the events here signified is the same in both verses, it will not be necessary to take the time to explain just what event in history is predicted; but as the event is the same, the time periods are therefore alike.

SCRIPTURE RULE 360 DAYS

Thus we have proved that the "1260 days," "forty and two months," and "the time, times, and a half" are all alike and refer to the like duration of time. Now as we do not speak of months as of decades, or as months of centuries, the forty-two months refer to years and are equal to three and a half years; that is, counting as is the rule, twelve months to the year; in which case there would be 360 days to the year. Thus it may be readily concluded from the Scriptures that the phrase "time, times, and a half" are three and a half years, equaling 1260 days, or fortytwo months. Accordingly, 360 is the basic number to be used in these Prophetic Times.

In view of the fact that we read that the heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth his handiwork; and that the movements of the heavenly bodies through space are for signs, seasons, days, and years, according to Gen. 1:14, it is appropriate that a round number that may be associated with the movements of the planets should be chosen as a sign of a complete cycle of time—a year; and seeing that God has chosen the number 360 as a scriptural time measuring rule, there must be other good reasons besides the choosing of a round number which would be convenient for computing purposes.

Life is a casket, not precious in itself, but valuable in proportion to what fortune or industry or virtue has placed within it.—Landor.

Eternal Life

DO ANY of us realize the meaning of the words immortality, eternal life, everlasting life, deathlessness, ? Can even the wisest of us comprehend what it will be to live on and on until we are as old as Methuselah; then add another thousand years and still another, until the thousands become millions, and the millions, billions ? It is impossible.

No finite mind can grasp the meaning of such a life as that, so marvellous in length, in knowledge, and glory, or grasping it, can be conscious of what a person must be to be accounted worthy of that world and of the resurrection from among the dead. No wonder Sister Lawrence thought the time had come to take a stand for Jesus, no matter what the oppostition might be; nor that Sister Lucy Lapp drove two hundred and twenty-five miles that her children might get into the strong tower and be safe; and that Mr. Backmaster wants to go to the very bottom of things from the precious word that he may teach for Jesus. How I pray that he may be able to do so. There is no more exalted position in the world than to be a messenger of the Most High to men; to bear the tidings of pardon and peace and hope to those who "sit in the shadow of death," in so clear and simple a way that even the little children can understand and can come to Jesus and be saved.

The Lord's highway to the kingdom is a plain path. A fool need not err therein. It is to believe what Jesus preached; to accept his glad tidings of the re-establishment of God's kingdom on earth; the restoration of that kingdom to a united and restored Israel; the setting up of David's throne, this time with an immortal Christ thereon; the kingdom world-wide in extent and the enthroned judges of Israel, the twelve apostles of the Lamb with the immortalized saints occupying other thrones over one or over ten cities; and this kingdom to have no end. Surely a little child can understand and believe that, and having believed, can understand that there is only one way to get the life that never ends in the kingdom that never ends. "I am the resurrection and the life." When God promised Abraham that he should have the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession, it meant that he would be raised from the dead to live always. Abraham knew this. He knew about Christ, for he "saw his day and was glad." All the old worthies knew about Christ and the resurrection; all looked forward to him for forgiveness and life. We cannot be forgiven out of Christ. You know that Marie and Jennie and Helen, and Robert who "want to learn the gospel," and his sister, don't you? You know that you could be adopted by some great man and take his name for your name, but that God would not save you under that name; that to have eternal life you must take the life giver's name, and that God has given to us but one life-giver, our Savior, only one name whereby we can be saved, and only one way whereby we can get that name, and that is by being baptized into it for the remission of our sins. O Ethel, dear, dear Mr. Howard, and dear Mr. Alexander if I could only make you see what a great and inestimable gift eternal life is, you would surely "sell all that you have to buy the field," would gladly submit to any conditions, however crucifying to the natural mind, that you might have that name, and having it, have the life to come. The very thought that I may not be found worthy of having it bestowed upon me is a frightful one; for to lose it would be to lose it forever. I do not want to be as if I had never been; to have no part or lot in that blessed age of light and song; to never meet my beloved father and mother and other dear ones again.

It fills my heart with joy that there are still earnest ones who do want eternal life, and who are determined to "make their calling and election sure." God bless these and all the household of faith. We have a sure foundation; let us stand fast thereon, that we may live for millions and billions of years.

S. ROXANA WINCE.

Remarks

WHEN WE reported last we were in the midst of our meeting at Randolph, Mo., wondering what the outcome would be. And here I ask, did you ever see a time when everything was a wonder as it is now? There is no stability in anything. Even the elements seem to be in a state of unrest. The governments are more or less in a state of chaos. The nominal churches are face to face with problems they do not know what to do with. They have received a blow that has left them dazed; and while they are on their feet, they are decidedly groggy.

But do we find this unrest in the above mentioned places only? No; it is in the very place we should never look for it or find it—right in the church of the living God! It is one thing to preach and advocate a thing, and another to be ready when it comes. The church believed and advocated with all its power, and through its strongest and most influential representatives, that a world war was coming, and they were not mistaken, for it came; but were we ready for it when it came? In belief only, not in practice. It caused dissension and division, just as it did among the nations. What was the trouble? Just this: We talked and fully believed a world's war was coming, forgetting one of the mst essential things what will we do, and where will we stand when it comes? It is one thing to believe the Lord is coming and altogether another to be ready when he comes. We should learn the lesson fully, and put it into practice—not wait until he comes, and try to deal with neglected duty when it is too late. In times of peace when people's minds and nerves were normal, when we were teaching a coming world's conflict, we should have settled the question, and taken a Bible stand, and committed every individual to that principle. Then there would not have been any divisions.

The church tried to discuss and put in practice a principle at a time when every thing was at fever heat—a poor time to try to reason with people. My purpose in penning the above is this: We as a people believe and advocate the coming of a time of unrest and general trouble, and concerning Christianity a general lukewarmness; and while we believe it, have we fully determined what our stand will be, and are we going to be prepared to keep it out of the church, or are we going to let the unrest and lukewarmness hit us? Are we going to let the drowsiness seize us at a time when we should be very much awake? Are we going to join with the world, and try to adjust the wrongs being perpetuated by profiteers, or are we going to be patient to the coming of the Lord? Will we fret and worry and join in worldly organizations to attempt to relieve the suffering, or will we heed the injunction of the Master to endure to the end? When Jesus' final hour came, his followers went to sleep: when the supreme moment of this age comes, will we go to sleep also?

I returned home May 22, after an absence of two months and a half. Two things I encountered as never before—bad weather and an utter indifference to all form of religion. Sister Morgan had planned and worked for a meeting at her place in the hope that some one of her neighbors might be led to a knowledge of the truth; and while her earnest heart was sad when no one openly acknowledged it, the meeting did her good in more ways than one. On the same ground, a good many years ago, I preached the truth that brought her parents and sister into the faith, and I found them still sound. This is of itself encouraging. My stay at Sister Morgan's was enjoyed by us all from first to last. We expect to see Robert Jewell and Geneva in the body soon. The time came to say good by and move on.

My next point was Raymore, where Sisters Lawrence and Leasly live (you remember in another report I said these two sisters came to Kansas City while I was holding a meeting there and were baptized). Sister Lawrence longed for her family to hear the gospel, and as she had been refused the use of the church, she secured a hall, and here we made the first effort to get the truth to the people of Raymore. Sister Fugate came down from Belton and stayed all through. We made our home with Sister Lawrence, who is a sister in the flesh of Sisters Fugate and Leasly. It would be hard to find three more earnest and devoted workers than these, and having a good report without, what more could we ask to make a good prospect for a meeting; but people took no interest and just a faithful few came each evening. I hope that Sister Lawrence will yet have cause to rejoice in seeing some of her dear ones take a stand. Our stay in her home with Sister Fugate to brighten the corner, by pleasant manner and knowledge of Scripture, was truly pleasant. We went as a chance afforded to Archie, 35 miles away and visited with Brother and Sister Wilson. In the afternoon, like Cornelius of old, they called in their relations and had us talk to them on the signs of the times, and some were quite interested and begged us to return.

In the evening we again journeyed back to Sister Lawrence. On the morrow we all went to Belton and spent the day with Sister Fugate where, after a splendid dinner, we spent the afternoon singing. We enjoyed a visit with Joe and Gladys, (son and daughter-in-law of Sister Lawrence), and hope some day to see them in the body of Christ So closed our two and a half month's work. What will be the final result God knows. I believe every one did their duty, and we must leave the result with God, who gives the increase.

We took the evening train for Kansas City, and went on to Wolcott on the interurban, and spent the night with Brother and Sister Meadly. We found Sister Meadly in poor health, but trust she may regain her strength and remain until the Master comes. The following day and night was spent in visiting with Sister Schaueramn and Sister Calkins. We took dinner with Sister Morgan, then visited the Bell Memorial Hospital where Sister Gladys Reed is a nurse. It was our first meeting with Sister Reed. We found her very pleasant to talk to and agreed with us that we must stand aloof from the world in these times of indifference, and be ready. In the evening we went to the home of Brother and Sister Herren in Kansas City, Kans., where a few relations gathered, and we held a round table investigation for a couple of hours. One lady had been drawn into the Seventh Day delusion, and here we had to direct most of our talk. She was honest in error, and honestly seeking the truth, and I firmly believe she found it, and will accept it when an opportunity comes. May the Lord soon provide the opportunity. Promising to return soon as possible we hurried to the train that was homeward bound, arrived in the morning to find all in fair health. I cannot however, stay long at home; the calls to come over and help us are so many we must hurry on, and trust in God for strength to endure the strain. If I can possibly find the time I will write on some things that are now before us, as great evidence of the approaching end. Brethren, be faithful, and put forth every effort to get the truth to the people, in hope of rescuing even one more.

ALMUS ADAMS.

Seeing God

LOOKING AT humanity from the ordinary point of view, that exalts man as the sum of all creation and the ne plus ultra thereof, we are met by numerous discrepancies when we take into consideration the rest of the visible work of God. For instance, there are very conspicuous defects in human intelligence as well as sense as compared with many of the lower animals in whom in many instances the gifts border on what is called the occult, yes, we might say they more than border; they reach down far into the unknown and invisible, but which are either lightly slighted over by the ignorant and unobserving, or systematically ignored by scientific professionals who hate to own up that there is anything that they don't know. And I sometimes think that those superior senses and wonderful intuitions are illustrations given us of what the coming race will be like ‘when that which is perfect is come .”

One evening in the autumn as I sat on the river bank looking northward I caught sight of some black specks moving in the sky. They came lower and nearer, circling ever downward until they skimmed along the surface of the water. Swallows they were on the way "spreading their wings to the earth." Then after dipping their little bills again and again, circling and dipping, they rose and circled and were lost to view toward the south. I have seen them since sometimes as they gather for the long flight and sit on the telegraph wires —a jolly crowd they are too, sitting in rows and chattering like school girls in the prospect of a straw ride to a picnis. Sometimes they cast off, then sit down and chatter again. "Nature fakirs" might suggest that they were discussing matters concerning the long thousands of miles of flight ahead of them such would be the human proceedure in such a case, and there would be some long solemn visages, for the children of Israel crossing the desert of Egypt or Brigham Young's journey to Salt Lake are petty affairs compared to the long flight of the migrant bird. Some even go clear across the planet from pole to pole but they need no information on the matter and no discussion, they know where they are going, and they know the way with a precision that is absolutely infallible; and there are some things in detail observed by those who have made a special study of these things. For instance it has been remarked that the young birds (last hatched) start first!

In recording these things I think of the last journey of Elijah and Elisha when the "sons of the prophets" came out to meet them and asked Elisha if he knew that his master would be taken. Yes, he said, he knew; and Jesus told his disciples "plainly Lazarus is dead." By what miracle of sense was it that they knew? Hw does the crane and the swallow know the time of its coming and the way then going in all the most accurate detail? Because these facts are common things and of common knowledge; they are overlooked by the passer by but they are perfectly inscrutable and as wonderful as any of the other deep things of God; and they prove conclusively that although man is gifted with reason and has the ability to search and dig into the realm of nature yet in many respects he is the dumbest thing around. Even the fine senses we possess are far more perfectly developed in other creatures than in us, and they have numerous senses of which we have not the slightest idea. For instance, all living creatures have an innate "race sense," we might call it, that enables them to understand each other as well as their general relation to the rest of creation; and so without explanation they understand the sex relations, propagation, enemies, proper habitat, proper food, and so forth, each race with a "special education." Man as super-animal is a tragedy sometimes, and sometimes a joke, seeing only through a glass very darkly, and subject to "every wind of doctrine" in these as in other respects.

The evolutionist scientist by a continuous propaganda for half a century has succeeded in stultifying us in regard to natural history . By an assumption of wisdom that they never possessed, they led us to believe that they had attained the heights and depths of all human knowledge, when as a matter of fact the simple problem of how the cat finds its way home is as far from their ken as is the centre of the universe, although all these natural wonders are manifest and above board, no "secret seances" in the robin's song or the wren's nest, nothing ghostly or immaterial but all openly written for our instruction or for those of us who have eyes to see or ears to hear, leading us forward and upward to the greater knowledge "when we shall know even as we are known;" when he shall pour out his spirit on all flesh, and all shall know him. For it is written, "Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God."

We all miss the genial and happy presence of Sister Frances Russell, who has gone to Florida, Brother and Sister Lang, who are in Michigan, and Brother and Sister Hamilton, who are in the East. Others too numerous to mention are absent on vacations of brief duration. Vacation season makes those who stay at home feel lonesome. However, we congratulate those who are able to enjoy a period of recreation, while we gladly anticipate the time when all shall be "at home" again.

Reader, it is of great consequence for you to separate yourself from irreligious and worldly companions. It will require some courage, and call for some painful self-denial, to retire from the society of those with whom you have been in the habit of associating; but if they are ungodly persons, it must be done. Read what God and good men have said on the subject in Psa. 119:63; Prov. 1:11-16; 2:12-19; 29:6· 13:20; 1 Cor. 15:33; 2 Cor. 6: 14-18. Comply with these admonitions; quit the society of all who think lightly of the gospel. Their company will soon draw you aside from the ways of piety and truth. Their levity, their indifference, their neglect of salvation, will be destructive to all your religious feelings. Even believers of long standing find such society very unfriendly to the truth, and avoid it as much as possible: how much more dangerous to you who are young in the cause of Christ!

Communication

They spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened, and heard it.—Mal. 3:16.

DEAR BROTHER HUGGINS:

IN THE Restitution of June 8, Brother Adams asked me this question: "Who believes anyone has another chance?" I refer him to "The Divine Plan of the Ages," volume 1, pp. 150 and 151:

"To claim that he gave 'ransom for all' and yet claim that only a mere handful of the ransomed ones will ever receive any benefit from it, is absurd . . . . . The 'ransom for all' given by the man Christ Jesus . . . . . . guarantees to every man another opportunity or trial for life everlasting. . . . . . Only the wilfully disobedient will receive the penalty of the the second trial . . . . That trial will decide for ever who would be righteous and holy under a thousand trials . . ."

If the first trial does not give life and they are granted a second opportunity, what is the use of preaching.

Let them have the thousand trials.

Yours for truth and righteousness,

F. W. KNAPP.

Obituaries

Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.—Psa. 116:15.

Sister Mary A. Calder, wife of the late George Calder, of Oleander, California, died at the home of her daughter at Garnett, Kansas, February 14, 1920, and was buried by the side of her mother, in the Springfield Cemetery near Garnett.

Mary Balch was born in Dupage County, Illinois, April 7, 1848, and was married to Homer Balch Sept. 2, 1865.

To this union was born four children three of whom died in infancy; the other daughter, Mrs. Ida Horn, lives in Kansas.

Homer Balch and wife united with the Church of God in 1865, and were baptized by Brother G. W. Loosie in the Cottonwood River near Emporia. Homer Balch died in 1884, and the widow married George Calder in 1886.

In 1887 they moved from Anderson Co., Kansas, to Oleander, California, where they live until the death of Brother Calder six years ago. Since that time she has lived most of her time with her daughter in Kansas.

Sister Calder was a patient sufferer for a great many years, but she was upheld by a firm faith in the gospel promises embraced so many years ago. Brother and Sister Calder lived constant Christian lives and did everything in their power to spread the gospel; many have heard the truth and been encourged to a better walk of life through their faithful efforts.

Besides the daughter, a son and daughter of Brother Calder by a former marriage survive her; Marian Calder and Mrs. Homee Dart of Fresno, California, and numerous other relatives.

They sleep in Jesus, awaiting the resurrection to life in the kingdom of God.

E. E. GROAT.

George M. Alexander, son of Thomas and Rachael Alexander, was born on a farm seven miles south east of Bremen, on the twentieth day of August, 1854. Here he grew to manhood, attending the public schools and performing the duties incident to a life on the fram.

For many years he was a teacher in the public schools of the state, and occupied positions as superintendent of high schools.

He was associated with the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith and a zealous defender of the tenets of that creed.

In the year 1887 he was united in marriage with Miss Susie E. Crase. To this union was born a son, Geo. D. Alexander.

For the last twenty years he has lived in Chicago, and of late years he was employed by the General Electric Company, in the Monadnock Building. It was while in this position that the life, upon which his hold was growing weaker, suddenly went out on the morning of June 15, 1920.

A son, Geo. D. Alexander, of Geneva, Pa.; a sister, Mrs. Matilda Bodkin, of South Bend; a brother, W. G. Alexander, of Bremen; and many nephews, neices, and friends survive him.

Funeral services were held at the home of his brother, W. C. Alexander, in Bremen at 2 o'clock, June 17, conducted by Elder R. C. Railsback, of South Bend. Brother Railsback spoke words of comfort from 1 Cor. 15, Job 14, and other Scriptures bearing upon the great thought of a future life through a resurrection from the dead. Burial was made in the Bremen Cemetery where our beloved brother was laid to rest to await his resurrection at the coming of the Lord.

Mr. John J. Updike was born May 24, 1826, and died June 11, 1920, at the age of 94 years and 17 days. He was baptized about 18 years ago by Brother Wagoner. About 68 years ago he and Miss Elizabeth Rudacille were united in marriace. They were the parents of 11 children. The wife and 6 children preceded Brother Updike into the sleep of death. The children, Brother Randolph, Sisters M. F. Cook, Julia Updike, C. Dunlap and Alice Updike are all members of the Cool Springs Church of God. The house that their father built is where the church meets. Beside the 5 living children left there are 22 grandchildren, 53 great grandchildren living. Four or five grandchildren are members of the church of God.

The funeral was conducted at the home of his daughter, Julia, June 12, 1920, by the writer, who spoke words of comfort from Job 14:13, 14. After the funeral he was laid by the side of his wife to sleep till Jesus comes.

Benjamin Franklin Railsback died at his home near Argos, at 3 o'clock P. M., June 18, 1920, after a brief illness of a few weeks. His children were all at his bedside when the end came, with the exception of Mrs. Maude Olds who was not able to be present. His oldest son William arrived from California just the day before.

He was born near Indianapolis on Eagle Creek, Dec. 5, 1843. He was one of a large family of nine sons and two daughters, children of Caleb and Nancy Railsback. Of these, two of the sons died in youth, and the others grew to manhood and womanhood in the vicinity of Argos where the family was know far and near for their industry and intelligence. Their names were Sarah, William, Robert and David (twins), Nathan, Hugh, Richard C., Benjamin F., Mary Jane, Joel and John. The family came to Marshall County in 1846 and settled in the wilderness and became one of the potent forces in the transformation of it into the conditions of civilization.

Brother Railsback heard the gospel preached while yet a young man in his minority, and accepting it, yielded obedience and was baptized by Elder Hugh Barnhill sixty years ago and united with the church of God. This was before the organization of the Argos church and took place at the Springville school house just north of town. When the Argos congregation was organized in the latter sixties, he was one of the charter members and has remained in affiliation till his death.

He was married to Mary E. C. Wilson, April 22, 1868, and became the father of two children, William C., and Laura May. The companion and mother sickened and died leaving him with two little children. He again married, uniting to Sarah B. Martz, Feb. 18, 1875. This wife lived less than a year. Seeking again a companion and mother for his children, he married Jemima Caillat, Feb. 22, 1877. To them have been born five children, Mertie C. Victoria and Victor (twins), Maude Esther, and Mabel Jane.

He has made five trips to California staying at one time a year and at another two and a half years. The latter part of his life was spent on the farm where he died just east from Argos.

He leaves his companion, Mrs. Jemima Railsback, his oldest son, William C. Railsback of Modesto, California, Mrs. Mertie C. Brown, of Anderson, Ind., Mrs. Victoria Dunn, of Concord, California, Mr. Victor Railsback, of Argos, Mrs. Maude E. Olds, of Rosedale, Ind., and Mrs. Mabel J. Williams, of Argos, to remember his life of toil and sacrifice for their well being and care. He also leaves fifteen grandchildren.

He was inoffensive almost to timidity, and conservative in all his ways, seeking to discharge his duties in life toward God and his fellow men as befitting a follower of the meek and lowly Nazarene. Honest and upright in all his dealings among men, he held the high esteem of his neighbors and friends. He has fought a good fight, he has kept the faith, he has finished his course and there is laid up for him a crown of righteousness which the righteous judge will give him in that day when Jesus shall be revealed from heaven.

Funeral services were held at the Church of God at 2 P. M., June 20, and burial was made in Maple Grove Cemetery. The church was filled with friends and relatives and we spoke on the theme of the resurrection, the thought uppermost in our departed brother's mind while living. It was his greatest desire that Christ would come and raise the dead and change the living saints that death might be swallowed up of life.

Sarah E. Harris was born in La Salle County, Ill., July 23, 1860. She was married to Charles E. Vincent Feb. 2, 1878, and to this union four daughters were born, Mrs. Emma A. Higgins, of Deputy, Ind., Mrs. Carrie A. Gillespie, of Newton, Kans., Mrs. Lizzie M. Spaulding, of Richmond, Ind., and Mrs. Mary E. Jones, of Grand Haven, Mich.

For several years the family lived near Remington, Ind., moving to Jennings nineteen years ago.

She was baptized in 1898 or 9 by F. L. Austin into the church of God, and remained in the faith unto the end of her life. Her death was very sudden. She had not been feeling well for a couple of days preceding her death, but was apparently better Saturday morning, May 8, when her husband left to get a doctor about 10 A. M.; but when Mr. Vincent returned home he found her dead sitting in a chair. She is survived by her husband, five daughters, five grandchildren and many friends.

GOLDEN TEXT: James 3:12, 18

THE KING'S CITY

O royal city of the glorious King,
  Thy radiant splendor born of love divine,
Not sun nor moon, to thee can changing bring,
  Since God's own everlasting joy is thine;
As boundless are thy beauteous jasper walls,
  Thrice iridescent as the shimmering sea,
When on each crest the noontide sunbeam falls,
  And limitless as his eternity.

Thy massive gates do ever stand ajar,
  That he who o'er life's troubled sea may roam,
Shall see, take heart, and though he journey far,
  Within thy welcoming walls may find a home;
There find a King, whose love doth compass all,
  And where the terror of the night's alarms,
Can never come, for night can never fall,
  And rest within his everlasting arms.

O love divine, teach me to know thy ways,
  To feel that perfect love that casts out fear
To voice a hymn of everlasting praise,
  And prove that love and truth are ever here!
Then from my mortal eyes the veil shall fall,
  Then shall I see, and seeing understand,
That thou immortal love, art All in All,
  The Father, Mother, King in that blest land!

THE SCHOOL OF GENTLENESS

"The fruit of the spirit is . . . gentleness" (Gal. 5:22).

THEY TELL us that when Lord Lister was operating in the hospital wards at Edinburgh the wards became a school of gentleness and human sympathy. One of his assistants mentioned how his countenance darkened with severity when an unthinking student lifted a broken leg somewhat roughly. Everything was done with the tenderest solicitude. Even his speech was softened with unfailing considerateness. He never referred to some hospital patient as "this case," but always spoke of "this poor man" or "this poor woman." Those who labored with the great surgeon are not likely to forget his strength, but they are even less likely to forget the gentleness which was the fruit of his strength.
